Gwendolyn Porter ("Relator" or "Plaintiff-Appellant") is a licensed registered nurse ("RN") in Mississippi. She was employed by Magnolia from February 2011 through September 2012. While there, she allegedly learned that licensed practical nurses ("LPNs") were serving as case and care managers. Plaintiff-Appellant alleges that this practice violates state and federal law. She reported the alleged violation to the Mississippi Division of Medicaid in late 2011 or early 2012.[3] She also informed the local U.S. Attorney of Magnolia's alleged violation.

In March 2016, Plaintiff-Appellant filed a complaint in federal court alleging claims under state common law and the federal False Claims Act. About two weeks later, she filed an amended complaint. The government filed a notice of its election to decline intervention. Magnolia then filed a motion to dismiss, arguing that the amended complaint did not satisfy the materiality element of the False Claims Act. In her response, Plaintiff-Appellant withdrew all claims other than those made pursuant to the False Claims Act. The district court granted Magnolia's motion to dismiss and dismissed the False Claims Act claims 239 with prejudice.[4] Plaintiff-Appellant appealed.

II. DISCUSSION

Plaintiff-Appellant makes three arguments on appeal. She first asserts that the district court erred in declining to consider certain exhibits to her first amended complaint. She next argues that the district court erred in ruling that the amended complaint failed to adequately plead that alleged misrepresentations made by Magnolia were "material" misrepresentations as that term is used in the False Claims Act. Finally, she contends that the district court erred in declining to grant leave to amend.

A. Whether the district court erred in declining to consider certain exhibits to the first amended complaint

Plaintiff-Appellant complains that the district court "erred in excluding from consideration exhibits attached to the [amended] complaint on the basis that they did not form part of the [c]ontracts between [MississippiCAN] and Magnolia." The exhibits in question are documents published either by Magnolia or by its parent company, Centene. They include a press release, policy and procedure manual, job description, list of frequently asked questions, company handbook excerpt, and PowerPoint presentation. The district court found that it "need not consider" those exhibits because Plaintiff-Appellant did not identify "any contractual provision that incorporated [those] documents" into the contracts between Magnolia and MississippiCAN. But even if Plaintiff-Appellant is correct that the district court made that finding in error, none of the exhibits in question establish that the staffing of the case manager or care manager positions was a material term of the contracts. And materiality is a key component of Plaintiff-Appellant's claims, as explained below. We therefore assume arguendo that the district court committed error and proceed to the substance of Plaintiff-Appellant's claims.

B. Whether the district court erred in ruling that the amended complaint failed to adequately plead materiality

Plaintiff-Appellant's first amended complaint, the operative pleading, lists claims under two provisions of the False Claims Act. Plaintiff-Appellant first attempts to state a claim pursuant to Section 3729(a)(1)(A) of the Act, which is violated when a person "knowingly presents, or causes to be presented," a false or fraudulent claim to the government for payment or approval. 31 U.S.C. § 3729(a)(1)(A). She also attempts to state a claim under Section 3729(a)(1)(B) of the Act, under which liability attaches when a person "knowingly makes, uses, or cause to be made or used, a false record or statement material to a false or fraudulent claim." Id. at § 3729(a)(1)(B).[5] The district court dismissed both claims because it could not find that Magnolia's staffing of care manager and case manager positions by licensed practical nurses, and not registered 240 nurses, was material to its contracts with MississippiCAN. We agree.

1. Legal Standards

To survive a motion to dismiss, a complaint "must provide the plaintiff's grounds for entitlement to relief—including factual allegations that when assumed to be true 'raise a right to relief above the speculative level.' " Cuvillier v. Taylor, 503 F.3d 397, 401 (5th Cir. 2007) (quoting Bell Atl. Corp. v. Twombly, 550 U.S. 544, 555, 127 S.Ct. 1955, 167 L.Ed.2d 929 (2007)). Complaints filed pursuant to the False Claims Act must also satisfy the "heightened" pleading standard of Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 9(b). United States ex rel. Grubbs v. Kanneganti, 565 F.3d 180, 185 (5th Cir. 2009). Under Rule 9(b), a party alleging fraud or mistake "must state with particularity the circumstances constituting fraud or mistake." Fed. R. Civ. P. 9(b). "We apply Rule 9(b) to fraud complaints with bite and without apology." Grubbs, 565 F.3d at 185 (quotation marks and citation omitted). However, "to plead with particularity the circumstances constituting fraud for a False Claims Act § 3729(a)(1) claim, a relator's complaint, if it cannot allege the details of an actually submitted false claim, may nevertheless survive by alleging particular details of a scheme to submit false claims paired with reliable indicia that lead to a strong inference that claims were actually submitted." Id. at 190.

2. Analysis

The False Claims Act, 31 U.S.C. § 3729 et seq., "imposes significant penalties on those who defraud the Government." Escobar, 136 S.Ct. at 1995. There are four elements of a False Claims Act claim. Plaintiffs suing under the statute must show that (1) "there was a false statement or fraudulent course of conduct; (2) made or carried out with the requisite scienter; (3) that was material; and (4) that caused the government to pay out money or to forfeit moneys due (i.e., that involved a claim)." Abbott v. BP Expl. & Prod., Inc., 851 F.3d 384, 387 (5th Cir. 2017) (citing United States ex rel. Longhi v. United States, 575 F.3d 458, 467 (5th Cir. 2009)). Both Magnolia's motion to dismiss and the district court order granting that motion addressed only the third element of this test: materiality.

In 2016, the Supreme Court clarified how courts should interpret the materiality requirement. The Court noted that the False Claims Act itself defines "material" as "having a natural tendency to influence, or be capable of influencing, the payment or receipt of money or property." Escobar, 136 S.Ct. at 1996 (citing 31 U.S.C. § 3729(b)(4)). Describing the materiality standard as "demanding" and "rigorous," id. at 2002–03, the Court explained:

> The False Claims Act is not "an all-purpose antifraud statute" or a vehicle for punishing garden-variety breaches of contract or regulatory violations. A misrepresentation cannot be deemed material merely because the Government designates compliance with a particular statutory, regulatory, or contractual requirement as a condition of payment. Nor is it sufficient for a finding of materiality that the Government would have the option to decline to pay if it knew of the defendant's noncompliance. Materiality, in addition, cannot be found where noncompliance is minor or insubstantial.

Id. at 2003 (citations omitted). The Court went on:

> [W]hen evaluating materiality under the False Claims Act, the Government's decision to expressly identify a provision as a condition of payment is relevant, but not automatically dispositive. Likewise, proof of materiality can include, but is not necessarily limited to, evidence that the defendant knows that the 241 Government consistently refuses to pay claims in the mine run of cases based on noncompliance with > the particular statutory, regulatory, or contractual requirement. Conversely, if the Government pays a particular claim in full despite its actual knowledge that certain requirements were violated, that is very strong evidence that those requirements are not material. Or, if the Government regularly pays a particular type of claim in full despite actual knowledge that certain requirements were violated, and has signaled no change in position, that is strong evidence that the requirements are not material.

Id. at 2003–04. In so holding, the Court expressly rejected the view of materiality advanced by the federal government and the U.S. Court of Appeals for the First Circuit: "that any statutory, regulatory, or contractual violation is material so long as the defendant knows that the Government would be entitled to refuse payment were it aware of the violation." Id. at 2004.

[1] Here, the district court dismissed Plaintiff-Appellant's claims because her amended complaint failed to (1) identify a specific provision in any of the three contracts between Magnolia and MississippiCAN requiring that a case manager or care manager position be staffed by a registered nurse, (2) identify any specific federal or state statute or regulation mandating that a registered nurse provide those services, or (3) otherwise establish that the staffing of the case manager or care manager positions was a material term of the contracts. De novo review leads this panel to conclude the same.

Plaintiff-Appellant relies on two general categories of documents to support her claims that Magnolia committed fraud by employing licensed practical nurses as care or case managers: (1) the contracts between Magnolia and MississippiCAN; and (2) Mississippi statutes, regulations, and administrative materials. Neither work in her favor.

The contracts in question identify the minimum services to be performed by case or care managers, but do not require that those services be performed by a registered nurse. Indeed, while Plaintiff-Appellant alleges that Magnolia is "[i]n no event ... to assign a Case Manager who is neither a Registered Nurse nor a licensed Social Worker," that allegation is contradicted by the contracts themselves. "When a plaintiff attaches documents to the complaint, courts are not required to accept the plaintiff's interpretation of those documents." Kamps v. Baylor Univ., 592 F. App'x 282, 284 n.1 (5th Cir. 2014) (per curiam) (unpublished). If "an allegation is contradicted by the contents of an exhibit attached to the pleading, then indeed the exhibit and not the allegation controls." United States ex rel. Riley v. St. Luke's Episcopal Hosp., 355 F.3d 370, 377 (5th Cir. 2004) (citation omitted).

Each contract does, however, require Magnolia to "strictly adhere to all applicable federal and state law (statutory and case law), regulations and standards ... including ... the policies, rules, and regulations" of the Mississippi Division of Medicaid. Plaintiff-Appellant argues that Magnolia's staffing practices violate Mississippi law and therefore constitute material fraud. We assume arguendo that Plaintiff-Appellant's characterization of the Mississippi statutes and regulations is correct. But the Supreme Court has explicitly rejected the argument that "any statutory, regulatory, or contractual violation is material so long as the defendant knows that the [g]overnment would be entitled to refuse payment were it aware of the violation." Escobar, 136 S.Ct. at 2004. Indeed, "a misrepresentation cannot be deemed material merely because the [g]overnment designates compliance with a particular statutory, regulatory, or contractual requirement 242 as a condition of payment." Id. at 2003. Here, the district court concluded that the contracts between Magnolia and MississippiCAN "contain broad boilerplate language generally requiring a contractor to follow all laws, which is the same type of language Escobar found too general to support a FCA claim." We agree.

Moreover, we note that the Mississippi Division of Medicaid took no action after Plaintiff-Appellant informed the Division that Magnolia was staffing care and case manager positions with licensed practical nurses. Instead, it continued payment and renewed its contract with Magnolia several times. And even after Plaintiff-Appellant's suit was unsealed, MississippiCAN awarded Magnolia a contract for the fourth time. See Mississippi True v. Dzielak, 28CH1:18-CV-557, Order, Dkt. 96, at 1, 3 (Hinds Cty. Ch. Ct. Sept. 28, 2018).[6] "[C]ontinued payment by the federal government after it learns of the alleged fraud substantially increases the burden on the relator in establishing materiality." United States ex rel. Harman v. Trinity Indus., 872 F.3d 645, 663 (5th Cir. 2017).[7] Plaintiff-Appellant has not met that burden.

In summary: Plaintiff-Appellant's first amended complaint makes no specific allegations regarding the materiality of Magnolia's alleged fraud. The contracts between Magnolia and MississippiCAN do not require Magnolia to staff care or case manager positions with registered nurses, and they contain only broad, boilerplate language requiring Magnolia to follow all laws. And Escobar dictates that MississippiCAN's continued payments to and contracts with Magnolia substantially increase the burden on Plaintiff-Appellant in establishing materiality. See Harman, 872 F.3d at 663. We therefore affirm the district court's conclusion that Plaintiff-Appellant did not plead sufficient facts to survive a motion to dismiss.

C. Whether the district court erred in declining to grant leave to amend

The district court denied Plaintiff-Appellant leave to amend, explaining that the request was futile. We agree.

Rule 15(a) requires a trial court "to grant leave to amend 'freely,' and the language of this rule 'evinces a bias in favor of granting leave to amend.' " Lyn–Lea Travel Corp. v. Am. Airlines, 283 F.3d 282, 286 (5th Cir. 2002)

(quoting Chitimacha Tribe of La. v. Harry L. Laws Co., Inc., 690 F.2d 1157, 1162 (5th Cir. 1982)). A district court must have a "substantial reason" to deny a request for leave to amend. Id. (quoting 243 Jamieson v. Shaw, 772 F.2d 1205, 1208 (5th Cir. 1985)). "However, decisions concerning motions to amend are entrusted to the sound discretion of the district court." Smith v. EMC Corp., 393 F.3d 590, 595 (5th Cir. 2004) (quotation marks and citation omitted).

Ordinarily, this court reviews the denial of a motion for leave to file an amended complaint for abuse of discretion. City of Clinton, Ark. v. Pilgrim's Pride Corp., 632 F.3d 148, 152 (5th Cir. 2010). "When the district court's sole reason for denying such an amendment is futility, however, we must scrutinize that decision somewhat more closely, applying a de novo standard of review similar to that under which we review a dismissal under Rule 12(b)(6)." Wilson v. Bruks-Klockner, Inc., 602 F.3d 363, 368 (5th Cir. 2010) (citing Stripling v. Jordan Prod. Co., LLC, 234 F.3d 863, 872–73 (5th Cir.2000)).

[2] Here, the district court denied leave to amend because Plaintiff-Appellant had not met, and "indeed cannot meet," her burden. The court concluded that "any amendment to continue to pursue" the theory advanced by Plaintiff-Appellant "would be futile." For the reasons articulated above, we find no error in this conclusion. Given the terms of the contracts between Magnolia and MississippiCAN, as well as MississippiCAN's election to continue paying and contracting with Magnolia after Plaintiff-Appellant reported Magnolia's staffing practices and filed this complaint, there is no reasonable basis to predict that Plaintiff-Appellant can recover on her claims.

CONCLUSION

The district court did not err in granting Defendant's Motion to Dismiss with prejudice. Its order doing so is AFFIRMED.

All Citations

810 Fed.Appx. 237, Med & Med GD (CCH) P 306,754

Footnotes

* Pursuant to 5th Cir. R. 47.5, the court has determined that this opinion should not be published and is not precedent except under the limited circumstances set forth in 5th Cir. R. 47.5.4.

 © 2025 Thomson Reuters. No claim to original U.S. Government Works.

1 The Mississippi Division of Medicaid has referred to these services as both "care management" services and "case management" services. The parties do not contend that these terms apply to different services.

2 Mississippi CCOs, including Defendant, receive a "prepaid monthly capitated payment." Capitation payments are fixed, pre-arranged monthly payments based on the number of patients enrolled in a health plan.

3 There is no indication in the record that the Division took any action in response.

4 While the motion to dismiss was pending, Magnolia was awarded a MississippiCAN contract for the fourth time.

5 Both claims implicate the implied false certification theory of liability. Under that theory, which has been accepted by the Supreme Court "in some circumstances," when "a defendant makes representations in submitting a claim but omits its violations of statutory, regulatory, or contractual requirements, those omissions can be a basis for liability if they render the defendant's representations misleading with respect to the goods or services provided." Escobar, 136 S.Ct. at 1999.

6 "Taking judicial notice of directly relevant public records is proper on review of a 12(b)(6) motion." Biliouris as next friend of Biliouris v. Patman, 751 F. App'x 603, 604 (5th Cir. 2019) (per curiam) (citing Funk v. Stryker Corp., 631 F.3d 777, 783 (5th Cir. 2011)).

7 Plaintiff-Appellant directs the court to Campie, in which the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit applied Escobar and reversed a district court's dismissal of a False Claims Act suit involving HIV drugs. See United States ex rel. Campie v. Gilead Sciences, Inc., 862 F.3d 890 (9th Cir. 2017). Campie, which is not precedential authority here, is also easily distinguished. In that case, "questions remained as to whether the approval by the [agency] was itself procured by fraud," "there existed other potential reasons for continued approval that prevent[ed] judgment for the defendant on 12(b)(6)," "the continued payment came after the alleged noncompliance had terminated," and "the parties dispute[d] exactly what and when the government knew." Harman, 872 F.3d at 664 (quoting Campie, 862 F.3d at 906–07). Here, Plaintiff-Appellant has made no allegations that MississippiCAN's contracts with Magnolia were themselves the product of fraud or that continued approval persisted for reasons other than non-materiality. Moreover, Plaintiff-Appellant alleges that the asserted noncompliance persists to this day.

© 2025 Thomson Reuters. No claim to original U.S. Government Works.

CASE NO. 27

559 Fed.Appx. 406 (Mem)
This case was not selected for publication in the Federal Reporter.
Not for Publication in West's Federal Reporter.
See Fed. Rule of Appellate Procedure 32.1 generally governing citation of judicial decisions issued on or after Jan. 1, 2007. See also Fifth Circuit Rules 28.7, 47.5.3, 47.5.4.
(Find CTA5 Rule 28 and Find CTA5 Rule 47)
United States Court of Appeals,
Fifth Circuit.

Raymond V. GUTIERREZ, Plaintiff–Appellant,
v.
CORRECTIONS CORPORATION OF AMERICA, Defendant–Appellee.

No. 13–60451
|
Summary Calendar.
|
April 3, 2014.

Attorneys and Law Firms

Raymond V. Gutierrez, Tutwiler, MS, pro se.

Appeal from the United States District Court for the Northern District of Mississippi, USDC No. 3:13–CV–98.

Before JOLLY, SMITH, and CLEMENT, Circuit Judges.

Opinion

407 PER CURIAM: [*]

Raymond Gutierrez, California prisoner # F–12264, appeals the dismissal of his 42 U.S.C. § 1983 action against Corrections Corporation of America ("CCA") as frivolous and for failure to state a claim under 28 U.S.C. § 1915(e)(2)(B). He also moves for appointment of counsel; that motion is DENIED.

Gutierrez is confined in a CCA facility in Mississippi. His action arose from the denial of his request for Catholic-oriented television programming from the Eternal Word Television Network ("EWTN") in light of the broadcast of non-denominational programming from the Trinity Broadcasting Network ("TBN"), which Gutierrez characterizes as Protestant-oriented.

Gutierrez contends that the district court erred by denying his postjudgment motion to amend the complaint. He avers that he stated his Equal Protection Clause claim in the motion to amend sufficiently for that claim to proceed. He lists other claims that he also put into his motion to amend, but he fails to brief those claims or to address whether the district court erred by declining to allow him to amend the complaint to add them. See Yohey v. Collins, 985 F.2d 222, 224–25 (5th Cir.1993). The district court did not abuse its discretion by denying Gutierrez's postjudgment motion to amend the complaint to elaborate on the Equal Protection Clause argument that already had been raised and decided. See Briddle v. Scott, 63 F.3d 364, 379 (5th Cir.1995).

Gutierrez claims he was deprived of equal protection of the law because CCA does not provide EWTN programming for Catholic prisoners but provides TBN programming for Protestant prisoners. He notes that an Arizona district court found that a similar claim he raised while incarcerated in a CCA facility there stated a violation sufficient to require a response before that case was dismissed for failure to exhaust administrative remedies.

A complaint is frivolous if it lacks "an arguable basis in law or fact," and dismissal on that ground is reviewed for abuse of discretion. Berry v. Brady, 192 F.3d 504, 507 (5th Cir.1999). Dismissal for failure to state a claim is reviewed de novo, applying the standard used to review a dismissal under Rule 12(b)(6) of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure. Hart v. Hairston, 343 F.3d 762, 763–64 (5th Cir.2003). "To survive a motion to dismiss, a complaint must contain sufficient factual matter, accepted as true, to state a claim to relief that is plausible on its face." Ashcroft v. Iqbal, 556 U.S. 662, 678, 129 S.Ct. 1937, 173 L.Ed.2d 868 (2009) (internal quotation marks and citation omitted). "Factual allegations must be enough to raise a right to relief above the speculative level, on the assumption that all the allegations in the complaint are true (even if doubtful in fact)." Bell Atl. Corp. v. Twombly, 550 U.S. 544, 555, 127 S.Ct. 1955, 167 L.Ed.2d 929 (2007). Because the district court dismissed the complaint both as frivolous and for failure to state a claim, the dismissal is reviewed de novo. See Geiger v. Jowers, 404 F.3d 371, 373 (5th Cir.2005).

To establish a claim under the Equal Protection Clause, Gutierrez "must allege and prove that he received treatment different from that received by similarly situated individuals and that the unequal treatment stemmed from a discriminatory intent." Taylor v. Johnson, 257 F.3d 470, 473 (5th Cir.2001). The Clause does not require "that every religious sect or 408 group within a prison—however few in numbers—must have identical facilities or personnel"; it requires only that prison officials afford inmates "reasonable opportunities ... to exercise the religious freedom guaranteed by the First and Fourteenth Amendment[s]." Baranowski v. Hart, 486 F.3d 112, 123 (5th Cir.2007) (internal quotation marks and citation omitted).

Gutierrez does not allege any discriminatory intent on the part of CCA. A document attached to his complaint indicated that the Religious Review Committee ("RRC") reporting to the California Department of Corrections indicated that TBN is a "non-denominational channel" carrying programming from various denominations. It is not evident from the record whether any specifically Catholic programming is carried on the channel or whether the teachings on the channel could be considered consistent with Catholic doctrines and practices, and CCA's prisons presumably house a fair number of Catholic prisoners. However, the RRC determined that it was not feasible to provide each religious denomination with a specific television channel. If CCA were required to provide every prisoner of a particular faith with access to a religion-specific television channel because TBN is broadcast into CCA facilities, that might "spawn a cottage industry of litigation and could have a negative impact on prison staff, inmates, and prison resources." Id. at 122 (internal quotation marks and citation omitted). Moreover, Gutierrez has made no allegation suggesting that Catholic prisoners are not able to attend Mass or engage in the sacraments, study the Bible and other teachings, or otherwise exercise their right to practice their religion. See id. at 123. Additionally, Gutierrez has no constitutionally protected right to watch television. Montana v. Comm'rs Court, 659 F.2d 19, 23 (5th Cir.Unit A Sept.1981) (per curiam).

Gutierrez's allegations suggest at most that Catholic prisoners have less access to television programming specific to their faith than do Protestant prisoners. Gutierrez has failed to state a plausible claim of a violation of the Equal Protection Clause. See Iqbal, 556 U.S. at 678, 129 S.Ct. 1937. Additionally, the Arizona district court's finding that Gutierrez's equal protection claim was sufficient to warrant a response was not relevant to the ultimate dismissal of that complaint, see Gutierrez v. Corr. Corp. of Am., No. 10–0117, 2011 WL 2836705 (D.Ariz. July 18, 2011), is not precedential in this circuit, see Orellana–Monson v. Holder, 685 F.3d 511, 520 (5th Cir.2012), and is not persuasive in light of this court's jurisprudence addressing the Equal Protection Clause, dismissal for failure to state a claim, and dismissal as frivolous. The district court did not err by dismissing Gutierrez's complaint as frivolous and for failure to state a claim. See Geiger, 404 F.3d at 373.

The appeal is DISMISSED as frivolous. See 5TH CIR. R. 42.2. The dismissal of the § 1983 action and the dismissal of this appeal both count as a strike for purposes of 28 U.S.C. § 1915(g). See Adepegba v. Hammons, 103 F.3d 383, 388 (5th Cir.1996). Gutierrez is cautioned that, if he accumulates three such strikes, he will no longer be allowed to proceed IFP in any civil action or appeal filed while he is incarcerated or detained in any facility unless he "is under imminent danger of serious physical injury." § 1915(g).

All Citations

559 Fed.Appx. 406 (Mem)

Footnotes

* Pursuant to 5TH CIR. R. 47.5, the court has determined that this opinion should not be published and is not precedent except under the limited circumstances set forth in 5TH CIR. R. 47.5.4.

End of Document

© 2025 Thomson Reuters. No claim to original U.S. Government Works.

CASE NO. 28

421 Fed.Appx. 349
This case was not selected for publication in the Federal Reporter.
Not for Publication in West's Federal Reporter
See Fed. Rule of Appellate Procedure 32.1 generally governing citation of judicial decisions issued on or after Jan. 1, 2007. See also Fifth Circuit Rules 28.7, 47.5.3, 47.5.4.
(Find CTA5 Rule 28 and Find CTA5 Rule 47)
United States Court of Appeals,
Fifth Circuit.

UNITED STATES of America, Plaintiff–Appellee,
v.
Aurelio BASULTO–REINA, Defendant–Appellant.

No. 10–40860
|
Summary Calendar.
|
April 5, 2011.

Synopsis

Background: Defendant pleaded guilty in the United States District Court for the Southern District of Texas, to being unlawfully present in the United States following deportation and was sentenced to 24 months in prison following a 16 level enhancement. Defendant appealed.

Holding: The Court of Appeals, Jerry E. Smith, Circuit Judge, held that defendant's conviction for aggravated battery under Georgia law was a crime of violence.

Affirmed.

West Headnotes (1)

[1] Sentencing and Punishment Offense or adjudication in other jurisdiction

Defendant did not show a realistic probability that Georgia aggravated battery statute could apply in the absence of force, and therefore, his conviction for aggravated battery under Georgia law was a crime of violence warranting a sentencing enhancement following his guilty plea to being unlawfully present in the United States following deportation, absent any Georgia cases applying statute in the absence of force. West's Ga.Code Ann. § 16–5–24(a); U.S.S.G. § 2L1.2(b)(1)(A)(ii), 18 U.S.C.A.

4 Cases that cite this headnote

Attorneys and Law Firms

350 Mary Jane Harmon, James Lee Turner, Assistant U.S. Attorney, U.S. Attorney's Office, Houston, TX, for Plaintiff–Appellee.

Marjorie A. Meyers, Federal Public Defender, Sarah Beth Landau, Assistant Federal Public Defender, H. Michael Sokolow, Assistant Federal Public Defender, Federal Public Defender's Office, Houston, TX, for Defendant–Appellant.

 © 2025 Thomson Reuters. No claim to original U.S. Government Works.

Appeal from the United States District Court for the Southern District of Texas, No. 2:10–CR–363–1.

Before DAVIS, SMITH, and SOUTHWICK, Circuit Judges.

Opinion

JERRY E. SMITH, Circuit Judge: [*]

*1 Aurelio Basulto–Reina challenges the district court's conclusion that aggravated battery under Georgia law is a "crime of violence" ("COV") under U.S.S.G. § 2L1.2(b)(1)(A)(ii). We affirm, because Georgia aggravated battery involves the use of force and is thus a COV.

I.

Basulto–Reina pleaded guilty to one count of being found unlawfully present in the United States following deportation, in violation of 8 U.S.C. § 1326(a) and (b). The district court imposed a 16–level sentencing enhancement under § 2L1.2(b)(1)(A)(ii) because Basulto–Reina had been deported following a felony conviction for a COV. The underlying felony was a 1997 conviction in Georgia for aggravated battery. After a three-level reduction for acceptance of responsibility, the enhancement gave Basulto–Reina a total offense level of 21; he had a criminal history category of I. The guideline range was 37–46 months, but the district court gave 24 months. Basulto–Reina challenges the 16–level enhancement, arguing that Georgia aggravated battery is not a COV.

II.

The categorization of prior convictions as COV's is a legal issue that we review de novo. [1] The application notes define a COV as > any of the following offenses under federal, state, or local law: murder, manslaughter, kidnapping, aggravated assault, forcible sex offenses ..., statutory rape, sexual abuse of a minor, robbery, arson, extortion, extortionate extension of credit, burglary of a dwelling, or any other offense under federal, state, or local law that has as an element the use, attempted use, or threatened use of physical force against the person of another.

U.S.S.G. § 2L1.2 cmt. n. 1 (B)(iii). Thus, an offense can qualify as a COV either because it is part of an enumerated category or because it falls within the physical-force provision. Because we decide that the use of physical force is an element of aggravated battery in Georgia, we need not determine whether it is part of an enumerated category. For purposes of the guidelines, the " 'use' of force requires that a defendant intentionally avail himself of that force." United States v. Vargas–Duran, 356 F.3d 598, 599 (5th Cir.2004). To determine whether an offense involves the use of force, we employ the categorical approach in Taylor v. United States, 495 U.S. 575, 600–02, 110 S.Ct. 2143, 109 L.Ed.2d 607 (1990), examining the elements of the offense rather than the facts underlying the 351 conviction. United States v. Moreno–Florean, 542 F.3d 445, 449 (5th Cir.2008). Nonetheless, "if the statute of conviction contains a series of disjunctive elements, this court may look beyond the statute to certain records made or used in adjudicating guilt to determine which subpart of the statute formed the basis of the conviction." Id. (citations omitted).

A person commits aggravated battery in Georgia "when he or she maliciously causes bodily harm to another by depriving him or her of a member of his or her body, by rendering a member of his or her body useless, or by seriously disfiguring his or her body or a member thereof." GA.CODE ANN. § 16–5–24(a). The indictment for Basulto–Reina's 1997 conviction reveals that his conviction arose from disfigurement. Therefore, our inquiry is whether "maliciously caus[ing] bodily harm to another ... by seriously disfiguring his or her body" requires the use, attempted use, or threatened use of physical force.

*2 Basulto–Reina contends that causing bodily harm does not necessarily require physical force. His argument is supported by United States v. Lopez–Hernandez, 112 Fed.Appx. 984, 985 (5th Cir.2004) (per curiam), in which we evaluated a Georgia family violence battery conviction. A conviction for family violence battery requires " 'intentionally caus[ing] substantial physical harm or visible bodily harm to another' person who is a family member." Id. (quoting GA.CODE ANN. § 16–5–23.1(a)). We reasoned that "[t]he Georgia offense is results-oriented and does not contain a requirement that the offender apply force, but rather, leaves open the possibility that harm to the victim might result from omission or from the actions of another person or animal controlled by the offender." Id. Basulto–Reina urges that the same reasoning applies to a conviction for aggravated battery.

Because Lopez–Hernandez is unpublished, it is not precedential, and we find it unpersuasive. In particular, it ignores that Georgia courts have interpreted even simple battery to require the use of physical force. In Hammonds v. State, 263 Ga.App. 5, 587 S.E.2d 161, 163 (2003), for example, the court examined the element of simple battery requiring "intentionally causing physical harm to another." GA.CODE ANN. § 16–5–23(a)(2). That requirement, the court held, "contemplates a touching that goes beyond insult to the infliction of pain or physical injury,"[2] and any touching that inflicts pain necessarily requires the use of force.[3] If a requirement of "intentionally causing physical harm" requires physical force, therefore, so must the stricter requirement of "maliciously causing bodily harm to another ... by seriously disfiguring his or her body."

Admittedly, Georgia uses the results of a forceful touching to distinguish among simple battery, battery, and aggravated battery.[4] Thus, battery and aggravated battery are defined by the level of harm a defendant "causes" and do not explicitly mention an offensive touching or the use of 352 force. That classification scheme does not mean, however, that a forceful touching has dropped out of the offense as the severity increases to battery and aggravated battery. Thus, one Georgia court has construed the aggravated battery statute with reference to the common law definition of battery as the " 'unlawful touching or striking of the person of another by the aggressor himself or by any substance put in motion by him, done with the intention of bringing about a harmful or offensive contact or apprehension thereof.' "[5] Similarly, another court has assumed that aggravated battery qualifies under the Georgia statute allowing self-defense to prevent "forcible felonies."[6] Georgia thus treats aggravated battery as including an element of force.

In support of its holding, Lopez–Hernandez cited J.A.T. v. State, 133 Ga.App. 922, 212 S.E.2d 879, 882 (1975), which held that one can commit battery by siccing a dog on another. J.A.T. does not hold, however, that committing battery in such a fashion involves the absence of force. Instead, the court noted that by letting the dog go, the defendant "set[ ] a force in motion which ultimately produce[d] the result." Id. at 881. As the government points out, pulling the trigger on a gun also sets in motion a separate force that actually causes the harm, but it certainly involves the use of force. Siccing a dog on another must therefore involve using force as well, at least when that act is committed intentionally, as in J.A.T.[7]

*3 It is hypothetically possible that at some point the defendant's actions become so attenuated from the application of force to the victim that he cannot be said to have "used force," even though he is still guilty of battery. We need not engage in speculation to identify such remote possibilities, however. The Supreme Court's reasoning when determining whether a crime fell within an enumerated category of COV's is equally applicable here:

> [T]o find that a state statute creates a crime outside the generic definition of a listed crime in a federal statute requires more than the application of legal imagination to a state statute's language. It requires a realistic probability, not a theoretical possibility, that the State would apply its statute to conduct that 353 falls outside the generic definition of a crime. To show that realistic probability, an offender, of course, may show that the statute was so applied in his own case. But he must at least point to his own case or other cases in which the state courts in fact did apply the statute in the special (nongeneric) manner for which he argues.

Gonzales v. Duenas–Alvarez, 549 U.S. 183, 193, 127 S.Ct. 815, 166 L.Ed.2d 683 (2007). Basulto–Reina has cited no Georgia cases applying the aggravated-battery statute in the absence of force, so he has not shown a "realistic probability" that the statute could apply in such situations. We thus conclude that aggravated battery in Georgia involves the use of force and is a COV under U.S.S.G. § 2L1.2(b)(1)(A)(ii).

AFFIRMED.

All Citations

421 Fed.Appx. 349, 2011 WL 1251284

Footnotes

* Pursuant to 5TH CIR. R. 47.5, the court has determined that this opinion should not be published and is not precedent except under the limited circumstances set forth in 5TH CIR. R. 47.5.4.

1 United States v. Hernandez–Galvan, 632 F.3d 192, 196 (5th Cir.2011) (citing United States v. Sanchez–Ruedas, 452 F.3d 409, 412 (5th Cir.2006)).

2 Hammonds, 587 S.E.2d at 163; accord McKinney v. State, 218 Ga.App. 633, 463 S.E.2d 136, 139 (1995) ("Physical contact is required for a simple battery...."); Lyman v. State, 188 Ga.App. 790, 374 S.E.2d 563, 565 (1988) (stating that § 16–5–23(a)(2) "concerns the intentional causation of physical harm, a touching which goes beyond insult to the infliction of pain"); Anderson v. State, 170 Ga.App. 634, 317 S.E.2d 877, 878 (1984) (stating that a simple battery conviction under § 16–5–23 "requires physical contact"); Tuggle v. State, 145 Ga.App. 603, 244 S.E.2d 131, 133 (1978) (same).

3 See Hernandez v. U.S. Att'y Gen., 513 F.3d 1336 (11th Cir.2008) (declining to insert the word "violent" before "physical force" in the definition of COV and concluding that "simple physical contact.... satisfie[s] the 'use of physical force' definition of a 'crime of violence' " (citing United States v. Griffith, 455 F.3d 1339, 1342 (11th Cir.2006))).

4 Williams v. State, 248 Ga.App. 316, 546 S.E.2d 74, 78 (2001) ("The legislature has created three distinct categories of battery: simple battery, OCGA § 16–5–23 (offensive touching or physical harm); battery, OCGA § 16–5–23.1 (substantial physical harm or visible bodily injury); and aggravated battery, OCGA § 16–5–24 (loss of body member or serious disfigurement). These statutes evidence a legislative intent to categorize the types of battery by the severity of the harm inflicted and to provide harsher penalties for batteries that result in more severe bodily harm.").

5 Blanch v. State, 293 Ga.App. 750, 667 S.E.2d 925, 926 (2008) (emphasis removed) (quoting Brown v. State, 57 Ga.App. 864, 197 S.E. 82, 84 (1938)).

6 See Wicker v. State, 285 Ga.App. 294, 645 S.E.2d 712, 713 (2007) (rejecting a defendant's requested self-defense instruction because she did not introduce evidence that she feared her victim would commit aggravated battery, but acknowledging that aggravated battery can be a forcible felony justifying self-defense).

 © 2025 Thomson Reuters. No claim to original U.S. Government Works.

7 J.A.T., 212 S.E.2d at 880. J.A.T. suggests that one can also be convicted of battery if one was "criminally negligent" when letting the dog go, id. at 881, and one might argue that a criminally negligent defendant did not "use" force because "using" force requires using force "intentionally," Vargas–Duran, 356 F.3d at 599. J.A.T. stated that criminally negligent defendants can be convicted of battery, however, only because "[e]very person is presumed to intend the natural and necessary consequence of his acts." J.A.T., 212 S.E.2d at 881 (citations and internal quotation marks omitted). Even a defendant convicted of battery because of criminal negligence has therefore used force "intentionally" and has thus committed a COV.

End of Document

© 2025 Thomson Reuters. No claim to original U.S. Government Works.

CASE NO. 29

2009 WL 29688
Only the Westlaw citation
is currently available.

This decision was reviewed by West editorial staff and not assigned editorial enhancements.

United States District Court,
S.D. Texas,
Houston Division.

UNITED STATES of America
v.
Michael D. KIM.

Criminal
No.
H
-
07
-
406
.
|
Jan. 5, 2009.

Attorneys and Law Firms

Albert A. Balboni, United States Attorneys Office, Financial Litigation, U.S. Attorney'S Office, U.S. Marshal, U.S. Pretrial Svcs, U.S. Probation, Houston, TX, for Plaintiff.

MEMORANDUM AND ORDER

LEE H. ROSENTHAL, District Judge.

1 The defendant was convicted by a jury on September 2, 2008. He was represented by retained counsel who conducted a vigorous defense on behalf of his client. On November 5, 2008, new retained counsel moved for an extension of time under Rule 45 of the Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure to file a motion for a judgment of acquittal and motion for new trial. The government opposed on the ground that there had been no showing of excusable neglect. This court agreed and denied the motion. The defendant has now filed a motion for reconsideration.

The primary basis for the motion is that prior counsel rendered ineffective assistance in failing to renew the motion for judgment of acquittal-which had been urged at the close of the government's case-at the close of all the evidence. Rule 29 governs motions for a judgment of acquittal and Rule 33 governs motions for new trial. Rule 29 requires that a defendant (or his counsel) "move for a judgment of acquittal, or renew such a motion, within 7 days after a guilty verdict ...." FED. R.CRIM. P. 29. Similarly, unless a motion for new trial is "grounded on newly discovered evidence," Rule 33 requires such a motion to be filed "within 7 days after the verdict or finding of guilty." FED. R.CRIM. P. 33. When a motion for judgment of acquittal or a new trial is filed outside the time frames allowed by Rule 29 or 33, Rule 45 may provide an avenue for the court to reach the merits of the motion. See, e.g., United States v. Walton, 2007 WL 2108118, at *8 (E.D.Pa. July 20, 2007) (applying Rule 45(b)(1)(B) to Rule 33(b)(2)); United States v. Dade, 2006 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 76286, at *7 (D.Idaho Oct. 19, 2006) (concluding "the Court may still consider Defendant's motion for new trial if he shows excusable neglect for not filing the motion in a timely manner"). Rule 45(b), in pertinent part, provides:

 © 2025 Thomson Reuters. No claim to original U.S. Government Works.

> (1) In General. When an act must be done within a specified period, the court on its own may extend the time, or for good cause may do so on a party's motion made ... (B) after the time expires if the party failed to act because of excusable neglect.
>
> (2) Exception. The court may not extend the time to take any action under Rule 35, except as stated in that rule.

FED. R.CRIM. P. 45(b). [1]

The determination of whether excusable neglect exists "is at bottom an equitable one, taking account of all relevant circumstances surrounding the party's omission." Pioneer Inv. Serv. Co. v. Brunswick Assoc. Ltd. P'ship, 507 U.S. 380, 395, 113 S.Ct. 1489, 123 L.Ed.2d 74 (1993). In making this determination, the court must consider four factors: (1) the danger of prejudice to the nonmoving party; (2) the length of delay and its potential impact on judicial proceedings; (3) the reason for that delay, including whether it was within the reasonable control of the movant; and (4) whether the movant acted in good faith. Pioneer, 507 U.S. at 395; see also Stutson v. United States, 516 U.S. 193, 196, 116 S.Ct. 600, 133 L.Ed.2d 571 (1996) (suggesting the Pioneer factors apply in the criminal context); Kohl's Dep't Stores, Inc. v. Levco-Route 46 Assoc., L.P., 121 F. App'x 971, 974-76 (3d Cir.2005) (not precedential) (discussing "excusable neglect" in the context of Fed.R.Civ.P. 60(b)(1)).

2 This court considered each of these factors in its prior order and concluded that the record provided no basis to find excusable neglect. The motion for reconsideration argues ineffective assistance of prior counsel in failing to renew the motion for judgment of acquittal after the close of all the evidence. But the motion does not identify any basis to find excusable neglect in the delay in filing a motion for new trial or judgment of acquittal after the jury verdict. After again considering the factors, the court again concludes that there is no basis to find excusable neglect in failing to file a timely motion for new trial or judgment of acquittal.

The motion for reconsideration, Docket Entry No. 92, is denied.

All Citations

Not Reported in F.Supp.2d, 2009 WL 29688

Footnotes

1 Rule 45(b)(2) was amended in December 2005. The former Rule 45(b)(2) provided: "The court may not extend the time to take any action under Rules 29, 33, 34, and 35, except as stated in those rules." Former FED. R.CRIM. P. 45(b)(2) (emphasis added). The 2005 amendment removed the constraints placed on the court for motions filed under Rules 29, 33, and 34 of the Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure. See FED. R.CRIM. P. 45(b)(2).

 © 2025 Thomson Reuters. No claim to original U.S. Government Works.

End of Document

© 2025 Thomson Reuters. No claim to original U.S. Government Works.

CASE NO. 30

2015 WL 11251771
Only the Westlaw citation
is currently available.
United States District Court,
W.D. Texas, El Paso Division.

Alma Rosa BLAIR, Plaintiff,
v.
PRIDE INDUSTRIES, INC., Defendant.

EP
-
14
-
CV
-
00183
-
DCG
|

Signed 01/27/2015

Attorneys and Law Firms

Enrique Chavez, Jr., Miguel Luis Hernandez, Chavez Law Firm, Daniel Salvador Gonzalez, El Paso, TX, for Plaintiff.

Clara B. Burns, Jose Abelardo Howard-Gonzalez, Kemp Smith LLP, El Paso, TX, for Defendant.

ORDER DENYING PLAINTIFF'S MOTIONS

DAVID C. GUADERRAMA, UNITED STATES DISTRICT JUDGE

1 Presently before the Court are Plaintiff Alma Rosa Blair's ("Plaintiff" or "Blair") "Motion[s] to Quash and For Protective Order" ("Motions") (ECF Nos. 11-16), filed on September 5, 2014. After reviewing the motions, the responses and the applicable law, the Court hereby denies the instant Motions.

I. BACKGROUND

This is an employment discrimination and retaliation suit under federal and state law. In her Original Petition, Plaintiff claims she was discriminated against based on her race, sex, and age. See Notice of Removal 4-7, ECF 1. She also claims she was retaliated against by her former employer, the defendant in the case, for opposing its alleged discriminatory practices. See id. at 5.

The instant action originated in state court. On May 16, 2014, Defendant removed the above-captioned cause to this Court. See Notice of Removal 1-3. On September 3, 2014, Defendant served its "Notice of Intent to Take Depositions by Written Questions" and served a subpoena on several of Plaintiff's previous employers, including Home Depot, Tyson Prepared Foods, Levi Strauss & Co., Research Analysis and Maintenance Insurance, and Zenith Electronics Corp.; and her current employer, Sears Methodist Retirement Systems. See Mots. 1.[1] Specifically, Defendant requested from each employer:

> The entire files(s) of ALMA R. BLAIR, including but not limited to: any > and all medical, attendance and disciplinary files, job description, application for employment, new employee forms, attendance records, discipline and counseling forms, and if applicable, documents relating to her separation from employment and the reasons for the separation [from] her employment, wage and payroll information, files on employee benefits which ALMA R. BLAIR has received, is/was entitled to receive to include plans, statements, and summaries concerning said benefits available to ALMA R. BLAIR.

Mots. 1-2.

Plaintiff filed the instant Motions on September 5, 2014, seeking to quash the subpoenas. Defendant filed two responses on September 11, 2014, one addressing Plaintiff's past employers ("Response PE") and the other addressing Plaintiff's current employer ("Response CE"). See ECF Nos. 17, 18. All matters are now ripe for review.

II. ANALYSIS

A. Whether to Grant Plaintiff's Motions

"Discovery matters are entrusted to the 'sound discretion' of the district court." King v. Dogan, 31 F.3d 344, 346 (5th Cir. 1994) (per curiam) (citing Richardson v. Henry, 902 F.2d 414, 417 (5th Cir. 1990)); accord Harris v. Amoco Prod. Co., 768 F.2d 669, 684 (5th Cir. 1985). Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 26(b)(1) allows parties to "obtain discovery regarding any non-privileged matter that is relevant to any party's claim or defense ...." Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(1). At the discovery stage, relevancy is broadly construed: "information is relevant if it encompasses any matter that bears on, or that reasonably could lead to other matter[s] that could bear on, any issue that is or may be in the case." Coughlin v. Lee, 946 F.2d 1152, 1159 (5th Cir. 1991) (citation omitted) (internal quotation marks omitted). "Relevant information need not be admissible at the trial if the discovery appears reasonably calculated to lead to the discovery of admissible evidence." Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(1).

2 A party may seek an order limiting the scope of discovery request pursuant to Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 26(c). In order to prevail, a party seeking a protective order must establish good cause and a specific need for protection. See Landry v. Air Line Pilots Ass'n Int'l AFL-CIO, 901 F.2d 404, 435 (5th Cir. 1990) (citing Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(c)), opinion modified on denial of reh'g (Apr. 27, 1990). "Good cause" exists when justice requires the protection of "a party or person from annoyance, embarrassment, oppression, or undue burden or expense." Id. (quoting Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(c)(1)). To establish good cause, the party seeking the protective order must articulate particular and specific facts to support its request and cannot rely on speculative or conclusory statements. See In re Terra Int'l, Inc., 134 F.3d 302, 306 (5th Cir.

1998) (quoting United States v. Garrett, 571 F.2d 1323, 1326 n.3 (5th Cir. 1978)). Likewise, a party seeking to quash a subpoena under Rule 45(c)(3) bears the burden of proof. See Anzures v. Prologis Texas I LLC, 300 F.R.D. 316, 317 (W.D. Tex. 2012) (citing Williams v. City of Dallas, 178 F.R.D. 103, 109 (N.D. Tex. 1998)).

Defendant argues that it is entitled to Plaintiff's past (1) disciplinary records; (2) termination documents; (3) job description; (4) job application; (5) resume; and (6) pay records that identify her wages and benefits. See Resp. PE 3-4; Resp. CE 3. Defendant first argues that Plaintiff has raised questions about her credibility. In response to Defendant's interrogatory requesting that Plaintiff "identify each document which constitutes or contains evidence relevant to your claim that you were discriminated against," Plaintiff produced a resume that is different from the one she furnished Defendant during her application process. See Resp. PE 2; Resp. CE 2. Defendant argues that in light of this discrepancy, Plaintiff's credibility is in question. See Resp. PE 3; Resp. CE 3.

Defendant also argues that the documents sought are relevant to damage assessment, both in regards to a possible after-acquired evidence defense and mitigation of damages. See Resp. PE 4-5; Resp. CE 4-5. Under the after-acquired evidence doctrine, an employer can limit its damages for discrimination to back pay up through when the new evidence was discovered if the employer can establish that an employee's wrongful act was severe enough to terminate the employee on those grounds alone. See McKennon v. Nashville Banner Pub. Co., 513 U.S. 352, 361-62 (1995). In this case, Defendant would have to establish that it would have terminated Plaintiff upon discovery of the alleged application falsification. Defendant also argues that employees have a duty to mitigate their damages, and thus payment information related to her prior and subsequent employment is relevant.

Plaintiff contends that the subpoenas are "overly broad [and] unduly burdensome, require[ ] disclosure of proprietary and privileged documents with no applicable waiver, and [are] not likely to lead to the discovery of admissible evidence." Mots. 3. Plaintiff contemporaneously moves for a protective order based on "the annoyance, embarrassment, and oppression that production of the requested documents would cause ...." Mots. 4. Plaintiff contends that the subpoenas have "no legitimate purpose other than to harass and inform Plaintiff's previous and subsequent employers that the Plaintiff has filed a suit against one of her previous employers." See Mots. 4. Finally, Plaintiff argues that even proof of after-acquired evidence is not sufficient if Defendant's subpoenas are merely fishing expeditions. See Mots. 2-3.

The Court finds that Plaintiff has not articulated specifics to support her Motions. Instead, Plaintiff's Motions set forth only general objections and conclusory statements. See Anzures, 300 F.R.D. at 318 (denying a plaintiff's motion to quash and for a protective order regarding past employment records on the grounds that the objections were conclusory).

 © 2025 Thomson Reuters. No claim to original U.S. Government Works.

3 The Court agrees with Defendant that the information sought is relevant and reasonably calculated to lead to the discovery of admissible evidence. First, Plaintiff put her resume and past work experience into question by producing it in response to Defendant's interrogatory request. Second, there is little question that the payroll records are relevant to Defendant's mitigation. Any information related to Plaintiff's earnings is relevant to the determination of potential damages in this case. In fact, Plaintiff appears to concede as much by stating that such production would be duplicative of already-produced documents. See Mots. 4. Finally, Defendant has raised the existence of a discrepancy in Plaintiff's past employment history. Such a discrepancy could give rise to the after-acquired evidence defense, which would be relevant to any potential remedy by Plaintiff in this case. See Bowers v. Sears, Roebuck & Co., No. A-13CV-348-AWA, 2014 WL 4269090, at *2 (W.D. Tex. Aug. 29, 2014) (permitting discovery of a plaintiff's past employers because there was a discrepancy in information provided to employer and discovery responses). [2]

In conclusion, Plaintiff has failed to carry her burden of establishing good cause to quash the third party subpoenas and for a protective order. Aside from conclusory assertions, Plaintiff has not provided any argument as to how retrieving this information from her past and current employers would lead to "annoyance, embarrassment, and oppression," The Court notes that any such result would be mitigated by a protective order limiting Defendant's use of the records to the instant litigation.

B. Whether to Grant Expenses to Defendant

When a motion to compel discovery or for protective order is denied, the Court must consider expenses under Rule 37(a)(5) of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(c)(3). That Rule states that the Court > must, after giving an opportunity to be heard, require the movant, the attorney filing the motion, or both to pay the party or deponent who opposed the motion its reasonable expenses incurred in opposing the motion, including attorney's fees. But the court must not order this payment if the motion was substantially justified or other circumstances make an award of expenses unjust.

Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(a)(5)(B). Defendant did not ask for expenses. Regardless, the Court finds that Plaintiff's Motions were substantially justified. Therefore both parties will incur their own expenses.

III. CONCLUSION

Accordingly, IT IS HEREBY ORDERED THAT Plaintiff Alma Rosa Blair's "Motion[s] to Quash and For Protective Order" (ECF Nos. 11-16) are DENIED.

 © 2025 Thomson Reuters. No claim to original U.S. Government Works.

IT IS ALSO ORDERED THAT the parties SHALL submit a joint protective order limiting the use of Plaintiff Alma Rosa Blair's employment records to the instant action within twenty-one (21) days of this Order.

So ORDERED and SIGNED this 27th day of January, 2015.

All Citations

Not Reported in Fed. Supp., 2015 WL 11251771

Footnotes

1 Plaintiff's Motions are identical with the exception that each addresses a different former employer.

2 Plaintiff cites primarily to Premer v. Corestaff Svcs., L.P., 232 F.R.D. 692, 693 (M.D. Fla. 2005) for the proposition that proof of after-acquired evidence is not sufficient to allow discovery of past employment records. The Court notes that both that case and all other cases cited by Plaintiff are outside of the Fifth Circuit and are not precedential. Moreover, the Court finds that the cases are distinguishable from the case at bar because Defendant has provided additional independent bases for the discovery requests. In regards to McKennon, Plaintiff's argument is flawed because the Supreme Court ultimately allowed, albeit with concern for possible abuse, the employer to rely upon after-acquired evidence of wrongdoing to limit damages.

End of Document

© 2025 Thomson Reuters. No claim to original U.S. Government Works.

CASE NO. 31

2004 Mass.App.Div. 120
Massachusetts Appellate Division, District Court Department, Northern District.

MEDFORD CO–OPERATIVE BANK
v.
David P. SKERRY.

No. 9875.
|
Heard May 19, 2004.
|
Opinion Certified Aug. 12, 2004.

Synopsis
Background: After bank repaid Social Security Administration (SSA) to cover unauthorized deposits into its deceased customer's account, it brought conversion action against administrator for estate, both in his official capacity and individually. Administrator filed counterclaims for abuse of process and unfair and deceptive practices. The District Court Department, Somerville Division, McGuinness, J., entered judgment for administrator on his counterclaims, and bank appealed.

Holdings: The District Court Department, Appellate Division, Merrick, J., held that:

[1] sufficient evidence supported determination that bank's conversion action constituted an abuse of process;

[2] administrator's allegations supported unfair and deceptive practices claim;

[3] fact that administrator practiced law did not preclude his counterclaim for unfair and deceptive practices; and [4] administrator was entitled to recover his appellate attorney fees.

Affirmed.

Procedural Posture(s): On Appeal.

West Headnotes (5)

[1] Pretrial Procedure 🔑 Evidence

Plaintiff's motion for involuntary dismissal of defendant's counterclaims for abuse of process and unfair and deceptive practices was properly denied, since record was not devoid of evidence probative of defendant's counterclaims. Rules Civ.Proc., Rule 41(b)(2), 43A M.G.L.A.

1 Case that cites this headnote

[2] Process 🔑 Weight and sufficiency

Determination that bank's conversion action against administrator for estate, individually, to recover amounts it had paid to cover unauthorized social security deposits into deceased customer's account was pursued for an ulterior or illegitimate purpose, so as to constitute an abuse of process, was supported by evidence that bank officer did not think administrator had misappropriated funds, that bank had not brought individual actions in similar cases, and that bank's mistaken handling of the repayment may have jeopardized its ability to recover fully from the estate.

 © 2025 Thomson Reuters. No claim to original U.S. Government Works.

[3] Antitrust and Trade Regulation Defenses; answer and counterclaim

Administrator for estate who had been sued by bank in conversion in his individual capacity could recover on his counterclaim for unfair and deceptive trade practices based on bank's abuse of process, even though his counterclaim referred specifically to a violation of the Fair Debt Collection Practices Act, since his allegations supported a claim for relief on an abuse of process theory. 15 U.S.C.A. § 1692(a)-(o); M.G.L.A. c. 93A.

1 Case that cites this headnote

[4] Antitrust and Trade Regulation Persons and Transactions Covered Under General Statutes

Fact that administrator for estate practiced law did not preclude him from recovering on counterclaim against bank for unfair and deceptive trade practices. M.G.L.A. c. 93A, § 2, 9, 11.

[5] Antitrust and Trade Regulation Attorney fees

Antitrust and Trade Regulation Proceedings to impose; evidence

Costs, Fees, and Sanctions Affirmance

Costs, Fees, and Sanctions Proceedings to Award; Taxation

Where judgment in favor of administrator for estate on his counterclaims against bank for abuse of process and unfair and deceptive trade practices was upheld on appeal, attorney was entitled to recover appellate attorney fees upon motion, detailed affidavit, and notice.

1 Case that cites this headnote

In the Somerville Division, McGuinness, J., No. 0010–CV–0828.

Attorneys and Law Firms

Herbert William Boudreau, Jr., Medford, MA, for Plaintiff.

Daniel J. Harrington, Melrose, MA, for Defendant.

Before MERRICK, P.J., COVEN & GRECO, JJ.

 © 2025 Thomson Reuters. No claim to original U.S. Government Works.

Opinion

MERRICK, J.

1 After a trial without a jury, judgment was entered for the defendant on his counterclaims for abuse of process and G.L. c. 93A unfair and deceptive practices. The plaintiff filed this Dist./Mun. Cts. R.A.D.A. 8C appeal of the denial of its Mass. R. Civ. P. 41(b)(2) motion for involuntary dismissal of the defendant's counterclaims. As the plaintiff challenges the sufficiency of the evidence to support the court's judgment, we view the evidence in the light most favorable to the defendant for the purposes of this appeal. Edwards v. Sullivan and Cogliano Cos., 2002 Mass.App. Div. 43; Hale v. Building 19 1/6, 2002 Mass.App. Div. 38.

The defendant and plaintiff-in-counterclaim, David P. Skerry ("Skerry"), has practiced law in the City of Medford for 35 years. More than half of his practice has involved serving as a fiduciary or representing fiduciaries. In 1991, he was appointed as conservator for Mary J. Culkeen ("Culkeen") and served in that capacity until her death on July 31, 1999. Culkeen, confined to a nursing home, had received monthly Social Security payments by direct deposit to an account in the name of "David P. Skerry, Conservator, Property of Mary Culkeen" at the Medford Co-operative Bank (the "Bank"), the plaintiff and defendant-in-counterclaim herein. Skerry promptly notified the Social Security Administration ("SSA") in August, 1999 of Culkeen's death, forwarded a copy of her death certificate and thereafter contacted SSA on numerous occasions to terminate Culkeen's monthly benefits. Despite these efforts, Social Security payments continued to be deposited in the conservator account through February, 2000. The total amount of these overpayments after Culkeen's death, to which she and her estate were not entitled, was $5,925.00.

On August 31, 1999, Skerry was appointed administrator of Culkeen's estate. The estate's principal asset was a two-family house occupied by elderly tenants. The house was in disrepair and the heating system was not functioning. Skerry used conservator account funds to pay for repairs and insurance on the house. He also paid Culkeen's funeral and final expenses as well as a very small percentage of the fees due to him in the amount of $1,098.00. An inventory filed by Skerry, as administrator, in the Probate and Family Court on December 29, 1999 reflected a balance in the conservator account of $181.40. The estate's only other assets were the house, valued at $175,000.00, and the decedent's personal effects, worth only $150.00.[1]

2 At the end of February, 2000, the SSA made a demand upon Skerry for repayment of the $5,925.00 in benefits deposited after Culkeen's death. Skerry replied by letter dated March 1, 2000 that there was very little cash in the estate and that it would be needed to maintain the estate's principal asset. He further stated that the house would be sold and offered to pay the $5,925.00 out of the proceeds of the sale. Skerry testified that in his 35 years of experience, the SSA customarily agreed to such arrangements for the correction of the very common problem of continued automatic payments after the death of a social security recipient. During the month of March, 2000,

 © 2025 Thomson Reuters. No claim to original U.S. Government Works.

Skerry transferred most of the remaining funds in the conservator account at the Bank to an estate account he had opened, as Culkeen's administrator, at the Century Bank.

On March 2, 2000, Skerry was contacted by Henry T. Sampson ("Sampson") of the plaintiff Bank about the Bank's receipt of a U.S. Treasury Department "Notice of Reclamation" of the overpayments. Skerry advised Sampson that he was handling the matter with the SSA and provided copies of his correspondence with the SSA, including his March 1, 2000 letter outlining the proposed settlement. Skerry testified that Sampson did not contact him again. Sampson testified that he knew Skerry to be an honest man, that Skerry had been on the list of attorneys the Bank retained for real estate closings, and that he would not have been on that list if he had not had a reputation in the community for honesty. Sampson was also aware that Skerry had sued Sampson's boss, Robert Surabian ("Surabian"), the president of the Bank, on behalf of Surabian's niece over a family matter and had obtained a settlement in the niece's favor against Surabian for a substantial amount of money.

Sampson also testified that although he was the vice-president of the Bank for residential lending and had no knowledge of, or experience with, notices of reclamation or social security, he was asked to handle the Culkeen matter. The "Notice of Reclamation" received by the Bank clearly stated that the Bank's liability would be limited if it followed the instructions set forth in the Notice within 60 days. The Notice directed that if the account funds were less than the social security overpayment amount, the existing funds should be paid by the Bank. If the account balance was zero, the Bank should instead simply provide the names and addresses of all withdrawers. In either event, the Notice of Reclamation obligated the Bank to mail notice to the account holder of any action it had taken or planned to take in response to the Notice. Neither Sampson, nor anyone at the Bank, responded to the Notice of Reclamation. The Bank subsequently elected to pay the $5,925.00 in its entirety to the U.S. Treasury Department. Sampson testified that the Bank had no legal obligation to do so, and had never requested a return of the funds from the SSA after its voluntary payment. The Bank did not issue any notice to Skerry of either its intent to make such payment, or of the fact that it had done so.

3 Unaware of the Bank's action, Skerry paid $2,500.00 to the SSA as the first repayment installment.[2] On July 10, 2000, the Bank filed suit against both "David P. Skerry, Administrator of the Estate of Mary J. Culkeen" and "David P. Kerry, Individually." Service of the complaint on July 27, 2000 was not only the first notice Kerry received that the Bank had paid the Treasury Department, but also the first demand upon him for reimbursement. The complaint set forth claims for unjust enrichment and money had and received, and further alleged that Skerry, both as administrator and individually, had converted the $5,925.00 to his own use. Sampson testified that he never believed Skerry had converted the funds to his personal use, and that the Bank's usual approach in such situations was to sue the estate and not the individual. There was further testimony that the Bank had obtained a lien on the Culkeen house and that such lien was senior to any lien by the Department of Medical Insurance for medicaid payments for the nursing home care of Culkeen.

Skerry retained two separate attorneys to represent him as administrator and individually, and filed separate answers and counterclaims. As administrator, he submitted a Mass. R. Civ. P. 68 offer of judgment in the amount of $6,083.30,[3] which the Bank accepted. The parties executed a stipulation of dismissal of all claims and counterclaims in the case against Skerry as administrator. Despite full satisfaction of its claim, the Bank delayed for a year, until the eve of trial, before filing a voluntary dismissal of its action against Skerry individually. Skerry's counterclaims were tried without a jury, and the judge assessed $10,000.00 in damages on the abuse of process counterclaim and doubled that sum for an award of $20,000.00 on the G.L. c. 93A counterclaim. The Bank argues on this appeal that the denial of its motion for involuntary dismissal was error because the evidence was insufficient as a matter of law to support a finding for Skerry on either counterclaim.

[1] 1. The Bank's Rule 41(b)(2) motion for involuntary dismissal was properly denied if "anywhere in the evidence, from whatever source derived, any combination of circumstances could be found from which a reasonable inference could be drawn" in favor of Skerry. Sonogram of New England, Inc. v. Metropolitan Prop. & Cas. Ins. Co., 2002 Mass.App. Div. 68, 70–71, quoting Raunela v. Hertz Corp., 361 Mass. 341, 343, 280 N.E.2d 179 (1972). See also DeVito v. Cellular Mobile Communications, Inc., 1993 Mass.App. Div. 48, 48–49. As the record is not devoid of evidence probative of Skerry's counterclaims, the Bank was not entitled to judgment in its favor as a matter of law. The Bank's Rule 41(b)(2) motion was, therefore, properly denied.

2. Abuse of process is the use of legal process "to accomplish some ulterior purpose for which it was not designed or intended, or which was not the legitimate purpose of the particular process employed." Jones v. Brockton Public Markets, Inc., 369 Mass. 387, 389, 340 N.E.2d 484 (1975). It is "a form of coercion to obtain a collateral advantage, not properly involved in the proceeding itself, such as the surrender of property or the payment of money." Vittands v. Sudduth, 49 Mass.App.Ct. 401, 406, 730 N.E.2d 325 (2000), quoting from Cohen v. Hurley, 20 Mass.App.Ct. 439, 442, 480 N.E.2d 658 (1985). The essential elements of the tort are that "(1) process was used; (2) for an ulterior or illegitimate purpose; (3) resulting in damage." Gutierrez v. Massachusetts Bay Transp. Auth., 437 Mass. 396, 407, 772 N.E.2d 552 (2002). There is no question here that the first and third elements were satisfied. Process was clearly used and Skerry suffered damage, including the legal fees he was compelled to incur to retain separate counsel to represent himself individually.

4 [2] Skerry also points to the potential damage to his personal and professional reputation by the Bank's (or more properly, its executives') filing of what it knew to be groundless allegations that he had converted to his personal use funds he held as a fiduciary. The "ulterior or illegitimate purpose" element has been found in cases where, e.g., supplementary process was used to collect a debt known to have been already paid, Lorusso v. Bloom, 321 Mass. 9, 71 N.E.2d 218

(1947) or where property has been attached to enforce a claim known to be groundless. Reardon v. Sadd, 262 Mass. 345, 159 N.E. 751 (1928). Proof of motive or intent ordinarily requires the drawing of an inference. Powers v. Leno, 24 Mass.App.Ct. 381, 383–384, 509 N.E.2d 46 (1987). While the evidence is hardly overwhelming on this point, it would have permitted the trial judge to infer that the Bank proceeded with questionable intentions to level a groundless charge of conversion against Skerry. The responsible officer at the Bank regarded Skerry as a man of unquestioned probity and did not believe he had in any way misappropriated funds. The Bank, through this officer, knew that Skerry had repeatedly advised the SSA of the overpayments and had proposed a settlement plan for their return, and that Skerry handled the funds in the regular course of his administration of Culkeen's estate. The Bank had sued Skerry as administrator of that estate, and had secured its recovery on any judgment that may have entered in its favor by a lien on the estate's principal asset. The value of that asset far exceeded the $5,925.00 sought by the Bank. Yet the Bank departed from its customary practice of proceeding only against the estate and brought an additional, individual action against the very attorney who had prevailed in a costly lawsuit against the Bank's president.

While proof of ill will, bad intentions, or knowledge that a claim is groundless is not alone sufficient (or necessary) to establish liability for abuse of process, see Beecy v. Pucciarelli, 387 Mass. 589, 596, 441 N.E.2d 1035 (1982); Bednarz v. Bednarz, 27 Mass.App.Ct. 668, 673–674, 542 N.E.2d 300 (1989), it is relevant in proving ulterior or illegitimate purpose. Ladd v. Polidoro, 424 Mass. 196, 199–200, 675 N.E.2d 382 (1997); Fishman v. Brooks, 396 Mass. 643, 652, 487 N.E.2d 1377 (1986). See Cady v. Marcella, 49 Mass.App.Ct. 334, 342, 729 N.E.2d 1125 (2000). Further, where there is evidence that process has been utilized as a "threat or a club" to coerce or extort some collateral advantage, Cohen v. Hurley, supra at 442, 480 N.E.2d 658, or to "put pressure upon the [defendant] to compel him ... to take some ... action," Powers v. Leno, supra at 384, 509 N.E.2d 46, the requisite ulterior purpose may be found. The trial judge may well have inferred that the Bank's negligence in failing to comply with the Notice of Reclamation, compounded by its embarrassing mistake in electing to make a complete payment to the U.S. Treasury, rendered it particularly anxious to recover the money. The Bank may have questioned its ability to recover fully from the Culkeen estate what a trial court might have viewed as a gratuitous Bank payment of social security benefits that the estate was already repaying directly to the SSA. Thus it could have been reasonably concluded that the Bank's conversion claim against Skerry individually, with its threat to Skerry's reputation and practice, was designed to pressure him into quickly concluding the action by reimbursing the Bank in his capacity as administrator. So viewed, the Bank's groundless conversion claim was tortiously used as an "instrument of persuasion rather than a means of satisfaction," Koonce v. Aldo Realty Trust, 8 Mass.App.Ct. 199, 201, 392 N.E.2d 549 (1979), and constituted an abuse of process.

5 3. There was also no error in the denial of the Bank's motion for involuntary dismissal of Skerry's G.L. c. 93A counterclaim for unfair and deceptive practices. Conduct amounting to an abuse of process may also constitute a violation of G.L. c. 93A and serve as the basis for a recovery under that statute. See, e.g., Wyler v. Bonnell Motors, Inc., 35 Mass.App.Ct. 563, 624 N.E.2d 116 (1993).

[3] The Bank argues that because Skerry's G.L. c. 93A counterclaim referred specifically to a violation of the Fair Debt Collection Practices Act, 15 U.S.C. 1692(a)-(o), Skerry cannot recover under G.L. c. 93A for unfair and deceptive practices based upon abuse of process. Such argument overstates Massachusetts "notice pleading" principles which do not require that a complaint or counterclaim state a correct substantive theory of recovery and which do not require dismissal when the claim would support relief on an alternative theory. Gallant v. Worcester, 383 Mass. 707, 709–710, 421 N.E.2d 1196 (1981); Berish v. Bornstein, 437 Mass. 252, 269, 770 N.E.2d 961 (2002). It is established that the scope of "unfair and deceptive acts or practices" actionable under G.L. c. 93A is broader than common law or other statutory bases of recovery. See, e.g., U.S. Funding, Inc. of America v. Bank of Boston Corp., 28 Mass.App.Ct. 404, 407, 551 N.E.2d 922 (1990). Moreover, Skerry's c. 93A counterclaim incorporated by reference the factual allegations of his first counterclaim[4] asserting, inter alia, that despite the Bank's knowledge that Skerry had negotiated a settlement with the SSA and had no knowledge of the Bank's voluntary payment, the Bank engaged in conduct "to harass ... and abuse" Skerry in an attempt to obtain reimbursement. Such allegations supported Skerry's claim for relief on an abuse of process theory.

[4] There is also no merit in the Bank's final contention that because Attorney Skerry practices law, he could not recover on his counterclaim pursuant to G.L. c. 93A, §§ 2 and 9 because § 9 excludes claims by persons engaged in "trade or commerce" who are entitled to recover under G.L. c. 93A, § 11. We need not decide whether the allegations of conversion of funds to his own use brought in a suit against Skerry as an individual amounted solely to an injury to him as one in trade or commerce. Given that Skerry's G.L. c. 93A claim was raised as a counterclaim and thus required no demand letter, and that there are no other differences between §§ 9 and 11 which are pertinent to this case, the distinction is immaterial.

[5] 4. We authorize an award of appellate attorney's fees to Skerry to be assessed by a trial court judge upon motion, detailed affidavit and notice. Patry v. Liberty Mobilehome Sales, Inc., 394 Mass. 270, 272, 475 N.E.2d 392 (1985).

Judgment affirmed.

So ordered.

All Citations

Not Reported in N.E.2d, 2004 Mass.App.Div. 120, 2004 WL 1853343

Footnotes

1 No objection was ever filed to the inventory and accounts submitted by Skerry as conservator or administrator.

2 The record does not indicate whether the overpayment to the SSA was recovered.

3 This figure was apparently the sum of the $5,925.00 overpayment amount and costs.

4 Skerry's first counterclaim was captioned “Violation of Fair Debt Collection Practices Act.” His voluntary dismissal of that counterclaim prior to trial should have been a clear signal to the Bank that his G.L. c. 93A counterclaim was based on grounds other than the Bank's alleged violation of the federal statute.

End of Document

© 2025 Thomson Reuters. No claim to original U.S. Government Works.

CASE NO. 32

2024 WL 5036568
Only the Westlaw citation
is currently available.
United States District Court,
S.D. Texas, Houston Division.

ASG CHEMICAL HOLDINGS, LLC, Plaintiff,
v.
BISLEY INTERNATIONAL, LLC, Defendant.

Civil Action H
-
23
-
4333

|
Signed November 18, 2024
|
Entered November 19, 2024

Attorneys and Law Firms

Laura Gibson, Mukul S. Kelkar, Dentons US LLP, Houston, TX, Cody Shane Paschall, James David Tuck, Dentons US LLP, Dallas, TX, for Plaintiff.

Dorsey R. Carson Jr., Kathryn Pickett Goff, Carson Law Group PLLC, Jackson, MS, for Defendant.

MEMORANDUM AND RECOMMENDATION

Peter Bray, United States Magistrate Judge

1 This case has been referred to the undersigned magistrate judge pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 636(b)(1). ECF No. 45. Pending before the court is Third-Party Defendants Ward and B4 Arrow Consulting, LLC's 12(b)(6) Motion to Dismiss Bisley's Amended Third-Party Complaint (ECF No. 36), ECF No. 41. The court recommends that the motion be GRANTED in part and DENIED in part.

1. Background and Procedural Posture

ASG Chemical Holdings, LLC (ASG) filed suit against Bisley International, LLC (Bisley) alleging several causes of action including breach of contract, trademark infringement, unfair competition, and false advertising. ECF No. 40-1 at 1. In response, Bisley asserted counterclaims against ASG and filed a third-party complaint against John Ward and B4 Arrow Consulting, LLC (Ward and B4), among others. See ECF No. 36 at 19–20. Bisley alleges thirteen claims against Ward and B4 related to fraud, theft, misappropriation of trade secrets, and tortious interference with contractual relationships, among others. See id. at 38–65. Ward and B4 argue that Bisley has failed to allege facts that, if true, would demonstrate Ward and B4's liability, and they seek to have Bisley's claims against them dismissed under Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 12(b)(6).[1] ECF No. 41 at 5.

Bisley alleges that Ward and his company, B4 Arrow Consulting, LLC, were part of a larger concerted effort to steal Bisley's inventory, destroy Bisley's cash flow, and otherwise harm Bisley's business. ECF No. 36 ¶¶ 130, 132, 280.

 © 2025 Thomson Reuters. No claim to original U.S. Government Works.

Bisley alleges that Ward "was a double agent acting on behalf of and/or for the benefit of ASG, himself, and [his] co-conspirators, while simultaneously operating as an employee of Riteks." Id. ¶ 6. According to Bisley, Riteks was a Bisley customer.[2] Id. ¶ 84. Bisley also alleges that Ward and B4 worked with others in this scheme, including:

- Ken Pryde, the former Vice President of Bisley's Operations, who "was a double agent acting on behalf of and/or for the benefit of ASG, himself, and [his] co-conspirators," id. ¶ 5;
- ASG, which is an LLC that conducted business with Bisley, id. ¶¶ 2, 16; and
- Jeff Koebrick and Claudio Manissero, who are the owners and operators of ASG, id. ¶ 2.

Bisley alleges a conspiracy between ASG, Ward and B4, and the remaining third-party defendants (Koebrick, Manissero, and Pryde). Bisley states that "ASG and Third-Party Defendants agreed to: terminate the non-compete clause between ASG and Bisley to take Bisley's current and potential business; retain monies owed to Bisley; purchase chemicals that were then converted to ASG and/or the co-conspirators, either directly or indirectly; stole inventory; and sold inventory off the books." ECF No. 36 ¶ 279.

2 Bisley states that one part of the effort to harm Bisley included a plan to fraudulently request large orders of sodium aluminate from Bisley. Id. ¶ 160(k). Normally, when Bisley's customer, Riteks, needed sodium aluminate, Ward would issue a delivery request to Bisley. Id. ¶¶ 134–35. When Bisley received the request, Bisley would ship the inventory to the location that Ward requested for Riteks. Id. ¶ 136. Bisley would then issue an invoice to Riteks for payment. Id. ¶ 137. Bisley alleges that Ward deviated from that normal practice as part of his conspiracy against Bisley.

Bisley alleges that "B4 Arrow Consulting and Ward, along with the other Third-Party Defendants, conspired and issued fraudulent requests for the delivery of sodium aluminate, purportedly on behalf of Riteks, which resulted in Bisley shipping sodium aluminate and never receiving payment." ECF No. 36 ¶ 160(k). Specifically, "[o]n seven separate occasions, Bisley shipped 40,000 lbs of sodium aluminate to Riteks, at Riteks' request, but the shipments never arrived." Id. ¶ 138. Bisley alleges that "[u]pon information and belief, the shipments were re-routed, by Ward and/or B4 Arrow Consulting, and delivered to an undisclosed location. Neither Riteks nor Bisley requested that the carrier re-route any of the seven shipments." Id. ¶ 139.

Bisley also claims that Ward and B4 entered an agreement with Pryde and ASG to fraudulently inflate commissions paid by Bisley to Ward and B4. ECF No. 36 ¶¶ 187, 190. "Specifically, the price payable to Riteks was increased to account for commissions payable to B4 Arrow Consulting and/or John Ward." Id.

Bisley also alleges that Ward and B4 used Bisley's trade secrets to take Bisley's current and future potential customers. Id. ¶ 240. Bisley alleges that its customer information, the probability of its shipments, the prices it charges, revenue information, and the amount it pays its carriers are all trade secrets that Pryde shared with Ward and B4. ECF No. 36 ¶¶ 234–39, 253, 257. Bisley states that Ward and B4 "now use Bisley's trade secrets and proprietary information in competition with Bisley to divert and steal, among other things, Bisley's current customers and future customers via Bisley leads." Id. ¶ 240.

Bisley claims that it reasonably protects its confidential and trade secret information, in part, by: "requiring all employees to maintain [ ] confidentiality ...; restricting employee access to proprietary and trade secret information ...; and enforcing disciplinary action against employees for improper use or disclosure of proprietary and trade secret information." ECF No. 36 ¶¶ 254, 260.

2. Rule 12(b)(6) Motion to Dismiss Standard

Rule 12(b)(6) authorizes the court to dismiss a complaint for "failure to state a claim upon which relief can be granted." Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(b)(6). Generally, the court is constrained to the "four corners of the complaint" to determine whether the plaintiff has stated a claim. Morgan v. Swanson, 659 F.3d 359, 401 (5th Cir. 2011); see also Loofbourrow v. Comm'r, 208 F. Supp. 2d 698, 708 (S.D. Tex. 2002) ("[T]he court may not look beyond the four corners of the plaintiff's pleadings.").

"The court accepts all well-pleaded facts as true, viewing them in the light most favorable to the plaintiff," and "drawing all reasonable inferences in that party's favor." In re Katrina Canal Breaches Litig., 495 F.3d 191, 205–06 (5th Cir. 2007). The pleading rules "do not countenance dismissal of a complaint for imperfect statement of the legal theory supporting the claim asserted." Johnson v. City of Shelby, Miss., 574 U.S. 10, 11 (2014); see Skinner v. Switzer, 562 U.S. 521, 530 (2011) ("[A] complaint need not pin plaintiff's claim for relief to a precise legal theory.").

3 A complaint must contain a "short and plain statement of the claim showing that the pleader is entitled to relief." Fed. R. Civ. P. 8(a)(2). To survive a Rule 12(b)(6) motion to dismiss, the plaintiff must also plead "enough facts to state a claim to relief that is plausible on its face." Bell Atl. Corp. v. Twombly, 550 U.S. 544, 570 (2007).

3. Analysis

A. Fraud Claims: Counts I and II

Special pleading rules apply to claims of fraud. Fed. R. Civ. P. 9(b). Rule 9(b) provides that "[i]n alleging fraud or mistake, a party must state with particularity the circumstances constituting fraud or mistake." Id.; see Lone Star Ladies Inv. Club v. Schlotzsky's Inc., 238 F.3d 363, 368 (5th Cir. 2001) ("Rule 9(b) applies by its plain language to all averments of fraud, whether they are part of a claim of fraud or not.").

Generally, courts have required the pleading to lay out "the who, what, when, where, and how" of the alleged fraud to comply with Rule 9(b). See Benchmark Elecs., Inc. v. J.M. Huber Corp., 343 F.3d 719, 724 (5th Cir.), modified on other grounds, 355 F.3d 356 (5th Cir. 2003). Rule 9(b)'s application is context-specific, however, and "[d]epending on the claim, a plaintiff may sufficiently 'state with particularity the circumstances constituting fraud or mistake' without including all the details of any single court-articulated standard —it depends on the elements of the claim at hand." United States ex rel. Grubbs v. Kanneganti, 565 F.3d 180, 188 (5th Cir. 2009). Where the facts are particularly within the perpetrator's knowledge, the pleading requirements are held to a lower standard. See United States ex rel. Willard v. Humana Health Plan of Texas Inc., 336 F.3d 375, 385 (5th Cir. 2003).

i. Fraud: Count I

In Texas, the elements of fraud are:

> (1) that a material representation was made; (2) the representation was false; (3) when the representation was made, the speaker knew it was false or made it recklessly without any knowledge of the truth and as a positive assertion; (4) the speaker made the representation with the intent that the other party should act upon it; (5) the party acted in reliance on the representation; and (6) the party thereby suffered injury.

Aquaplex, Inc. v. Rancho La Valencia, Inc., 297 S.W.3d 768, 774 (Tex. 2009) (quoting In re FirstMerit Bank, N.A., 52 S.W.3d 749, 758 (Tex. 2001)).

Ward and B4 argue that Bisley has not met its heightened burden under Rule 9(b) and that Bisley has not alleged any "representation" at all by Ward or B4. ECF No. 41 at 5. The court disagrees.

According to Bisley, when Riteks needed sodium aluminate in the normal course of business, Ward would issue a delivery request to Bisley on behalf of Riteks. ECF No. 36 ¶¶ 134–35. When Bisley received the request, Bisley would ship the inventory "to the location specified by Riteks through Ward." Id. ¶ 136. Then, Bisley would issue an invoice to Riteks for payment. Id. ¶ 137.

Bisley alleges that "B4 Arrow Consulting and Ward, along with the other Third-Party Defendants, conspired and issued fraudulent requests for the delivery of sodium aluminate, purportedly on behalf of Riteks, which resulted in Bisley shipping sodium aluminate and never receiving payment." ECF No 36 ¶ 160(k). Specifically, "[o]n seven separate occasions, Bisley shipped 40,000 lbs of sodium aluminate to Riteks, at Riteks' request, but the shipments never arrived." Id. ¶ 138. Bisley alleges that "[u]pon information and belief, the shipments were re-routed, by Ward and/or B4 Arrow Consulting, and delivered to an undisclosed location. Neither Riteks nor Bisley requested that the carrier re-route any of the seven shipments." Id. ¶ 139.

4 The "statements" at issue here are fraudulent orders for sodium aluminate. The allegations include who made the fraudulent orders, what the orders were for, and how the defendants engaged in fraud. Although Bisley does not state the specific dates those orders were placed or shipped, Bisley has stated with particularity the circumstances constituting fraud—that is, Ward, B4, and other third-party defendants placed seven large, false orders with Bisley that never arrived to the customer. Much of the information that Bisley does not allege in its complaint is information that is in Ward or B4's control, such as whether Riteks requested the orders of sodium aluminate, where Riteks asked for the orders to be shipped, and how Ward allegedly re-routed the shipment.

A party may meet the Rule 9(b) standard "without including all the details of any single court-articulated standard." Grubbs, 565 F.3d at 188. Here, Bisley alleged the circumstances of its fraud claims sufficient to survive Ward and B4's motion to dismiss. Ward and B4's motion to dismiss Bisley's fraud claim should be denied.

ii. Fraudulent Inducement: Count II

Texas law imposes "a duty to abstain from inducing another to enter into a contract through the use of fraudulent misrepresentations." Anderson v. Durant, 550 S.W.3d 605, 614 (Tex. 2018). Fraudulent inducement is a type of common law fraud that requires all the same basic elements of fraud and is actionable when the fraudulent misrepresentation "is a false promise of future performance made with a present intent not to perform." Id. Fraudulent inducement only arises in the context of an agreement, so "with a fraudulent inducement claim, the elements of fraud must be established as they relate to an agreement between the parties." Haase v. Glazner, 62 S.W.3d 795, 798–99 (Tex. 2001).

Ward and B4 argue that they "cannot be held liable for fraudulently inducing a contract to which they were not a party." ECF No. 41 at 8. Ward and B4 argue that they were not a party to the 2022 agreement between Bisley and ASG and that that they were not parties to any agreement with Bisley about their commission. Id.

Bisley agrees that Ward was not a party to the 2022 agreement. ECF No. 48 at 8. Bisley argues that its fraudulent inducement claim against Ward and B4 is based on "the multiple sales agreements Ward fraudulently induced Bisley to execute, including the sodium aluminate scheme." Id. 8–9. As discussed above, Bisley alleges that Ward was part of a scheme to harm Bisley. If Bisley's allegations are true, Ward induced Bisley to send seven large shipments of sodium aluminate as part of that scheme. ECF No. 36 ¶¶ 132–41. That is, Ward's fraudulent requests were not on behalf of Riteks, they were on behalf of Ward himself and his alleged co-conspirators. Any agreement requiring Bisley to send the seven orders of sodium aluminate would have been between Ward and Bisley. Bisley has met its burden at this stage in the proceedings. Accordingly, Ward and B4's motion should be denied on Bisley's fraudulent inducement claim.

B. Theft: Count IV

The Texas Theft Liability Act (TTLA) creates a civil cause of action against a person who commits theft under the Texas Penal Code. Tex. Civ. Prac. & Rem. Code §§ 134.002–.005. Bisley alleges (1) theft of property in violation of § 31.03 of the Texas Penal Code and (2) theft of services in violation of § 31.04 of the Texas Penal Code. ECF No. 36 ¶ 205–06. The court considers each in turn.

 © 2025 Thomson Reuters. No claim to original U.S. Government Works.

The Texas Penal Code provides that a person commits theft "if he unlawfully appropriates property with intent to deprive the owner of property." Tex. Penal Code § 31.03(a). Ward and B4 argue that "Bisley offers no specific or plausible allegations of what happened to these products." ECF No. 41 at 9–10. Bisley alleges that "ASG and Third-Party Defendants worked together to steal the products purchased by Bisley through numerous different schemes." ECF No. 36 ¶ 213.

5 One theft scheme that Bisley alleges is Ward and B4's involvement in requesting seven fraudulent orders of sodium aluminate, discussed above. If Bisley's allegations are true, Ward and B4 placed false orders for large amounts of sodium aluminate and re-routed the shipments so they would not arrive to the customer. See ECF No. 36 ¶ 160(k). That is, based on Bisley's allegations, it is at least plausible that Ward and B4, along with others, fraudulently (i.e., without Bisley's effective consent) appropriated sodium aluminate with intent to deprive Bisley of the property. Bisley thus states a plausible claim for theft of property and Ward and B4's motion should be denied on this claim.

The Texas Penal Code also provides that a person commits theft of services if:

> with intent to avoid payment for service that the actor knows is provided only for compensation:
>
> (1) the actor intentionally or knowingly secures performance of the service by deception, threat, or false token; [or]
>
> (2) having control over the disposition of services of another to which the actor is not entitled, the actor intentionally or knowingly diverts the other's services to the actor's own benefit or to the benefit of another not entitled to the services[.]

Tex. Penal Code § 31.04(a).

Based on Bisley's amended pleadings, Ward and B4 argue that they "still do not know what services they supposedly stole or how they supposedly stole them." ECF No. 41 at 10. But Bisley alleges that, via the sodium aluminate scheme detailed above, Ward and B4 received Bisley's services of shipping the sodium aluminate through deception. ECF No. 36 ¶ 138. Thus, Bisley has adequately pleaded its claim for theft of services and Ward and B4's motion to dismiss should be denied on this claim.

C. Conversion: Count VII

Conversion is the "unauthorized and wrongful assumption and exercise of dominion and control over the personal property of another, to the exclusion of or inconsistent with the owner's rights[.]" Waisath v. Lack's Stores, Inc., 474 S.W.2d 444, 447 (Tex. 1971). To establish conversion, a plaintiff must show that:

> (1) the plaintiff owned or had possession of the property or entitlement to possession; (2) the defendant unlawfully and without authorization assumed and exercised control over the property to the exclusion of, or inconsistent with, the plaintiff's rights as an owner; (3) the plaintiff demanded return of the property; and (4) the defendant refused to return the property.

Tex. Integrated Conveyor Sys., Inc. v. Innovative Conveyor Concepts, Inc., 300 S.W.3d 348, 365–66 (Tex. App.—Dallas 2009, pet. denied).

Ward and B4 argue that "Bisley does not plausibly allege that Ward did anything improper with respect to [the sodium aluminate] shipments, when the shipments/conversion supposedly occurred, how the conversion occurred, or any details beyond the fact that Bisley thinks it is missing inventory and is guessing at the cause." ECF No. 41 at 10–11.

As discussed above, if Bisley's allegations are true, Ward and B4 placed false orders for large amounts of sodium aluminate and re-routed the shipments so they would not arrive to the customer. ECF No. 36 ¶¶ 132–41. That is, Bisley alleges that Ward and B4, along with others, exercised control over the sodium aluminate shipments inconsistent with Bisley's rights. Bisley states a plausible claim for conversion and Ward and B4's motion should be denied on this claim.

D. Trade Secret Claims: Counts V and VI

i. Trade Secret Misappropriation: Count V

To make a claim for misappropriation under the Texas Uniform Trade Secrets Act (TUTSA), a plaintiff must show that "(1) a trade secret existed, (2) the trade secret was acquired through a breach of a confidential relationship or was discovered by improper means, (3) the defendant used the trade secret without the plaintiff's authorization, and (4) the plaintiff suffered damages as a result." Malone v. PLH Group, Inc., No. 01-19-00016-CV, 2020 WL 1680058, at *5 (Tex. App.—Houston [1st Dist.] Apr. 7, 2020, pet. denied); see also Tex. Civ. Prac. & Rem. Code § 134A. "Discovery by 'improper means' includes 'theft, fraud, unauthorized interception of communications, inducement of or knowing participation in a breach of confidence, and other means either wrongful in themselves or wrongful under the circumstances of the case.' " Hoover Panel Sys., Inc. v. HAT Contract, Inc., 819 F. App'x. 190, 198 (5th Cir. 2020).

6 Ward and B4 argue that Bisley has not alleged "which supposed secret or secrets the Ward Parties misappropriated." ECF No. 41 at 11. Ward and B4 also argue that Bisley did not allege that Ward or B4 used the secrets. Id. Bisley alleges that its customer information, the probability of its shipments, the prices it charges, and the amount it pays its carriers are all trade secrets that Pryde shared with Ward and B4. ECF No. 36 ¶¶ 234–39. Bisley further alleges that Ward and B4 "now use Bisley's trade secrets and proprietary information in competition with Bisley to divert and steal, among other things, Bisley's current customers and future customers via Bisley leads." Id. ¶ 240. Ward and B4's arguments are without merit.

Ward and B4 also argue that Bisley did not allege when or how Pryde shared the secrets or how Ward or B4 engaged in any "improper means." ECF No. 41 at 11. Bisley need not allege the specifics about how Ward and B4 learned the alleged secrets. Bisley's burden is to plead "enough facts to state a claim to relief that is plausible on its face." Twombly, 550 U.S. at 570. Even so, Bisley alleges that Ward and B4, along with ASG, Koebrick, Manissero, and Pryde, are part of various schemes to steal Bisley's inventory, destroy Bisley's cash flow, and otherwise harm Bisley's business. ECF No. 36 ¶¶ 130, 132, 280. It is plausible that learning Bisley's customer list and prices as part of a larger effort to harm Bisley is "wrongful under the circumstances of the case." See Hoover Panel Sys., 819 F. App'x. at 198. Bisley's motion to dismiss should be denied on this claim.

ii. Violation of DTSA: Count VI

The federal Defend Trade Secrets Act (DTSA) and TUTSA are both based on the Uniform Trade Secrets Act, and the elements under each are similar but not identical. *See DBG Grp. Invs., LLC v. Puradigm, LLC, Civil Action No. 3:21-CV-678-S, 2022 WL 313435, at *2 (N.D. Tex. Feb. 2, 2022). To allege a claim under the DTSA, the plaintiff must show that "(1) a trade secret existed, (2) the trade secret was acquired through a breach of a confidential relationship or discovered by improper means, and (3) the defendant used the trade secret without authorization from the plaintiff." CAE Integrated, L.L.C. v. Moov Techs., Inc., 44 F.4th 257, 262 (5th Cir. 2022).

First, Ward and B4 argue that Bisley's DTSA claim fails because Bisley does not "identify specific trade secret information it claims has been misappropriated." ECF No. 41 at 12 (quoting Clearline Techs. Ltd. v. Cooper B-Line, Inc., No. CIV.A. H-11-1420, 2012 WL 43366, at *11 (S.D. Tex. Jan. 9, 2012)). Ward and B4's argument is not persuasive. The court in Clearline did not define a cause of action under the DTSA. Clearline Techs. Ltd., 2012 WL 43366, at *11. Rather, the cause of action in that case was the Illinois Trade Secret Act. Id. Also, the allegations of misappropriation in that case included that the defendant used "technical and financial information," and that the parties entered a Proprietary Information Agreement. Id. The court dismissed the claim and held that it "will not infer that trade secrets exist merely from the existence of a proprietary information agreement." Id.

Here, Bisley's allegations are clear. Bisley alleges that Ward and B4 used Bisley's "recent customer list and contact information, load counts, revenue information, and pricing and profit numbers." ECF No. 36 ¶¶ 253, 257. Bisley states that "[t]hese documents and information are unique to Bisley and are not commonly known or available to the public." Id. ¶ 253.

7 Ward and B4 also argue that Bisley failed to allege that the trade secret was not generally known or readily ascertainable by proper means. ECF No. 41 at 12–13. Courts have "routinely dismiss[ed] trade secret claims where the allegations of the complaint fail to separate the alleged trade secret from public knowledge and, therefore, do not establish that the alleged trade secret was 'not generally known' or 'readily ascertainable by proper means.' " See Pie Development, LLC v. Pie Insurance Holdings, Inc., 2021 WL 3206043 (S.D. Miss. July 21, 2021), aff'd, No. 21-60593, 2023 WL 2707184 (5th Cir. Mar. 30, 2023). Bisley's allegations state that:

> Bisley takes reasonable steps to protect the secrecy of its confidential, proprietary, and trade secret information. Bisley's reasonable steps include but are not limited to: requiring all employees to maintain the confidentiality of proprietary and trade secret business information; restricting employee access to proprietary and trade secret information to employees with a legitimate business need to know such information; and enforcing disciplinary action against employees for improper use or disclosure of proprietary and trade secret information.

ECF No. 36 ¶¶ 254, 260 ("information misappropriated by ASG and Third-Party Defendants derives independent economic value from not being known within the industry to Bisley's competitors"). Thus, Ward and B4's argument fails here.

Ward and B4 also argue that "Bisley does not offer any explanation of how the Ward Parties supposedly 'disclosed or used' any of Bisley's alleged trade secrets." ECF No. 41 at 13. Bisley alleges that "ASG and Third-Party Defendants disclosed and used Bisley's recent customer list and contact information, load counts, revenue information, and pricing and profit numbers and other trade secret and proprietary information for the unlawful economic benefit of ASG[.]" ECF No. 36 ¶ 257. Bisley also alleges that Ward and B4 "use Bisley's trade secrets and proprietary information in competition with Bisley to divert and steal, among other things, Bisley's current customers and future customers via Bisley leads." Id. ¶ 233–42. Bisley has met its burden and Ward and B4's motion to dismiss Bisley's DTPA claim should be denied.

iii. TUTSA Preemption

TUTSA "displaces conflicting tort, restitutionary, and other law of this state providing civil remedies for misappropriation of a trade secret." Tex. Civ. Prac. & Rem. Code § 134A.007(a). TUTSA preemption prevents inconsistent theories of relief for the same underlying harm by displacing alternative common law theories of recovery that are based on trade secret misappropriation. Super Starr Int'l, LLC v. Fresh Tex Produce, LLC, 531 S.W.3d 829, 843 (Tex. App.—Corpus Christi–Edinburg 2017, no pet.). Trade secrets are defined broadly and include:

 © 2025 Thomson Reuters. No claim to original U.S. Government Works.

> all forms and types of information, including business [information], ... or list[s] of actual or potential customers or suppliers, whether tangible or intangible ... if:
>
> (A) the owner of the trade secret has taken reasonable measures under the circumstances to keep the information secret; and
>
> (B) the information derives independent economic value, actual or potential, from not being generally known to, and not being readily ascertainable through proper means by, another person who can obtain economic value from the disclosure or use of the information.

Id. § 134A.002(6). Whether a trade secret exists "is properly considered a question of fact to be decided by the judge or jury as fact-finder." Gen. Universal Sys., Inc. v. Lee, 379 F.3d 131, 150 (5th Cir. 2004).

Federal district courts in Texas are not in agreement about how to apply TUTSA's preemption provision. See, e.g., DHI Group, Inc. v. Kent, 397 F. Supp. 3d 904, 922 (S.D. Tex. 2019) (comparing Embarcadero Techs., Inc. v. Redgate Software, Inc., 1:17-cv-444-RP, 2018 WL 315753, at *3 (W.D. Tex. Jan. 5, 2018) (finding that TUTSA's preemption extends to "all claims based on the alleged improper taking of confidential business information") with AMID, Inc. v. Medic Alert Found. United States, Inc., 241 F.Supp.3d 788, 827 (S.D. Tex. 2017) (allowing the plaintiff to allege misappropriation of information in the alternative under TUTSA as trade secrets and under common law as confidential)); see also Topstone Communications, Inc. v. Xu, No. 4:22-CV-00048, 2024 WL 1517637, at *6 (S.D. Tex. Apr. 8, 2024) ("TUTSA's preemption provision is best read to preempt only those claims that allege misappropriation of trade secrets.").

8 Despite the widespread disagreement on certain aspects of TUTSA preemption, "[m]ost district courts in Texas hold that if a plaintiff's tort claim is premised on the same factual allegations as its claim for trade secret misappropriation, the claim is preempted by TUTSA." Recif Res., LLC v. Juniper Cap. Advisors, L.P., Civil Action No. H-19-2953, 2020 WL 6748049, at *13 (S.D. Tex. Nov. 17, 2020); see also Embarcadero Techs., Inc., 2018 WL 315753, at *3 (stating that "allow[ing] multiple theories of relief for [the] same underlying harm would be to read the preemption provision too narrowly"); Amid, Inc., 241 F.Supp.3d at 826 (stating that the focus of the preemption analysis is "on whether the facts relied on to support the unfair-competition claim differ from those supporting the TUTSA claim"); 360 Mortg. Grp., LLC v. Homebridge Fin. Servs., Inc., CAUSE NO.: A-14-CA-00847-SS, 2016 WL 900577, at *8 (W.D. Tex. Mar. 2, 2016) (stating that a claim for conversion "based on the same facts as those underlying [a] claim for misappropriation of trade secrets" was wholly preempted).

The undersigned has previously considered this issue on multiple occasions. See EthosEnergy Field Services, LLC v. Axis Mech. Group, Inc., No. CV H-21-3954, 2022 WL 2707734 (S.D. Tex. June 10, 2022), R&R adopted, No. CV H-21-3954, 2022 WL 2704853 (S.D. Tex. July 11, 2022); see also Stress Eng'g Services, Inc. v. Olson, No. CV H-21-3210, 2022 WL 4086574 (S.D. Tex. Aug. 4, 2022), R&R adopted, No. CV H-21-3210, 2022 WL 4084433 (S.D. Tex. Sept. 6, 2022). Here, as before, the court relies on the common thread among district courts. That is, common law claims are preempted when they are based on the same facts as a TUTSA claim.

Ward and B4 argue that portions of Bisley's claims are preempted by TUTSA because they depend on facts that Bisley relies on as trade secrets in its TUTSA claims. ECF No. 41 at 23. Bisley identifies its "customer and supplier lists, financial data, including the cost, revenue, and the probability of Bisley's shipments" as well as its customer information, prices it charges, and the amount it pays its carriers as trade secrets. ECF No. 36 ¶¶ 233–35.

None of Bisley's claims, aside from those under TUTSA and the DTSA, rely wholly on alleged trade secrets. Accordingly, to the extent that Bisley's tort claims are based on misappropriation of that which Bisley defines as its trade secrets, those theories of recovery should be dismissed. This ruling would not dismiss any claim in its entirety.

E. Civil Conspiracy: Count VIII

The elements of civil conspiracy are: "(1) two or more persons; (2) an object to be accomplished; (3) a meeting of minds on the object or course of action; (4) one or more unlawful, overt acts; and (5) damages as the proximate result." *Agar Corp., Inc. v. Electro Circuits Int'l, LLC, 580 S.W.3d 136, 141 (Tex. 2019) (quoting Massey v. Armco Steel Co., 652 S.W.2d 932, 934 (Tex. 1983)).

Ward and B4 argue that Bisley fails to allege the third, fourth, and fifth elements. ECF No. 41 at 20. Bisley alleges that "ASG and Third-Party Defendants agreed to: terminate the noncompete clause between ASG and Bisley to take Bisley's current and potential business; retain monies owed to Bisley; purchase chemicals that were then converted to ASG and/or the co-conspirators, either directly or indirectly; stole inventory; and sold inventory off the books." ECF No. 36 ¶ 279. Bisley also alleges that, as part of the alleged conspiracy, Ward and B4 were part of a scheme to fraudulently request seven orders of sodium aluminate that never arrived to the customer. Id. ¶¶ 138–39, 160(k). Considering all of Bisley's allegations, Bisley has plausibly alleged each element of a conspiracy. That is, Ward and B4 were part of a meeting of the minds with ASG, Pryde, Koebrick, and Manissero; Ward and B4 performed overt acts in furtherance of the agreement, such as fraudulently ordering sodium aluminate; and Bisley was injured by the conspiracy.

9 Ward and B4's comparison to Twombly is not instructive here. The court has already found that Bisley plausibly alleged fraud, theft, and conversion as part of the scheme to harm Bisley, which is more than "rational and competitive business strategy [.]" Twombly, 550 U.S. at 566. Thus, Bisley's conspiracy claim survives and Ward and B4's motion should be denied for this claim.

F. Good Faith and Fair Dealing: Count XII

"Texas law does not impose a generalized contractual duty of good faith and fair dealing and, in fact, rejects it in almost all circumstances." Hux v. S. Methodist Univ., 819 F.3d 776, 781 (5th Cir. 2016). A duty of good faith and fair dealing arises if the parties are (1) in a formal fiduciary relationship or (2) "in a special or confidential relationship." Id. A "special relationship" is "earmarked by specific characteristics including: long standing relations, an imbalance of bargaining power, and significant trust and confidence shared by the parties." Id. Texas courts have restricted "special relationships" to narrow situations between an insurer and an insured and have declined to extend the relationship to other situations including employer-employee, lender-borrower, and supplier-distributor. Id. at 781–82 (citing cases).

Bisley does not allege a formal fiduciary relationship nor a special relationship with Ward or B4. Bisley alleges that "Ward was a double agent acting on behalf of and/or for the benefit of ASG, himself, and [his] co-conspirators, while simultaneously operating as an employee of Riteks." ECF No. 36 ¶ 6. Bisley also alleges that Ward approved "inflated" commission prices "in his capacity as a Sales Director for Riteks," id. ¶ 328, and that the commissions arrangement "appears to have been separately agreed between Pryde, ASG, and Ward. Relevantly, these commissions were paid to B4 Arrow Consulting by ASG, rather than directly from Bisley." Id. ¶ 329.

Ward and B4 state that "Ward was an independent contractor/consultant engaged to locate potential customers for Bisley/ASG[.]" ECF No. 41 at 13 n.4.

Bisley has not alleged a formal fiduciary relationship, and the allegations do not show that Ward and Bisley had a long-standing relationship, an imbalance of bargaining power, nor that the parties shared significant trust. Accordingly, Bisley has not shown that it is plausibly entitled to relief, and Ward and B4's motion to dismiss should be granted on the breach of good faith and fair dealing claim.

G. Aiding and Abetting Breach of Fiduciary Duty: Count XIV

Ward and B4 argue that Texas does not recognize claims for aiding and abetting breach of fiduciary duty. ECF No. 41 at 18. The Supreme Court of Texas recently stated that it "has not expressly decided whether Texas recognizes a cause of action for aiding and abetting." First United Pentecostal Church of Beaumont v. Parker, 514 S.W.3d 214, 224 (Tex. 2017).

Bisley cites to a case from the Southern District of Texas that analyzes a claim for aiding and abetting breach of fiduciary duty on a motion for summary judgment. ECF No. 48 at 20-21 (citing PrevMED, Inc. v. MNM-1997, Inc., No. CV H-15-2856, 2017 WL 785656, at *12 (S.D. Tex. Feb. 28, 2017)). In that case, similar to First United Pentecostal Church of Beaumont, it does not appear that the parties argued that the cause of action did not exist. PrevMED, Inc., 2017 WL 785656, at *11–12; see also First United Pentecostal Church of Beaumont, 514 S.W.3d at 224 ("the parties do not raise or brief the question of whether such a cause of action exists in Texas, so we will assume, without deciding, that it does."). The court ultimately granted a motion for summary judgment on the claim for aiding and abetting breach of fiduciary duty. PrevMED, Inc., 2017 WL 785656, at *11–12

10 Texas appellate courts have not conclusively decided whether a claim for aiding and abetting exists. In 2011, the Dallas Court of Appeals recognized an aiding and abetting breach of fiduciary duty claim. Darocy v. Abildtrup, 345 S.W.3d 129, 137-38 (Tex. App.—Dallas 2011, no pet.). In analyzing this claim, the court stated that "[w]hen a defendant knowingly participates in the breach of a fiduciary duty, he becomes a joint tortfeasor and is liable as such." Id. at 137.

But in 2020, the San Antonio Court of Appeals separated a claim for "knowing participation in breach of fiduciary duty" from a claim of "aiding and abetting a breach of fiduciary duty." *Straehla v. AL Glob. Services, LLC, 619 S.W.3d 795, 803–04 (Tex. App.—San Antonio 2020, pet. denied). There, the court stated that the parties "do not dispute that knowing participation is a viable cause of action under Texas law. We, therefore, consider [Plaintiffs] claims to be for knowing participation in breach of fiduciary duty, and we do not separately consider aiding-and-abetting claims. We offer no opinion on whether an aiding-and-abetting cause of action is viable under Texas law." Id. at 803 n.3. Similarly, the Corpus Christi-Edinburg Court of Appeals noted that "when a breach of fiduciary duty claim fails, so should an aiding and abetting in the breach of fiduciary duty claim, to the extent one exists in Texas." *Super Starr Int'l, LLC, 531 S.W.3d at 847 (emphasis added).

The Fifth Circuit held in 2018 that a party was not entitled to relief on an aiding and abetting claim and the defendant was entitled to judgment as a matter of law "because no such claim exists in Texas." In re DePuy Orthopaedics, Inc., Pinnacle Hip Implant Prod. Liab. Litig., 888 F.3d 753, 782 (5th Cir. 2018). There, the court held that "a federal court exceeds the bounds of its legitimacy in fashioning novel causes of action not yet recognized by the state courts." Id. at 781. When the district court recognized a cause of action for aiding and abetting, "despite ample warning, the district court exceeded its circumscribed institutional role and 'expanded Texas law beyond its presently existing boundary.' " Id.

Because the Supreme Court of Texas has not ruled on this issue and because the Fifth Circuit held that aiding and abetting claims do not exist in Texas, Bisley has not shown that it is entitled to relief on this claim. As such, Ward and B4's motion to dismiss should be granted on the aiding and abetting breach of fiduciary duty claim.

H. Tortious Interference Claims: Counts XV and XVI

i. Tortious Interference with Existing Contracts: Count XV

The elements for tortious interference with an existing contract are: "(1) an existing contract subject to interference, (2) a willful and intentional act of interference with the contract, (3) that proximately caused the plaintiff's injury, and (4) caused actual damages or loss." Prudential Ins. Co. of Am. v. Fin. Review Services, Inc., 29 S.W.3d 74, 77 (Tex. 2000).

Ward and B4 argue that Bisley has not alleged the second or third elements of its claim. The court disagrees.

Bisley alleges that, as part of a larger scheme to harm Bisley, Ward and B4 "increased sales prices causing Bisley to pay inflated commission rates that exceeded the rates agreed to in the Agreements" and "conspired to destroy Bisley's cash flow by ordering mass amounts of sodium aluminate on 'consignment' for Riteks." ECF No. 36 ¶¶ 349–50. Bisley's allegations state that Bisley had to "pay inflated commission rates" due to Third-Party Defendants' actions. Id. ¶ 349. As such, Bisley has plausibly stated a claim to relief and Ward and B4's motion should be denied for Bisley's tortious interference with existing contracts claim.

ii. Tortious Interference with Prospective Contracts: Count XVI

11 The elements for tortious interference with prospective contracts require:

> (1) a reasonable probability that the parties would have entered into a contractual relationship; (2) an "independently tortious or unlawful" act by the defendant that prevented the relationship from occurring; (3) the defendant did such act with a conscious desire to prevent the relationship from occurring or knew that the interference was certain or substantially certain to occur as a result of his conduct; and (4) the plaintiff suffered actual harm or damage as a result of the defendant's interference.

Faucette v. Chantos, 322 S.W.3d 901, 914 (Tex. App.—Houston [14th Dist.] 2010, no pet.).

Ward and B4 argue that Bisley failed to allege "the elements of this cause of action for any of these potential customers[.]" ECF No. 41 at 15. But Bisley has met its burden. For example, Bisley alleges that, after a potential customer contacted Bisley through its website, Bisley sent that potential customer a sample of its product. ECF No. 36 ¶ 52. Then, Ward, with others, excluded Bisley from further conversations with the customer and negotiated a sale by ASG, "bypassing and stealing business from Bisley." Id. ¶¶ 49–57. This plausibly states that Ward, as part of a larger scheme against Bisley, unlawfully acted to prevent Bisley from engaging in conversations with a potential customer. Bisley has alleged each element of a claim for tortious interference with a prospective contract, and Ward and B4's motion should be denied on this claim.

I. Business Disparagement: Count XVII

Business disparagement is actionable when there is "publication of a disparaging statement concerning the product [or services] of another" and "(1) the statement is false, (2) published with malice, (3) with the intent that the publication cause pecuniary loss or the reasonable recognition that it will, and (4) pecuniary loss does in fact result." Innovative Block of S. Tex., Ltd. v. Valley Builders Supply, Inc., 603 S.W.3d 409, 417 (Tex. 2020).

Ward and B4 argue that Bisley merely recites the elements of business disparagement and does not allege any false statements sufficient to plead a claim. ECF No. 41 at 16. Indeed, Bisley states that "ASG and Third-Party Defendants have made disparaging oral statements about Bisley's business to many vendors and customers" knowing that these statements would likely result in inducing others not to deal with Bisley. ECF No. 36 ¶¶ 361–62. Bisley also alleges that Ward and B4 were part of a concerted effort to direct potential business away from Bisley. Id. ¶ 83.

Bisley also alleges that "[i]n May 2022, Pryde informed Bisley that Eastern Wholesale Fence, LLC ("Eastern Fence"), a major Bisley account, would no longer be a customer of Bisley's due to its financial difficulties." Id. ¶ 88. Ward and B4 argue that this is not sufficient to allege that Ward made any disparaging statements about Bisley at all. ECF No. 41 at 16–17. The court agrees. Because Bisley has not alleged that Ward or B4 made untrue statements about Bisley with the intent to cause Bisley pecuniary loss, Ward and B4's motion should be granted for Bisley's business disparagement claim.

J. Unjust Enrichment: Count XVIII

12 Unjust enrichment occurs when someone secures a benefit wrongfully or passively receives a benefit that would be unconscionable to retain. Eun Bok Lee v. Ho Chang Lee, 411 S.W.3d 95, 111 (Tex. App.—Houston [1st Dist.] 2013, no pet.). To successfully assert a claim for unjust enrichment, a party must allege that "one person has obtained a benefit from another by fraud, duress, or the taking of an undue advantage." Heldenfels Bros., Inc. v. City of Corpus Christi, 832 S.W.2d 39, 41 (Tex. 1992).

Ward and B4 argue that Bisley's unjust enrichment claim fails because Bisley has not plausibly alleged (1) how third-party defendants "obtained a benefit" from their acts or (2) that Ward or B4 committed any acts constituting fraud, duress, or taking undue advantage. ECF No. 41 at 17. Ward and B4 also argue that two of Bisley's theories to support its claim for unjust enrichment fail because they are restated breach of contract claims. Id.

As the court explained above, Bisley alleges that Ward and B4 earned inflated commissions for some sales to Riteks. ECF No. 36 ¶ 326. These commissions, Bisley alleges, were part of a larger scheme to harm Bisley. Id. ¶¶ 349–50. These allegations plausibly state that Ward and B4 obtained a benefit by taking advantage of Bisley and as part of a larger scheme to harm Bisley. At this stage in the proceedings, the court cannot say that this is a restated breach of contract claim. Ward and B4's motion should be denied for Bisley's unjust enrichment claim.

K. Request for Injunctive Relief

Bisley requests injunctive relief against ASG and Third-Party Defendants. ECF No. 36 ¶¶ 460–66. Ward and B4 argue that the court should dismiss this request for relief because Bisley has not plausibly alleged a likelihood of success on the merits of any of its claims. ECF No. 41 at 23–24. Because the court found otherwise above, Ward and B4's motion to dismiss Bisley's claim for injunctive relief should be denied.

L. Leave to Amend

The parties engaged in significant briefing on this motion to dismiss. Yet, in the last sentence of its response, Bisley states, "[i]n the event the Court finds Bisley's Third-Party Complaint deficient, Bisley requests permission to amend." ECF No. 48 at 25.

"Dismissing an action after giving the plaintiff only one opportunity to state his case is ordinarily unjustified." Davoodi v. Austin Indep. Sch. Dist., 755 F.3d 307, 310 (5th Cir. 2014) (quoting Jacquez v. Procunier, 801 F.2d 789, 792 (5th Cir. 1986)). A party seeking leave to amend "must give the court at least some notice of what ... [his] amendments would be and how those amendments would cure the initial complaint's defects." Scott v. U.S. Bank Nat'l Ass'n, 16 F.4th 1204, 1209 (5th Cir. 2021) (citation omitted). The court may deny leave "[i]f the plaintiff does not provide a copy of the amended complaint [or] explain how the defects could be cured." Id. (citation omitted).

Here, Bisley has amended its third-party complaint once before, it has not provided a copy of its newest proposed amended third-party complaint, and it has not explained how any defects in its pleading might be cured. Bisley has not stated any arguments or provided any legal support for its cursory request. Thus, to the extent that Bisley asks for leave to amend, that motion should be denied.

4. Conclusion

For the foregoing reasons, the court recommends that Ward and B4's Motion to Dismiss, ECF No. 41, be GRANTED in part and DENIED in part.

13 The parties have fourteen days from service of this Memorandum and Recommendation to file written objections. 28 U.S.C. § 636(b)(1); Fed. R. Civ. P. 72. Failure to timely file objections will preclude appellate review of factual findings or legal conclusions, except for plain error. See Thomas v. Arn, 474 U.S. 140, 147–49 (1985); Rodriguez v. Bowen, 857 F.2d 275, 276–77 (5th Cir. 1988).

All Citations

Slip Copy, 2024 WL 5036568

Footnotes

1 The court advised the parties of Judge Lake's normal practice to "allow only one dispositive motion per party." ECF Nos. 68, 73, Ward and B4 provided the court with their intent to proceed with their motion to dismiss. ECF No. 70. Ward and B4 are therefore barred from later seeking summary judgment on any remaining third-party claims against them. ECF No. 68.

2 ASG also alleges that "Riteks was one of ASG's key clients." ECF No. 40-1 ¶¶ 46–47.

End of Document

© 2025 Thomson Reuters. No claim to original U.S. Government Works.

CASE NO. 33

2024 WL 5108450
Only the Westlaw citation
is currently available.
United States District Court,
S.D. Texas, Houston Division.

ASG CHEMICAL HOLDINGS, LLC, Plaintiff,
v.
BISLEY INTERNATIONAL, LLC, Defendant.

Civil Action H
-
23
-
4333
|
Filed December 12, 2024
|
Entered December 13, 2024

Attorneys and Law Firms

Laura Gibson, Mukul S. Kelkar, Dentons U.S. LLP, Houston, TX, Cody Shane Paschall, James David Tuck, Dentons U.S. LLP, Dallas, TX, for Plaintiff.

Dorsey R. Carson, Jr., Kathryn Pickett Goff, Carson Law Group PLLC, Jackson, MS, for Defendant.

ORDER

Sim Lake, Senior United States District Judge

1 On November 18, 2024, Magistrate Judge Peter Bray recommended that the court grant in part and deny in part Third-Party Defendants Ward and B4 Arrow Consulting LLC's 12(b)(6) Motion to Dismiss Bisley's Amended Third-Party Complaint. ECF No. 98. On December 3, 2024, Third-Party Defendants Ward and B4 Arrow Consulting LLC objected to the Memorandum and Recommendation. ECF No. 102. The objections are DENIED. The court ADOPTS the memorandum and recommendation as its memorandum and opinion.

All Citations

Slip Copy, 2024 WL 5108450

End of Document

© 2025 Thomson Reuters. No claim to original U.S. Government Works.

CASE NO. 34

2010 WL 2488031
United States District Court,
S.D. Texas,
Laredo Division.

SPECIALTIES OF MEXICO INC. et al, Plaintiffs
v.
MASTERFOODS USA.

Civil Action
No.
L
–
09
–
88
.
|
June 14, 2010.

West KeySummary

1 Sales 🔑 By seller

Purchasers of candy failed to show an overarching agreement with candy sellers and thus failed to establish a breach of contract when seller ended the business relationship by refusing to fill purchaser's requests for product. Purchasers did not allege a specific offer, acceptance, consideration, or material terms such as the duration of the alleged contract, a quantity to be sold, or a price to be paid.

6 Cases that cite this headnote

Attorneys and Law Firms

Jesse R. Castillo, Edward C. Snyder, III, Castillo Snyder PC, San Antonio, TX, for Plaintiffs.

J.A. Tony Canales, Nancy M. Simonson, Canales Simonson PC, Corpus Christi, TX, Dane H. Butswinkas, David S. Blatt, John E. Clabby, Williams & Connolly LLP, Washington, DC, for Masterfoods USA.

ORDER

MICAELA ALVAREZ, District Judge.

1 On January 26, 2010, Defendant Masterfoods USA ("Defendant") filed the instant Motion to Dismiss Plaintiff Specialties of Mexico, Inc. ("SoM") and Plaintiff Distribuidora de Basicos Regiomontanos, S.A. de C.V.'s ("Dibaresa") (collectively "Plaintiffs") First Amended Complaint, in its entirety, under Rule 12(b)(6) for "failure to state a claim upon which relief can be granted." [Dkt. Nos. 35, 36]. After careful consideration of Defendant's Motion, the contents of the complaint, and the applicable law, the Court GRANTS, in part, and DENIES, in part, Defendant's Motion.

I. BACKGROUND

The following facts are taken from Plaintiffs' First Amended Complaint, [Dkt. No. 32].

Plaintiff SoM is a Texas corporation, based out of Laredo, Texas. [Id. at 1]. Beginning in 2004, SoM bought chocolate candy from Defendant Masterfoods USA in the United States. [Id.]. Masterfoods USA is a Delaware corporation, doing business in Texas. [Id. at 1]. After purchasing the candy in the United States, SoM would transfer the candy to Co-plaintiff Dibaresa, a Mexican Corporation, who would then sell it to retail customers in Mexico. [Id.]. Both of the Plaintiff corporations, SoM and Dibaresa, are run by the same individual, Gerardo Cantu. [Id. at 3].

As SoM's Mexican counterpart is Dibaresa, Defendant Masterfoods USA's Mexican counterpart is Masterfoods Mexico. Plaintiffs allege that Masterfoods USA and Masterfoods Mexico are both "controlled and directed" by Mars, Inc., with Masterfoods USA handling candy sales in the United States and Masterfoods Mexico[1] handling candy sales in Mexico. [Id. at 12]. Importantly, neither Masterfoods Mexico, nor Mars, Inc., has been named as a defendant in this case; Masterfoods USA is the sole named defendant.

SoM would purchase the candy in Texas from Masterfoods USA through a third party, Sell–Thru Services, Inc. ("Sell–Thru").[2] [Id.]. SoM would place orders with Sell–Thru, and Defendant would fill them. [Id.]. "Dibaresa did not buy product in the United States or deal directly with Defendant [Masterfoods USA]." [Id. at 18].

When the relationship between SoM and Masterfoods USA began, Masterfoods USA was "aware that the products being ordered were for sale in Mexico." [Id. at 3]. With that knowledge, Plaintiffs allege that Masterfoods USA agreed to "sell product to [SoM][3] that [Masterfoods Mexico] did not have in its portfolio," in order to "maximize the sales of Mars, Inc." [Id. at 10, 5].

In December 2005, Masterfoods Mexico, aware of Dibaresa's sales in Mexico but unaware of where the imported candy was coming from, contacted Cantu to discuss the possibility of selling candy to Dibaresa in Mexico. [Id. at 5]. In April 2006, Masterfoods Mexico began contacting Dibaresa customers in Mexico, and offering to provide them with the same products as Dibaresa, at a lower price. [Id. at 6]. Dibaresa agreed to buy certain products from Masterfoods Mexico, but continue to handle the rest of its products through the United States. [Id. at 7]. "Masterfoods [Mexico][4] pressured Dibaresa concerning its source of supply and prices." [Id.].

2 "In April 2007, Dibaresa became aware that Masterfoods [Mexico][5] was acting very differently from what it was representing to Dibaresa." [Id.]. Specifically, Masterfoods Mexico was instructing Dibaresa customers to stop buying from Dibaresa because "Dibaresa was doing a lot of damage to the market," and that if they did not stop buying from Dibaresa, Masterfoods Mexico would not sell them any other products. [Id.]. Dibaresa then wrote to "Daniel Gilbert[6] asking for an explanation because the information and plans that Dibaresa had disclosed were being used by Masterfoods [Mexico][7] against Dibarsea." [Id.].

During this time, SoM continued to buy products from Masterfoods USA in the United States, and the two continued their business relationship. [Id.]. In May 2007, Ken Fridey, an employee of Masterfoods USA, wrote Cantu saying "I spoke with [Masterfoods] Mexico yesterday and they advised me that they are still working on a proposal for you. For now, it is business as usual until they finalize their proposal." [Id.].

Through July 2007, SoM[8] continued to "[issue] purchase orders and [buy] Mars product [from Masterfoods USA] through Sell–Thru." [Id.]. "SoM and Dibaresa continue[d] to promote Defendant's products in Mexico, and introduce [Ken Fridey] to customers such as 7–Eleven Mexico at product expositions in Mexico in September 2007." [Id. at 8]. In October 2007, Sell–Thru informed Cantu that Ken Fridey had instructed Sell–Thru to stop supplying Masterfoods USA's product to SoM. [Id.]. Ken Fridey informed Cantu that any future products should be purchased from Masterfoods Mexico. [Id.]. Ultimately, in January 2008, Sell–Thru refused to sell Cantu any of Masterfoods USA's products, at the request of Masterfoods USA. [Id.].

Cantu then tried to purchase candy products through Masterfoods Mexico, but encountered problems, such as products with "short expiration dates," "mislabeling," and sometimes no response at all. [Id. at 10]. In the Spring of 2008, "Cantu learned that while Masterfoods [Mexico] was representing that it would supply product, Masterfoods [Mexico] was contacting Dibaresa's clients such as OXXO and 7–Eleven, and telling them that Masterfoods [Mexico] was going to be the ones (sic) supplying the products and at a price below Dibaresa's price." [Id. at 11]. Cantu confronted Masterfoods Mexico about this action in an email, and Masterfoods Mexico did not respond. [Id.]. In December 2008, Masterfoods Mexico disclosed that they "now wanted to decide what entered into Mexico and what would not enter according to its brand strategy." [Id. at 12]. Cantu tried to continue the relationship in early 2009, but Masterfoods Mexico "basically shut out SoM and Dibaresa through its operations in Mexico, [Masterfoods USA's] refusal to sell in the USA and Sell–Thru's refusal to sell without Defendant's approval." [Id.].

3 On July 3, 2009, SoM and Dibaresa filed this action against Masterfoods USA in the 111th Judicial District Court, Webb County, Texas. [Dkt. No. 1]. On August 14, 2009, Masterfoods USA removed the case to this Court, on the basis of diversity jurisdiction, 28 U .S.C. § 1332, as Plaintiff SoM is a Texas corporation, Plaintiff Dibaresa is a Mexican corporation, Defendant Masterfoods USA is a Delaware Corporation, and the amount in controversy exceeds $75,000. [Id.]. On January 5, 2010, Plaintiffs filed their First Amended Complaint, alleging: (1) breach of contract; (2) breach of duty of good faith and fair dealing; (3) tortuous interference with contract and business relations; (4) common law fraud; (5) negligent misrepresentation; (6) three claims under Mexican Law; and (7) civil conspiracy. [Dkt. No. 32]. In the instant motion, Masterfoods USA asserts that each claim should be dismissed for failure to state a claim under Rule 12(b)(6), and each will be discussed in turn.

II. DISCUSSION

Under Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 8(a)(2), a pleading must state "a short and plain statement of the claim showing that the pleader is entitled to relief." FED. R. CIV. P. 8(a)(2). "The pleading standard Rule 8 announces does not require 'detailed factual allegations,' but it demands more than an unadorned, the-defendant-unlawfully-harmed-me accusation." Ashcroft v. Iqbal, —— U.S. ——, ——, 129 S.Ct. 1937, 1949, 173 L.Ed.2d 868 (2009) (citing Bell Atlantic Corp. v. Twombly, 550 U.S. 544, 555, 127 S.Ct. 1955, 167 L.Ed.2d 929 (2007)). For a complaint to withstand a Rule 12(b)(6) motion to dismiss, it "must contain sufficient factual matter, accepted as true, to state a claim to relief that is plausible on its face." Id. A complaint meets this requirement when it contains facts that allow the court "to draw the reasonable inference that the defendant is liable for the misconduct alleged." Id. When evaluating a complaint against a 12(b)(6) motion, the Supreme Court in Iqbal further clarified:

> Two working principles underlie our decision in Twombly. First, the tenet that a court must accept as true all of the allegations contained in a complaint is inapplicable to legal conclusions.... Second, only a complaint that states a plausible claim for relief survives a motion to dismiss. Determining whether a complaint states a plausible claim for relief will, as the Court of Appeals observed, be a context-specific task that requires the reviewing court to draw on its judicial experience and common sense. But where the well-pleaded facts do not permit the court to infer more than the mere possibility of misconduct, the complaint has alleged-but it has not "show[n]"-"that the pleader is entitled to relief."

Id. at 1949–50 (citing FED. R. CIV. P. 8(a)(2)). After recognizing the applicable standards set out in Iqbal and Twombly, the Court now turns to the merits of Defendant's motion.

A. Choice of Law

In contract, Plaintiffs claim breach of contract and breach of the duty of good faith under Texas law. [Dkt. No. 32 at 12–14]. Neither Plaintiffs nor Defendant contend that any law other than Texas should govern theses claims. In addition to Texas contract claims, Plaintiffs plead tort claims under both Texas and Mexican law. [Dkt. No. 32 at 14–21]. Because a court must draw its own "legal conclusions" in addressing a Rule 12(b)(6) motion, the initial conclusion to be reached is whether Texas or Mexican law governs Plaintiffs' claims.

4 A federal district court exercising diversity jurisdiction must apply the choice of law rules of the forum state. Klaxon Co. v. Stentor Elec. Mfg. Co., 313 U.S. 487, 496, 61 S.Ct. 1020, 85 L.Ed. 1477 (1941). This Court, sitting in Texas, applies Texas choice of law principles. In making a choice-of-law determination, Texas courts apply the "most significant relationship test," as it is set forth in the Restatement (Second) of Conflict of Laws (1971). Mayo v. Hartford Life Ins. Co., 354 F.3d 400, 403 (5th Cir.2004) (citing Duncan v. Cessna Aircraft Co., 665 S.W.2d 414, 420–21 (Tex.1984)).

The Restatement applies a fact-based analysis, with § 6(2) laying out a list of factors relevant to a choice of law:

(a) the needs of the interstate and international systems,

(b) the relevant policies of the forum,

(c) the relevant policies of other interested states and the relative interests of those states in the determination of the particular issue,

(d) the protection of justified expectations,

(e) the basic policies underlying the particular field of law,

(f) certainty, predictability and uniformity of result, and

(g) ease in the determination and application of the law to be applied.

RESTATEMENT (SECOND) OF CONFLICT OF LAWS, § 6(2) (1971). Also applicable to the instant case, and helpful when applying the § 6 factors, are the later sections of the Restatement which lay out specific contacts to be taking into consideration for different types of claims. Section 188 governs contract disputes, and § 145 governs tort disputes. As Plaintiffs' amended complaint consists of both contract and tort claims, the Court will consider factors under both sections:

§ 188. [Contracts] Law Governing In Absence of Effective Choice By The Parties

...

(a) the place of contracting,

(b) the place of negotiation of the contract,

(c) the place of performance,

(d) the location of the subject matter of the contract, and

(e) the domicil, residence, nationality, place of incorporation and place of business of the parties.

...

§ 145. [Torts] The General Principle

...

(a) the place where the injury occurred,

(b) the place where the conduct causing the injury occurred,

(c) the domicil, residence, nationality, place of incorporation and place of business of the parties, and

(d) the place where the relationship, if any, between the parties is centered.

RESTATEMENT (SECOND) OF CONFLICT OF LAWS, §§ 188, 145 (1971).

Plaintiffs' contract claims are based on the relationship between Plaintiff SoM and Defendant Masterfoods USA, and their dealings in Texas. Defendant Masterfoods USA is a Delaware corporation, doing business in Texas. [Dkt. No. 32 at 1–2]. Plaintiff SoM is a Texas corporation. Under § 188, Plaintiffs' Amended Complaint does not specify the place of contracting or the place of the negotiation of the contract, but as the parties' relationship is centered in Texas, both are most likely Texas. The place of performance was "the United States," again presumably Texas, as Plaintiffs would later transfer the products into Mexico.

[Id. at 3]. The subject matter of the contract is not as applicable in this case as in others, as the subject matter here is an obligation to sell, instead of a tangible item. The alleged breach, by refusing to sell, also occurred in Texas. The alleged damages arise from "lost sales and profits," which also presumably arose in Texas, as it is not alleged that Plaintiff SoM ever sold products directly in Mexico. [Id. at 13].

5 Plaintiffs' tort claims are also based on dealings between Plaintiff SoM and Defendant Masterfoods USA, but in a slightly different manner. Plaintiffs allege that Defendant Masterfoods USA communicated misrepresentations to Plaintiff SoM about the intentions and actions of (non-party) Masterfoods Mexico. [Id. at 7]. The damages arising from the various torts alleged center around the loss of business and customers in Mexico by Plaintiff Dibaresa, due to (non-party) Masterfoods Mexico's actions. The interactions between Plaintiff Dibaresa and Masterfoods Mexico, both Mexican corporations, occurred in Mexico and thus would argue for the application of Mexican law. However, as a non-party, Masterfoods Mexico's nationality is irrelevant in a suit against only Masterfoods USA. Under § 145, the alleged misrepresentations by Defendant were made and received in Texas. Reliance allegedly occurred in both Texas and Mexico, with Plaintiff SoM relying on the representations in Texas and Plaintiff Dibaresa relying on the representations in Mexico.

Under the general factors of § 6, "the protection of justified expectations" would weigh in favor of the application of Texas law. SoM's relationship with Masterfoods USA was centered in Texas, so both would be justified in expecting Texas law to govern this relationship. Also, "ease in the determination and application of the law to be applied" would argue for Texas over Mexican law, as this Court sits in Texas. While Mexico certainly has an interest in protecting the rights of Dibaresa as a Mexican Corporation, Texas has the same interests in protecting the rights of SoM as a Texas corporation and Masterfoods USA as a corporation licensed to do business, and doing business, in Texas. Texas also has an interest in resolving disputes arising within its borders. The fact that any claim Plaintiff Dibaresa may have against non-party Masterfoods Mexico concerning dealings in Mexico can be adjudicated under Mexican law in a Mexican court, also argues for the corollary, the application of Texas law in a United States court to dealings between SoM and Masterfoods USA. It must also be noted that so far as an application of Texas law is adverse to Plaintiffs interests, it was Plaintiffs themselves who chose a Texas forum in which to bring suit.

Considering all of these factors, the Court finds that Texas law should govern all of Plaintiffs' claims against Defendant Masterfoods USA under the "most significant relationship" test. This determination "necessarily precludes the application of [Mexican] law." Vasquez v. Bridgestone/Firestone, Inc., 325 F.3d 665, 680 (5th Cir.2003). Thus, Plaintiffs' claims under Mexican law are DISMISSED, and Texas law will govern the remainder of Plaintiffs' claims.

B. Breach of Contract

To prevail on a claim for breach of contract in Texas, a plaintiff must show: "(1) existence of a valid contract, (2) performance or tendered performance by the plaintiff, (3) breach of contract by the defendant, and (4) damages caused by the breach." Royce Bane Invs., Inc. v. McGinn, 2008 WL 4335115, *2 (Tex.App.-Tyler 2008) (citing Roof Sys., Inc. v. Johns Manville Corp., 130 S.W.3d 430, 442 (Tex.App.-Houston [14th Dist.] 2004, no pet.)). To establish the first element, existence of a valid contract, the plaintiff must show "(1) an offer, (2) acceptance, (3) meeting of the minds, (4) each party's consent to the terms, and (5) execution and delivery of the contract with the intent that it be mutual and binding." Id. (citing Cessna Aircraft Co. v. Aircraft Network, L.L.C., 213 S.W.3d 455, 465 (Tex.App.-Dallas 2006, pet. denied)).

6 Plaintiffs assert that an overarching agreement existed with Defendant, beyond individual purchase orders, which Defendant breached by ending the business relationship and refusing to fill Plaintiffs' further requests for product. However, Plaintiffs' depiction of the agreement in the Complaint does not go beyond vague assertions. Plaintiffs' entire discussion of the agreement and the factual assertions in support of the same are as follows:

> 14. In January 2006, [Defendant] presented Cantu with a contract containing the terms of the relationship between [Defendant] and [Plaintiffs]. The contract confirmed the off-invoice allowance and requirements. [SoM] was required to exercise its best efforts to participate in [Defendant's] launches of product and pass through the off-invoice allowance to retailers.
>
> ...
>
> 40. [Defendant] agreed that it would sell product to Dibaresa that [Masterfoods Mexico] did not have in its portfolio....
>
> 41. [Ken] Fridey confirmed to Cantu that [Defendant] would supply [Plaintiffs] going forward. Fidey (sic) wrote on March 24, 2008:
>
> > Gerardo, it is encouraging that [Masterfoods Mexico] is working with you to create a long term solution for your business needs. I will confirm with [Masterfoods Mexico] the business agreement on how [Defendant] will supply you going forward....
>
> ....
>
> 44.... Fridey received purchase order (sic) from [SoM] and indicated that in accordance with the agreement with [Masterfoods Mexico], he could not supply [SoM]. This was in contradiction to the representation that [Defendant] would supply the product if [Masterfoods Mexico] would not.
>
> ...
>
> 53. [Defendant] breached the agreement with Plaintiff [SoM] by refusing to sell product it had agreed to sell. Fridey specifically agreed that [Defendant] would sell Products to [SoM] that Masterfoods Mexico would not sell. As a result of the breach, Plaintiff [SoM] suffered damages. [Defendant] refused to sell products after Masterfoods Mexico refused to sell products to Dibaresa. Such breach of contract by Defendant > has proximately caused actual and special damages to Plaintiff, including lost sales and profits, out of pocket expenses to cover the customer's (sic) needs, lost investment opportunities and damage to Plaintiff's credit, business reputation and goodwill.

[Dkt No. 32 at 5–13]. Also, in response to the instant motion, Plaintiffs admit that this overarching agreement to continue to provide products was never reduced to writing. [Dkt. No. 40 at 5]. Paragraph 14 of the complaint must be read in the context of this admission, leading to the conclusion that the "off-invoice allowances and requirements" mentioned in the January 2006 writing did not include an agreement by Defendant to sell products to Plaintiffs in the future. Plaintiffs go on, in paragraph 40, to nakedly assert that "[Defendant] agreed that it would sell product to Dibaresa that [Masterfoods Mexico] did not have in its portfolio," but do not allege a specific offer, acceptance, consideration, or material terms such as the duration of the contract, a quantity to be sold, or a price to be paid. Paragraph 41, even in the light most favorable to Plaintiffs, is neither an offer nor an acceptance. Paragraph 44 alleges facts to show that at some point (no date is indicated) Defendant received a purchase order from Plaintiffs which it refused to fill. But, without previously pleading the specifics of Defendant's obligations under the agreement, Plaintiffs are unable to demonstrate how this refusal to sell was actually a breach of contract. Again, in paragraph 55, Plaintiffs simply assert that there was an agreement to sell that was breached.

7 In sum, Plaintiffs continually refer to "the agreement," but never give any specifics of the agreement itself: offer, acceptance, consent to its terms, the terms themselves (such as duration), or consideration. Plaintiffs have pleaded sufficient facts to establish a business relationship between SoM and Masterfoods USA, that of buyer and seller over time. But Plaintiffs have failed to plead sufficient facts to establish the plausibility of an overarching, binding "contract" to sell between the two that would be breached when this relationship came to an end. While Rule 8 does not require a plaintiff to plead every detail of a contract in order to proceed on a claim for breach, it does require more than what Plaintiffs have provided in the Complaint. Plaintiffs have pleaded no facts that would suffice to move their claim for breach of contract from "possible" to "plausible," as required by Twombly, and therefore must be DISMISSED.

Additionally, given the admission that the contract was never reduced to writing, Plaintiffs claim for breach of contract may also be barred by the statute of frauds, under the Texas Business and Commerce Code § 2.201:

> (a) Except as otherwise provided in this section a contract for the sale of goods for the price of $500 or more is not enforceable by way of action or defense unless there is some writing sufficient to indicate that a contract for sale has been made between the parties and signed by the party > against whom enforcement is sought.

TEX. BUS. & COM.CODE § 2.201 (2009). Though Plaintiffs have not characterized the contract as a "requirements" contract, such contracts are also required to be in writing by § 2.201. Royce Bane Invs., Inc. v. McGinn, 2008 WL 4335115, n. 2 (Tex.App.-Tyler 2008). Also, if the duration of the contract was to be longer than one year, again, a writing would be required for enforcement. TEX. BUS. & COM.CODE § 26.01(b)(6) (2009). However, the factual insufficiencies in the Complaint which warrant dismissal under Twombly also prevent the Court from a complete analysis under the applicable statute of frauds.

C. Breach of Duty of Good Faith

Plaintiffs also allege that the "agreement by Masterfoods [USA] to sell to [SoM]" gave rise to a duty of good faith under the Texas Business and Commerce Code § 1.304, and that Masterfoods USA breached that duty. [Dkt. No. 32 at 13]. The statute provides that "[e]very contract or duty within this title imposes an obligation of good faith in its performance and enforcement." TEX. BUS. & COM.CODE § 1.304 (2009). However, as the comments to the Code make clear, and Texas courts have consistently held, "[t]his section does not support an independent cause of action for failure to perform or enforce in good faith." Id., cmt. 1; N. Nat. Gas Co. v. Conoco, Inc., 986 S.W.2d 603, 606–07 (Tex.1998). Without an underlying contract to which the duty of good faith can attach, this claim cannot stand on its own. Thus, as the claim for breach of the underlying contract has been dismissed above, this claim for breach of the accompanying duty of good faith cannot exist independently and must also be DISMISSED.

D. Common Law Fraud/Negligent Misrepresentation

8 Plaintiffs also assert common law fraud and negligent misrepresentation against Masterfoods USA. [Dkt. No. 32 at 15–17]. Higher than the pleading standard of Rule 8 discussed in Twombly/Iqbal, Rule 9(b) requires that a fraud claimant "state with particularity the circumstances constituting the fraud." FED. R. CIV. P. 9(b). "Put simply, Rule 9(b) requires the who, what, when, where, and how to be laid out." Shandong Yinguang Chem. Indus. Joint Stock Co., Ltd. v. Potter, 2010 WL 2106628, *2 (5th Cir.2010) (quoting Benchmark Electronics, Inc. v. J.M. Huber Corp., 343 F.3d 719, 724 (5th Cir.2003)). Substantively, to establish fraud under Texas law, Plaintiffs must show:

> (1) that a material representation was made;
>
> (2) the representation was false;
>
> (3) when the representation was made, the speaker knew it was false or made it recklessly without any knowledge of the truth and as a positive assertion;
>
> (4) the speaker made the representation with the intent that the other party should act upon it;
>
> (5) the party acted in reliance on the representation; and
>
> (6) the party thereby suffered injury.

Aquaplex, Inc. v. Rancho La Valencia, Inc., 297 S.W.3d 768, 774 (Tex.2009).

The only specific representation made by Defendant Masterfoods USA contained in the complaint is Ken Fridey's May 2007 email stating, "I spoke with [Masterfoods Mexico] yesterday and they advised me that they are still working on a proposal for you. For now it is business as usual until they finalize their proposal." [Dkt. No. 32 at 7]. Plaintiffs allege that this representation was false, that Masterfoods USA knew it was false, and that it was made with intention that Plaintiffs would rely upon it. [Id. at 16]. Plaintiffs also allege that they relied on the representation by continuing business as usual, by "spending significant time, and money" to market the products, "shar[ing] confidential information," and "introducing Fridey to [customers]." [Id.]. Finally, Plaintiffs allege that due to this fraud, they lost customers and profits to Masterfoods Mexico. [Id.]. While Plaintiffs' factual allegations are minimal, the Court finds that at this stage, with regards to the May 2007 email, Plaintiffs have sufficiently plead "the who, what, when, where, and how" required by Rule 9(b), providing Defendant with notice of the nature and specifics of the fraud claim against it. As such, Defendant's Motion to Dismiss this claim under Rule 12(b)(6) is DENIED.

Similar to a claim for fraud, a claim for negligent misrepresentation requires that:

> (1) a representation was made by a defendant in the course of business;
>
> (2) the defendant supplied false information for the guidance of others in their business;
>
> (3) the defendant failed to exercise reasonable care or competence in obtaining or communicating the information; and
>
> (4) the plaintiff suffered pecuniary loss by justifiably relying on the representation.

9 Brown & Brown of Texas, Inc. v. Omni Metals, Inc., 2010 WL 1240580, *16 (Tex.App.Houston [1st Dist.] 2010). Comparing these elements to the above elements for fraud, the difference between the two torts lies primarily in the defendant's mind, whether they "knew the statement was false or made it recklessly" versus a failure "to exercise reasonable care." As Plaintiffs have met the minimum requirements to state a claim for fraud (discussed above), by alternatively alleging a failure to exercise reasonable care, Plaintiffs have also stated a claim for negligent misrepresentation based on the same May 2007 statement by Defendant. Thus, Defendant's motion to dismiss Plaintiffs' claim for negligent misrepresentation is also DENIED.

E. Tortious Interference with Contract/ Prospective Business Relations

Plaintiffs also claim "tortious interference with actual contract and business relationships and prospective contract and business relationships." [Dkt. No. 32 at 14]. To be clear, this language translates into two separate torts under Texas law: "tortious interference with (actual/existing) contract" and "tortious interference with prospective business relations (prospective contract)." See

Texas Integrated Conveyor Systems, Inc. v. Innovative Conveyor Concepts, Inc., 300 S.W.3d 348, 367 (Tex.App.-Dallas 2009); Plotkin v. Joekel, 304 S.W.3d 455, 487 (Tex.App.-Houston [1st Dist.] 2009). While grouped together in the Complaint, each tort will be addressed separately by the Court.

Texas law protects existing contracts from interference by third parties. To establish a claim for tortious interference with existing contract, a Plaintiff must show:

> (1) the existence of a contract subject to interference,
>
> (2) willful and intentional interference,
>
> (3) that proximately causes damage, and
>
> (4) actual damage or loss.

All Am. Tel., Inc. v. USLD Commc'ns., Inc., 291 S.W.3d 518, 531 (Tex.App.-Fort Worth 2009). "For a plaintiff to maintain a tortious interference claim, it must produce some evidence that the defendant knowingly induced one of the contracting parties to breach its obligations under a contract." Id. at 532.

Plaintiffs allege that "Masterfoods [USA] interfered with [SoM's] agreement with SellThru by instructing Sell–Thru to not sell to [SoM]" and "Masterfoods [Mexico] interfered with Dibaresa's customer relationships and purchase orders by going to Dibaresa's customers and instructing them not to buy from Dibaresa." [Dkt. No. 32 at 14]. However, as discussed earlier, Masterfoods Mexico is not a defendant in this action, and thus any interference by it is not relevant to a claim against Defendant Masterfoods USA. Thus, the only interference at issue is Masterfoods USA's alleged interference with Sell–Thru. While Plaintiffs imply that there was some "agreement" with Sell–Thru, they do not allege or designate a specific contract with SellThru that was the subject of interference. Similar to Plaintiffs' claim for breach of contract, it is clear that a business relationship existed between SoM and Sell–Thru, that of purchaser and middle-man. But Plaintiffs have not set forth sufficient facts to show the existence of a contract obligating Sell–Thru to fill SoM's orders. Without alleging an existing contract, only generally asserting an "agreement," Plaintiffs have failed to plead this claim with facts sufficient to move it from "possible" to "plausible," as required under Rule 8 and Twombly. Accordingly, Plaintiffs' 15 / 20 claim for tortious interference with existing contract by Defendant Masterfoods USA must be DISMISSED.

10 Texas law also protects contracts that are not yet formed, but have a reasonable probability of being formed, from wrongful interference. For tortious interference with a prospective business relationship, the elements are:

> (1) a reasonable probability that the plaintiff would have entered into a business relationship;
>
> (2) an independently tortious or unlawful act by the defendant that prevented the relationship from occurring;
>
> (3) the defendant did such act with a conscious desire to prevent the relationship from occurring or the defendant knew the interference was certain or substantially certain to occur as a result of the conduct; and

(4) the plaintiff suffered actual harm or damages as a result of the defendant's interference.

Smith v. Royal Seating, Ltd., 2009 WL 3682644, *3 (Tex.App.-Austin 2009) (citing Wal–Mart Stores, Inc. v. Sturges, 52 S.W.3d 711, 726 (Tex.2001)). The Texas Supreme Court clarified:

> [T]o recover for tortious interference with a prospective business relation a plaintiff must prove that the defendant's conduct was independently tortious or wrongful. By independently tortious we do not mean that the plaintiff must be able to prove an independent tort. Rather, we mean only that the plaintiff must prove that the defendant's conduct would be actionable under a recognized tort.... Conduct that is merely "sharp" or unfair is not actionable and cannot be the basis for an action for tortious interference with prospective relations, and we disapprove of cases that suggest the contrary.

Wal–Mart Stores, 52 S.W.3d at 726.

To show interference with prospective business relations, Plaintiffs again allege that Masterfoods Mexico interfered with relationships between Dibaresa and its customers, but Masterfoods Mexico is not a defendant. With regard to Masterfoods USA, Plaintiffs allege that Masterfoods USA's action of instructing Sell–Thru to stop selling to SoM "eliminated any future business dealings between [SoM] and Dibaresa and Sell–Thru." [Dkt. No. 32 at 14]. Supporting this claim, Plaintiffs have sufficiently plead a probability of future contracts, that Defendant 16 / 20 consciously prevented those contracts, and the harm that resulted from Sell–Thru's refusal to sell. However, Plaintiffs have failed to allege the key element to this cause of action, an act that is tortious or unlawful. Plaintiffs have not alleged how Defendant's instruction to Sell–Thru to stop selling their goods to Plaintiffs rises above the level of "sharp or unfair" conduct, and amounts to an independently actionable tort, as required by the Texas Supreme Court in Wal–Mart Stores. Without pleading the existence of an independent tort on which this claim can stand, this claim must also be DISMISSED.

F. Civil Conspiracy

Plaintiffs assert an agreement between Masterfoods USA and Sell–Thru rising to the level of civil conspiracy. [Dkt. No. 32 at 20]. A civil conspiracy is actionable when two or more persons agree to accomplish an unlawful purpose, or a lawful purpose by unlawful means, and damages proximately result. Massey v. Armco Steel Co., 652 S.W.2d 932, 934 (Tex.1983). The elements of a claim for civil conspiracy are:

 © 2025 Thomson Reuters. No claim to original U.S. Government Works.

11 (1) two or more persons;

(2) an object to be accomplished;

(3) a meeting of the minds on the object or course of action;

(4)one or more unlawful, overt acts; and

(5) damages as the proximate result.

Paschal v. Great W. Drilling, Ltd., 215 S.W.3d 437, 450 (Tex.App.-Eastland 2006) (citing Juhl v. Airington, 936 S.W.2d 640, 644 (Tex.1996)). Because "[i]t is not the agreement itself but an injury to the plaintiff ... that gives rise to a cause of action for civil conspiracy," recovery is premised on an underlying tort. Paschal, 215 S.W.3d at 250. Fraud has been held to support a derivative claim for civil conspiracy. Id.

Plaintiffs allege that "[Masterfoods USA] and Sell–Thru entered into an agreement with eachother (sic) ... to the furtherance of the common design to defraud Plaintiffs and interfere with their customers in Mexico." [Dkt. No. 32 at 20]. As support, Plaintiffs state that "[t]he email in Plaintiffs (sic) possession demonstrate (sic) Sell–Thru would not sell at the direction of Masterfoods [USA] and that Sell–Thru and Masterfoods [USA] communicated about the decision not to sell." [Id.]. Plaintiffs' problem in pleading this claim is similar to the problem with their claim for tortious interference with prospective business relations: that they do not show how a direction not to sell rises to the level of an independent tort. Plaintiffs characterize this action as a "common design to defraud," but have not plead sufficient facts to show that this action was plausibly fraud. To be clear, Plaintiffs have stated a claim for fraud, discussed above. However, that fraud involves a statement by Masterfoods USA as to the operations and intentions of Masterfoods Mexico. Plaintiffs have not stated a claim for fraud based on Masterfoods USA's direction that Sell–Thru not sell to Plaintiffs. Because this direction not to sell is the only "overt act" provided by Plaintiffs in support of this claim, and Plaintiffs have not shown how this act constitutes an independent tort, their claim for civil conspiracy is not "plausible" under the pleading standards of Rule 8 and Twombly. Accordingly, Plaintiffs' claim for civil conspiracy between Defendant Masterfoods USA and Sell–Thru must be DISMISSED.

G. Statute of Limitations

Defendant also moves for dismissal of some of Plaintiffs' claims based on a two-year statute of limitations. [Dkt. No. 26 at 36]. At this point, the only claim remaining where the statute of limitations may apply is Plaintiffs' claim for negligent misrepresentation. "A statute of limitations may support dismissal under Rule 12(b)(6) where it is evident from the plaintiff's pleadings that the action is barred and the pleadings fail to raise some basis for tolling or the like." Jones v. Alcoa, Inc., 339 F.3d 359, 366 (5th Cir.2003). Defendant correctly asserts that a two-year statute of limitations period applies to negligent misrepresentation claims. Etan Indus., Inc. v. Lehmann, 308 S.W.3d 489, 489 (Tex.App.-Austin 2010) (citing HECI Expl. Co. v. Neel, 982 S.W.2d 881, 885 (Tex.1998)). The point of contention is the date on which Plaintiffs' claim accrued. Plaintiffs filed this action on July 3, 2009. [Dkt. No. 40 at 1]. Thus, for the claim to be barred by the statute of limitations, it must have accrued before July 3, 2007.

12 "Generally, a cause of action accrues and the statute of limitations begins to run when facts come into existence that authorize a party to seek a judicial remedy," and the date of accrual is a question of law to be determined by the court. Etan Indus., 308 S.W.3d at 500 (citing Provident Life & Accident Ins. Co. v. Knott, 128 S.W.3d 211, 221 (Tex.2003)). Because it is unfair to run a limitations period before a plaintiff discovers wrongful conduct, the doctrine of fraudulent concealment defers the accrual period "until the plaintiff discovers, or in the exercise of reasonable diligence should have discovered, the wrongful conduct ." Id. When the plaintiff discovered, or should have discovered, the wrongful conduct is a question of fact. Id.

As discussed above, Plaintiffs' claim for negligent misrepresentation hinges on a statement made by Defendant in May 2007. Plaintiffs contend that they did not learn that the May 2007 statement was false until some time in December 2008. [Dkt. No. 40 at 31–32]. The Complaint does include allegations of reliance well beyond the July 3, 2007 cutoff. [Dkt. No. 32 at 7–9]. Viewing the Complaint in the light most favorable to Plaintiffs, it is not "evident" that Plaintiffs learned that the statement was false, and therefore Plaintiffs' claim accrued, before July 3, 2007. Therefore, at this stage, Defendant's motion to dismiss this claim based on the statute of limitations is DENIED.

III. CONCLUSION

For the foregoing reasons, with respect to Plaintiffs' claims for breach of contract, breach of duty of good faith, tortious interference with contract, tortious interference with prospective business relations, civil conspiracy, as well as Plaintiffs' claims under Mexican law, Defendant's motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim under Rule 12(b)(6) is hereby GRANTED, and those claims are hereby DISMISSED.

With respect to Plaintiffs' claims for fraud and negligent misrepresentation, Defendant's motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim under Rule 12(b)(6) is hereby DENIED, and those claims remain.

IT IS SO ORDERED.

All Citations

Not Reported in F.Supp.2d, 2010 WL 2488031, 72 UCC Rep.Serv.2d 240

Footnotes

1 Plaintiffs refer to Masterfoods Mexico by an array of names in the Complaint: Masterfoods Mexico, Masterfoods MX, Masterfoods, Mars Mexico, Effem, Effem Mexico, and simply Mars. [Dkt. No. 32]. Plaintiffs compound the difficulties in interpreting their pleadings by also seemingly using "Specialties of Mexico" and

 © 2025 Thomson Reuters. No claim to original U.S. Government Works.

"Dibaresa" interchangeably, as well as simply "Masterfoods" to refer to either Masterfoods USA or Masterfoods Mexico. Despite these problems, for the purposes of ruling on Defendant's instant motion, the Court will attempt to decipher the Complaint.

2 The Court denied Plaintiffs' motion to add Sell–Thru as a defendant, finding that the primary purpose was to defeat diversity jurisdiction. [Dkt. No. 27].

3 The complaint states "Dibaresa" here, but this would contradict Plaintiffs' statement that Dibaresa never dealt directly with Masterfoods USA. See [Dkt. No. 32 at 18].

4 While not specific, Plaintiffs are seemingly referring to Masterfoods Mexico, as it would be illogical for Masterfoods USA to pressure Dibaresa for their own identity and prices.

5 Again, Plaintiffs are seemingly referring to Masterfoods Mexico.

6 It is not clear from the complaint who Daniel Gilbert is, whether he is an employee of Masterfoods USA or Masterfoods Mexico.

7 Again, presumptively Masterfoods Mexico.

8 In the complaint, it states that "Cantu continued to do business with Masterfoods," but in light of the fact that Dibaresa never dealt directly with Masterfoods USA, the Court reasons that Cantu was issuing these purchase orders on behalf of SoM.

End of Document

© 2025 Thomson Reuters. No claim to original U.S. Government Works.

CASE NO. 35

2025 WL 871601
United States District Court, E.D. Louisiana.

ALBORES, et al.
v.
DIMITRI, et al.

CIVIL ACTION
NO.
18
-
6936
|
Signed March 20, 2025

Attorneys and Law Firms

Jody Forester Jackson, Mary Bubbett Jackson, Jackson & Jackson, New Orleans, LA, Jason Travis Brown, Pro Hac Vice, Patrick Almonrode, Pro Hac Vice, Brown, LLC, Jersey City, NJ, for Albores, et al.

James Walter Frazer Green, I, Emma Looney, Phelps Dunbar, LLP, Baton Rouge, LA, for E.M. Dimitri, American Medical Support Services, LLC, Mississippi Dermatology, LLC, Mississippi Support Solutions, LLC, Precision Medical Billing Services, LLC, Regional Support Services, LLC, Shapiro Dimitri Medical, LLC, Dimitri Clinics, LLC, Elizabeth Dimitri.

Brian J. Capitelli, Thomas C. Wicker, IV, Capitelli and Wicker, New Orleans, LA, for Dermatologic Centers of America, LLC, Karen Drake, Thomas Orgeron, Joel Perdomo, Steven Shapiro.

Sandra Lee Sears, DOJ-United States Attorney's Office, New Orleans, LA, for Intervenor United States of America.

Julie Hatcher Ralph, Office of the Attorney General, St. Francsiville, LA, Nicholas J. Diez, Baton Rouge, LA, Paolo J. Messina, Shockey & Associates, East Baton Rouge, LA, for Intervenor Louisiana State.

SECTION: "H"

ORDER AND REASONS

JANE TRICHE MILAZZO, UNITED STATES DISTRICT JUDGE

1 Before the Court is Defendants E.M. Dimitri D.O. PMC d/b/a Dimitri Dermatology; American Support Services, LLC; Dermatologic Centers of America, LLC; Mississippi Dermatology, LLC; Mississippi Support Solutions, LLC; Precision Billing Services, LLC; Regional Support Services, LLC; Shapiro Dimitri Medical, LLC; The Dimitri Clinics, LLC; Elizabeth Dimitri, D.O.; Karen Drake; Thomas Orgeron, M.D.; Joel Perdomo, M.D.; and Steven Shapiro, M.D.'s ("Defendants") Motion to Dismiss for Failure to State a Claim (Doc. 76). For the following reasons, Defendants' Motion is GRANTED IN PART and DENIED IN PART.

BACKGROUND

This qui tam action arises out of alleged fraudulent actions by Defendants that took place from January 1, 2016 to September 5, 2024. Elizabeth Dimitri, D.O. is a Doctor of Osteopathy who operates thirteen clinics (the "Clinics") in Louisiana and Mississippi that provide dermatological services. Dr. Dimitri has operated her practice since 2007, and since that time has expanded to multiple locations employing numerous physicians, nurse practitioners, physician assistants, nurses, administrators, and other health care professionals throughout the Gulf South. Dr. Dimitri and her colleagues treat a variety of skin diseases as well as offer cosmetic procedures to their patients. The Clinics accept Medicare and Medicaid as well as private insurance.

On July 24, 2018, former independent contractors with the Clinics, Jessica Albores, Marie Ford, and Margaret Whiteman ("Relators"), initiated this action, alleging violations of the False Claims Act ("FCA")[1] and Louisiana's Medical Assistance Program Integrity Law ("MAPIL").[2] The United States of America and the State of Louisiana (together with Relators, "Plaintiffs") elected to intervene on September 3, 2024, and filed a Joint Complaint in Intervention (the "Complaint").[3] In their Complaint, Plaintiffs allege that Dr. Dimitri, her Clinics, several billing and administrative support organizations, Dr. Dimitri's office manager, and three other physicians conspired to submit false claims for payment for services that were not medically necessary, namely the provision of phototherapy and photochemotherapy at subtherapeutic doses and intervals, incision and drainage procedures on acne patients, and upcoding for evaluation and management ("E&M") visits.

Now before the Court is Defendants' Joint Motion to Dismiss for Failure to State a Claim. Defendants argue that the Complaint is deficient because it fails to identify the specific role that each Defendant played in the alleged fraudulent scheme, merely lumping the actions of multiple Defendants together. Plaintiffs oppose.[4] The Court held oral argument on Defendants' motion on February 27, 2025.

LEGAL STANDARD

I. Motion to Dismiss Standard

To survive a Rule 12(b)(6) motion to dismiss, a plaintiff must plead enough facts "to state a claim to relief that is plausible on its face."[5] A claim is "plausible on its face" when the pleaded facts allow the court to "[d]raw the reasonable inference that the defendant is liable for the misconduct alleged."[6] A court must accept the complaint's factual allegations as true and must "draw all reasonable inferences in the plaintiff's favor."[7] The Court need not, however, accept as true legal conclusions couched as factual allegations.[8]

2 To be legally sufficient, a complaint must establish more than a "sheer possibility" that the plaintiff's claims are true.[9] "A pleading that offers 'labels and conclusions' or 'a formulaic recitation of the elements of a cause of action' " will not suffice.[10] Rather, the complaint must contain enough factual allegations to raise a reasonable expectation that discovery will reveal evidence of each element of the plaintiff's claim.[11]

II. The False Claims Act and Rule 9(b)

The FCA prohibits, in relevant part, 1) the presentment of a false claim to the Government; 2) the use of a false record or statement to get a false claim paid, and 3) conspiracies to get a false claim paid.[12] Liability for violation includes a liquidated civil penalty and damages.[13] The act is remedial in nature and is "intended to protect the Treasury against the hungry and unscrupulous host that encompasses it on every side."[14] To aid in the rooting out of fraud, the Act provides for civil suits brought by both the Attorney General and by private persons, termed relators, who serve as a "posse of ad hoc deputies to uncover and prosecute frauds against the government."[15] In order to prevail in its contention of violation of § 3729 (a)(1), Plaintiffs must show that Defendants presented (or caused to be presented) a claim to the Government, that the claim was false, and the action was undertaken knowingly.[16]

A complaint filed under the FCA must meet the heightened pleading standard of Rule 9(b) which requires that "[i]n alleging fraud or mistake, a party must state with particularity the circumstances constituting fraud or mistake."[17] Rule 9(b) is an exception to Rule 8(a)'s simplified pleading standard that calls for a "short and plain statement of the claims."[18] Fifth Circuit precedent "interprets Rule 9(b) strictly [when evaluating the pleading of a false claim under the FCA], requiring the plaintiff to 'specify the statements contended to be fraudulent, identify the speaker, state when and where the statements were made, and explain why the statements were fraudulent.' "[19] However, "the time, place, contents, and identity standard is not a straitjacket for Rule 9(b). Rather, the rule is context specific and flexible."[20] Further, if Plaintiffs cannot allege the details of an actually submitted false claim, the Complaint may nevertheless survive by alleging particular details of a scheme to submit false claims paired with reliable indicia that lead to a strong inference that claims were actually submitted.[21] Additionally, fraud may be pleaded on information and belief when "the facts relating to the alleged fraud are peculiarly within the perpetrator's knowledge ... the complaint must set forth a factual basis for such belief."[22] "A dismissal for failure to plead fraud with particularity as required by Rule 9(b) is a dismissal on the pleadings for failure to state a claim under Rule 12(b)(6)."[23]

LEGAL ANALYSIS

3 In the instant Motion, Defendants argue that, on the whole, the Complaint is impermissively vague, fails to identify the actions of Defendants with particularity, and fails to state a claim upon which relief can be granted due to its failure to meet the heightened pleading requirements for fraud claims. Plaintiffs oppose, arguing that the Complaint is as detailed as it can be based on the limited information it received from Dr. Dimitri in response to their Civil Investigative Demands ("CIDs") and that, regardless, the 9(b) standard should be relaxed here because that knowledge was located entirely with Dr. Dimitri and the fraudulent scheme was complicated.

Defendants made more particularized arguments for dismissal as related to each individual or entity named in the suit. Plaintiffs opposed each of these arguments. The Court will now consider the pleadings as they relate to each individual or entity in turn.

I. E.M. Dimitri D.O. PMC d/b/a Dimitri Dermatology; Elizabeth Dimitri, D.O.; and the Dimitri Clinics

In their Motion, Defendants assert that as written, the Complaint fails to provide notice to Defendants Dimitri or E.M. Dimitri D.O. PMC d/b/a Dimitri Dermatology ("Dimitri Dermatology") of their role in the alleged scheme because the actions of all fourteen Defendants are lumped together as accusations against Dr. Dimitri and her practice. Plaintiffs read Defendants' motion to concede that the Complaint was sufficiently plead as to Dr. Dimitri and Dimitri Dermatology. At oral argument, Defendants conceded that they are not arguing that Plaintiffs have failed to allege a scheme as to Defendants Dimitri and Dimitri Dermatology, but rather that they are used interchangeably by Plaintiffs, making the task of mounting an appropriate defense difficult. Plaintiffs then elaborated that Defendant Dimitri Dermatology is clearly defined in Paragraph 10 of their Complaint and is not used interchangeably with Defendant Dimitri herself.

The Court agrees that the Complaint sufficiently and distinctly alleges claims against Defendants Dimitri and Dimitri Dermatology. For example, Defendant Dimitri is accused of training midlevel providers how to perform and bill medically unnecessary procedures[24], while Defendant Dimitri Dermatology submitted the allegedly false claims regarding photochemotherapy procedures to Louisiana Medicaid.[25] "[W]hen the facts relating to the alleged fraud are peculiarly within the perpetrator's knowledge ... the fraud may be pled on information and belief, provided the plaintiff sets forth the factual basis for [their] belief."[26] While it is certainly alleged that Defendant Dimitri is involved at every stage of this alleged fraudulent scheme, the Court finds that there is adequate distinction between Defendant Dimitri and Defendant Dimitri Dermatology in the Complaint as written, and that 9(b) may be relaxed here because of the concentration of information held exclusively by Defendant Dimitri.

II. American Support Services, LLC; Dermatologic Centers of America, LLC; Mississippi Dermatology, LLC; Mississippi Support Solutions, LLC; Precision Billing Services, LLC; Regional Support Services, LLC; Shapiro Dimitri Medical, LLC

In their Motion, Defendants argue that regarding each of the individual entities named as Defendants, the Complaint fails to do more than state that they had contracts with a medical clinic without any mention of wrongdoing as required by the FCA. Plaintiffs respond that because Defendant Dimitri had dominion and control over the named companies, their pleadings were limited to the scant information shared by Defendant Dimitri. In so doing, Plaintiffs argue that a relaxed pleading standard applies when, as here, the knowledge of a particular fraudulent scheme is known by a perpetrator.

4 Defendant Dimitri was the sole member, manager, and officer of American Support Services, LLC; Dermatologic Centers of America, LLC; Mississippi Dermatology, LLC; Mississippi Support Solutions, LLC; Precision Billing Services, LLC; and Regional Support Services, LLC from 2016 to 2022. As such, the Court finds that Defendant Dimitri exclusively possesses the information that would allow Plaintiffs to plead with the accuracy that Defendants seek regarding these entities' participation in any alleged fraud. [27]

Further, when a complaint alleges "corporate or business fraud, such that Plaintiffs cannot be expected to have knowledge of all the details which undergird the alleged fraudulent scheme ... some relaxation of Rule 9(b)'s particularity requirement is appropriate in instances where such information is in the [D]efendant's hands or control." [28] Here, while it is not entirely clear from the Complaint what specific role each Defendant entity addressed in this section had in the alleged fraudulent scheme, the Court finds that any lack in the pleadings results from the complexity of the scheme and the interworking of organizations Defendant Dimitri had under her control over the relevant time. [29] As such, the Court finds that the Complaint is sufficiently plead under Rule 9(b) as to Defendants American Support Services, LLC; Dermatologic Centers of America, LLC; Mississippi Dermatology, LLC; Mississippi Support Solutions, LLC; Precision Billing Services, LLC; Regional Support Services, LLC; and Shapiro Dimitri Medical, LLC. [30]

III. Individuals Karen Drake; Thomas Orgeron, M.D.; Joel Perdomo, M.D.; and Steven Shapiro, M.D.

If a plaintiff sues more than one defendant for fraud, the plaintiff cannot 'lump together' several defendants and allege generally the defendants' participation in a fraud scheme." [31] Considering the individual named Defendants other than Dr. Dimitri, Defendants argue that the Complaint fails to allege with particularity their role in the alleged fraudulent scheme. Defendants state that the Complaint's assertions that Defendant Drake assisted Dr. Dimitri in intentionally hiring inexperienced medical professionals and staff is not sufficient under Rule 9(b). Plaintiffs oppose, arguing that because of her role as General Manger of E.M. Dimitri, D.O. PMC, Dermatologic Centers of America, LLC, American Support Services, LLC and Precision Billing Services, LLC, and Shapiro Dimitri Medical prior to its dissolution, Defendant Drake's involvement should be viewed in the same manner as Defendant Dimitri in that the knowledge of any wrongdoing is known only to her.

The Court does not agree that Defendant Drake should be afforded the same relaxed pleading standard as applied earlier to Defendant Dimitri, her practice, and the entities of which she was the sole member, manager, and officer. It is unclear what Defendant Drake's role as General Manager entailed or whether she was simply ill-equipped to perform her job, resulting in the hiring of underqualified medical providers which does not amount to having intimate knowledge of a fraudulent scheme, let alone actively participating in it. As such, the Court cannot make the inferential leap that Defendant Drake engaged in the alleged fraudulent activities described in the Complaint without more about her specific allegations.

5 Considering physician Defendants Drs. Orgeron, Perdomo, and Shapiro, Defendants assert that the Complaint fails to properly plead their commission of false acts beyond a statement that they were relied on by midlevel providers. Plaintiffs respond that the Complaint particularly alleges that the physician Defendants participated in the fraud through the direct administration of unnecessary medical services that they subsequently billed for and the training/guidance of less-experienced mid-level providers. Still, Plaintiffs conceded at oral argument that they did not elucidate specific false claims submitted by the physician Defendants in their Complaint. This, the Court finds, amounts to insufficient pleading under Rule 9(b) because it cannot discern which provider treated which patient and billed for what medically unnecessary procedure in perpetuation of the alleged fraud. [32]

Accordingly, the Court finds that Plaintiffs have failed to satisfy Rule 9(b) regarding its allegations against Defendants Drake, Orgeron, Perdomo, and Shapiro.

IV. Opportunity to Amend

Plaintiffs conclude their Opposition to Defendants' motion with a request for leave to amend their Complaint if the Court finds it wanting under the rigors of Rule 9(b) or 12(b)(6). At oral argument, counsel for Defendants Drake; Drs. Orgeron, Perdomo, Shapiro; and Dermatologic Centers of America, LLC opposed, arguing that Plaintiffs have had enough time to gather the information required to plead their case with enough particularity to survive a motion to dismiss and should therefore not be given the opportunity to amend.

Denial of leave to amend "may be warranted for undue delay, bad faith or dilatory motive on the part of the movant, repeated failure to cure deficiencies, undue prejudice to the opposing party, or futility of a proposed amendment." [33] The policy of the federal rules, however, "is to permit liberal amendment to facilitate determination of claims on the merits and to prevent litigation from becoming a technical exercise in the fine points of pleading." [34] "Thus, unless there is a substantial reason to deny leave to amend, the discretion of the district court is not broad enough to permit denial." [35] As such, the Court finds that where it has found that the Complaint currently does not survive Rule 9(b), Plaintiffs may amend.

CONCLUSION

For the foregoing reasons, Defendants' Motion to Dismiss for Failure to State a Claim is GRANTED IN PART and DENIED IN PART.

Plaintiffs' case against Defendants Karen Drake; Thomas Orgeron, M.D.; Joel Perdomo, M.D.; and Steven Shapiro, M.D. is DISMISSED WITHOUT PREJUDICE to Plaintiffs' ability to move for leave to amend the Complaint within twenty (20) days of this Order.

All Citations

Slip Copy, 2025 WL 871601, Med & Med GD (CCH) P 308,490

Footnotes

1 31 U.S.C. § 3729, et seq.

2 LA. REV. STAT. §§ 6:438, et seq.

3 Doc. 38.

4 Doc. 80.

5 Ashcroft v. Iqbal, 556 U.S. 662, 667 (2009) (quoting Bell Atlantic Corp. v. Twombly, 550 U.S. 544, 547 (2007)).

6 Id.

7 Lormand v. U.S. Unwired, Inc., 565 F.3d 228, 232 (5th Cir. 2009).

8 Iqbal, 556 U.S. at 667.

9 Id.

10 Id. at 678 (quoting Twombly, 550 U.S. at 555).

11 Lormand, 565 F.3d at 255–57.

12 31 U.S.C. § 3729 (a).

13 Id.

14 U.S. ex rel. Grubbs v. Kanneganti, 565 F.3d 180, 184 (5th Cir. 2009).

15 Id.

16 31 U.S.C. § 3729(a)(1).

17 Fed. R. Civ. P. 9(b); see also Tel–Phonic Servs., Inc. v. TBS Int'l, Inc., 975 F.2d 1134, 1139 (5th Cir. 1992).

18 Grubbs, 565 F.3d at 185.

19 Flaherty & Crumrine Preferred Income Fund, Inc. v. TXU Corp., 565 F.3d 200, 207 (5th Cir. 2009) (quoting Smallwood v. Pearl Brewing Co., 489 F.2d 579, 605 (5th Cir. 1974)).

20 Grubbs, 565 F.3d at 190.

21 Id.

22 U.S. ex rel. Willard v. Humana Health Plan of Tex., Inc., 336 F.3d 375, 385 (5th Cir. 2003).

23 Southland Sec. Corp. v. Inspire Ins. Solutions Inc., 365 F.3d 353, 361 (5th Cir. 2004) (citing Shushany v. Allwaste, Inc., 992 F.2d 517, 520 (5th Cir. 1993)).

24 Doc. 38 ¶¶73-76.

25 Doc. 38 ¶ 89.

26 U.S. ex rel. Thompson v. Columbia/HCA Healthcare, Inc., 125 F.3d 899, 903 (5th. Cir. 1997) abrogated on other grounds, U.S. ex rel. Eisenstein v. City of New York, New York, 556 U.S. 928, 129 (2009).

27 See Burford v. Cargill, Inc., No. CIV.A. 05-0283, 2011 WL 4382124, at *13 (W.D. La. Sept. 20, 2011) (citing Giuliano v. Everything Yogurt, Inc., 819 F. Supp. 240, 244 (E.D.N.Y. 1993)).

28 Id. at *12 n.7.

29 See U.S. ex rel. Thompson, 125 F.3d at 193 (5th Cir. 1997).

30 Defendants Dimitri and Shapiro were both identified as Member/Managers until the company was voluntarily dissolved in 2020. Doc. 38 ¶17. While Dr. Dimitri and Dr. Shapiro may both have information regarding Shapiro Dimitri Medical LLC's operations, the Court finds that because of its status as another organization in this web, the relaxed 9(b) standard applies here.

31 U.S. ex rel. Schiff v. Norman, No. 15-1506, 2018 WL 264253 (M.D. Fla. Jan. 2, 2018).

32 See U.S. ex rel. Hebert v. Dizney, 295 Fed. Appx. 717, 723 (5th Cir. 2008) (stating that although Rule 9(b) "does not require a qui tam plaintiff alleging a long-running scheme involving many false claims to list every false claim, its dates, and the individuals responsible, the allegedly great extent and complexity of a fraudulent scheme does not excuse a failure to plead at least one false claim with the requisite specificity.")

33 See Rosenblatt v. United Way of Greater Houston, 607 F.3d 413, 419 (5th Cir. 2010) (citing Foman v. Davis, 371 U.S. 178, 182, 83 S.Ct. 227, 9 L.Ed.2d 222 (1962)).

34 Dussouy v. Gulf Coast Inv. Corp., 660 F.2d 594, 597-98 (5th Cir. 1981).

35 Id. (citing Lone Star Motor Import v. Citroen Cars, 288 F.2d 69, 75 (5th Cir. 1961)).

End of Document

© 2025 Thomson Reuters. No claim to original U.S. Government Works.

CASE NO. 36

2014 WL 10751177
Only the Westlaw citation
is currently available.
United States District Court,
S.D. Texas, Houston Division.

FORUM SUBSEA RENTALS f/k/a DPS, Inc., Plaintiff,
v.
Tarek A. ELSHARHAWY, Shelly L. Elsharhawy a/k/a Shelly L. Chilman, and Globaltech Offshore, Defendants.

Civil Action No. H–13–885
|
Signed September 17, 2014

Attorneys and Law Firms

George J. Fowler, III, Peter Thomson, Jon Wesley Wise, Fowler Rodriguez, New Orleans, LA, for Plaintiff.

Bryon A. Rice, Charles Randall Flores, Beck Redden LLP, Houston, TX, Richard Dale Brady, The Brady Firm, PC, Liberty, TX, for Defendants.

FINDINGS OF FACT & CONCLUSIONS OF LAW

DAVID HITTNER, United States District Judge

1 On August 26, 2014, this Court commenced a non-jury trial in the above-entitled matter. During the course of the one-day proceeding, the Court received evidence and heard sworn testimony. Having considered the evidence, testimony, and oral argument presented during the trial, along with post-trial submissions and the applicable law, the Court now enters the following findings of fact and conclusions of law pursuant to Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 52(a). Any finding of fact that should be construed as a conclusion of law is hereby adopted as such. Any conclusion of law that should be construed as a finding of fact is hereby adopted as such.

I. FINDINGS OF FACT

The Contract

1. In December 2010, defendant Tarek Elsharhawy approached Plaintiff Forum Subsea Rental's ("Forum") predecessor in interest DPS Offshore, Inc. ("DPS") in order to lease equipment for use in Mexico by businesses owned and operated by himself and his wife, defendant Shelly Chilman. After initial soliciting by email and telephone, Tarek Elsharhawy traveled to Houston, Texas to solicit further equipment rentals directly from DPS at its offices. DPS ultimately agreed to rent equipment to Globaltech Offshore ("Globaltech"), a U.S. company registered in California, of which Tarek Elsharhawy was president/lead salesman and he and his wife were the owners.[1] Notably, DPS had rejected the credit application initially proposed for the Elsharhawys' other business, Global Subsea & Maritime Technologies Mexico S. De R.L. De C.V. ("Global Subsea"), because the credit references did not check out. The credit application by Globaltech contained different references and representations as to the credit worthiness of Globaltech and listed Tarek Elsharhawy and Shelly Chilman as its principals. [2]

2. Beginning in late January 2011, Globaltech entered into a series of contracts of lease with DPS for the lease of certain subsea equipment owned by DPS. [3]

3. Each rental contract between Globaltech and DPS required Globaltech to pay a daily rental rate for equipment it leased from DPS and to comply with the Standard Terms and Conditions contained on the back of the Rental Quotation and Order Confirmation. [4]

4. The daily rental rates for the relevant equipment was as follows: [5]

Description	Day Rate
HiPAP 350P System	$350.00/day
Tritech System	$303.00/day
MS1000 System	$169.00/day
Geo Nav I-Compass	$85.00/day

5. All of the equipment leased by Globaltech was shipped to Mexico as a temporary import and under Mexican law could not stay in Mexico more than 6 months. Globaltech, as the importer into Mexico, was required to export the equipment back to DPS before the expiration of the 6–month window according to Mexican law. [6]

6. Globaltech was charged a daily rental rate by DPS for the equipment it leased based on its utilization of the equipment. The term of each lease was the six-month period of temporary import into Mexico. [7]

7. Globaltech was told and aware that the equipment was a temporary import and must be exported from Mexico within six months. [8]

The Breach of Contract

2 8. Globaltech failed to timely export the HiPap System, the Tritech System, the MS 1000 System and the Geo Nav I-Compass from Mexico. This represented a breach of each contract of lease as well as a violation of Mexican import law. [9]

9. The HiPAP 350P system was imported to Mexico pursuant to Declaration No. 3978 1000335, which expired on October 29, 2011. [10]

10. Because the equipment on Declaration No. 3978 1000335 was not exported by October 29, 2011, it was encumbered in violation of DPS' Standard Terms and Conditions. [11]

11. The Tritech System was imported pursuant to Declaration Nos. 3574

1003682 and 39781000976, which expired on November 30, 2011. [12]

12. Because the equipment on Declaration Nos. 3574 1003682 and 39781000976 was not exported by November 30, 2011, it was encumbered in violation of DPS' Standard Terms and Conditions. [13]

13. The MS 1000 System was imported pursuant to Declaration No. 3978 1000198, which expired on September 25, 2011. [14]

14. Because the equipment on Declaration No. 3978 1000198 was not exported by September 25, 2011, it was encumbered in violation of DPS' Standard Terms and Conditions. [15]

15. The Geo Nav I–Compass (gyrocompass) was imported pursuant to Declaration No. 3978810000414, which expired on November 30, 2011. [16]

16. Because the equipment on Declaration No. 3978810000414 was not exported by November 30, 2011, it was encumbered in violation of DPS' Standard Terms and Conditions. [17]

17. Beginning around June 2011 and continuing thereafter, DPS contacted Tarek Elsharhawy and Globaltech to request the return of the equipment. Despite repeated requests by DPS, the equipment was not returned by any of the defendants during the years 2011, 2012 or 2013. In June, 2014, a portion of the equipment was returned; however, the MS 1000 system was never returned.

18. In addition to failing to return the equipment, Globaltech failed to pay all of the outstanding invoices. [18] Those invoices which were paid were approved by defendant Shelly Chilman and paid with checks sent to DPS in Houston and signed by Shelly Chilman. [19]

The Fraud

19. On March 15, 2012, Defendant Tarek Elsharhawy represented to Forum that Globaltech was prepared to return the equipment leased from Forum's predecessor-in-interest DPS, but needed Certificates of Origin to "clear customs." [20]

20. Forum promptly sent the Certificates of Origin, and placed its freight forwarder on standby, with the expectation that the equipment was about to be shipped. [21]

21. On April 9, 2012, Forum asked for an updated regarding the return of its equipment. [22]

22. On or about April 11, 2012, Defendant Globaltech represented to the Mexican Taxing Authority that it intended to make the above equipment a permanent import. [23]

3 23. Defendant Globaltech's April 11, 2012, representation to the Mexican Taxing Authority was made without the knowledge or consent of Plaintiff. [24]

 © 2025 Thomson Reuters. No claim to original U.S. Government Works.

24. On April 19, 2012, Defendants again represented that they were in the process of returning the equipment. Defendants at no time advised Forum of their attempt to have these items declared a permanent import. [25]

25. On July 20, 2012, Vice President and General Counsel of Forum, James McCulloch, sent an email to Tarek Elsharhawy demanding immediate return of all the equipment that had been retained by Globaltech. This demand came after McCulloch had contacted Elsharhawy on July 9, 2012, and received various excuses from Elsharhawy, including representations that he was trying to get another contract to use the equipment. In fact, Globaltech did not ship the equipment back and Elsharhawy did not respond to this formal demand. [26]

26. From September 2012 to June 2014, Defendants represented that they could not return the equipment to Plaintiff because it could not be exported from Mexico. [27] Forum, through its retained counsel, made repeated demands to Defendants to return the equipment and that it regarded the ongoing retention of the equipment without explanation as theft. Despite the fact that Defendants had retained counsel and received these emails, no offer to return the equipment ever occurred. [28]

27. Forum filed suit against Defendants on March 28, 2013. [29]

28. On May 28, 2014, the judgment denying Globaltech's Motion for Summary Judgment and Defendants Tarek Elsharhawy and Shelly Chilman's Motion to Dismiss for Lack of Personal Jurisdiction was entered into the record. [30]

29. Defendants subsequently returned some of the DPS/Forum equipment to their attorney's office in Houston, Texas without explanation in early June 2014. [31]

30. The boxes of returned equipment included a packing slip that showed Defendants exported the box from Mexico via DHL to their address in California on May 30, 2014—two days after Defendants motions were denied and it became clear that Elsharhawy and Chilman would remain in the case through trial. The packing slips had been removed from the other boxes. [32]

31. The packing slip indicated the equipment had been exported "for repair." In fact, Defendants tendered the equipment to Plaintiff for return, not for repair. [33]

32. The following equipment was shipped from Mexico to Defendants' office in California on or about May 30, 2014 and then to the office of their counsel in Houston in June 2014: [34]

a. HiPAP 350P System,

b. Tritech System, and

c. Gyro Compass.

The MS 1000 System was never returned.

33. An inspection of the returned equipment revealed signs of recent use, including new marine growth on components that are used underwater. This evidence established that Globaltech had been using the equipment during the period between October 2011 (when it was to be returned) and June 2014, when it was actually returned—in direct contradiction to its representations to DPS/Forum over the previous three years. Globaltech did not report this utilization of the equipment to Plaintiff and did not pay the daily rental rate for its use. [35]

Disregard of Corporate Formalities

4 34. On its January 18, 2011 credit application, Globaltech represented that it had annual sales of $800,000–$1,200,000. [36]

35. Globaltech's tax returns in fact showed that Globaltech's January 18, 2011 credit application overstates its annual sales in 2010 and that the company's net sales were under $300,000 and profits close to $100,000. [37]

36. Defendant Globaltech is a California corporation.

37. Defendant Shelly Chilman is the only shareholder of Defendant Globaltech. [38]

38. Defendants Tarek Elsharhawy and Shelly Chilman are the only officers of Defendant Globaltech. [39]

39. Defendants Tarek Elsharhawy and Shelly Chilman are the only members of Defendant Globaltech's Board of Directors. [40]

40. No formal meeting was held to elect Defendants Tarek Elsharhawy and Shelly Chilman to Defendant Globaltech's Board of Directors. [41]

41. Defendant Globaltech does not hold properly noticed annual shareholder meetings. [42]

42. Defendant Globaltech does not maintain written records or minutes of any shareholder meetings. [43]

43. Defendant Globaltech does not prepare an annual report to its shareholder(s). [44]

44. Defendant Globaltech does not maintain written records of shareholder resolutions. [45]

45. Defendant Globaltech is run as an informal family business by Tarek Elsharhawy and his wife Shelly Chilman. [46]

46. Defendant Globaltech has not paid California franchise taxes since 2010. [47]

47. Defendant Globaltech's corporate charter was suspended by the California Secretary of State beginning in 2011. [48]

48. Globaltech's corporate representative Tarek Elsharhawy could offer no testimony regarding Globaltech's finances, and could offer no testimony to explain the company's financial records as reflected on Globaltech's tax returns. [49]

49. Despite showing significant assets on its corporate tax returns during 2011 and for the years following, Globaltech is in arrears to many creditors, and has been evasive about where the money shown on the company's corporate tax returns went. [50]

Damages

50. The HiPAP transducer was not working upon its return and needed to be recalibrated. This repair will cost $3,000. The Kongsberg MST charging system was damaged and will cost $460 to repair. [51]

51. It is industry custom for lessees and renters who lose or damage equipment beyond repair to pay the replacement cost of the equipment. [52]

52. Globaltech failed to return the following equipment: [53]

- MS 1000 System (Site Survey Sonar), valued at $31,165.00
- MS 1000 Site Survey Sonar System laptop, valued at $6,400.00
- Kongsberg HiPAP 350P Transducer cable (70 m), valued at $6,066.00

5 • Power Module for TSS SG Brown Meridian Standard Gyro Compass, valued at $250.00

- Right angle to straight cable from the Tritech SeaKing SK704/20 Bathy, valued at $560.00
- 2 cables from the Tritech Super SeaKing, valued at $1,120.00
- 19" Flat Panel Monitor, valued at $120.00

53. The total replacement cost of the missing equipment is $45,581.00. [54]

54. Globaltech failed to pay the following invoices for equipment rental charges, lost and damaged equipment and service charges: [55]

- DPS Invoice # 18745–7420 in the amount of $3,016.34
- DPS Invoice # 18855–7555 in the amount of $341.17
- DPS Invoice # 18891–7394 in the amount of $1,183.00
- DPS Invoice # 18891–7428 in the amount of $54.94

55. The total amount of the unpaid invoices is $4,595.45.

56. Plaintiff made a demand on Globaltech for the return of the equipment and for payment of all amounts due, which demand was refused by Defendants. [56]

57. The evidence established that Plaintiff could have rented this equipment to other parties had it been returned to Plaintiff as required and in fact lost work because the equipment was unavailable to rent out. [57]

58. The failure to return the equipment, as noted in Paragraph 8 above, resulted in a loss of use of the equipment by the Plaintiffs for the period beginning when each system should have been returned to the U.S. (in accordance with its temporary import status) until the date the equipment was returned. In the case of the MS 1000 system, the equipment was never returned and the return date testified to was the date of trial. The loss of use claim may be summarized as follows:

HiPap System	$350 Day Rate × 963 days	= $337,050.00
Tritech System	$303 Day Rate × 931 days	= $282,093.00
Geo Nav I–Compass	$85 Day Rate × 931 days	= $ 79,135.00
MS 100 System	$169 Day Rate × 1066 days	= $180,154.00
TOTAL		$878,432.00 [58]

Attorney's Fees

59. Plaintiff retained the law firm of Fowler Rodriguez to pursue its claim against Globaltech. [59]

60. Plaintiff has incurred attorney's fees of $198,929.50 in the prosecution of this case. [60]

61. Plaintiffs attorney's fees incurred in the prosecution of this case were reasonable and necessary. The fees charged are customarily charged in Harris County, Texas for the same or similar services for attorneys with the experience, reputation, and abilities of the attorneys who worked on this matter, considering the type of controversy, the time limitations imposed, the novelty and difficulty of the matter, and the results obtained. [61]

II. CONCLUSIONS OF LAW

1. The Court has diversity jurisdiction over the parties and the subject matter of this case. Complete diversity of citizenship exists and the amount in controversy exceeds $75,000.

Breach of Contract

6 2. To recover on a claim for breach of contract, a plaintiff must show: (1) the existence of a valid contract between itself and the defendant; (2) its performance or tender of performance; (3) the defendant's breach of the contract; and (4) its damage as a result of the breach. Prime Prods., Inc. v. S.S.I. Plastics, Inc., 97 S.W.3d 631, 636

(Tex. App.—Houston [1st Dist.] 2002, pet. denied). In this case, Defendants failed to return the subject equipment at the end of the rental term (for over two years in some cases and in other cases, not at all). Failure to return the leased property pursuant to a valid contract constituted an active breach of the contract.

3. "Generally, the proper measure of damages for a common-law breach of contract claim is just compensation for the loss or damage actually sustained, commonly referred to as the benefit of the bargain." City of Houston v. Swinerton Builders, Inc., 233 S.W.3d 4, 10 n.7 (Tex.App.—Houston [1st Dist.] 2007, no pet.).

   Actual damages are either direct or consequential. Direct damages are those that flow naturally and necessarily from the breach. Direct damages compensate for the loss, damage, or injury that is conclusively presumed to have been foreseen or contemplated by the party as a consequence of his breach of contract or wrongful act. Consequential damages are those which result naturally, but not necessarily, from the breach. Consequential damages must be foreseeable and must be directly traceable to the wrongful act and result from it. A general measure of damages is subject to any agreement that the parties might have made with respect to damages because parties to a contract are free to limit or modify the remedies available in the event of a breach of contract.

   Term. Gas Pipeline Co. v. Technip USA Corp., 2008 WL 3876141, at *6 (Tex.App.—Houston [1st Dist.] 2007, pet. denied) (citations omitted) (internal quotation marks omitted).

4. In this case, the parties agreed to a day rate in the quotation and acceptance. While the day rate was owed when the equipment was being used during the term of the contract, once the Defendants failed to return the equipment when the term of the contract had expired and the contract was terminated, Forum was deprived of the daily rate on this equipment. Given the fact that the object of the contract was the rental of the equipment at a specified daily rate, the loss of use that followed from Defendants' ongoing breach of contract was a form of direct damage clearly contemplated by the parties in advance. Further, plaintiff's representative, Felix Pena, testified that the equipment was in demand and could have been rented consistently during the period it was not returned and was in the custody of Defendants. Vice President and General Counsel James McCulloch testified that it is customary in the industry to charge and receive a daily rate on rental equipment which is not returned at the end of the rental term, until the equipment is in fact returned.

5. Even if the loss of the daily rate on the non-returned equipment could be characterized as a consequential damage flowing from the breach, this type of damage was foreseeable and directly traceable to the Defendants' initial and ongoing breach of the contract. Plaintiffs were an equipment rental company—the improper retention of its equipment would necessarily result in a loss of rental income of the equipment until possession was restored. [62]

6. The Standard Terms and Conditions together with the rental quotations and Purchase Orders submitted by the Defendants are valid, enforceable contracts (collectively, the "Agreements") for the lease of equipment.

*7 7. Plaintiff performed or tendered its obligations under the Agreements. By virtue of the numerous actions of Defendants evidenced herein, Defendants have violated the Agreements, and such breach has damaged Plaintiff.

8. As a result of Globaltech's breach of contract, Plaintiff suffered actual damages of $53,636.45 in the form of missing and damaged equipment and unpaid invoices. Plaintiff is also entitled to damages of $878,432.00 in the form of loss of use of the equipment from the date it was encumbered in violation of the Standard Terms and Conditions by Globaltech's failure to comply with Mexican law and timely export it from Mexico until the date the equipment was returned. Plaintiff is entitled to a daily rate of $350/day for 963 days for the HiPAP system. Plaintiff is entitled to a daily rate of $303.00/day for 931 days for the Tritech System. Plaintiff is entitled to a daily rate of $85.00/day for 931 days for the Geo Nav I–Compass.

9. The MS 1000 system has never been returned and Plaintiff is entitled to a daily rate from the date of encumbrance in violation of the Standard Terms and Conditions through the date of trial. Plaintiff is entitled to a daily rate of $169.00/day for 1066 days for the MS 1000 System.

Attorney's Fees

10. Section 38.001 of the Texas Civil Practice and Remedies Code provides, in relevant part:

> A person may recover reasonable attorney's fees from an individual or corporation, in addition to the amount of a valid claim and costs, if the claim is for: ... an oral or written contract.

Tex. Civ. Prac. & Rem.Code § 38.001(8). [63] Section 38.001 is to be construed "liberally ... to promote its underlying purposes." Id. § 38.005.

11. The Texas Supreme Court has explained that

> [a]lthough Chapter 38 does not explain its underlying purposes, there are at least two reasons for allowing a claimant to recover attorney's fees on a contract suit. First, a wronged claimant may recover the full amount of its damages—including costs in having to litigate the suit—from the wrongdoer, so that [it] is made whole. And, second, a party with a small but valid contract claim is more likely to hazard bringing suit since the claimant may recover attorney's fees if successful, even if the potential amount of attorney's fees is greater than the amount of the contract. Section 38.001's establishment of a one-way fee shift means that a claimant does not risk having to pay the defendant's attorney's fees if the suit is unsuccessful.

1/2 Price Checks Cashed v. United Auto. Ins. Co., 344 S.W.3d 378, 382–83 (Tex.2011). Both of these purposes are evident in the facts of this case, and the attorney's fees of $198,929.50 as proven are reasonable under the circumstances.

Fraud

8 12. The Texas Supreme Court has held that

[t]he elements of fraud are: (1) that a material representation was made; (2) the representation was false; (3) when the representation was made, the speaker knew it was false or made it recklessly without any knowledge of the truth and as a positive assertion; (4) the speaker made the representation with the intent that the other party should act upon it; (5) the party acted in reliance on the representation; and (6) the party thereby suffered injury.

Aquaplex, Inc. v. Rancho la Valencia, Inc., 297 S.W.3d 768, 774 (Tex.2009) (internal quotation marks omitted).

13. Defendants made material misrepresentations that they knew were false at the time they made them with the intent that Plaintiff act on these misrepresentations. Plaintiff acted on Defendants' material misrepresentations and suffered damages as a result.

14. Here, the Defendants represented to Forum that they would initially return the property, but were instead negotiating with the Mexican government to declare the property a permanent import. Defendants failed to admit this to Forum for two years, during which time they retained the property under the false pretext that they could not get the property out of the country. Ironically, Defendants managed to extract the property in June 2014 from Mexico with no explanation as to how this was done or why it was possible in 2014 and not 2012. In addition, there is no question that the Defendants had been using the equipment for their own purposes, given the recent marine growth on some of the equipment.

15. Accordingly, the actions of the Defendants were fraudulent.

Piercing the Corporate Veil

16. "Th[e] Court looks to the law of the State of incorporation for each corporate [d]efendant to determine whether its corporate entity should be disregarded." Amoco Chem. Co. v. Tex Tin Corp., 925 F.Supp. 1192, 1201 (S.D.Tex.1996) (Kent, J.); Ace Am. Ins. Co. v. Huntsman Corp., 255 F.R.D. 179, 195 (S.D.Tex.2008) (Rosenthal, J.). Globaltech is a California corporation. While Texas law controls Forum's other claims, California law will govern whether Globaltech's corporate veil can be pierced.

17. Under California law,

> [t]here is no litmus test to determine when the corporate veil will be pierced; rather the result will depend on the circumstances of each particular case. There are, nevertheless, two general requirements: (1) that there be such unity of interest and ownership that the separate personalities of the corporation and the individual no longer exist and (2) that, if the acts are treated as those of the corporation alone, an inequitable result will follow.

Mesler v. Bragg Mgmt. Co., 39 Cal.3d 290, 300 (Cal.1985) (citations omitted) (internal quotation marks omitted).

> Factors for the trial court to consider include the commingling of funds and assets of the two entities, identical equitable ownership in the two entities, use of the same offices and employees, disregard of corporate formalities,[64] identical directors and officers, and use of one as a mere shell or conduit for the affairs of the other. No one characteristic governs, but the courts must look at all the circumstances to determine whether the doctrine should be applied.

9 Troyk v. Farmers Grp., Inc., 171 Cal.App. 4th 1305, 1342 (Cal.Ct.App.2009) (citations omitted) (internal quotation marks omitted). The corporate form may not be "used by an individual or individuals ... to perpetrate a fraud, circumvent a statute, or accomplish some other wrongful or inequitable purpose[;] a court may disregard the corporate entity and treat the acts as if they were done by the individuals themselves or by the controlling corporation." People v. Anderson, 1 Cal.App. 4th 1084, 1092 (Cal.Ct.App.1991) (alterations in original) (emphasis omitted) (internal quotations marks omitted).

18. Globaltech was used by Defendants Tarek Elsharhawy and Shelly Chilman as a sham to perpetrate a fraud on Plaintiff and its predecessor in interest, DPS. Through the artifice of their corporate entity, Globaltech, Tarek Elsharhawy and Shelly Chilman acquired equipment from DPS for their own use by deliberately misrepresenting their intentions with respect to the equipment, as explained supra. Tarek Elsharhawy and Shelley Chilman attempted in this litigation to evade the consequences of their fraud by hiding behind the corporate formality of Globaltech—a company that did not follow corporate formalities and misrepresented its capitalization to Plaintiff. There was such unity of interest and ownership between Globaltech, Tarek Elsharhawy, and Shelly Chilman that the separate personalities of the corporation and the individuals no longer existed. If the acts of Globaltech are treated as those of the corporation alone, an inequitable result will follow for Forum/DPS, the victim of this fraudulent scheme.

19. For the foregoing reasons, this Court finds that Tarek Elsharhawy and Shelly Chilman are individually liable to the Plaintiff for the damages caused by their deliberate, fraudulent actions, including being individually liable for Globaltech's breach of contract. It is appropriate to pierce the corporate veil and disregard the corporate entity, which it appears was used for the purposes of evading the law.

III. CONCLUSION

Based on the foregoing, the Court hereby

ORDERS that Plaintiff Forum Subsea Rentals f/k/a DPS, Inc. is AWARDED $932,068.45 in damages. The Court further ORDERS that Plaintiff Forum Subsea Rentals f/k/a DPS, Inc. is AWARDED $198,929.50 in attorney's fees.

The Court will issue a separate Final Judgment.

SIGNED at Houston, Texas, on this 17 day of September, 2014.

All Citations

Not Reported in Fed. Supp., 2014 WL 10751177

Footnotes

1 Testimony of Felix Pena; Exhibits 1, 4, 7.

2 Exhibits 2,3

3 Exhibits 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11 and 12.

4 Testimony of Felix Pena and Exhibits 5, 7 and 11.

5 Testimony of Felix Pena; Exhibit 43.

6 Testimony of Felix Pena; Exhibit 17 at Forum 00350.

7 Testimony of Felix Pena.

8 Testimony of Felix Pena and Exhibit 17 at Forum 00350.

9 Testimony of Felix Pena; Exhibit 17; Exhibit 21 and Exhibit 24.

10 Testimony of Felix Pena; Exhibit 17 at Forum 00358 and 00353.

11 Exhibit 17 at Forum 00358 and 00353.

12 Testimony of Felix Pena; Exhibit 17 at Forum 00358 and 00353.

13 Exhibit 17 at Forum 00358 and 00353.

14 Testimony of Felix Pena; Exhibit 17 at Forum 00358 and 00353.

15 Exhibit 17 at Forum 00358 and 00353.

16 Testimony of Felix Pena; Exhibit 17 at Forum 00358 and 00353.

17 Exhibit 17 at Forum 00358 and 00353.

18 Testimony of Felix Pena; Exhibits 14, 15, 16.

19 Exhibit 41, at Forum 00076–00079.

20 Exhibit 18.

21 Exhibit 18.

22 Exhibit 18.

23 Exhibit 17, at Forum 00349–00351.

24 Testimony of Felix Pena.

25 Exhibit 18.

26 Testimony of James McCulloch; Exhibits 21 and 20.

27 Testimony of Felix Pena and James McCulloch. Testimony of Tarek Elsharhawy, p. 95.

28 Exhibits 24–32; Testimony of James McCulloch.

29 Doc. 1.

30 Doc. 41.

31 Testimony of Felix Pena; Exhibit 40.

32 Exhibit 39; Testimony of Felix Pena.

33 Exhibit 39; Testimony of Felix Pena.

34 Testimony of Felix Pena; Exhibit 39, 23.

35 Testimony of Felix Pena.

36 Exhibit 3.

37 Exhibit 35.

38 Testimony of Tarek Elsharhawy, pp. 33–34.

 © 2025 Thomson Reuters. No claim to original U.S. Government Works.

39 Testimony of Tarek Elsharhawy, p. 36

40 Testimony of Tarek Elsharhawy, p. 36.

41 Testimony of Tarek Elsharhawy, pp. 36–37.

42 Testimony of Tarek Elsharhawy, p. 37.

43 Testimony of Tarek Elsharhawy, p. 37.

44 Testimony of Tarek Elsharhawy, pp. 38–39.

45 Testimony of Tarek Elsharhawy, p. 37.

46 Testimony of Tarek Elsharhawy, pp. 34–39.

47 Testimony of Tarek Elsharhawy, p. 79.

48 Testimony of Tarek Elsharhawy, pp. 65–89.

49 Testimony of Tarek Elsharhawy, pp. 64–92.

50 Testimony of Tarek Elsharhawy, pp. 64–92.

51 Testimony of Felix Pena; Exhibit 43.

52 Testimony of Felix Pena.

53 Testimony of Felix Pena.

54 Testimony of Felix Pena and Exhibit 43. See also Exhibit 22.

55 Testimony of Felix Pena and Exhibit 43. See also Exhibits 13, 14, 15, 16, 41 at Forum 00201.

56 Testimony of Felix Pena and Jim McCulloch and Exhibits 13, 14, 15, 16, 21, 24, 28 and 41 at Forum 00201.

57 Testimony of Felix Pena.

58 Testimony of Felix Pena; Exhibit 43 (summary); Exhibits 5, 11

59 Testimony of Jim McCulloch.

60 Testimony of Jon Wise and Exhibit 44.

61 Testimony of Jon Wise.

62 As an independent basis for recovery of loss of use under the contract, the Standard Terms and Conditions of Equipment Rental which formed a part of the Forum contract provided in Paragraph 4 that the renter (i.e., Defendants) agreed to "pay rental charges for damaged equipment until such time that the damaged equipment is returned to DPS facility or other location as directed by DPS." Therefore, Defendants expressly bound themselves to pay rental charges (at the agreed daily rates) for the damaged equipment from the time the contract ended until the present.

 © 2025 Thomson Reuters. No claim to original U.S. Government Works.

63 "To recover attorney's fees under section 38.001, a claimant must meet several prerequisites. The claimant must: (1) plead and prevail on a claim for which attorney's fees are permitted under section 38.001, (2) be represented by an attorney, (3) present the claim to the opposing party or his agent, and (4) demonstrate that the opposing party did not tender payment within thirty days after the claim was presented." 1/2 Price Checks Cashed v. United Auto. Ins. Co., 344 S.W.3d 378, 383 (Tex.2011). Those prerequisites occurred in this case.

64 Under § 1500 of the California Corporations Code,

> Each corporation shall keep adequate and correct books and records of account and shall keep minutes of the proceedings of its shareholders, board and committees of the board and shall keep at its principal executive office, or at the office of its transfer agent or registrar, a record of its shareholders, giving the names and addresses of all shareholders and the number and class of shares held by each. Those minutes and other books and records shall be kept either in written form or in another form capable of being converted into clearly legible tangible form or in any combination of the foregoing. When minutes and other books and records are kept in a form capable of being converted into clearly legible paper form, the clearly legible paper form into which those minutes and other books and records are converted shall be admissible in evidence, and accepted for all other purposes, to the same extent as an original paper record of the same information would have been, provided that the paper form accurately portrays the record.

Cal. Corp.Code § 1500.

End of Document

© 2025 Thomson Reuters. No claim to original U.S. Government Works.

CASE NO. 37

2024 WL 5048964
Only the Westlaw citation
is currently available.
United States District Court,
S.D. Texas, Houston Division.

POINTEAST PHARMA CONSULTING, INC., Plaintiff,
v.
LENZING AKTIENGESELLSCHAFT, Palmers Textil Aktiengesellschaft, Hygiene Austria LP Gmbh, Stephan Trubrich, Tino Wieser, Defendants.

Civil Action
No.
4
:
21
-
CV
-
3654
|
Signed December 9, 2024

Attorneys and Law Firms

William J. Akins, FisherBroyles, LLP, Austin, TX, William Joel Akins, Pierson Ferdinand, LLP, Austin, TX, for Plaintiff.

ORDER GRANTING MOTION FOR DEFAULT JUDGMENT

Andrew S. Hanen, United States District Judge

1 Pending before the Court is Plaintiff PointEast Pharma Consulting, Inc.'s ("Plaintiff" or "PointEast") Amended Motion for Default Judgment against Defendants Palmers Textil Aktiengesellschaft ("Palmers") and Tino Wieser ("Wieser"). (Doc. No. 121). The Court has considered the evidence, the pleadings on file, and the relevant authorities. (Doc. Nos. 121 and 122). Plaintiff dismissed its claims against Defendant Hygiene Austria LP GmbH ("HALP"), and has resolved its claims against Lenzing AG ("Lenzing") and Stephan Trubrich ("Trubrich"). As such, Plaintiff's only remaining claims are against Palmers and Wieser. Neither Defendant answered the Original Complaint nor filed any responsive pleadings or briefs. The Court concludes that PointEast has established that it is entitled to the requested judgment and GRANTS Plaintiff's Amended Motion for Default Judgment. (Doc. No. 121).

I. Background

PointEast is a United States-based pharmaceutical consulting company. (Doc. No. 121-1 at 3). PointEast is owned by Dr. Georg Fischer ("Dr. Fischer") and Mr. Leonard Fischer ("Mr. Fischer"). (Id.). Defendants Lenzing and Palmers, both textile manufacturers, are entities based in Austria. (Id.). In 2020, Lenzing and Palmers jointly created HALP, also an Austrian entity. (Id. at 5). Defendant Trubrich, a citizen of Austria, is a Vice President of Lenzing. (Id. at 3–4). Defendant Wieser is part-owner of Palmers. (Id. at 4).

 © 2025 Thomson Reuters. No claim to original U.S. Government Works.

At issue in this case is an alleged contract whereby Plaintiff was to be the exclusive distributor of HALP's "Made in Austria" masks in the United States. Plaintiff alleges that amid the COVID-19 pandemic, Lenzing and Palmers created HALP to sell personal protective products, principally face masks. (Id. at 5). HALP allegedly undertook to produce "hundreds of millions of masks" for distribution outside of Austria. (Id. at 6). In July 2020, HALP contacted PointEast. (Id. at 5). Plaintiff claims that HALP inquired as to whether PointEast was interested in a long-term, exclusive distribution deal for the United States. Plaintiff responded that it was indeed interested. (Id. at 7).

HALP allegedly promised Plaintiff that it would create a joint venture in the United States that would be headquartered in Houston. Texas. (Id. at 6). Leonard Fischer was to act as lead manager of the United States venture. (Id.). Plaintiff claims that HALP told Mr. Fischer that he "could name [his] salary and title." (Id.). Over the next couple of months, the parties exchanged terms sheets and eventually agreed to finalize the term sheet during a meeting in Vienna, Austria. (Id. at 7). At this meeting. Dr. Fischer and Mr. Fischer, on behalf of PointEast, met with Trubrich, on behalf of Lenzing and HALP, and Wiser, on behalf of Palmers and HALP. (Id.). When Dr. Fischer inquired about finalizing the term sheet, Wieser assured him that no written contract was needed and that their verbal contract, accompanied by a handshake, is binding. (Id.). The parties then agreed to make PointEast HALP's exclusive distributor in the United States of HALP's "Made in Austria" face masks. (Id. at 8).

2 PointEast applied for and obtained, on behalf of HALP, permission from the United States Food & Drug Administration ("FDA") to import and sell the masks within the United States. (Id. at 13). This application required PointEast to identify the masks' production location, which PointEast listed as Austria. (Id.). PointEast claims it spent hundreds of hours:

> advising HALP, conducting market, pricing and federal grant research, creating a logistics plan, distributing mask samples, conceptualizing and providing branding and design work, developing N95/FFP2 prototypes, registering internet domains, business names and bank accounts, building an online store, establishing federal and state supplier accounts, corresponding with testing laboratories and hospitals, collecting competitor masks and sending them to Hygiene Austria, corresponding with FDA regulators, submitting FDA Emergency Use Authorization ("EUA") paperwork, and serving as Hygiene Austria's FDA import agent, all in an effort to prepare for promised distribution of "Made in © 2025 Thomson Reuters. No claim to original U.S. Government Works.

> Austria" masks in the United States.

(Id.). Plaintiff states that HALP, and thus Palmers and Wieser, benefited significantly from PointEast's work. (Id. at 9). On August 18, 2020, PointEast recommended that HALP use a red nosepiece on its masks to create brand recognition and "confer strong product quality identification in the United States." (Id.). HALP agreed to, and in fact did, use a red nosepiece on its masks. (Id. at 9, 11). PointEast alleges that, as a result of the "instantly recognizable" red nosepiece forged via "countless hours and considerable branding and design work," HALP earned over $609 million USD in sales. (Id. at 11–12).

Wieser, on behalf of HALP, allegedly made repeated statements claiming that the masks HALP sold were made in Austria. See (Id. at 12, 14–15). The masks, however, were actually made in China but labeled as "Made in Austria." (Id. at 15; Doc. No. 121-2 at 3). At the same time HALP offered to supply PointEast 500,000 of its "Made in Austria" masks, Austrian police were investigating HALP for the use of the false labels. (Doc. No. 121-1 at 15; Doc. No. 121-3). HALP allegedly never imported any masks to PointEast, nor did it create its United States venture or hire Mr. Fischer at his desired salary. (Doc. No. 121-1 at 16). HALP, instead, attempted to deflect the bad publicity from the police investigation by issuing a statement that it was correct in labeling its masks "Made in Austria" because the masks were "made for Austria." (Id.). Plaintiff argues that this deflection shows that HALP knowingly contracted for masks that it had no plans to produce. (Id.).

PointEast filed this lawsuit in the 333rd Judicial District of Harris County, Texas. Lenzing removed the case to the Southern District of Texas. (Doc. No. 1). Plaintiff brings claims for fraud, fraud in the inducement, negligent misrepresentation, breach of express or implied contract, unjust enrichment, and violations of the Texas Theft Liability Act. (Doc. No. 121-1 at 21–24). Plaintiff further alleges that liability amongst or between defendants should be shared through theories of joint venture or joint enterprise and civil conspiracy. (Id. at 24–26). Plaintiff alleges that the Defendants breached the parties' verbal contract by failing to import any masks at all (let alone masks actually made in Austria), failing to establish the United States venture as promised, and failing to pay Plaintiff for the work it put into their business arrangement. (Id. at 18–19). Most significantly, Plaintiff states that Defendants wrongfully profited from an idea they took from PointEast—the red nosepiece—while refusing to pay Plaintiff anything. (Id. at 19).

3 As noted above, Plaintiff dismissed its claims against Defendant HALP, and has resolved its claims against Lenzing and Trubrich. Therefore, Plaintiff's only remaining claims are against Palmers and Wieser. Despite having been served with process, Defendants Wieser and Palmers have not appeared in the case or filed any responsive pleadings.[1] The Clerk entered default as to Palmers on April 16, 2024 (Doc. No. 115) and default as to Wieser on November 22, 2024 (Doc. No. 123) pursuant to Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 55(a). Plaintiff subsequently filed its Amended Motion for Default Judgment pursuant to Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 55(b). (Doc. No. 121).

II. Legal Standard

After default is entered, a plaintiff may seek default judgment under Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 55(b). See N.Y. Life Ins. Co. v. Brown, 84 F.3d 137, 141 (5th Cir. 1996). The plaintiff must submit evidence supporting that the defendant has been properly served with the summons, complaint, and the default judgment motion. James Avery Craftsman, Inc. v. Sam Moon Trading Enters., Ltd., No. 16-CV-463, 2018 WL 4688778, at *3 (W.D. Tex. July 5, 2018) (citing Bludworth Bond Shipyard, Inc. v. M/V Caribbean Wind, 841 F.2d 646, 649–51 (5th Cir. 1988)); Hazim v. Schiel & Denver Book Grp., No. H-12-1286, 2013 WL 2152109, at *1 (S.D. Tex. May 16, 2013). Absent proper service, a district court does not have personal jurisdiction over the defendant, and any default judgment is void. See Recreational Props., Inc. v. Sw. Mortg. Serv. Corp., 804 F.2d 311, 314 (5th Cir. 1986).

"A default judgment is unassailable on the merits but only so far as it is supported by the well-pleaded allegations, assumed to be true." Wooten v. McDonald Transit Assocs., Inc., 788 F.3d 490, 496(5th Cir.2015)(quoting Nishimatsu Constr. Co., Ltd. v. Hous. Nat'l Bank, 515 F.2d 1200, 1206 (5th Cir. 1975)). "There must be a sufficient basis in the pleadings for the judgment entered." Nishimatsu Constr. Co., 515 F.2d at 1206. For the court to enter default judgment, the complaint must satisfy Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 8. See Wooten, 788 F.3d at 497–98. "On appeal, the defendant, although he may not challenge the sufficiency of the evidence, is entitled to contest the sufficiency of the complaint and its allegations to support the judgment." Nishimatsu Const. Co. v. Houston Nat. Bank, 515 F.2d 1200, 1206 (5th Cir. 1975).

Rule 8(a) requires "a short and plain statement of the claim showing that the pleader is entitled to relief." FED. R. CIV. P. 8(a)(2). A complaint must contain "enough facts to state a claim to relief that is plausible on its face." Bell Atl. Corp. v. Twombly, 550 U.S. 544, 573 (2007). Rule 8 "does not require 'detailed factual allegations,' but it demands more than an unadorned, the-defendant-unlawfully-harmed-me accusation." Ashcroft v. Iqbal, 556 U.S. 662, 678 (2009) (citing Twombly, 550 U.S. at 555). "A claim has facial plausibility when the plaintiff pleads factual content that allows the court to draw the reasonable inference that the defendant is liable for the misconduct alleged." Id. (citing Twombly, 550 U.S. at 556). "The plausibility standard is not akin to a 'probability requirement,' hut it asks for more than a sheer possibility than a defendant has acted unlawfully." Id. (citing Twombly, 550 U.S. at 556).

III. Analysis

4 Courts in the Fifth Circuit have developed a three-part analysis to determine whether a default judgment should be entered. The Court must consider three questions: (1) if a default judgment is procedurally appropriate; (2) if the plaintiff has presented a colorable claim in its pleadings; and (3) how to calculate damages or equitable relief. Vela v. M&G USA Corp., 2020 WL 421188. at * 1 (S.D. Tex. Jan. 27, 2020). The Court finds that each of these requirements has been met.

A. PointEast has shown that default judgment is procedurally warranted.

As a matter of longstanding Fifth Circuit law, default judgments are generally disfavored. See Sun Bank v. Pelican Homestead & Sav. Ass'n, 874 F.2d 274, 276 (5th Cir. 1989) ("Default judgments are a drastic remedy, not favored by the Federal Rules and resorted by courts only in extreme situations."). The Court must consider relevant factors, including: (1) whether material issues of fact are at issue; (2) whether there has been substantial prejudice; (3) whether the grounds for default are clearly established; (4) whether the default was caused by a good faith mistake or excusable neglect; (5) the harshness of the default judgment based on the circumstances; and (6) whether the court would think itself obliged to set aside the default on the [defaulting party's] motion. Lindsey v. Prive Corp., 161 F.3d 886, 893 (5th Cir. 1998). The Court finds that each of these considerations weigh in favor of default judgment in this case.

First, there are no material facts at issue. Defendants have not filed an answer or any responsive pleadings since being served in this case; consequently, there are no material facts in dispute. See Nishimatsu Constr. Co., 515 F.2d at 1206 ("The defendant, by his default, admits the plaintiff's well-pleaded allegations of fact, is concluded on those facts by the judgment, and is barred from contesting on appeal the facts thus established.").

Second, there does not seem to be any threat of substantial prejudice to the Defendant. Moreover, Defendants' "failure to respond threatens to bring the adversary process to a halt, effectively prejudicing Plaintiff's interests." Ins. Co. of the W. v. H & G Contractors, Inc., No. C–10–390, 2011 WL 4738197, at *3 (S.D. Tex. Oct. 5, 2011).

Third, the grounds for default are well established by Defendants failure to "plead or otherwise defend" against PointEast's claims, despite being properly served. Fed. R. Civ. Pro. 55(a). Further, none of the typical exceptions to default apply, reflected in the Clerk's entry of default. This factor weighs in favor of default judgment.

Fourth, the question of good faith mistake or excusable neglect is slightly more difficult. Defendant Wieser is a citizen of, and resides in, Austria. (Doc. No. 121-1 at 4). Defendant Palmers is an entity incorporated in Austria with its principal place of business in Vienna, Austria. (Id. at 3). The requisite documents have been mailed first class to Palmers's Austrian address. (Doc. No. 21). Wieser was served via both first-class mail and email after the Court permitted alternative service of process in its prior order. (Doc. No. 90). The service is deemed legally sound, even if the Plaintiff cannot show Defendants have actual notice of the suit. Thus, the Court finds that this factor is neutral.

Fifth, default judgment is not harsh under the circumstances. PointEast seeks only the relief to which it is entitled under the law, mitigating the harshness of a default judgment against Defendants. See Lindsey, 161 F.3d at 893.

5 Sixth, and finally, absent a compelling reason the Court does not find itself likely to set aside the default upon Defendants' motion. Defendants have failed to answer or appear at any time during the pendency of this suit—now pending over three years—despite being served numerous ways over the course of several months. Further, based on the Defendants' lack of appearance or response, the likelihood of the Defendants making such a motion seems remarkably low. Thus, this factor also weighs in favor of default judgment.

All of the Lindsey factors weigh in Plaintiffs favor. Therefore, the Court concludes that default judgment is procedurally warranted.

B. PointEast has pled substantively meritorious claims.

Next, the Court must determine whether the pleadings provide a "sufficient basis" for entering default judgment. Nasufi, 2017 WL 6497762, at *2. Due to their default. Defendants are deemed to have admitted the well-pleaded facts alleged in the Complaint. See United States v. Shipco Gen., Inc., 814 F.2d 1011, 1014 (5th Cir. 1987) (finding that the well-pleaded factual allegations are assumed to be true, except regarding damages). Nonetheless, the Court must review the pleadings to determine the substantive merits of PointEast's claims for relief. Nishimatsu Constr. Co., 515 F.2d at 1206. As noted above, Plaintiff brings claims for fraud, fraud in the inducement, negligent misrepresentation, breach of express or implied contract, unjust enrichment, and violations of the Texas Theft Liability Act.

1. Fraud, fraud in the inducement, and negligent misrepresentation

PointEast asserted claims for common-law fraud against the Defendants. (Doc. No. 121-1, at 19–21). In Texas, the elements of fraud are:

> (1) that a material representation was made; (2) the representation was false; (3) when the representation was made, the speaker knew it was false or made it recklessly without any knowledge of the truth and as a positive assertion; (4) the speaker made the representation with the intent that the other party should act upon it; (5) the party acted in reliance on the representation; and (6) the party thereby suffered injury.

Italian Cowboy Partners, Ltd. v. Prudential Ins. Co. of Am., 341 S.W.3d 323, 337 (Tex. 2011) (quoting Aquaplex, Inc. v. Rancho La Valencia, Inc., 297 S.W.3d 768, 774 (Tex. 2009) (per curiam)). In federal court, fraud claims must meet the heightened pleading standard of Rule 9. FED. R. CIV. P. 9(b) ("In alleging fraud or mistake, a party must state with particularity the circumstances constituting fraud or mistake."). The Fifth Circuit "interprets Rule 9(b) strictly, requiring the plaintiff to 'specify the statements contended to be fraudulent, identify the speaker, state when and where the statements were made, and explain why the statements were fraudulent.' " Flaherty & Crumrine Preferred Income Fund, Inc. v. TXU Corp., 565 F.3d 200, 207 (5th Cir. 2009) (quoting Williams v. WMX Techs., Inc., 112 F.3d 175, 177 (5th Cir. 1997)).

PointEast's Complaint adequately alleges a cause of action for fraud under this heightened pleading standard. The complaint identifies a series of false statements made by Defendants concerning the purported HALP United States venture business opportunity. (Doc. No. 121-1 at 12, 14–15). PointEast alleges Defendants made these false intentionally and knowingly. (Id. at 16). Moreover, Plaintiff asserts reliance and causation, stating that "PointEast relied on their false representations to its detriment, including by dedicating countless hours and considerable branding and design work, causing [HALP's] masks to become instantly recognizable in the market as Hygiene Austria masks.... as a result of PointEast's work" (Id. at 20–21). Thus, Plaintiff has satisfied each element of a common law fraud claim. The Court finds that the pleadings provide a sufficient basis for entering default judgment on this cause of action.

2. Breach of contract

6 PointEast has also asserted claims for breach of contract against the Defendants. (Doc. No. 1, at 10–11). Under Texas law, to prevail on a breach-of-contract claim a plaintiff must show "(1) the existence of a valid contract; (2) performance or tendered performance by the plaintiff; (3) breach of the contract by the defendant; and (4) damages sustained by the plaintiff as a result of the breach." Mullins v. TestAmerica, Inc., 564 F.3d 386, 418 (5th Cir. 2009) (quoting Aguiar v. Segal, 167 S.W.3d 443, 450 (Tex. App.—Houston [14th Dist.] 2005, pet. denied)). The allegations set out in the Complaint satisfy these four elements. Specifically, the Complaint alleges: (1) the oral agreement between the parties constitutes a valid, enforceable contract (Doc. No. 121-1 at 7–8); (2) PointEast performed or was excused from performing its contractual obligations (Id. at 13); (3) Defendants have failed to pay the amounts owing under the contracts (Id. at 18–19); and (4) Defendants' breaches have caused significant financial injury to PointEast. (Id.). Given these well-pleaded factual allegations, default judgment is appropriate for Plaintiff's breach of contract cause of action.

Plaintiff also asserts an unjust enrichment cause of action. Texas law is not completely clear as to whether unjust enrichment constitutes an independent cause of action rather than a theory of restitution used when calculating damages. Compare Pepi Corp. v. Galliford, 254 S.W.3d 457, 460 (Tex. App.—Houston [1st Dist.] 2007, pet. denied) (finding that unjust enrichment is an independent cause of action), with Davis v. OneWest Bank N.A., No. 02-14-00264-CV, 2015 WL 1623541, at *1 (Tex. App.—Fort Worth, Apr. 9, 2015, pet. denied) (finding that unjust enrichment is not an independent cause of action); see also Perales v. Bank of Am., N.A., No. CIV.A. H-14-1791, 2014 WL 3907793, at *3 (S.D. Tex. Aug. 11, 2014). Nevertheless, whether unjust enrichment is characterized as a cause of action or a theory of recovery, the elements are clear.

"A party may recover under the unjust enrichment theory when one person has obtained a benefit from another by fraud, duress, or the taking of an undue advantage." Digital Drilling Data Sys., L.L.C. v. Petrolink Servs., Inc., 965 F.3d 365, 384 (5th Cir. 2020) (citing Heldenfels Bros. v. City of Corpus Christi, 832 S.W.2d 39, 41 (Tex. 1992)). Unjust enrichment claims are based on quasi-contract and are predicated on the absence of an express contract controlling the circumstances. See Fortune Production Co. v. Conoco, Inc., 52 S.W.3d 671, 683 (Tex. 2000).

PointEast alleges Defendants benefited, either by fraud or by taking of an undue advantage, from PointEast's work on the branding and designs of the face masks. (Doc. No. 121 at 13). Plaintiff states that it explicitly recommended Defendants use a red nosepiece to build brand recognition. (Doc. No. 121-1 at 9). The red nosepiece is claimed to be the cause of Defendants' earning hundreds of millions of Euros. (Id. at 22). Plaintiff alleges that Palmers and Wieser unjustly obtained the revenue generated from the design and wrongfully retained such benefits to the detriment of PointEast. (Id. at 22).

Still, the Court is uncertain whether Plaintiff, as pleaded, can recover under both a breach of contract cause of action and an unjust enrichment cause of action. See Coghlan v. Wellcraft Marine Corp., 240 F.3d 449, 454 (5th Cir. 2001) (citing Woodard v. Southwest States, Inc., 384 S.W.2d 674, 675 (Tex. 1964)) ("In Texas, unjust enrichment is based on quasi-contract and is unavailable when a valid, express contract governing the subject matter of the dispute exists."). Pursuant to Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 55(b), the Court "may conduct hearings when, to enter or effectuate judgment, it needs to: ... establish the truth of any allegation by evidence or investigate any other matter." FED. R. CIV. P. 55(b)(2). Thus, the Court will conduct a hearing to determine whether Plaintiff may recover under just one or both causes of action.

3. Texas Theft Liability Act

7 Plaintiff also brings claims under the Texas Theft Liability Act ("TTLA"). Pursuant to the TTLA, a person who commits theft is liable for the damages resulting from the theft. TEX. CIV. PRAC. & REM. CODE ANN. § 134.003(a). "Theft" is defined as "unlawfully appropriating property or unlawfully obtaining services as described by sections 31.03-31.07, or 31.11-31.14 of the Texas Penal Code." Id. § 134.002(a). "A person commits theft of service if, with intent to avoid payment for service that the actor knows is provided only for compensation the actor intentionally or knowingly secures performance of the service by deception...." TEX. PEN. CODE § 31.04(1).

PointEast alleges Defendants promised to make Plaintiff the exclusive United States distributor of its products, and made this promise without the intent to pay for PointEast's work. (Doc. No. 121-1 at 16). PointEast claims the services would not have been provided but-for Defendants' promise of compensation. (Id. at 22). Plaintiff also states that, "[a]cting with the intent to avoid payment, Defendants intentionally and knowingly secured PointEast's performance of its services by deception." (Id.). Given these well-pleaded factual allegations, default judgment is appropriate for Plaintiff's TTLA claim. While the statute entitles PointEast to recover reasonable and necessary attorney's fees, Plaintiffs do not provide evidence to support such a claim.

C. Damages

After a court determines default judgment can be entered, the court must determine what form of relief, if any, to which the plaintiff is entitled. Nasufi, 2017 WL 6497762, at *2. The plaintiff bears the burden of proving the amount of damages. U.S. for Use of M-CO Constr., Inc. v. Shipco Gen., Inc., 814 F.2d 1011, 1014 (5th Cir. 1987). The plaintiff must establish the necessary facts, either through detailed affidavits or an evidentiary hearing, to show its damages are "capable of mathematical calculation." United Artists Corp. v. Freeman, 605 F.2d 854, 857 (5th Cir. 1979). If a calculation can be made "with certainty by reference to the pleadings and supporting documents," a hearing to determine damages is unnecessary. James v. Frame, 6 F.3d 307, 311 (5th Cir. 1993) (quoting Frame v. S–H, Inc., 967 F.2d 194, 204 (5th Cir. 1992)).

Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 55(b)(2) also allows the Court to conduct hearings when it needs to determine the amount of damages. The general rule is "unliquidated damages normally are not awarded without an evidentiary hearing." Leedo Cabinetry v. James Sales & Distribution, Inc., 157 F.3d 410, 414 (5th Cir. 1998). While there is an exception when the amount claimed is "one capable of mathematical calculation," the Court finds that the exception is not applicable. Id. (citing James v. Frame, 6 F.3d 307, 309–10 (5th Cir. 1993)). Therefore, the Court will conduct a hearing to determine the amount of damages to which PointEast is entitled.

IV. Conclusion

For the foregoing reasons, the Court GRANTS PointEast's Motion for Default Judgment on the issue of liability against the remaining Defendants. (Doc. No. 121). The Court will set a hearing to determine: (1) whether Plaintiff may recover on both its breach of contract and unjust enrichment claims; and (2) the amount of damages to which PointEast is entitled.

All Citations

Slip Copy, 2024 WL 5048964

Footnotes

1 As residents of Austria, Defendants were served in accordance with the Hague Convention on the Service Abroad of Judicial and Extrajudicial Documents in Civil or Commercial Matters. Nov. 15, 1965, 20 U.S.T. 361; see FED. R. CIV. P. 4(f)(1), (h)(2) (authorizing service under the Hague Convention); (Doc. Nos. 120 and 120-1).

 © 2025 Thomson Reuters. No claim to original U.S. Government Works.

End of Document

© 2025 Thomson Reuters. No claim to original U.S. Government Works.

CASE NO. 38

2018 WL 4701566
Only the Westlaw citation
is currently available.
United States District Court,
S.D. Texas, Houston Division.

Terry KATZ, Plaintiff,
v.
INTEL PHARMA, LLC, a Texas limited liability company; Ntel Pharma, LLC, a Texas limited liability company; Ntel Nutra, Inc., a Texas corporation; and Landon Suggs, an individual. Defendants.

Civil Action
No.
H
-
18
-
1347
|
Signed 10/01/2018

Attorneys and Law Firms

Matthew Dempsey Treco, Kaufman & Forman, PC, Atlanta, GA, A. Kent Altsuler, Lewis Brisbois Bisgaard & Smith, Houston, TX, for Plaintiff.

Dillon Hoey Malar, Pro Hac Vice, Robert Tauler, Tauler Smith LLP, Los Angeles, CA, for Defendants.

OPINION AND ORDER

Lee H. Rosenthal, Chief United States District Judge

1 Terry Katz brought this derivative action on behalf of the nominal defendant, Intel Pharma, LLC, against Ntel Pharma, LLC, Ntel Nutra, Inc., and Landon Suggs. (Docket Entry Nos. 1, 18). Katz asserts breach of fiduciary duty, aiding and abetting a breach of fiduciary duty, violations of the Texas Uniform Fraudulent Transfer Act, and civil conspiracy. (Id.). The defendants moved to dismiss, and Katz responded and filed an amended complaint. (Docket Entry Nos. 11, 18, 20). This court denied the motion to dismiss as moot, the defendants moved to dismiss the amended complaint, and Katz responded. (Docket Entry Nos. 24–26). For the reasons explained below, the court denies the defendants' motion to dismiss.

I. Background

A. The Complaint's Allegations

Katz alleges that his relationship with Landon Suggs, then the sole owner of workout-supplement company Intel Pharma, LLC, began in January 2015. (Docket Entry No. 18 at 1–2). In February 2015, Suggs gave him a business proposal for a new supplement brand. (Id.). A month later, Suggs offered Katz a 25% interest in Intel in exchange for funding the initial inventory purchase, providing warehouse space, purchasing labels, and soliciting sales. (Id. at ¶ 14). Katz alleges that he orally accepted the proposal, creating an enforceable contract, and that he met the terms. (Id. at 15). The amended complaint alleges that Suggs confirmed Katz's 25% interest in writing. (Id. at ¶ 16). Angel Echevarria, Intel's president, referred to Katz as a co-owner of the company in correspondence with an insurance broker. (Id. at ¶ 17–18). Katz received at least two income distributions from Intel in the summer of 2015. (Id. at ¶ 19).

 © 2025 Thomson Reuters. No claim to original U.S. Government Works.

Katz alleges that in August 2015, he wrote to Suggs and Echevarria offering them the opportunity to buy out his ownership interest in Intel. (Id. at ¶ 20). Neither responded. (Id.). In September 2015, Katz threatened Suggs and Echevarria with legal action if they did not pay him the income distributions he was owed. (Id. at ¶ 21).

The amended complaint alleges that Suggs and Echevarria formed Ntel Pharma a year later and transferred all or substantially all of Intel's assets to Ntel Pharma. (Id. at ¶¶ 24–25). Ntel Pharma allegedly began selling and marketing the same workout supplements as Intel, including, for a time, through Intel's website and Facebook page. (Id. at ¶¶ 31–32). Later, the Intel website redirected customers to Ntel Pharma's websites. (Id.). Intel stopped selling its products or doing business, and, in January 2017, the Texas Secretary of State forfeited Intel's certificate of formation. (Id. at ¶ 34).

Katz alleges that Suggs and Echevarria formed a third company, NTel Nutra, in January 2018, and that they transferred substantially all of Ntel Pharma's assets to NTel Nutra. Katz alleges that NTel Nutra described itself as a continuation of Ntel Pharma and sold the same supplements as Ntel Pharma and Intel had sold. (Id. at ¶¶ 46–50). Katz also alleges that NTel Nutra adopted the same hashtags and marketing features that Intel and Ntel Pharma had used. (Id. at ¶¶ 51–55). Katz contends that Suggs and Echevarria were the majority owners, if not the sole owners, of NTel Nutra. (Id. at ¶ 43).

2 Katz asserts on Intel's behalf claims for: (1) breach of fiduciary duty against Suggs; (2) aiding and abetting a breach of fiduciary duty, against Ntel Pharma and NTel Nutra; (3) violations of the Texas Uniform Fraudulent Transfer Act, against N-Tel and Nutra; and (4) civil conspiracy, against Suggs, Ntel Pharma, and NTel Nutra.

B. The Motion to Dismiss

The defendants argue that Katz bases his claims on his alleged oral agreement with Suggs to acquire a 25% interest in Intel, and, therefore, that his claims sound in contract. (Docket Entry No. 25 at 8–10). They argue that Katz has not pleaded sufficient facts to support an inference that Katz and Suggs had an enforceable contract. They urge the dismissal of Katz's civil conspiracy claim because Texas law does not recognize a claim for civil conspiracy to breach a contract. (Id. at 10–12). They similarly argue that Katz's aiding and abetting claims are not cognizable under Texas law. (Id. at 11). Finally, they argue that Katz's amended complaint is deficient because many of its claims are based solely on "information and belief." (Id. at 10).

II. The Legal Standards under Rule 12(b)(6)

Rule 12(b)(6) allows dismissal if a plaintiff fails "to state a claim upon which relief can be granted." Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(b)(6). Rule 12(b)

 © 2025 Thomson Reuters. No claim to original U.S. Government Works.

(6) must be read in conjunction with Rule 8(a), which requires "a short and plain statement of the claim showing that the pleader is entitled to relief." Fed. R. Civ. P. 8(a) (2). A complaint must contain "enough facts to state a claim to relief that is plausible on its face." Bell Atl. Corp. v. Twombly, 550 U.S. 544, 570 (2007). Rule 8 "does not require 'detailed factual allegations,' but it demands more than an unadorned, the-defendant-unlawfully-harmed-me accusation." Ashcroft v. Iqbal, 556 U.S. 662, 678 (2009) (citing Twombly, 550 U.S. at 555). "A claim has facial plausibility when the plaintiff pleads factual content that allows the court to draw the reasonable inference that the defendant is liable for the misconduct alleged." Id. (citing Twombly, 550 U.S. at 556). "The plausibility standard is not akin to a 'probability requirement,' but it asks for more than a sheer possibility that a defendant has acted unlawfully." Id. (citing Twombly, 550 U.S. at 556).

To withstand a Rule 12(b)(6) motion, a "complaint must allege 'more than labels and conclusions,' " and "a formulaic recitation of the elements of a cause of action will not do." Norris v. Hearst Tr., 500 F.3d 454, 464 (5th Cir. 2007) (quoting Twombly, 550 U.S. at 555). "Nor does a complaint suffice if it tenders 'naked assertion[s]' devoid of 'further factual enhancement.' " Iqbal, 556 U.S. at 678 (alteration in original) (quoting Twombly, 550 U.S. at 557). "[A] complaint 'does not need detailed factual allegations,' but must provide the plaintiff's grounds for entitlement to relief-including factual allegations that when assumed to be true 'raise a right to relief above the speculative level.' " Cuvillier v. Taylor, 503 F.3d 397, 401 (5th Cir. 2007) (quoting Twombly, 550 U.S. at 555). But "when the allegations in a complaint, however true, could not raise a claim of entitlement to relief, 'this basic deficiency should...be exposed at the point of minimum expenditure of time and money by the parties and the court.' " Twombly, 550 U.S. at 558 (quoting 5 CHARLES ALAN WRIGHT & ARTHUR R. MILLER, FEDERAL PRACTICE AND PROCEDURE § 1216, at 233-34 (3d ed. 2004)) (alteration in original).

3 A plaintiff alleging fraud is held to the heightened pleading standard of Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 9(b). The Rule provides that a party alleging fraud "must state with particularity the circumstances constituting fraud....Malice, intent, knowledge, and other conditions of a person's mind may be alleged generally." Fed. R. Civ. P. 9(b). "Put simply, Rule 9(b) requires 'the who, what, when, where, and how' to be laid out." Benchmark Electronics, Inc. v. J.M. Huber Corp., 343 F.3d 719, 724 (5th Cir. 2003). The plaintiff must "specify the statements contended to be fraudulent, identify the speaker, state when and where the statements were made, and explain why the statements were fraudulent." Williams v. WMX Techs., Inc., 112 F.3d 175, 177 (5th Cir. 1997). "A dismissal for failure to plead fraud with particularity under Rule 9(b) is treated as a dismissal for failure to state a claim under Rule 12(b)(6)." United States ex rel. Grubbs v. Kanneganti, 565 F.3d 180, 185 n.8 (5th Cir. 2009) (citation and internal quotation marks omitted).

III. Analysis

A. The Nature of Katz's Claims

The defendants' central argument for dismissal is that the claims Katz presents as tort claims are contract claims because each is based on Katz's alleged oral agreement with Suggs. (Docket Entry No. 25 at 5). The defendants' argument for why this requires dismissal is that Katz is seeking contract performance, but has not pleaded sufficient facts to show that the contract exists, much less that it was breached.

Katz responds that the allegations about his agreement with Suggs are only to show that he has standing to bring this derivative claim. See TEX. BUS. ORG. CODE § 101.452; *see also In re LoneStar Logo & Signs, LLC, 552 S.W.3d 342, 347 (Tex. App.—Austin 2018, no pet.) ("From these rationales has followed the rule, recognized in Texas as elsewhere, that a corporate shareholder (and, by logical extension, an LLC member) must have and maintain that ownership status in order to have standing to prosecute derivative claims on the entity's behalf."). Katz argues that the defendants have mischaracterized his complaint by arguing that he bases his claims on Suggs's failure to give him distributions from his 25% interest in Intel. Katz clarifies that he does not seek relief for Suggs's failure to comply with an oral agreement to give Katz a 25% interest and to make distributions based on that interest. Instead, Katz argues he is pleading facts about the contract to show that, because he has a 25% ownership interest, he has standing to bring his derivative suit.

Katz's claims are properly considered under § 101.463 of the Texas Business Organizations Code, which provides special rules for closely held limited liability companies. See TEX. BUS. ORG. CODE § 101.463. Under § 101.463, a "closely held limited liability company" is a limited liability company with "(1) fewer than 35 members; and (2) no membership interests listed on a national securities exchange or regularly quoted in an over-the-counter market by one or more members of a national securities association." § 101.463(a). Katz alleges that Suggs was the sole owner of Intel before he offered Katz a 25% interest, meaning that Intel had fewer than 35 members and that its membership interests are not listed on a national exchange.

"Sections 101.452–101.459 do not apply to a closely held limited liability company." § 101.463(b); see also Lonestar Logo, 552 S.W.3d at 348–49. "The import and effect of this exemption, as the Texas Supreme Court has observed in regard to the parallel provisions that govern shareholder-derivative suits, are that 'the Legislature has enacted special rules to allow its shareholders to more easily bring a derivative suit on behalf of the corporation,' including 'without having to prove that they "fairly and adequately represent[ ] the interests of" the corporation, without having to make a "demand" upon the corporation, as in other derivative actions, and without fear of a stay or dismissal based on actions of other corporate actors in response to a demand.' " Id. at 349 (quoting Ritchie v. Rupe, 443 S.W.3d 856, 880–81 (Tex. 2014) (citations omitted)). Section 101.463 also provides:

> 4 [i]f justice requires:
>
> (1) a derivative proceeding brought by a member of a closely held limited liability company may be treated by a court as a direct action brought by the member for the member's own benefit; and

 © 2025 Thomson Reuters. No claim to original U.S. Government Works.

> (2) a recovery in a direct or derivative proceeding by a member may be paid directly to the plaintiff or to the limited liability company if necessary to protect the interests of creditors or other members of the limited liability company.

§ 101.463(c).

Even if Intel is a closely held corporation, Katz must establish himself as a member of the LLC to bring a derivative suit. The complaint alleges that Katz had a 25% ownership interest in Intel and that both Suggs and Echevarria corroborated Katz's interest in writing. (Docket Entry No. 18 at 16–17). A membership interest is a bundle of economic rights in the LLC, including the right to receive distributions. See TEX. BUS. ORG. CODE § 1.002(54). The complaint alleges that Katz received the right to income distributions from Intel based on his ownership interest and that he received at least two distributions. (Docket Entry No. 18 at ¶ 19). Viewing the complaint in the light most favorable to Katz, the factual allegations are sufficient to permit Katz's derivative claims. The fact that Katz repeatedly alleges the existence of a contract with Suggs to receive the ownership interest in Intel does not support dismissal.

B. The Claims Based on "Information and Belief"

The defendants argue that, to the extent Katz's claims are not based on contract, the amended complaint should be dismissed because its claims "are predicated solely on allegations of a fraudulent transfer of corporate assets 'on information and belief.' " (Docket Entry No. 25 at 10). The defendants challenge the allegations based "on information and belief" as failing to set forth a sufficient factual basis. See, e.g., U.S. ex rel. Thompson v. Columbia/HCA Healthcare Corp., 125 F.3d 899, 903 (5th Cir. 1997) ("Although we have held that fraud may be pled on information and belief...we have also warned that this exception 'must not be mistaken for license to base claims of fraud on speculation and conclusory allegations.'...In addition, even where allegations are based on information and belief, the complaint must set forth a factual basis for such belief." (citations omitted)).

Katz agrees that some of his allegations are based on information and belief, and that Rule 9's heightened pleading standards likely apply to his claim for violations of the Texas Uniform Fraudulent Transfer Act. (Docket Entry No. 26 at 8–10). He argues, however, that the complaint pleads sufficient facts to support those allegations. The complaint "sufficiently pleads the who, what, when, where, and how of the fraudulent acts," and pleading on information and belief is necessary because only the defendants know, and have access to the information about, the specifics of the allegedly fraudulent transfers. (Id. at 10).

That some of the claims are made on "information and belief" is not a basis for dismissal. Rule 9(b) requires the plaintiff to identify "the 'who, what, when, where, and how' of the alleged fraud." United States ex rel. Thompson., 125 F.3d at 903 (quoting Williams, 112 F.3d at 179). The complaint pleads essential facts making out the Texas Uniform Fraudulent Transfer Act claim. The complaint identifies which conveyances and transfers that allegedly lacked adequate consideration are based on information and belief. (Docket Entry No. 18 at ¶¶ 26, 40). The complaint also states with particularity the facts on which the allegations of inadequate consideration are based. For example, the complaint alleges that Suggs was the managing member and CEO of Intel as well as the co-managing member and CEO of Ntel Pharma. The complaint alleges that Echevarria served as a member and president of Intel, while also serving as the co-managing member and president of Ntel Pharma. The complaint alleges that when Intel's assets were conveyed to Ntel Pharma, Suggs and Echevarria were the majority owners of Intel and held at least a majority ownership interest in Ntel Pharma. The complaint sets out a general timeline for these transactions and alleges with specificity the marketing strategies and official statements of Ntel Pharma and NTel Nutra that tied the transactions to Intel. These allegations are not the type of vague, conclusory pleadings that Iqbal and Twombly instruct the courts to dismiss.

C. The Aiding and Abetting Claim

5 The defendants argue that the court should dismiss the claim for aiding and abetting a breach of fiduciary duty because Texas law does not recognize liability on this basis. (Docket Entry No. 25 at 11). Katz responds that Texas does recognize a claim for aiding and abetting in this context. See, e.g., Floyd v. Hefner, 556 F. Supp. 2d 617, 654 (S.D. Tex. 2008) (citing Kinzbach Tool Co. v. Corbett-Wallace Corp., 160 S.W.2d 509, 514 (Tex. 1942); Cox Tex. Newspapers, L.P. v. Wootten, 59 S.W.3d 717, 721 (Tex. App.—Austin 2001, pet. denied)) ("Texas recognizes a cause of action for aiding and abetting a breach of fiduciary duty.").

The cases the defendants cite concluded that Texas law does not recognize a cause of action for aiding and abetting fraud; those cases do not discuss breach of fiduciary duty. See, e.g., In re Enron Corp. Sec., No. H-01-3624, 2006 WL 3716669, at *8 (S.D. Tex. Dec. 12, 2006). As the Texas cases recognize a common-law claim for aiding and abetting a breach of fiduciary duty. Kinzbach Tool Co., 160 S.W.2d at 574 ("It is settled as the law of this State that where a third party knowingly participates in the breach of duty of a fiduciary, such third party becomes a joint tortfeasor with the fiduciary and is liable as such."); Kastner v. Jenkens & Gilchrist, P.C., 231 S.W.3d 571, 580 (Tex. App.—Dallas 2007, no pet.); Kline v. O'Quinn, 874 S.W.2d 776, 786 (Tex.App.—Houston [14th Dist.] 1994, writ denied); Horton v. Robinson, 776 S.W.2d 260, 266 (Tex. App.—El Paso 1989, no writ).

Stating a claim for aiding and abetting a breach of fiduciary duty requires pleading: "(1) the existence of a fiduciary relationship; (2) that the third party knew of the fiduciary relationship; and (3) that the third party was aware that it was participating in the breach of that fiduciary relationship." Meadows v. Hartford Life Ins. Co., 492 F.3d 634, 639 (5th Cir. 2007). The amended complaint adequately pleads the existence of a fiduciary duty by alleging that Suggs was the CEO of Intel and by alleging facts about his relationship with, and statements to, Katz about Intel. The complaint alleges that Ntel Pharma and NTel Nutra, through their officers, Suggs and Echevarria, knew of the fiduciary duties that these men owed Intel and participated in the breach. (Docket Entry No. 18 at ¶¶ 68-69). Katz's supporting factual allegations—that Ntel Pharma used the same marketing strategies, website, and mission statement as well as sold the same products as Intel—make these claims more than "threadbare recitals of a cause of action's elements" that merit dismissal. Iqbal, 556 U.S. at 678.

D. The Civil Conspiracy Claim

The defendants also move to dismiss the civil conspiracy claim, arguing that Texas law does not recognize a claim for a civil conspiracy to breach a contract. (Docket Entry No. 25 at 12). Katz argues that his action does not sound in contract but is a derivative action on behalf of Intel. (Docket Entry No. 26 at 11–12).

Because this is a derivative claim and not a breach of contract claim, Katz's cause of action for civil conspiracy can proceed. Under Texas law, "[a] civil conspiracy involves a combination of two or more persons with an unlawful purpose or a lawful purpose to be accomplished by unlawful means." Ernst & Young, L.L.P. v. Pac. Mut. Life Ins. Co., 51 S.W.3d 573, 583 (Tex. 2001). "That is, a defendant's liability for conspiracy depends on participation in some underlying tort for which the plaintiff seeks to hold at least one of the named defendants liable." Tilton v. Marshall, 925 S.W.2d 672, 681 (Tex. 1996). Katz's amended complaint alleges as the underlying tort the breach of fiduciary duty for his derivative claims. (Docket Entry No. 18 at ¶¶ 89–94). Again, dismissal at this stage is not required.

IV. Conclusion

6 The motion to dismiss is denied.

All Citations

Not Reported in Fed. Supp., 2018 WL 4701566

End of Document

© 2025 Thomson Reuters. No claim to original U.S. Government Works.

CASE NO. 39

2022 WL 3084480
Only the Westlaw citation
is currently available.
United States District Court,
S.D. Texas, Galveston Division.

KAFI, INC. Plaintiff.
v.
SAND CANYON CORPORATION
F/k/a Option One Mortgage
Corporation, et al. Defendants.

Civil Action
No.
3
:
20
-
cv
-
00354
|
Signed August 3, 2022

Attorneys and Law Firms

Jeffrey Craig Jackson, Jeffrey Jackson & Associates, PLLC, Houston, TX, for Plaintiff.

Brett W. Schouest, Dykema Gossett PLLC, San Antonio, TX, Stephen Andrew Walsh, Weinberg Wheeler et al., Birmingham, AL, for Defendants Sand Canyon Corporation.

Kurt Lance Krolikowski, Ryan Benner Burns, Locke Lord LLP, Houston, TX, for Defendants Nationwide Title Clearing, Inc.

Neyma Edelyn Figueroa, Brett W. Schouest, Dykema Gossett PLLC, San Antonio, TX, for Defendants Wells Fargo Bank, N.A. as Trustee for ABFC 2006-OPT3 Trust, Asset Backed Funding Corporation Asset-Backed Certificates, Series 2006-OPT3, PHH Mortgage Corporation.

MEMORANDUM AND RECOMMENDATION

ANDREW M. EDISON, UNITED STATES MAGISTRATE JUDGE

1 Pending before me is Defendants' Joint Motion to Dismiss Fourth Amended Complaint. Dkt. 66. Having reviewed the briefing, the record, and the applicable law, and for the reasons explained below, I recommend the Court GRANT in part and DENY in part the motion.

I. FACTUAL BACKGROUND

In this lawsuit, Kafi, Inc. ("Kafi") seeks to avoid foreclosure of a property it owns at 810 Almond Pointe in League City, Texas (the "Property"). In June 2006, non-parties Joe and Kelly Richardson (the "Richardsons") purchased the Property. The transfer was memorialized by general warranty deed with a vendor's lien. The Richardsons financed their purchase with a loan from Sand Canyon Corporation f/k/a Option One Mortgage Corporation ("Sand Canyon"). The loan was secured by a deed of trust in favor of Sand Canyon. The deed of trust contains an optional acceleration clause, allowing Sand Canyon to "invoke the power of sale and/or any other remedies" should the Richardsons default. Dkt. 63-1 at 6.

 © 2025 Thomson Reuters. No claim to original U.S. Government Works.

In January 2012, Sand Canyon purported to assign the deed of trust, along with "all interests secured thereby, all liens, and any rights due or to become due thereon" (the "Assignment"), to Wells Fargo Bank, N.A. ("Wells Fargo"). Dkt. 63-9. The Assignment was prepared by Nationwide Title Clearing, Inc. ("NTC"), notarized by Miranda Avila ("Avila"), and purportedly executed on behalf of Sand Canyon by Derrick White ("White") in his professed capacity as Sand Canyon's Vice President.[1] It is undisputed that, at the time of the Assignment, White and Avila were employees of NTC. See Dkt. 66 at 3. As discussed in greater detail in the following sections, the central issue in this case is Kafi's allegation that White's and Avila's signatures are forgeries.

By September 2012, the Richardsons were in default. Although the Property was noticed for sale multiple times, for reasons not explained, it was never sold at foreclosure. Kafi has attached to its pleadings four notices of trustee's sales:

Date of Notice	Date of Sale
September 5, 2012	October 2, 2012
November 6, 2012	December 4, 2012
June 19, 2017[2]	August 1, 2017
February 24, 2020	May 5, 2020

Kafi alleges that two of the notices—dated September 5 and November 6, 2012—were mailed to the Richardsons and filed in the real property records, thereby "unequivocally accelerat[ing]" the loan. Dkt. 63 at 14.

2 In September 2020, Kafi purchased the Property "as-is" from the Richardsons by general warranty deed, which provides, in relevant part:

> This conveyance is made subject-to any outstanding liens of record. Grantors understand that Grantee is in no way assuming or promising to pay any outstanding liens of record.

Dkt. 63-3 at 1–2. There is no allegation that Defendants have attempted to foreclose on the Property.

II. PROCEDURAL HISTORY

In October 2020, Kafi sued Defendants in Texas state court, seeking, among other things, a declaration that Defendants lack standing to foreclose and a judgment quieting title to the Property. Defendants timely removed the case to this Court on the basis of diversity jurisdiction.

Kafi has since amended its complaint multiple times. In its live pleadings, Kafi requests a bevy of declaratory relief concerning its alleged title to the Property,[3] the most relevant of which are its requests for declaratory judgments that: (1) the Assignment is a forgery and, therefore, void; and (2) the four-year limitations period to foreclose on the Property has expired. Kafi also brings claims to quiet title or, in the alternative, for the equitable right of redemption. See Dkt. 63 at 10–11, 16–17. Finally, against Sand Canyon and NTC, Kafi asserts common-law claims for "forgery." See id. at 12–13.

In December 2021, I granted Kafi's request to conduct limited, targeted discovery to develop facts supporting its forgery allegation. Specifically, I allowed Kafi to depose Avila and send written discovery to Sand Canyon and NTC. See Dkt. 57. In January 2022, I denied Kafi's request to depose White. See Dkt. 60. After completing its court-approved discovery, Kafi amended its complaint for a fourth time in February 2022. In support of the allegations mentioned above, Kafi's Fourth Amended Complaint includes over a dozen exhibits, most of which pertain to its claim that the Assignment is a forgery. I discuss the relevant exhibits later in the opinion, but it is worth mentioning upfront that one of the exhibits is a "Forensic Document Examination Preliminary Report," prepared by two forensic document examiners who analyzed dozens of White's and Avila's known signatures and compared them to the supposed forgeries. See Dkt. 63-14.

Defendants have jointly moved for dismissal under Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 12(b)(6), arguing that Kafi's forgery claim is time-barred, as are Kafi's claims for declaratory relief based on the alleged forgery. See Dkt. 66 at 6–11. Even if the statute of limitations does not torpedo Kafi's claims, Defendants aver that Kafi has failed to sufficiently plead a claim for any of the relief sought. Sand Canyon and NTC further argue that they must be dismissed from the case, irrespective of whether Kafi has adequately pleaded a claim for relief, because they claim no interest in the underlying loan or Property. See id. at 29–30.

3 Kafi advances a handful of interrelated arguments in response, the most relevant of which are: (1) the Assignment is a forgery and, therefore, void ab initio—meaning Defendants lack standing to enforce the underlying deed of trust; (2) foreclosure is time-barred under Texas' four-year statute of limitations for real-property actions, see TEX. CIV. PRAC. & REM. CODE § 16.035(d); and (3) even if the Assignment was valid and foreclosure not time-barred, Kafi is entitled to equitably redeem the Property by paying off the loan's balance to the current mortgagee, Wells Fargo, or the current loan servicer, PHH.

III. LEGAL STANDARD

A. RULE 12(b)(6) MOTION TO DISMISS

Rule 12(b)(6) provides that a district court must dismiss a complaint that fails to state a claim upon which relief can be granted. See FED. R. CIV. P. 12(b)(6). This rule is read in conjunction with the pleading standard set forth in Rule 8(a), which requires "a short and plain statement of the claim showing that the pleader is entitled to relief." FED. R. CIV. P.

8(a)(2). To survive dismissal at this early stage, the complaint must state enough facts such that the claim to relief is plausible on its face. See Bell Atl. Corp. v. Twombly, 550 U.S. 544, 570 (2007). A claim is facially plausible when the plaintiff pleads enough facts to allow the district court to draw a reasonable inference that the defendant is liable for the misconduct alleged. See Ashcroft v. Iqbal, 556 U.S. 662, 678 (2009). Although a complaint "does not need detailed factual allegations" to survive Rule 12(b)(6), a plaintiff must provide "more than labels and conclusions, and a formulaic recitation of the elements of a cause of action will not do." Twombly, 550 U.S. at 555.

In deciding a Rule 12(b)(6) motion, I must accept all well-pleaded facts as true, viewing them in the light most favorable to the plaintiff. See Alexander v. AmeriPro Funding, Inc., 848 F.3d 698, 701 (5th Cir. 2017). I also must limit my inquiry "to the facts stated in the complaint and the documents either attached to or incorporated in the complaint." Lovelace v. Software Spectrum Inc., 78 F.3d 1015, 1017 (5th Cir. 1996). Here, all documents discussed in this opinion are both attached to and incorporated in Kafi's Fourth Amended Complaint.

The Fifth Circuit has repeatedly held that "[m]otions to dismiss are viewed with disfavor and are rarely granted." Test Masters Educ. Servs. v. Singh, 428 F.3d 559, 570 (5th Cir. 2005). Given my charge to liberally construe the complaint in the light most favorable to the plaintiff, with every doubt resolved in the plaintiff's favor, dismissal is proper only if it "appear[s] beyond doubt that the plaintiff can prove no set of facts in support of his claim which would entitle him to relief." Id. (quotation omitted).

B. RULE 9(b)'S HEIGHTENED PLEADING STANDARD

Rule 9(b) imposes a heightened pleading standard for claims of fraud. Forgery is a type of fraud, and, therefore, Rule 9(b)'s heightened pleading standard applies. See Bynane v. Bank of N.Y. Mellon, 866 F.3d 351, 360 (5th Cir. 2017) (analyzing forgery allegations under Rule 9(b)'s heightened pleading standard). See also Lone Star Ladies Inv. Club v. Schlotzsky's Inc., 238 F.3d 363, 368 (5th Cir. 2001) ("Rule 9(b) applies by its plain language to all averments of fraud, whether they are part of a claim of fraud or not.").

Rule 9(b) requires that a party "state with particularity the circumstances constituting fraud." FED. R. CIV. P. 9(b). "What constitutes 'particularity' will necessarily differ with the facts of each case." Benchmark Elecs. v. J.M. Huber Corp., 343 F.3d 719, 724 (5th Cir. 2003) (cleaned up). Generally, Rule 9(b) requires that a complaint detail "the who, what, when, and where before access to the discovery process is granted." Hart v. Bayer Corp., 199 F.3d 239, 247 n.6 (5th Cir. 2000) (cleaned up). However, the Fifth Circuit has acknowledged that there is "no single construction of Rule 9(b) that applies in all contexts," U.S. ex rel. Grubbs v. Kanneganti, 565 F.3d 180, 188 (5th Cir. 2009), and that "Rule 9(b)'s ultimate meaning is context-specific." Williams v. WMX Techs., 112 F.3d 175, 178 (5th Cir. 1997).

4 Relatedly, "[i]f the facts pleaded in a complaint are peculiarly within the opposing party's knowledge, fraud pleadings may be based on information and belief." Tuchman v. DSC Commc'ns Corp., 14 F.3d 1061, 1068 (5th Cir. 1994). See Corley v. Rosewood Care Ctr., Inc., 142 F.3d 1041, 1051 (7th Cir. 1998) ("Rule 9(b) must be relaxed where the plaintiff lacks access to all facts necessary to detail his claim."). But the Fifth Circuit has cautioned that "this exception must not be mistaken for license to base claims of fraud on speculation and conclusory allegations." U.S. ex rel. Thompson v. Columbia/HCA Healthcare Corp., 125 F.3d 899, 903 (5th Cir. 1997) (quotation omitted). That is, "even where allegations are based on information and belief, the complaint must set forth a factual basis for such belief." Id.

C. DIVERSITY JURISDICTION

Because jurisdiction is based on diversity of citizenship, Texas substantive law and federal procedural law apply to Kafi's claims. See Ferguson v. Bank of N.Y. Mellon Corp., 802 F.3d 777, 780 (5th Cir. 2015).

IV. ANALYSIS

A. BECAUSE A FORGED SIGNATURE IS THE TYPE OF INJURY THAT IS INHERENTLY UNDISCOVERABLE, THE DISCOVERY RULE APPLIES

It is undisputed that the Assignment was filed in the real property records of Galveston County on January 18, 2012. Defendants insist that subsequent purchasers of real property, like Kafi, are charged with constructive notice of any title defects that could have been discovered through a reasonably diligent inspection of the public record. Defendants thus contend that Kafi's forgery claim accrued on January 18, 2012. Because Kafi did not file the underlying lawsuit until October 2020, Defendants argue that Kafi's forgery claim is time-barred under Texas's four-year statute of limitations for real-property actions. See TEX. CIV. PRAC. & REM. CODE §§ 16.004(a)(4), 16.051. Kafi counters that any claim based on the purportedly forged Assignment did not accrue until it acquired an interest in the Property or, alternatively, the discovery rule deferred accrual of its claim because its injury is the type of injury that is inherently undiscoverable.

A cause of action generally accrues when a wrongful act causes some legal injury, regardless of when the plaintiff learns of such injury. See Moreno v. Sterling Drug, Inc., 787 S.W.2d 348, 351 (Tex. 1990). "The discovery rule represents an exception to this general rule of accrual." Id. It applies when "the nature of the injury incurred is inherently undiscoverable and the evidence of injury is objectively verifiable." Comput. Assocs. Int'l, Inc. v. Altai, Inc., 918 S.W.2d 453, 456 (Tex. 1996). "This legal question is decided on a categorical rather than case-specific basis; the focus is on whether a type of injury rather than a particular injury was discoverable." Via Net v. TIG Ins. Co., 211 S.W.3d 310, 314 (Tex. 2006). When the discovery rule applies, the cause of action does not accrue, and, consequently, the limitations period does not begin to run until the plaintiff knows or, through the exercise of reasonable diligence, should know of the facts giving rise to the cause of action. See Wagner & Brown, Ltd. v. Horwood, 58 S.W.3d 732, 734 (Tex. 2001).

In Defendants' minds, "had Kafi owned the Property in 2012, before the supposedly fraudulent assignment was filed," the discovery rule would save Kafi's claim because property owners do not have a duty to continuously search the public record to ensure that no fraudulent instruments are subsequently recorded against their property. Dkt. 66 at 8. However, because "Kafi purchased the Property from the borrowers nearly nine (9) years after the allegedly forged assignment was executed and recorded," Defendants argue that Kafi is charged with "constructive notice [of the allegedly forged Assignment] for limitations purposes." Id. (quotation omitted).

5 Although Texas law may charge a buyer "with constructive notice of the actual knowledge that could have been acquired by examining the public records," Mooney v. Harlin, 622 S.W.2d 83, 85 (Tex. 1981), this includes only "knowledge of all facts that reasonable inquiry would have disclosed." Holmes v. P.K. Pipe & Tubing, Inc., 856 S.W.2d 530, 542 (Tex. App.—Houston [1st Dist.] 1993, no writ). At the time of its purchase, Kafi was placed on notice of the Assignment itself. Nothing on the face of the Assignment—nor anything else in the public record—should have alerted Kafi that White's or Avila's signatures are possible forgeries. To hold otherwise would be nothing short of demanding Kafi exercise clairvoyance. This far exceeds the concept of "reasonable diligence" required under Texas law. See Hooks v. Samson Lone Star, Ltd. P'ship, 457 S.W.3d 52, 60–61 (Tex. 2015) (holding where fraudulent information "taints the public record," the question of whether a property owner exercised "reasonable diligence remains a fact question" for the jury to decide);[4] Mooney, 622 S.W.2d at 85 ("When evidence of fraud may be disclosed by examination of public records ... limitations will begin to run from the time the fraud could have been discovered by the exercise of ordinary diligence.").

At this point in the litigation, one can only speculate on when Kafi learned of the supposed forgery. Under Texas law, where a plaintiff pleads the discovery rule, the defendant bears the burden of conclusively negating its application before dismissal is appropriate. *See KPMG Peat Marwick v. Harrison Cnty. Hous. Fin. Corp., 988 S.W.2d 746, 748 (Tex. 1999) ("the defendant must ... negate the discovery rule, if it applies and has been pleaded or otherwise raised"); Jennings v. Burgess, 917 S.W.2d 790, 793 (Tex. 1996) ("If the nonmovant asserts that a tolling provision applies, the movant must conclusively negate the tolling provision's application to show his entitlement to summary judgment.").

Right now, any theory that Kafi knew or should have known of the forgery more than four years before filing suit is just that—a theory without factual support. For Rule 12(b)(6) purposes, I conclude that Kafi has sufficiently invoked the discovery rule, permitting it to proceed for the time being. However, at trial, Kafi, as "[t]he party seeking to benefit from the discovery rule must also bear the burden of proving and securing favorable findings thereon." Woods v. William M. Mercer, Inc., 769 S.W.2d 515, 518 (Tex. 1988).

B. FORGERY

1. Pleading Requirements for Kafi's Forgery Allegation

Although the parties agree that Rule 9(b)'s heightened pleading standard controls Kafi's forgery claim, they differ over how stringently it must be applied.

Rule 11(b)(3) of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure allows a party to plead factual allegations that lack evidentiary support if it appears that they are "likely [to] have evidentiary support after a reasonable opportunity for further investigation or discovery." FED. R. CIV. P. 11(b)(3). Kafi contends that Rule 9(b)'s heightened pleading standard should be relaxed in this case because the facts in question are peculiarly within Defendants' knowledge. Regardless, Kafi insists that its Fourth Amended Complaint demonstrates its belief that White's signature is a forgery is well-grounded. Understandably, Defendants disagree. They argue, "Kafi's forgery allegations are purely speculative and fail to meet [Rule 9(b)'s] stringent pleading requirements." Dkt. 66 at 16.

Rule 9(b) does not require omniscience. As mentioned, the Fifth Circuit has held that "[i]f the facts pleaded in a complaint are peculiarly within the opposing party's knowledge, fraud pleadings may be based on information and belief." Tuchman, 14 F.3d at 1068. Cf., ABC Arbitrage v. Tchuruk, 291 F.3d 336, 354 (5th Cir. 2002) ("[T]he plaintiffs need not allege all facts that may be related to their claims, since such a requirement is impossible at the pleading stage because, in nearly every securities fraud case, only the defendants know all the facts related to the alleged fraud." (quotations omitted)).

6 That said, the Fifth Circuit warned that relaxation of Rule 9(b)'s requirements "must not be mistaken for license to base claims of fraud on speculation and conclusory allegations." Tuchman, 14 F.3d at 1068. That is, "while Rule 11(b)(3) may relax Rule 9(b)'s particularity requirement, it cannot be construed to eviscerate that requirement in its entirety by permitting rank speculation." Moon v. Harrison Piping Supply, 375 F. Supp. 2d 577, 593 (E.D. Mich. 2005), rev'd in part on other grounds, 465 F.3d 719 (6th Cir. 2006). So, even under a non-restrictive application of the rule where allegations are based on information and belief, "the complaint must set forth a factual basis for such belief." U.S. ex rel. Thompson, 125 F.3d at 903. See also Wexner v. First Manhattan Co., 902 F.2d 169, 172 (2d Cir. 1990) ("[A] complaint must adduce specific facts supporting a strong inference of fraud or it will not satisfy even a relaxed pleading standard.").

As one leading authority explains:

> Allegations of the circumstances of a fraud based on information and belief, which are commonplace and often a necessity in many litigation contexts, usually do not satisfy the particularity requirement of Rule 9(b), unless accompanied by a statement of the facts upon which the pleader's belief is founded or > by allegations that the necessary information lies within the defendant's control.

5A CHARLES A. WRIGHT & ARTHUR R. MILLER, Federal Practice and Procedure § 1298 (4th ed.) (emphasis added).

The prima facie elements of the claim will assist in determining whether the plaintiff has satisfied a relaxed application of Rule 9(b)'s "time, place, contents, and identity" standard. See Wagemann v. Dr.'s Hosp. of Slidell, LLC, No. CIV.A. 09-3506, 2010 WL 3168087, at *3 (E.D. La. Aug. 6, 2010). Put differently, the degree of particularity required is guided by the nature of the claim. See U.S. ex rel. Foster v. Bristol-Myers Squibb Co., 587 F. Supp. 2d 805, 819 (E.D. Tex. 2008) ("Just as the particularity requirements of Rule 9(b) are depend[e]nt on the facts of the case, they are also depend[e]nt on Rule 8.").

In sum, to satisfy Rule 9(b)'s heightened pleading requirement, Kafi must convince me that there is a reasonable basis for its belief that White's and Avila's signatures are forgeries and that evidentiary support will be forthcoming should the case proceed.

2. Kafi's Forgery Allegations

Keeping in mind that a plaintiff must plead specific facts and not mere conclusory allegations, but accepting as true the well-pleaded factual allegations of the complaint and reasonable inferences to be drawn from them, I turn to Kafi's Fourth Amended Complaint.

Below are the allegations that Kafi has "allege[d] upon information [are] reasonably likely to be discovered," see Dkt. 63 at 6, 12–13:

- "[T]he signature of Derrick White was not signed or affixed by Derrick White nor was the signature signed or affixed by someone else" with White's knowledge and authority. Id. at 6.
- "[T]he signature [of] Miranda Avila was not signed or affixed by Miranda Avila nor was the signature signed or affixed by someone else" with Avila's knowledge or authority. Id.
- "Sand Canyon and NTC altered, made, completed, executed, and authenticated the 2012 Assignment so that it purported to be signed by Derrick White and [notarized by] Miranda Avila when in fact Derrick White and Miranda Avila did not sign and did not authorize anyone else to sign for them." Id. at 12.
- "Sand Canyon and NTC issued, transferred, [possessed], registered, passed off, and published the 2012 assignment when it purported to be signed by Derrick White and Miranda Avila." Id. at 12–13.

3. The Basis for Kafi's Belief That White's Signature Is a Forgery

*7 Kafi's Fourth Amended Complaint includes a handful of exhibits that it claims demonstrate a reasonable basis for its belief that the Assignment is a forgery. I will address the relevant exhibits, in turn.

i. Osceola County, Florida Records Audit

The first is a 2014 property records audit performed in Osceola County, Florida,[5] which identifies four property transactions where White, as an "alleged NTC employee," executed unrelated assignments in which he misrepresented his capacity to do so "as Assistant Secretary of MERS" on behalf of several now-defunct corporations. Dkt. 63-10 at 121–22.

Kafi relies on the Osceola County records audit to cast general aspersions on NTC's business practices. See Dkt. 63 at 6–7. Buried within the 332-page document are allegations brought by the Illinois Attorney General that implicate NTC in a "robosigning" scheme. See Dkt. 63-10 at 111. Ostensibly relevant here is an allegation that "[d]ocuments generated by NTC were ... signed by NTC employees who had no personal knowledge of the facts they were attesting to." Id. The records audit also describes NTC as "a known document manufacturing plant," engaged in a pattern of recording documents that were prepared but not executed by NTC employees. Id. at 109–12.

The report itself is replete with conclusory allegations. United States District Judge Gray Miller found the same records audit less than useful when considering a similar forgery allegation. See Reed v. Bank of Am., N.A., No. CV H-15-2005, 2016 WL 3058303, at *4 (S.D. Tex. May 31, 2016) ("Even considering the report, it simply makes the conclusory statement that Martha Munoz is a 'known Bank of America robosigner.' The report offers no support for this allegation. Moreover, the report is no evidence that the assignments at issue in this case were forged." (internal citation omitted)).

But even if I were to accept the allegations contained within the records audit as the gospel truth, they are not the silver bullet Kafi believes them to be. That is, the records audit does not lend support to Kafi's theory that White's signature is a forgery. If anything, it tilts the scales in the opposite direction, suggesting that White personally signed the Assignment but misrepresented his capacity to do so as Sand Canyon's Vice President.

Under Texas law, "a contract executed on behalf of a corporation by a person fraudulently purporting to be a corporate officer is, like any other unauthorized contract, not void, but merely voidable." Reinagel v. Deutsche Bank Nat'l Tr. Co., 735 F.3d 220, 226 (5th Cir. 2013). This is significant because, under Texas law, a non-party to a mortgage assignment (i.e., homeowner) may only challenge the assignment on grounds that would render it void, not merely voidable. See EverBank, N.A. v. Seedergy Ventures, Inc., 499 S.W.3d 534, 542 (Tex. App.—Houston [14th Dist.] 2016, no pet.) ("When the homeowner is just a third party to an assignment, the homeowner lacks standing to challenge the assignment on grounds that would merely render the assignment voidable."). Here, Kafi's standing to challenge the Assignment hinges on the fact that "[a] forged deed is void" under Texas law. Vazquez v. Deutsche Bank Nat'l Tr. Co., N.A., 441 S.W.3d 783, 787 (Tex. App.—Houston [1st Dist.] 2014, no pet.).

8 Said differently, allegations of White's supposed nefarious conduct found in the records audit are not comparable to the allegations made by Kafi in this case and do not provide a reasonable basis for its forgery allegations.

ii. AOL.com News Article

The second exhibit is an online news article similarly discussing NTC's "problematic" business practice of robosigning mortgage-related documents. Dkt. 63-11. In its briefing, Kafi specifically references an NTC employee mentioned in the article who, according to the article, testified at deposition that he notarized hundreds of documents at a time and, on occasion, signed documents as a vice president of various financial institutions. See id. at 3. That same employee, however, also apparently testified that he was unaware whether other NTC employees did the same. See id.

Cutting to the chase, the article makes no mention of White, Avila, or the Assignment at issue. Like the records audit, the article's general allegations regarding NTC's supposed business practices do nothing to demonstrate a reasonable basis for Kafi's forgery allegations in this case.

iii. Forensic Document Examination Preliminary Report

The third exhibit is the aforementioned "Forensic Document Examination Preliminary Report," prepared by forensic document examiners Dale Stobaugh ("Stobaugh") and Kenneth Crawford ("Crawford"), both of whom analyzed dozens of White's and Avila's "known signatures" and compared them to the supposed forgeries. See Dkt. 63-14. The report begins with the caveat, "[d]ue to the lack of detail and possible misinterpretation of foreign matter reflected in copies [of signatures], it is usually our policy not to base definite identification or elimination by handwriting comparison on any type of reproduction," and includes a disclaimer that ink originals of the known signatures "could provide a basis for a more definite determination." Id. at 1–2. Nonetheless, the report cites "consistent differences" between the known signatures and supposed forgeries before concluding that these inconsistencies "indicat[e]" White and Avila did not author their respective signatures on the Assignment. Id. at 2.

iv. Avila's Deposition Testimony

Avila testified her signature on the Assignment is authentic and that White signed the Assignment in front of her. See Dkt. 66-1 at 5–6. However, upon cross-examination, Avila conceded that she did not specifically remember White signing "this particular assignment" but could not recall an instance where she notarized a document where the signer was not in her presence. Id. at 6–7.

Predictably, the parties' view of Avila's testimony is considerably different. Defendants would have me look at Avila's seemingly unequivocal statement that White "signed [the Assignment] in front of [her]." Id. at 6. While Kafi emphasizes that Avila walked back her testimony, admitting she did not recall White signing the Assignment in question. See id. at 6–7 (Q: [A]re you saying that you specifically recall that this particular assignment from January 5, 2012, that you have specific recollection that [White] signed this in front of you?" A: "I don't remember specifically that day, but we sign in front of each other all the time.").

4. Kafi Has Pleaded Forgery with Sufficient Particularity

9 Defendants' flagship argument is that "the Fifth Circuit has repeatedly held that these types of signature comparison are insufficient to state a [forgery] claim." Id. at 14 (citing Bynane v. Bank of N.Y. Mellon, 866 F.3d 351, 360 (5th Cir. 2017) and Kreway v. Countrywide Bank, 647 F. App'x 437, 437–38 (5th Cir. 2016)).

The short of it is that the Fifth Circuit has never decided a case like this. In both Bynane and Kreway, the plaintiff's forgery allegations were premised solely on the plaintiff's own deduction that the assignment was a forgery because, according to the plaintiff, the signature on the assignment in question differed from the signer's signature on other unrelated assignments, which the plaintiff had attached to the complaint for the court to compare. See Bynane, 866 F.3d at 361; Kreway, 647 F. App'x at 438.

This case might have started out as a Bynane or Kreway-type signature-comparison case, but Kafi amended its pleadings and dropped the signature-comparison argument altogether. Now, Kafi's allegations chiefly rely on the preliminary forensic document examination report. Stobaugh and Crawford —professional forensic document examiners —compared dozens of versions of White's and Avila's "known signatures" that were produced by NTC with the supposed forgeries and found "consistent differences," which they concluded "indicat[e]" that White and Avila "did not write the signature in that name on the [Assignment]." Dkt. 63-14 at 2. While the Fifth Circuit has constructed an admittedly rigorous test for successfully pleading forgery allegations of this type, the preliminary report distinguishes Kafi's allegations from those made in Bynane and Kreway. Viewed in the light most favorable to Kafi, I find that the preliminary report demonstrates a reasonable basis for its allegation that the Assignment is a forgery. See Dkt. 63 at 6 (alleging that "[t]he forgery allegations ... in this complaint have evidentiary support and will likely have even more evidentiary support after a reasonable opportunity for further investigation or discovery").

Moreover, if I were to adopt the position Defendants would have me take, it is difficult to envision how a plaintiff in Kafi's shoes could ever surmount Rule 9(b)'s heightened pleading standard. Admittedly, Kafi does not allege who forged the signatures, when the signatures were forged, where the signatures were forged, or how the signatures were forged. However, there is no question that this information is "peculiarly within the opposing party's knowledge." Tuchman, 14 F.3d at 1068. To hold otherwise would essentially require Kafi first figure out who (allegedly) forged the signatures (without the benefit of discovery) and then drag them into court to explain when, where, and how they did so. This would be a draconian application of Rule 9(b) where, as here, Kafi has demonstrated a reasonable basis for its belief that the signatures are forgeries. See U.S. ex rel. Foster, 587 F. Supp. 2d at 819 ("the particularity requirements of Rule 9(b) are depend[e]nt on the facts of the case");

5A CHARLES A. WRIGHT & ARTHUR R. MILLER, Federal Practice and Procedure § 1291 (4th ed.) ("[T]hose portions of Rule 9 that require specific or detailed allegations should not be construed in an unduly strict fashion.").

10 Courts are intended as places of redress. For this reason, motions to dismiss are generally viewed with disfavor, as they tend to undermine the overarching public policy favoring merits-based disposition. See Test Masters, 428 F.3d at 570 ("Motions to dismiss are viewed with disfavor and are rarely granted."); 5B CHARLES ALAN WRIGHT & ARTHUR R. MILLER, Federal Practice and Procedure § 1356 (3d ed.) ("[A] motion under Federal Rule 12(b)(6) ... is not a procedure for resolving a contest between the parties about the facts or the substantive merits of the plaintiff's case."). Because I find that Bynane and Kreway are not binding on the facts of this case, I recommend the Court deny Defendants' motion to dismiss Kafi's claims for declaratory relief based on the supposed forgery and decide the merits of Kafi's forgery allegations at summary judgment or at trial. See Foley v. Wells Fargo Bank, N.A., 772 F.3d 63, 72 (1st Cir. 2014) ("[A] primary purpose of a Rule 12(b)(6) motion is to weed out cases that do not warrant reaching the (oftentimes) laborious and expensive discovery process because, based on the factual scenario on which the case rests, the plaintiff could never win." (emphasis added)).

C. TEXAS LAW DOES NOT RECOGNIZE FORGERY AS AN INDEPENDENT CIVIL CAUSE OF ACTION

In addition to seeking a declaratory judgment that the Assignment is a forgery, Kafi has pleaded an independent "forgery" cause of action against Sand Canyon and NTC. Thus, I must address whether "forgery" is a recognized civil claim under Texas law and, if so, whether Kafi has sufficiently pleaded such a claim. See Breitling v. LNV Corp., No. CV 3:15-CV-0703-B, 2015 WL 5896131, at *8 (N.D. Tex. Oct. 5, 2015) (observing that whether forgery qualifies as a tort under Texas "is unclear" and collecting conflicting authority).

Kafi's Fourth Amended Complaint cites a single state-court decision in support of its position that a common-law claim of forgery exists under Texas law, Saxer v. Nash Phillips-Corpus Co. Real Estate, 678 S.W.2d 736 (Tex. App.—Tyler 1984, writ ref'd n.r.e.). In that case, the court of appeals wrote as follows: "Forgery is an unlawful and unconscionable act for which a common law court may provide a civil remedy independent of the remedies provided by [the Deceptive Trade Practices Act]." Id. at 739 (footnote omitted). Critically, following the phrase "unconscionable act," the court included a footnote citation to Texas Penal Code § 32.21, which codifies forgery as a criminal offense. See id. at 739 n.2.

As United States District Judge Sim Lake aptly pointed out, "in order for a private right of action to exist under a criminal statute, there must be a statutory basis for inferring that a civil cause of action of some sort lay in favor of someone." Van Duzer v. U.S. Bank Nat'l Ass'n, 995 F. Supp. 2d 673, 699 (S.D. Tex.) (cleaned up), aff'd, 582 F. App'x 279 (5th Cir. 2014). What's more, Van Duzer considered the very question before me now—whether a private cause of action for "forgery" exists under Texas law. See id. In deciding that no such civil claim exists, Judge Lake explained: "Plaintiffs have not provided any statutory basis for inferring that they are entitled to bring a private cause of action on the basis of any criminal statute. Thus, any attempt by Plaintiffs to assert a cause of action under a criminal statute fails as a matter of law." Id.

Much like the plaintiff in Van Duzer, Kafi's forgery allegations track the language found in the Texas Penal Code—though Kafi does not cite to the Penal Code itself. Compare Dkt. 63 at 12–13, with Tex. Penal Code § 32.21(a)–(b). Kafi cannot create a civil cause of action simply by parroting the Texas Penal Code. Because there is no statutory basis for me to infer that Texas law recognizes a civil cause of action for violating the criminal forgery statute, I find that forgery is not a cognizable, stand-alone civil claim under Texas law. See Mathis v. DCR Mortg. III Sub, I, LLC, 952 F. Supp. 2d 828, 836 (W.D. Tex. 2013) (dismissing a forgery claim "to the extent it was asserted as any kind of freestanding cause of action"). Accordingly, I recommend the Court dismiss Kafi's forgery claims against Sand Canyon and NTC with prejudice.

D. STATUTE OF LIMITATIONS

11 Defendants label Kafi's claim for declaratory relief based on the expiration of the statute of limitations to foreclose on the Property as "nothing more than speculation," arguing that Kafi has pleaded no facts to support its allegations that the notices of trustee's sale[6] were ever mailed to the Richardsons or that the notices were proceeded by a notice of intent to accelerate. Dkt. 66 at 25–26.

Under Texas law, a suit for the foreclosure of a real property lien must be brought within four years of the maturity date of the last installment of an obligation payable in installments. TEX. CIV. PRAC. & REM. CODE §§ 16.035(a), (e). However, default alone does not automatically start the limitations clock. If a note or deed of trust secured by real property contains an optional acceleration clause—as in this case—"the action accrues only when the holder actually exercises its option to accelerate." Holy Cross Church of God in Christ v. Wolf, 44 S.W.3d 562, 566 (Tex. 2001).

Effective acceleration requires two acts: (1) notice of intent to accelerate; and (2) notice of acceleration. See id. Both notices must be "clear and unequivocal," Shumway v. Horizon Credit Corp., 801 S.W.2d 890, 893 (Tex. 1991), and notice of acceleration is ineffective unless preceded by proper notice of intent to accelerate. See Ogden v. Gibraltar Sav. Ass'n, 640 S.W.2d 232, 234 (Tex. 1982).

Kafi has sufficiently pleaded facts to assert a plausible claim that the statute of limitations to foreclose on the Property has expired. Kafi alleges that the debt was accelerated—and, therefore, the limitations period to bring a foreclosure action began—on September 5, 2012, when "notice of foreclosure sale was filed in the real property records and mailed to the Richardsons," or, in the alternative, "on November 6, 2012, when another notice of foreclosure sale was filed in the real property records and mailed to the Richardsons." Dkt. 63 at 14. Kafi further alleges the notices were "preceded by an unequivocal notice of intent to accelerate," though Kafi cabins this allegation by pleading it "will likely have evidentiary support after a reasonable opportunity for further investigation or discovery." Id. at 15. Accepting these facts as true for the purposes of the motion to dismiss, I find that Kafi has sufficiently pleaded the expiration of the statute of limitations to foreclose.

Accordingly, I recommend the Court deny Defendants' motion to dismiss Kafi's claim for declaratory relief based on the expiration of the statute of limitations to foreclose on the Property. See e.g., Kafi, Inc. v. Deutsche Bank Nat'l Tr. Co.*, No. CV H-20-3247, 2021 WL 5143309, at *4 (S.D. Tex. Oct. 5, 2021) (recommending the same result under near-identical circumstances).

E. QUIET TITLE

12 Under Texas law, an action to quiet title—also known as a suit to remove cloud from title—is one in which a superior title holder seeks to remove a challenge to that title. See Brumley v. McDuff, 616 S.W.3d 826, 835 (Tex. 2021). "A cloud on title exists when an outstanding claim or encumbrance is shown, which on its face, if valid, would affect or impair the title of the owner of the property." Gordon v. W. Houston Trees, Ltd., 352 S.W.3d 32, 42 (Tex. App.—Houston [1st Dist.] 2011, no pet.). "An action to remove a cloud from title exists to enable the holder of the feeblest equity to remove from his way to legal title any unlawful hindrance having the appearance of a better right." Hahn v. Love, 321 S.W.3d 517, 531 (Tex. App.—Houston [1st Dist.] 2009, pet. denied) (quotation omitted). In a suit to remove a cloud from his title, the plaintiff has the burden of supplying the proof necessary to establish his superior equity and right to relief. See Lance v. Robinson, 543 S.W.3d 723, 739 (Tex. 2018). "That is, the plaintiff must prove, as a matter of law, right, title, or ownership in himself with sufficient certainty to enable the court to see that he has a right of ownership and that the alleged adverse claim is a cloud on the title that equity will remove." Hahn, 321 S.W.3d at 531. "The effect of a suit to quiet title is to declare invalid or ineffective the defendant's claim to title." Essex Crane Rental Corp. v. Carter, 371 S.W.3d 366, 388 (Tex. App.–Houston [1st Dist.] 2012, pet. denied).

The elements of a claim for relief to quiet title are: (1) a valid equitable interest in a specific property, (2) title to the property is affected by a claim by the defendant, and (3) although facially valid, the defendant's claim is invalid or unenforceable. See id. To prevail, the plaintiff must demonstrate that she has superior title to the property at issue. See id.

Here, there is no question that Kafi has an interest in the Property. Moreover, Wells Fargo's claim of a right to foreclose and thereby transfer legal title to the Property constitutes a cloud on Kafi's title. E.g., Morales v. Wells Fargo Bank, N.A., No. SA-13-CV-410-XR, 2013 WL 6057853, at *6 (W.D. Tex. Nov. 14, 2013). See Lighthouse Church of Cloverleaf v. Tex. Bank, 889 S.W.2d 595, 603 (Tex. App.—Houston [14th Dist.] 1994, writ denied) ("Foreclosure transfers title ... to another party"). As for the third element, either of Kafi's two principal arguments—forgery [7] or limitations [8]—if proven, would demonstrate Wells Fargo's claimed interest in the Property is invalid or unenforceable, and that Kafi has a superior title.

For these reasons, I find that Kafi has alleged facts that, if true, would permit it to recover on the strength of its own title and has demonstrated the existence of a potentially invalid charge against that title. Accordingly, I recommend the Court deny Defendants' motion to dismiss Kafi's claim to quiet title to the Property without prejudice to re-urging the issue at summary judgment.

F. EQUITABLE RIGHT OF REDEMPTION

13 In the alternative, Kafi has also pleaded a claim for equitable redemption. A right of redemption is the right to redeem the property subject to foreclosure within a reasonable time of default by paying off the full amount owed on the mortgage. See Scott v. Dorothy B. Schneider Estate Tr., 783 S.W.2d 26, 28 (Tex. App.—Austin, 1990 no writ). In order to state a claim for equitable redemption, a plaintiff must allege: (1) it has a legal or equitable interest in the property subject to the mortgage; (2) it is ready, able, or willing to redeem the property in question by paying off the amount of the liens to which the property is subject; and (3) that the equity of redemption was asserted before a foreclosure sale occurred. See id.

Kafi's alleged right to equitable redemption is based on its allegations that: (1) it is the "legal owner of the Property"; (2) it "would suffer a loss of ownership and the right to possession and control of the Property if Wells Fargo and PHH are allowed to foreclose"; and (3) it "is ready, able or willing to redeem the Property ... by paying off the amount of any valid and subsisting liens to which the Property is subject." Dkt. 63 at 17. Regarding the latter, Kafi pleads that it has a net worth of $7 million, which dwarfs the loan's principal amount ($260,248), and would "pay any valid and subsisting liens in cash." Id. Finally, Kafi represents that the current amount owed under the loan agreement is unknown and subject to discovery. See id.

Defendants maintain that Kafi has failed to sufficiently plead a claim for equitable redemption because it has not tendered all amounts due on the underlying note. See Owens v. Bank of Am., NA, No. CIV.A. H-11-2552, 2012 WL 912721, at 3 (S.D. Tex. Mar. 16, 2012) ("Thus, within the context of the plaintiffs' equitable redemption claim, the plaintiffs must tender the redemption amount (including the full amount of the defendant's lien) either to the defendant or the Court.").

Simply pleading willingness and the ability to pay the amount owed has been rejected by just about every court to consider the issue. Nonetheless, some courts have decided that alleging facts that adequately explain the plaintiff's ability to pay off the amount owed on the subject property is sufficient to survive a motion to dismiss. Compare, DBDFW 3 LLC v. JPMorgan Chase Bank, N.A., No. 3:18-CV-3148-C-BN, 2019 WL 823810, at *8 (N.D. Tex. Feb. 6, 2019) ("Stating that the plaintiff is willing to satisfy the lien is insufficient to state a claim for equitable redemption. The plaintiff must provide additional details such as the value of the lien, how it would pay, its own net worth or assets, or any other information from which the court could infer that plaintiff's right to relief is plausible."), with 330 Cedron Tr. v. Citimortgage, Inc., No. SA-14-CV-933-XR, 2015 WL 1566058, at 3 (W.D. Tex. Apr. 8, 2015) ("Cedron offers no facts in its complaint that demonstrate it is [ ] 'ready, willing, and able' to pay off the amount of the existing liens to which the Property is subject .... Cedron offers no facts about the value of such lien, how it would pay, its own net worth or assets, etc. The conclusory statement that merely recites an element of the cause of action is not enough to raise the right to relief above a purely speculative level.").

Here, Kafi has pleaded that it is ready, willing, and able to pay off "any valid and subsisting liens to which the Property is subject." Dkt. 63 at 17. Standing alone, this would be insufficient. But Kafi has also pleaded that "it has a net worth of $7 million and would pay any valid and subsisting liens in cash." Id. Moreover, although Kafi offers no facts about the amount due, it does include the loan's principal amount: $260,248. Given that Kafi claims a net worth of $7 million, Kafi has sufficiently alleged that it has the assets to pay off whatever remains on the loan.

14 In my mind, these extra allegations nudge Kafi's equitable redemption claim above a purely speculative level. See Green for 2016 Wolf Tr. v. Bank of Am., N.A., No. CV H-17-0772, 2017 WL 1424332, at *2 (S.D. Tex. Apr. 20, 2017) ("Plaintiff has plead sufficient facts to state a claim for its equitable right of redemption that is plausible on its face."); id. ("Although the cases on which Defendant relies correctly identify tender of the amount owed as a condition precedent to recovery of title, tender is not required in order to state a legally cognizable claim." (quotation omitted)).

G. KAFI CANNOT OBTAIN ANY RELIEF FROM NTC OR SAND CANYON BECAUSE NEITHER PARTY CLAIMS A CURRENT INTEREST IN THE MORTGAGE

It is undisputed that PHH is the current loan servicer, and, since 2012, Wells Fargo has been the assignee of record of the deed of trust. There are no allegations that Sand Canyon has a current interest in the loan or deed of trust, nor are there any allegations that NTC has ever claimed such an interest. Moreover, there are no allegations that Sand Canyon or NTC is attempting to foreclose on the Property. Thus, even if Kafi ultimately succeeds on any of its claims for declaratory relief, it could not obtain any of the requested relief from NTC or Sand Canyon. Accordingly, I recommend the Court dismiss Kafi's claims against Sand Canyon and NTC.

H. KAFI'S CLAIMS FOR EXEMPLARY DAMAGES

Kafi alleges that Defendants' conduct in making, presenting, or using the Assignment and the post-2008 notices of sale constitute fraud, malice, or gross negligence, entitling Kafi to exemplary and punitive damages. See Dkt. 63 at 18 (citing TEX. CIV. PRAC. & REM. CODE § 41.003(a)).

An independent tort must be separately pleaded and proved to recover exemplary damages. See Amoco Prod. Co. v. Alexander, 622 S.W.2d 563, 571 (Tex. 1981) (holding that exemplary damages were "not recoverable because the [Appellees] failed to plead and prove a tort allowing recovery of exemplary damages"); Sharpe v. Kilcoyne, 962 S.W.2d 697, 703 n.5 (Tex. App.—Fort Worth 1998, no pet.) ("To support an award of exemplary damages, the plaintiff must prove a 'distinct' tortious injury with actual damages arising from that injury."). Because Kafi's forgery allegations live on only through its requests for declaratory relief, it is unable to obtain exemplary damages. Accordingly, I recommend the Court dismiss Kafi's request for exemplary damages.

CONCLUSION

For the above reasons, I recommend that the Court GRANT in part and DENY in part Defendants' Joint Motion to Dismiss (Dkt. 66). Specifically, I recommend the Court dismiss (1) Kafi's civil forgery claim against all Defendants; (2) Kafi's claim for exemplary damages; and (3) all claims against NTC and Sand Canyon. All other requested relief is denied without prejudice to re-urging at summary judgment.

The Clerk shall provide copies of this Memorandum and Recommendation to the respective parties who have 14 days from receipt to file written objections pursuant to Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 72(b) and General Order 2002–13. Failure to file written objections within the time period mentioned shall bar an aggrieved party from attacking the factual findings and legal conclusions on appeal.

All Citations

Not Reported in Fed. Supp., 2022 WL 3084480

Footnotes

1 Kafi's Fourth Amended Complaint alleges that White executed the Assignment as "an 'Assistant Secretary' for" Mortgage Electronic Registration Systems, Inc. Dkt. 63 at 5–6. However, the Assignment identifies White as Sand Canyon's Vice President. See Dkt. 63-9. Whatever the case may be, the capacity in which White executed the Assignment has no bearing on my decision.

2 The June 2017 notice of sale identifies Ocwen Loan Servicing, LLC ("Ocwen") as the Richardsons loan servicer. Dkt. 63-7 at 2. Kafi alleges Ocwen merged with PHH Mortgage Corporation in 2019, and that "PHH now claims to be the [loan's] mortgage servicer." Dkt. 63 at 9.

3 Specifically, Kafi seeks the following declarations that: (1) Defendants lack "legal or contractual" standing to conduct a foreclosure sale; (2) the Assignment is void as a forgery; (3) the Assignment is void because Sand Canyon had no right, title, or interest in the mortgage on the date of the Assignment; (4) the Assignment is void because it violates the public policy favoring identification of lienholders and avoidance of "secret liens"; (5) there is no complete and unbroken chain of assignments and transfers of the deed of trust or mortgage documents from Sand Canyon to any of the other Defendants; (6) not all assignments and transfers of the mortgage were properly recorded in the public record, in violation of TEX. LOC. GOV'T CODE § 192.007; (7) the deed of trust is null and void; and (8) the limitations period to foreclose has expired. Dkt. 63 at 10, 13–15.

 © 2025 Thomson Reuters. No claim to original U.S. Government Works.

4 Hooks concerned the fraudulent-concealment doctrine. Although the discovery rule and fraudulent-concealment doctrine are separate tolling doctrines that are "characterized by different substantive and procedural rules," S.V. v. R.V., 933 S.W.2d 1, 4 (Tex. 1996), "cases discussing fraudulent concealment are relevant to the meaning of reasonable diligence" under the discovery rule. Hooks, 457 S.W.3d at 58 n.9.

5 The 332-page records audit is part one of a two-part forensic examination of Osceola County, Florida's real property and circuit court records.

6 Defendants cite a decision out of the Houston Division for the proposition that I should dismiss Kafi's limitations claim because nothing in the record indicates the Richardsons actually received the notices of trustee's sale. See Dkt. 66 at 25–26 (citing Ther & Co. v. U.S. Bank, N.A., No. CV H-18-2916, 2019 WL 5684226, at *3 n.1 (S.D. Tex. Oct. 31, 2019)). Critically, Ther was decided at summary judgment. In contrast, Rule 8's liberal pleading standard does not require that a plaintiff produce evidence supporting the facts alleged; "it simply calls for enough fact to raise a reasonable expectation that discovery will reveal evidence" to support what is alleged. Twombly, 550 U.S. at 556.

7 "A void contract of assignment confers no right to foreclose under the deed on the purported assignee[.]" Puente v. CitiMortgage, Inc., No. 3:11-CV-2509-N, 2012 WL 4335997, at *6 n.14 (N.D. Tex. Aug. 29, 2012) (applying Texas law). See Wright v. Matthews, 26 S.W.3d 575, 578 (Tex. App.—Beaumont 2000, pet. denied) ("Any deed, contract, judgment or other instrument not void on its face that purports to convey any interest in or make any charge upon the land of a true owner, the invalidity of which would require proof, is a cloud upon the legal title of the owner.").

8 "It is established law in Texas that, when a debt is barred, an action to foreclose a lien or mortgage given as security for it is barred also." Dupree v. Mansur, 214 U.S. 161, 166 (1909). See Wolf, 44 S.W.3d at 567 ("Under state law, a sale of real property under a power of sale in a mortgage or deed of trust that creates a real-property lien must be made not later than four years after the day the cause of action accrues. When this four-year period expires, the real-property lien and the power of sale to enforce the lien become void." (internal citations omitted)).

End of Document

© 2025 Thomson Reuters. No claim to original U.S. Government Works.

CASE NO. 40

2022 WL 4454395
Only the Westlaw citation
is currently available.
United States District Court,
S.D. Texas, Galveston Division.

KAFI, INC., Plaintiff.
v.
SAND CANYON CORPORATION
f/k/a Option One Mortgage
Corporation, et al., Defendants.

No. 3:20-cv-00354
|
Signed September 23, 2022

Attorneys and Law Firms

Jeffrey Craig Jackson, Charles Daniel Brooks, Jeffrey Jackson & Associates, PLLC, Houston, TX, for Plaintiff.

Brett W. Schouest, Dykema Gossett PLLC, San Antonio, TX, Stephen Andrew Walsh, Weinberg Wheeler et al, Birmingham, AL, for Defendant Sand Canyon Corporation.

Kurt Lance Krolikowski, Ryan Benner Burns, Locke Lord LLP, Houston, TX, for Defendant Nationwide Title Clearing, Inc.

Neyma Edelyn Figueroa, Brett W. Schouest, Dykema Gossett PLLC, San Antonio, TX, for Defendants Wells Fargo Bank, N.A. as Trustee for ABFC 2006-OPT3 Trust, Asset Backed Funding Corporation Asset-Backed Certificates, Series 2006-OPT3, PHH Mortgage Corporation.

ORDER ADOPTING MAGISTRATE JUDGE'S MEMORANDUM AND RECOMMENDATION

JEFFREY VINCENT BROWN, UNITED STATES DISTRICT JUDGE

1 On February 24, 2021, all dispositive and non-dispositive pretrial matters in this case were referred to United States Magistrate Judge Andrew M. Edison under 28 U.S.C. § 636(b)(1)(A) and (B). See Dkt. 38. Judge Edison filed a memorandum and recommendation on August 3, 2022, recommending that the court grant in part and deny in part the defendants' joint motion to dismiss claims brought against them by Kafi, Inc. ("Kafi") for failure to state a claim. See Dkt. 72. Specifically, Judge Edison recommended the court dismiss: (1) Kafi's forgery claim against all defendants; (2) Kafi's claim for exemplary damages; and (3) Kafi's claims against Nationwide Title Clearing ("NTC") and Sand Canyon Corporation f/k/a Option One Mortgage Corporation ("Sand Canyon"). In all other respects, Judge Edison recommended the court deny the relief sought by the defendants in their joint motion to dismiss without prejudice to re-urging at summary judgment.

On August 17, 2022, the defendants timely filed their objections to the memorandum and recommendation. See Dkt. 73. In accordance with 28 U.S.C. § 636(b)(1)(C), this court is required to "make a de novo determination of those portions of the [magistrate judge's] report or specified proposed findings or recommendations to which objection [has been] made." 28 U.S.C. § 636(b)(1)(C). After conducting this de novo review, the court may "accept, reject, or modify, in whole or in part, the findings or recommendations made by the magistrate judge." Id.; see also Fed. R. Civ. P. 72(b)(3).

The court has carefully considered the objections, the memorandum and recommendation, the pleadings, and the record. The court accepts Judge Edison's memorandum and recommendation and adopts it as the opinion of the court. It is therefore ordered that:

(1) Judge Edison's memorandum and recommendation (Dkt. 72) is approved and adopted in its entirety as the holding of the court;

(2) The defendants' joint motion to dismiss (Dkt. 66) is granted in part and denied in part.

(3) Kafi's forgery claim against all defendants is dismissed with prejudice;

(4) Kafi's claim for exemplary damages is dismissed is dismissed with prejudice;

(5) Kafi's claims against NTC and Sand Canyon are dismissed with prejudice, and those parties are dismissed from the case; and

(6) All other relief sought by the defendants in their joint motion to dismiss is denied without prejudice to re-urging at summary judgment.

All Citations

Not Reported in Fed. Supp., 2022 WL 4454395

End of Document

© 2025 Thomson Reuters. No claim to original U.S. Government Works.

CASE NO. 41

2020 WL 13240060
Only the Westlaw citation
is currently available.
United States District Court,
S.D. Texas, Houston Division.

LOUISIANA OILFIELD LOGISTICS, LLC, Plaintiff,
v.
FLOTEK CHEMISTRY, LLC, Defendant.

Civil Action No. H-19-1272
|
Signed 06/29/2020

Attorneys and Law Firms

Michael A. Mahone, Jr., The Mahone Firm LLC, New Orleans, LA, Travis Michael Hedgpeth, The Hedgpeth Law Firm, PC, Houston, TX, for Plaintiff.

Tyler G. Doyle, Smyser Kaplan et al, Houston, TX, for Defendant.

MEMORANDUM AND OPINION

Lee H. Rosenthal, Chief United States District Judge

1 The plaintiff, Louisiana Oilfield Logistics, LLC, contracted with Flotek Chemistry, LLC, for transportation services in August 2018. (Docket Entry No. 11 at 2; Docket Entry No. 47 ¶ 6). In April 2019, Louisiana Oilfield sued Flotek for breach of that contract, anticipatory breach, promissory estoppel, and quantum meruit, and later amended its complaint. (Docket Entry Nos. 1, 11). Flotek's answer to the amended complaint included four counterclaims, fraudulent inducement among them. (Docket Entry No. 14 at ¶¶ 81–82, 148–185).

Louisiana Oilfield moved to dismiss the fraudulent inducement counterclaim under Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 12(b)(6). (Docket Entry Nos. 24, 24-1). Louisiana Oilfield renewed the motion after Flotek filed its first amended counterclaim. (Docket Entry Nos. 30, 31, 31-1). Months later, Flotek filed a second amended counterclaim, which addresses issues unrelated to the fraudulent inducement counterclaim and does not moot Louisiana Oilfield's dismissal motion. (Docket Entry No. 44 at 6; Docket Entry No. 47).

Based on a careful review of the parties' arguments, the record, and the applicable law, the court denies the motion to dismiss the fraudulent inducement counterclaim. The reasons are set out in detail below.

I. Background

In August 2018, Louisiana Oilfield contracted to "provide tractor-trailers for use by Flotek in its chemical operation in the State of Texas" for an initial one-year term. (Docket Entry No. 47 at ¶¶ 6–9). This contract resulted from negotiations between Louisiana Oilfield president, Kenneth Begovich, and former Flotek employee Eric Klumb. (Id. at ¶ 92). The contract required Flotek to pay a fixed amount to Louisiana Oilfield in exchange for access to ten "units"—each unit being a tractor, trailer, and driver—regardless of whether Flotek actually used those units. (Id. at ¶ 9; Docket Entry No. 11 at ¶ 9).

In February 2019, Flotek emailed Louisiana Oilfield about contract termination. (Docket Entry No. 11 at ¶ 12; Docket Entry No. 47 at ¶ 12). While Flotek described this correspondence as "confirm[ation] that the contract had been terminated" already, after Louisiana Oilfield's "repeated breaches and failure to cure such breaches," Louisiana Oilfield viewed the correspondence as a first notice of termination. (Docket Entry No. 11 at ¶¶ 12–16; Docket Entry No. 47 at ¶¶ 12–17). Despite these different understandings, Flotek kept paying Louisiana Oilfield's invoices. (Docket Entry No. 11 at ¶ 16; Docket Entry No. 47 at ¶¶ 13–16).

In March 2019, Louisiana Oilfield received a letter from Flotek confirming Flotek's position that the February 2019 email terminated the agreement and describing the circumstances surrounding the purported termination. (Docket Entry No. 11 at ¶¶ 15–16; Docket Entry No. 47 at ¶¶ 15–16). Louisiana Oilfield responded to Flotek's letter, stating that the contract "remained in force and effect" because there was no breach; any possible breaches "vaguely identified in the Letter had been cured"; and "Flotek could not terminate the Contract without first putting [Louisiana Oilfield] in default by written notice describing the alleged breach with detail and affording it an opportunity to cure [the breach]." (Docket Entry No. 11 at ¶¶ 17–18).

2 After March 7, 2019, Flotek made no further payments to Louisiana Oilfield. Louisiana Oilfield alleges that it continued to provide Flotek with access to tractor-trailers and drivers and interpreted Flotek's non-payment as repudiation of the contract. (Docket Entry No. 11 at ¶¶ 26–27). In April 2019, Louisiana Oilfield filed this suit against Flotek, which asserted a fraudulent inducement counterclaim against Louisiana Oilfield. (Docket Entry Nos. 1, 14, 30, 47).

Flotek's counterclaim alleges that Louisiana Oilfield "knowingly and intentionally represented to Flotek that it would be able to meet Flotek's demands for the dedicated use of tractor trucks, trailers, and drivers" during the time period of the parties' July and August correspondence and contractual negotiations. (Docket Entry No. 47 at ¶¶ 161–162). Flotek alleges that Louisiana Oilfield, beset with financial difficulties and a shortage of capital, made this representation knowing that "[Louisiana Oilfield] could not provide the ten [units] but represented otherwise" to secure a valuable contract. (Docket Entry No. 47 ¶¶ 161–165; see also Docket Entry No. 34 at 19).

Louisiana Oilfield moved to dismiss the counterclaim under Rule 12(b)(6) and Rule 9(b), arguing that "there are no facts pleaded supporting a conclusion that [Louisiana Oilfield] knew that it could not provide the dedicated units." (Docket Entry No. 31-1 at 6). The court considers the parties' arguments against the applicable legal standards.

II. The Legal Standards

a. Rule 12(b)(6)

Rule 12(b)(6) allows dismissal if a plaintiff fails "to state a claim upon which relief can be granted." FED. R. CIV. P. 12(b)(6). Rule 12(b)(6) must be read in conjunction with Rule 8(a), which requires "a short and plain statement of the claim showing that the pleader is entitled to relief." FED. R. CIV. P. 8(a)(2). A complaint must contain "enough facts to state a claim to relief that is plausible on its face." Bell Atl. Corp. v. Twombly, 550 U.S. 544, 570, 127 S.Ct. 1955, 167 L.Ed.2d 929 (2007). Rule 8 "does not require 'detailed factual allegations,' but it demands more than an unadorned, the-defendant-unlawfully-harmed-me accusation." Ashcroft v. Iqbal, 556 U.S. 662, 678, 129 S.Ct. 1937, 173 L.Ed.2d 868 (2009) (quoting Twombly, 550 U.S. at 555, 127 S.Ct. 1955). "A claim has facial plausibility when the plaintiff pleads factual content that allows the court to draw the reasonable inference that the defendant is liable for the misconduct alleged." Id. (citing Twombly, 550 U.S. at 556, 127 S.Ct. 1955). "The plausibility standard is not akin to a 'probability requirement,' but it asks for more than a sheer possibility that a defendant has acted unlawfully." Id. (quoting Twombly, 550 U.S. at 556, 127 S.Ct. 1955).

To withstand a Rule 12(b)(6) motion, a complaint must include "more than labels and conclusions, and a formulaic recitation of the elements of a cause of action will not do." Lincoln v. Turner, 874 F.3d 833, 839 (5th Cir. 2017) (quoting Twombly, 550 U.S. at 555, 127 S.Ct. 1955). "Nor does a complaint suffice if it tenders 'naked assertion[s]' devoid of 'further factual enhancement.' " Iqbal, 556 U.S. at 678, 129 S.Ct. 1937 (alteration in original) (quoting Twombly, 550 U.S. at 557, 127 S.Ct. 1955). "A complaint 'does not need detailed factual allegations,' but the facts alleged 'must be enough to raise a right to relief above the speculative level.' " Cicalese v. Univ. of Tex. Med. Branch, 924 F.3d 762, 765 (5th Cir. 2019) (quoting Twombly, 550 U.S. at 555, 127 S.Ct. 1955). "Conversely, when the allegations in a complaint, however true, could not raise a claim of entitlement to relief, this basic deficiency should be exposed at the point of minimum expenditure of time and money by the parties and the court." Cuvillier v. Taylor, 503 F.3d 397, 401 (5th Cir. 2007) (alterations omitted) (quoting Twombly, 550 U.S. at 558, 127 S.Ct. 1955).

3 A court reviewing a motion to dismiss under Rule 12(b)(6) may consider "(1) the facts set forth in the complaint, (2) documents attached to the complaint, and (3) matters of which judicial notice may be taken under Federal Rule of Evidence 201." Inclusive Cmtys Project, Inc. v. Lincoln Prop. Co., 920 F.3d 890, 900 (5th Cir. 2019).

b. The Rule 9(b) Standard for Claims of Fraud

Rule 9(b) of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure states that "[i]n alleging fraud or mistake, a party must state with particularity the circumstances constituting fraud or mistake. Malice, intent, knowledge, and other conditions of a person's mind may be alleged generally." FED. R. CIV. P. 9(b). "A dismissal for failure to plead fraud with particularity under Rule 9(b) is treated as a dismissal for failure to state a claim under Rule 12(b)(6)." Musket Corp. v. Suncor Energy (U.S.A.) Mktg. Inc., 759 F. App'x 280, 286–87 (5th Cir. 2019) (quoting United States ex rel. Stephenson v. Archer W. Contractors, L.L.C., 548 F. App'x 135, 138 (5th Cir. 2013)); see also United States ex rel. Grubbs v. Kanneganti, 565 F.3d 180, 185 n.8 (5th Cir. 2009) (citing United States ex rel. Thompson v. Columbia/HCA Healthcare Corp., 125 F.3d 899, 901 (5th Cir. 1997)).

In the Fifth Circuit, Rule 9(b) requires that a plaintiff state the who, what, when, where, and how of the alleged fraud. Musket Corp., 759 F. App'x at 287 (citing United States ex rel. Stephenson v. Archer W. Contractors, L.L.C., 548 F. App'x 135, 138 (5th Cir. 2013)). "The frequently stated, judicially-created standard for a sufficient fraud complaint ... instructs a plaintiff to plead the time, place and contents of the false representation, as well as the identity of the person making the misrepresentation and what that person obtained thereby." Id. (quoting Grubbs, 565 F.3d at 186).

c. Fraudulent Inducement

"To state a claim of fraud by misrepresentation under Texas law, a plaintiff must sufficiently allege (1) a [material] misrepresentation that (2) the speaker knew to be false or made recklessly (3) with the intention to induce the plaintiff's reliance, followed by (4) actual and justifiable reliance (5) causing injury." Brush v. Wells Fargo Bank, N.A., 911 F. Supp. 2d 445, 485 (S.D. Tex. 2013) (quoting Rio Grande Royalty Co. v. Energy Transfer Partners, L.P., 620 F.3d 465, 468 (5th Cir. 2010)). "A contract is subject to avoidance on the ground that it was induced by fraud." Id. (quoting Italian Cowboy Partners, Ltd. v. Prudential Ins. Co. of Am., 341 S.W.3d 323, 331 (Tex. 2011)); see also Formosa Plastics Corp. U.S.A. v. Presidio Eng'rs & Contractors, Inc., 960 S.W.2d 41, 46 (Tex. 1998) ("As a rule, a party is not bound by a contract procured by fraud."). Counterclaims alleging fraud must comply with the particularity requirements of Rule 9(b). Brush, 911 F. Supp. 2d at 486 (citing Castillo v. Hernandez, EP-10-CV-247-KC, 2011 WL 2489910, at *——, 2011 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 65796, at *3 (W.D. Tex. June 17, 2011) (applying Rule 9(b) to a fraud counterclaim)).

III. Analysis

Flotek describes the alleged fraud with sufficient particularity. As to the "who, what, when, and how," Flotek has alleged that Begovich made the "false representation that [Louisiana Oilfield] would provide ten [units] for Flotek's dedicated use," during the time period of the parties' correspondence and negotiations prior to signing the contract. (Docket Entry No. 34 at 2). This representation was a term material to the contractual agreement between the parties. (Id. at 2–3). According to Flotek, Louisiana Oilfield failed "to provide the dedicated use of ten tractor trucks, trailers, and drivers," that Louisiana Oilfield had promised, "allow[ed] its equipment to become subject to seizure," and "fail[ed] to provide skilled, knowledgeable, and safe drivers." (Docket Entry No. 47 at ¶ 66). Flotek alleges that "[t]he trucks that [Louisiana Oilfield] actually provided frequently arrive[d] late, causing transportation of Flotek's chemical products to be late to Flotek's customers and threatening their operations." (Docket Entry No. 47 at ¶¶ 131, 190–191).

4 Flotek has alleged the "where": Flotek's facility—where Louisiana Oilfield President Begovich and Flotek employee Klumb met in person for negotiations—located at 2790 Wilma St., Monahans, Texas 79756. (Id. at ¶ 92). Additional correspondence and negotiations occurred via email. (Id. at ¶¶ 95–97).

Louisiana Oilfield does not dispute that Flotek alleged a material representation, that Flotek actually and justifiably relied on that representation, or that Flotek's reliance caused the injury. (Docket Entry No. 31-1; Docket Entry No. 34 at 3–4; Docket Entry No. 36). The parties dispute whether Flotek's pleading satisfies the second and third fraud factors relating to Louisiana Oilfield's knowledge and intent to induce reliance. (Docket Entry Nos. 31-1, 34, 36).

Louisiana Oilfield argues that Flotek made "bare bones intent allegations" that are "not sufficient to meet the heightened pleading standards under Rule 9(b)." (Docket Entry No. 31-1 at 7). Louisiana Oilfield contends that "general statements about a party's intent to perform the very obligations that are later recorded in the contract can constitute a fraud-in-the inducement claim only if the Plaintiff offers evidence that [the] Defendant had no such intent when these pre-contractual negotiations took place." Gimme The Best, L.L.C. v. Sungard Vericenter, Inc., No. 08-CV-2873, 2010 WL 1388993 at *4, 2010 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 32979 at *13 (S.D. Tex. Apr. 1, 2010); see also Aquaplex, Inc. v. Rancho La Valencia, Inc., 297 S.W. 3d 768, 774 (Tex. 2009) ("A promise of future performance constitutes an actionable misrepresentation if the promise was made with no intention of performing at the time it was made." (quoting Formosa Plastics Corp. U.S.A. v. Presidio Eng'rs & Contractors, Inc., 960 S.W.2d 41, 48 (Tex. 1998))).

Flotek alleges that Louisiana Oilfield sought the transportation agreement because it was valuable, and Louisiana Oilfield was cash poor and simply needed the money. "Flotek was willing to pay [Louisiana Oilfield] a flat rate of $8,600 per Unit per week for ten Units—representing $86,000 per week and more than $340,000 a month—just to have ten Units on standby for Flotek's dedicated use." (Docket Entry No. 34 at 8; Docket Entry No. 47 at ¶ 102). Flotek alleges that Louisiana Oilfield's president, Begovich, owned "companies [that] were already experiencing significant financial problems in 2018 and had been for several years beforehand going as far back as 2011." (Docket Entry No. 34 at 12).

Flotek alleges that "at least two trucks (i.e., [trucks] ST09 and ST11) provided by [Louisiana Oilfield] and invoiced to Flotek were at risk of being sold," because they were subject to an earlier security interest. (Docket Entry No. 34 at 13). Begovich "previously had put up trucks ST09 and ST11 as collateral to secure a loan" to BriCor, LLC ("BriCor"), a company that, according to Flotek, is solely owned and managed by Begovich. (Id. at 8, 13). According to Flotek, Begovich knew at the time of contract negotiations that the two trucks, ST09 and ST11, which the contract reserved for Flotek's use, might be subject to seizure due to BriCor's loan default. (Id. at 13–14). Louisiana Oilfield disputes the "false contention that BriCor is owned by Begovich" but the court takes Flotek's sufficiently pleaded factual allegations as true at this stage. (Docket Entry No. 36 at 3). Flotek pleads in sufficient detail that BriCor defaulted on its loan and in November 2018, knew that the trucks were subject to foreclosure proceedings. (Docket Entry No. 34 at 13).

5 According to Louisiana Oilfield, Flotek "fails to allege that BriCor's trucks were ever actually seized." (Docket Entry No. 36 at 3). Actual seizure is irrelevant because Flotek is using these facts to demonstrate Louisiana Oilfield's knowledge, at the time of contract negotiations, of financial difficulties and the trucks' potential unavailability as well as a motive for fraudulent inducement. Louisiana Oilfield emphasizes that "BriCor became involved in litigation months after the Contract was signed" and argues the timeline of events defeats Flotek's counterclaim. (Id.). This argument is unpersuasive, at least at this stage of the litigation. Although litigation over the trucks began in November 2018, after the parties signed the contract, the facts set out in Flotek's timeline make it plausible that BriCor was delinquent in loan payments before the August 2018 negotiation date. Given that Louisiana Oilfield promised to dedicate to Flotek's use two trucks that were at risk of being unavailable, there is a plausible claim that Louisiana Oilfield made this representation knowing it could not perform.

Flotek points to a May 2018 factoring agreement between Begovich, on behalf of Louisiana Oilfield, and Advance Business Capital, LLC d/b/a Triumph Business Capital ("Triumph"), the terms of which "entitled [Triumph] to purchase [Louisiana Oilfield]'s current and future accounts receivable." (Docket Entry No. 34 at 13). Flotek argues that the nature and terms of the factoring agreement support "the inference that [Louisiana Oilfield] was desperately short on working capital in 2018 and looking for ways to quickly generate funds months before meeting with Flotek." (Id.).

Louisiana Oilfield responds that "factoring is a common arrangement in which funding is secured using accounts receivable and ... no different than other types of financing." (Docket Entry No. 36 at 4). While this may be true, the court draws factual inferences in Flotek's favor at the motion-to-dismiss stage. Twombly, 550 U.S. at 556, 127 S.Ct. 1955.

Louisiana Oilfield argues that the financial status of BriCor should not factor into the analysis of Louisiana Oilfield's motives and knowledge. (Docket Entry No. 36 at 4). However, in the context of securities fraud, the Fifth Circuit has stated that "[a]lleged facts are sufficient to support such an inference if they either (1) show a defendant's motive to commit securities fraud, or (2) identify circumstances that indicate conscious behavior on the part of the defendant." Lovelace v. Software Spectrum, 78 F.3d 1015, 1018–19 (5th Cir. 1996) (quoting Tuchman v. DSC Communications Corp., 14 F.3d 1061, 1068 (5th Cir.1994)). As Flotek argues, the court "reasonably can infer that the financial state of Begovich's companies was so dire" prior to contract negotiations that "Begovich was motivated to commit fraud in order to secure the lucrative Contract with Flotek." (Docket Entry No. 34 at 15–16). Even though BriCor and Louisiana Oilfield are different companies, Flotek states a plausible claim that they are financially linked through Begovich.

Louisiana Oilfield contends that there is no evidence of fraudulent intent at the time the parties entered into the transportation agreement. A party's intent at the time of entering into a contract "may be inferred from the party's subsequent acts after the representation is made." Aquaplex, 297 S.W.3d at 775 (quoting Spoljaric v. Percival Tours, Inc., 708 S.W.2d 432, 434 (Tex. 1986)). To avoid dismissal, Flotek need not plead facts in support of its counterclaim allegations with contemporaneous evidence of Louisiana Oilfield's intent during the negotiations or contract signing.

Louisiana Oilfield asserts that the facts of this case "are on all fours" with Legendary Lightning Grp. v. Optigenex, in which the court granted a Rule 12(b)(6) motion to dismiss for failure to meet the Rule 9(b) pleading requirements. Legendary Lightning Grp., Inc. v. Optigenex, Inc., No. 4:15CV53-LG-CMC, 2015 WL 3942946, 2015 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 83074 (E.D. Tex. June 26, 2015) ("There are no facts pled in support of Legendary's assertion that it believes Optigenex knew it would not perform under the contract when it promised that its stock would be tradable after it received Legendary's funds."); (Docket Entry No. 31-1 at 7). Legendary Lightning is both unpublished and distinguishable. In Legendary Lightning, the plaintiff did not allege facts suggesting knowledge of inability to perform. That is not the case here. Flotek specifically alleges that Begovich was aware of "BriCor's massive, delinquent debt" and "[Louisiana Oilfield]'s limited working capital." (Docket Entry No. 34 at 20). Flotek argues that Begovich knew or "lacked sufficient information to know" whether Louisiana Oilfield could honor its contract promise to provide "ten Units for Flotek's dedicated use." (Id. at 17, 20). Flotek's factual allegations are sufficient.

6 Louisiana Oilfield argues that Flotek has made an "about-face" by admitting "no knowledge of how many trucks [Louisiana Oilfield] actually had," noting that "[Flotek] "currently lacks information regarding the total number of trucks in [Louisiana Oilfield]'s fleet." (Docket Entry No. 34 at 13; Docket Entry No. 36 at 5). Louisiana Oilfield mischaracterizes this as an "admi[ssion] that [Flotek's] belief is based on nothing." (Docket Entry No. 36 at 5). Flotek acknowledges its present lack of information and suggests that Louisiana Oilfield would not have dedicated encumbered trucks to Flotek if Louisiana Oilfield's resources were sufficient to meet the contract requirements. (Docket Entry No. 34 at 13).

Louisiana Oilfield cites Aquaplex, 297 S.W.3d at 775, and argues that Flotek has not alleged enough circumstantial evidence because "no facts pleaded support[ ] a conclusion that [the] Plaintiff knew that it could not provide the dedicated units by a given date." (Docket Entry No. 31-1 at 6). According to the same authority Louisiana Oilfield relies on, "[w]hile breach of the contract alone is not evidence that a party did not intend to perform, 'breach combined with slight circumstantial evidence of fraud' is some evidence of fraudulent intent, enough to support a verdict." Aquaplex, 297 S.W.3d at 775 (quoting Tony Gullo Motors I, L.P. v. Chapa, 212 S.W.3d 299, 305 (Tex. 2006)). That standard is met here.

Louisiana Oilfield challenges Flotek's inclusion of "matters outside of its pleadings" in responding to the dismissal motion and argues that "consider[ing] public court records from other cases ... would be contrary to case law dealing with the issue and should not be allowed by the Court." (Docket Entry No. 36 at 2). Louisiana Oilfield challenges

Flotek's inclusion of the records concerning BriCor's debts and bankruptcy proceedings. (Id. at 2–4). Louisiana Oilfield argues that it would be improper for the court to consider public records, because Flotek relies on this information "for the truth of the matters asserted therein, namely that BriCor ... owed the alleged debts referenced therein." (Id. at 2); see Burns v. Mayes, 369 F. App'x. 526, 527 (5th Cir. 2010) (taking judicial notice of record of court proceedings from another district court in reviewing a 12(b)(6) dismissal); see also Int'l Star Class Yacht Racing Ass'n v. Tommy Hilfiger U.S.A., Inc., 146 F.3d 66, 70 (2d Cir. 1998) ("A court may take judicial notice of a document filed in another court 'not for the truth of the matters asserted in the other litigation, but rather to establish the fact of such litigation and related filings.' ") (citing Liberty Mutual Ins. Co. v. Rotches Pork Packers, Inc., 969 F.2d 1384, 1388 (2d Cir. 1992)).

It is unnecessary to consider the public records because, in the context of a Rule 12(b)(6) motion, this court takes as true Flotek's allegation that BriCor owed debts. Courts regardless may take judicial notice of matters of public record at this stage of the proceedings, particularly in the case of a dismissal motion. Burns, 369 F. App'x. at 527; Davis v. Bayless, 70 F.3d 367, 372 n.3 (5th Cir. 1995) ("Federal courts are permitted to refer to matters of public record when deciding a 12(b)(6) motion to dismiss.") (citing Cinel v. Connick, 15 F.3d 1338, 1343 n.6 (5th Cir. 1994)).

At this stage of the litigation, when evaluating a motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim, the court takes the sufficiently pleaded factual allegations as true. Twombly, 550 U.S. at 556, 127 S.Ct. 1955 ("[A] well-pleaded complaint may proceed even if it strikes a savvy judge that actual proof of those facts is improbable ...."). Flotek alleged enough facts to proceed with its fraudulent inducement counterclaim. The allegations provide sufficient information to answer the who, what, when, where, and how of the alleged fraud. The counterclaim adequately alleges Louisiana Oilfield's knowledge and intent at the time it made material representations to Flotek about the availability of tractor-trailers.

IV. Conclusion

7 Louisiana Oilfield's motions to dismiss, (Docket Entry Nos. 24, 31), are denied.

All Citations

Not Reported in Fed. Supp., 2020 WL 13240060

End of Document

© 2025 Thomson Reuters. No claim to original U.S. Government Works.

CASE NO. 42

2011 WL 13247456
Only the Westlaw citation
is currently available.
United States District Court,
S.D. Texas, Houston Division.

CLAIMHUB, INC., Plaintiff,
v.
UNIVERSAL RISK INSURANCE SERVICES, INC., et al., Defendants.

CIVIL ACTION NO. H-10-2841
|
Signed 07/25/2011

Attorneys and Law Firms

Steven Lee Tiedemann, JPB Enterprises Inc., Columbia, MD, for Plaintiff.

Scott Rothenberg, Attorney at Law, Houston, TX, for Defendants.

MEMORANDUM AND ORDER

Lee H. Rosenthal, United States District Judge

1 Claimhub, formerly known as N'Site Solutions, sued Universal Risk Insurance Services, Inc. ("URIS"), Universal Risk Holdings, Inc. ("URH"), Cybernex, Inc., Wiley Joe LeBrun, Jr., ("Wiley LeBrun"), Wiley Joe LeBrun, III, ("Joe LeBrun"), and Edwin E. LeBrun, Jr., alleging fraudulent transfer under the Texas Uniform Fraudulent Transfer Act ("TUFTA"), TEX. BUS. & COM. CODE § 24.005, et seq.; common law and statutory fraud, TEX. BUS. & COM. CODE § 27.01; and civil conspiracy. (Docket Entry No. 1). Claimhub alleges that its predecessor, N'Site, obtained an arbitration award against Omega Claims Solutions, Inc., a company that the LeBruns owned and served as corporate officers. Omega refused to pay the award, which N'Site reduced to judgment. Omega filed for bankruptcy protection under chapter 7 shortly after the judgment was entered. In this lawsuit, Claimhub alleges that assets that were or should have been Omega's property were fraudulently transferred to the defendants in this case. Claimhub alleges that it is entitled to recover more than $623,214.07, the judgment amount plus pre- and post-judgment interest, and seeks to avoid the transfers and recover their value up to the judgment amount, plus attorneys' fees and punitive damages.

The defendants have filed a motion to dismiss the complaint. (Docket Entry No. 10). Claimhub has responded. (Docket Entry No. 12).[1] Based on the motion and response, the pleadings, the record, and the applicable law, this court finds that Claimhub's allegations of fraud and conspiracy to commit fraud are sufficient and denies the motion to dismiss those allegations. This court grants the motion dismiss as to Claimhub's allegations of fraudulent transfer under TUFTA and conspiracy to commit fraudulent transfers, without prejudice and with leave to amend. Claimhub must file an amended complaint by August 19, 2011. A status conference is set for Friday, August 5, 2011 at 8:30 a.m.

The reasons for these rulings are explained in detail below.

I. Background

In 2006, Omega agreed to sell N'Site a call center it owned and operated for processing insurance claims. On November 12, 2006, the parties signed an Asset Purchase Agreement and Licensing Agreement (the "Agreement") providing that part of the purchase price would be paid after closing. Joe LeBrun and Wiley LeBrun, directors of Omega, negotiated the transaction with N'Site. The LeBruns also served as directors of URIS, URH, and Cybernex.

During the negotiations, N'Site asked Omega to provide financial information. In the complaint, N'Site alleges that Omega, through Joe and Wiley LeBrun, represented that the financial information for URIS was the "same" as the financial information for Omega and that Omega and URIS were the same entity. In a November 7, 2006 e-mail, Joe LeBrun gave N'Site the financial information of URIS and stated: "In January 06 we started closing down Universal Risk and moving all claims dollars over to Omega Claims Solutions Inc. Omega Claims Solutions Inc. and Universal Risk are one, an[d] the same." LeBrun continued, "Effective January 06 our other companies have their own financials. The P&L that is attached is for claims only and does not take into consideration our other entities. Since the claims entity is the one purchasing the Nsite service center this is the P&L supplied." (Docket Entry No. 1, ¶¶ 11–16).

2 Shortly after the call center was transferred to Omega, N'Site and Omega had a dispute. They submitted the dispute to arbitration under the Agreement. The arbitrator issued an award in favor of N'Site in November 2008. After Omega refused to pay, N'Site filed a motion to confirm the award in federal district court in the Southern District of Texas. Omega opposed the motion and asserted a number of grounds for vacatur. On December 17, 2009, the court rejected Omega's vacatur arguments in forceful terms and entered judgment enforcing the award. Shortly after that judgment, Omega filed for chapter 7 bankruptcy protection. During the bankruptcy proceedings, Wiley LeBrun filed documents stating that the representations he had made to N'Site that Omega and URIS were the same entity were false. (Id., ¶¶ 22–23).

N'Site's successor, Claimhub, filed this lawsuit, alleging that "assets that were or should have been the property of Omega, were improperly transferred to or left with URIS, URH, Cybernex, Joe LeBrun, Wiley LeBrun and Edwin LeBrun in contravention of law." (Id., ¶ 24). Claimhub claims that "the transfers of assets to defendants" were made with fraudulent intent, while Omega was insolvent, and "without receipt of reasonably equivalent value by Omega." Claimhub seeks to avoid these transfers and recover the value of the assets up to the amount of the judgment. (Id., ¶¶ 25–44). Claimhub also alleges that Joe LeBrun engaged in fraud when he represented the status of Omega and URIS to N'Site, and that Wiley LeBrun participated in that fraud. (Id., ¶ 46). Claimhub alleges that the LeBruns knew of the falsity of the statements and made them with the intent that N'Site rely on them, and that N'Site did in fact detrimentally rely on the statements. (Id., ¶¶ 47–49). Finally, Claimhub asserts a civil conspiracy claim. (Id., ¶ 60).

The defendants moved to dismiss for failure to state a claim based on the insufficiency of the factual allegations. (Docket Entry No. 10). In response, Claimhub argues that this court should take judicial notice of court filings in the suit to confirm the arbitration award and in the bankruptcy proceeding. Claimhub argues that considering those filings with the complaint filed in this case shows sufficient facts to make the claims for relief under each cause of action sufficient. (Docket Entry No. 12).

 © 2025 Thomson Reuters. No claim to original U.S. Government Works.

The arguments and responses are analyzed below.

II. Rule 12(b)(6)

Rule 12(b)(6) allows dismissal if a plaintiff fails "to state a claim upon which relief can be granted." FED. R. CIV. P. 12(b) (6). In Bell Atlantic Corp. v. Twombly, 550 U.S. 544, 555 (2007), and Ashcroft v. Iqbal, 129 S. Ct. 1937, 1949 (2009), the Supreme Court confirmed that Rule 12(b)(6) must be read in conjunction with Rule 8(a), which requires "a short and plain statement of the claim showing that the pleader is entitled to relief." FED. R. CIV. P. 8(a)(2). Twombly rejected the Supreme Court's prior statement in Conley v. Gibson, 355 U.S. 41, 45–46 (1957), that "a complaint should not be dismissed for failure to state a claim unless it appears beyond doubt that the plaintiff can prove no set of facts in support of his claim which would entitle him to relief." See Twombly, 550 U.S. at 562–63. To withstand a Rule 12(b)(6) motion, a complaint must contain "enough facts to state a claim to relief that is plausible on its face." Twombly, 550 U.S. at 570; see also Elsensohn v. St. Tammany Parish Sheriff's Office, 530 F.3d 368, 372 (5th Cir. 2008). Under Rule 8(a)(2), plaintiffs are not required to include " 'detailed factual allegations,' but more than 'an unadorned, the-defendant-unlawfully-harmed-me accusation' is needed." Id. (quoting Twombly, 550 U.S. at 555). "A claim has facial plausibility when the plaintiff pleads factual content that allows the court to draw the reasonable inference that the defendant is liable for the misconduct alleged." Iqbal, 129 S. Ct. at 1949. "The plausibility standard is not akin to a 'probability requirement,' but it asks for more than a sheer possibility that a defendant has acted unlawfully." Id. (quoting Twombly, 550 U.S. at 556).

3 When considering the sufficiency of pleadings, "courts must consider the complaint in its entirety, as well as other sources courts ordinarily examine when ruling on Rule 12(b) (6) motions to dismiss, in particular, documents incorporated into the complaint by reference, and matters of which a court may take judicial notice." Tellabs, Inc. v. Makor Issues & Rights, Ltd., 551 U.S. 308, 322 (2007). The court may take judicial notice of matters in the public record, including prior proceedings between the parties, without converting the motion to dismiss into a motion for summary judgment. Wilson v. Barcella, CIV.A.K-05-3646, 2007 WL 963977 (S.D. Tex. Mar. 29, 2007) (citing cases), aff'd, 284 Fed.Appx. 210 (5th Cir. 2008) (per curiam) (unpublished).

When a plaintiff's complaint fails to state a claim, the court should generally give the plaintiff at least one chance to amend the complaint under Rule 15(a) before dismissing the action with prejudice. See Great Plains Trust Co. v. Morgan Stanley Dean Witter & Co., 313 F.3d 305, 329 (5th Cir. 2002) ("[D]istrict courts often afford plaintiffs at least one opportunity to cure pleading deficiencies before dismissing a case, unless it is clear that the defects are incurable or the plaintiffs advise the court that they are unwilling or unable to amend in a manner that will avoid dismissal."); see also United States ex rel. Adrian v. Regents of the Univ. of Cal., 363 F.3d 398, 403 (5th Cir. 2004) ("Leave to amend should be freely given, and outright refusal to grant leave to amend without a justification ... is considered an abuse of discretion." (internal citation omitted)). However, a plaintiff should be denied leave to amend a complaint if the court determines that "the proposed change clearly is frivolous or advances a claim or defense that is legally insufficient on its face...." 6 CHARLES A. WRIGHT, ARTHUR R. MILLER & MARY KAY KANE, FEDERAL PRACTICE AND PROCEDURE § 1487 (2d ed. 1990); see also Ayers v. Johnson, 247 Fed.Appx. 534, 535 (5th Cir. 2007) (unpublished) (per curiam) (" '[A] district court acts within its discretion when dismissing a motion to amend that is frivolous or futile.' " (quoting Martin's Herend Imports, Inc. v. Diamond & Gem Trading U.S. of Am. Co., 195 F.3d 765, 771 (5th Cir. 1999))).

III. Analysis

A. Fraud

Fraud allegations are subject to the Rule 9(b) heightened pleading standard. United States ex rel. Grubbs v. Kanneganti, 565 F.3d 180, 186 n.8 (5th Cir. 2009); United States ex rel. Thompson v. Columbia/HCA Healthcare Corp., 125 F.3d 899, 901 (5th Cir. 1997); Lovelace v. Software Spectrum, Inc., 78 F.3d 1015, 1017 (5th Cir. 1996). Rule 9(b) states:

> In alleging fraud or mistake, a party must state with particularity the circumstances constituting fraud or mistake. Malice, intent, knowledge, and other conditions of a person's mind may be alleged generally.

FED. R. CIV. P. 9(b). "At a minimum, Rule 9(b) requires that a plaintiff set forth the 'who, what, when, where, and how' of the alleged fraud." Thompson, 125 F.3d at 903 (quoting Williams v. WMX Techs., Inc., 112 F.3d 175, 179 (5th Cir. 1997)). The pleader must "specify the statements contended to be fraudulent, identify the speaker, state when and where the statements were made, and explain why the statements were fraudulent." Williams, 112 F.3d at 177.

The elements of common-law fraud in Texas are: (1) the defendant made a representation to the plaintiff; (2) the representation was material; (3) the representation was false; (4) when the defendant made the representation the defendant knew it was false or made the representation recklessly and without knowledge of its truth; (5) the defendant made the representation with the intent that the plaintiff act on it; (6) the plaintiff relied on the representation; and (7) the representation caused the plaintiff injury. Shandong Yinguang Chem. Indus. Joint Stock Co. v. Potter, 607 F.3d 1029, 1032–33 (5th Cir. 2010) (citing Ernst & Young, L.L.P. v. Pac. Mut. Life Ins. Co., 51 S.W.3d 573, 577 (Tex. 2001)). The plaintiff need not plead or prove that "each and every defendant made a material representation"; it is sufficient that "a defendant had knowledge of the material misrepresentations and profited thereby." In re NE 40 Partners, Ltd., 411 B.R. 352, 360–361 (Bankr. S.D. Tex. 2009).

4 The elements of statutory fraud are:

> (a) Fraud in a transaction involving real estate or stock in a corporation or joint stock company consists of a
>
> (1) false representation of a past or existing material fact, when the false representation is
>
> (A) made to a person for the purpose of inducing that person to enter into a contract; and
>
> (B) relied on by that person in entering into that contract

TEX. BUS. & COM. CODE § 27.01. With respect to third persons, section 27.01 provides:

> (d) A person who (1) has actual awareness of the falsity of a representation or promise made by another person and (2) fails to disclose the falsity of the representation or promise to the person defrauded, and (3) benefits from the false representation or promise commits the fraud described in Subsection (a) of this section and is liable to the person defrauded for exemplary damages. Actual awareness may be inferred where objective manifestations indicate that a person acted with actual awareness.

TEX. BUS. & COM. CODE § 27.01.

The defendants fault the complaint for failing to allege facts that meet the Rule 9(b) requirements. But Claimhub has alleged in its complaint a specific statement that it asserts meet the statutory and common-law elements for fraud. Claimhub alleges that the representations about the status of Omega and URIS made in the November 7, 2006 e-mail by Joe LeBrun were false and were made with the knowledge that they were false and the intent that N'Site rely upon them. Claimhub alleges that during July through November of 2006 (and specifically on November 7, 2006), Omega, J. LeBrun, and W. LeBrun made representations orally and in the e-mail identified in the complaint that the financial information for URIS was the "same" as the information for Omega and that Omega and URIS were "one and the same" entity. (Docket Entry No. 1, ¶ 14–15.). Claimhub alleges that in reliance on these representations, N'Site moved forward with its sale of the call center and entered into the Agreement, "convinced that Omega was financially capable of performing its obligations incurred as part of the Transaction." (Id., ¶ 16),

In addition, Claimhub alleges that specific statements made in the later bankruptcy proceeding showed that the earlier statements made by the defendants were false. Claimhub alleges that "[i]n its bankruptcy schedules, Omega revealed that it is not one and the same with URIS or URH." (Id., ¶ 22). Claimhub alleges that the bankruptcy filings also revealed that Omega had $1,000.00 in assets and over $1,000,000.00 in liabilities, and revealed that Omega did not own subsidiaries, as had been previously represented to Claimhub. (Id., ¶ 15). Claimhub alleges that in the bankruptcy proceeding, Wiley LeBrun admitted that the representations made to N'Site—that URIS was one and the same with Omega, that URIS would be shut down, and that all of the URIS assets would belong to Omega—were not true. (Id., ¶ 23.).

 © 2025 Thomson Reuters. No claim to original U.S. Government Works.

The complaint and related documents properly considered on this motion to dismiss under judicial notice satisfy the Rule 9(b) pleading requirements for fraud. The fraud claims against Wiley LeBrun are also sufficient on the basis of his alleged status as an insider and the fact that he was copied on the specific e-mail quoted as a critical misrepresentation. (Id., ¶¶ 15, 41). Because Claimhub has alleged that the individual defendants were also acting as agents for the corporations they owned and operated and which they served as directors, the fraud claims against the remaining defendants are also sufficient. ACS Investors, Inc. v. McLaughlin, 943 S.W.2d 426, 432 (Tex. 1997) ("Generally, a corporate officer's acts on the corporation's behalf are deemed corporate acts.").

5 The allegations of conspiracy to commit fraud are also sufficient. Texas law defines a civil conspiracy as: "(1) two or more persons; (2) an object to be accomplished; (3) a meeting of the minds on the object or course of action; (4) one or more unlawful, overt acts; and (5) damages as a proximate result." Tri v. J.T.T., 162 S.W.3d 552, 556 (Tex. 2005) (citing Juhl v. Airington, 936 S.W.2d 640, 644 (Tex. 1996)) (additional citations omitted). "It is not the agreement itself, but an injury to the plaintiff resulting from an act done pursuant to the common purpose that gives rise to the cause of action." Carroll v. Timmers Chevrolet, Inc., 592 S.W.2d 922, 925 (Tex. 1980) (citing Great Nat'l Life Ins. Co. v. Chapa, 377 S.W.2d 632, 635 (Tex. 1964)). Conspiracy to commit a tort requires that the parties conspire to commit an intentional tort. Firestone Steel Prods. Co. v. Barajas, 927 S.W.2d 608, 617 (Tex. 1996). A claim of conspiracy to commit a tort that sounds in fraud is also subject to the heightened pleading requirements of Rule 9(b). See Castillo v. First City Bancorporation of Texas, Inc., 43 F.3d 953, 961 (5th Cir. 1994). Rule 9(b) does not, however, require a plaintiff to plead all the details of a defendant's mental state in a claim of conspiracy to defraud. "[E]ven though Rule 9(b) applies ... '[it] does not work to penalize a plaintiff merely because he was not privy to, and therefore, cannot plead the details of, the inner workings of a group of defendants who allegedly acted in concert to defraud him.' " NE 40 Partners, 411 B.R. at 367 (quoting Kravetz v. Brukenfeld, No. 83 Civ. 5357(GLG), 1984 WL 2443, at *3 n.9 (S.D.N.Y. June 29, 1984)). Status as an "insider" can support an inference of knowledge. See, e.g., id.

Claimhub has alleged that each individual defendant, acting as an insider, conspired with the other defendants to commit fraud. The allegations of insider status are sufficient and provide a factual basis for alleging each individual defendant's mental state. The assertions that the individual defendants were acting as agents for the corporations they served as officers are also factually sufficient. See Askanase v. Fatjo, 130 F.3d 657, 668 (5th Cir. 1997) ("If the directors had the requisite knowledge and intent for the fraud and conspiracy claims, then that knowledge is imputed to the corporation unless the Appellant makes a showing of adverse interest.").

The motion to dismiss the fraud claims in Counts V and VI and related conspiracy to commit fraud claim is denied.

B. Fraudulent Transfers

Fraudulent transfers are divided into two categories: actually fraudulent transfers, TEX. BUS. & COM. CODE § 24.005(a)(1); and constructively fraudulent transfers, TEX. BUS. & COM. CODE §§ 24.005(a)(2) & 24.006. Claimhub asserts claims based on both sections.

Section 24.005(a) provides:

> A transfer made or obligation incurred by a debtor is fraudulent as to a creditor, whether the creditor's claim arose before or after the transfer was made or the obligation was incurred, if the debtor made the transfer or incurred the obligation under any of the following:
>
> (1) With actual intent to hinder, delay or defraud any creditor of the debtor.
>
> (2) Without receiving a reasonably equivalent value in exchange for the transfer or obligation, and the debtor either:
>
> (a) Was engaged or was about to engage in a business or a transaction for which the remaining assets of the debtor were unreasonably small in relation to the business or transaction.
>
> (b) Intended to incur, or believed or reasonably should have believed that he would incur, debts beyond his ability to pay as they became due.

TEX. BUS. & COM. CODE § 24.005(a). Section 24.006 provides:

> (a) A transfer made or obligation incurred by a debtor is fraudulent as to a creditor whose claim arose before the transfer was made or the obligation was incurred if the debtor made the transfer or incurred the obligation without receiving a reasonably equivalent value in exchange for the transfer or obligation and the debtor was insolvent at that time or the debtor became insolvent as a result of the transfer or obligation.
>
> (b) A transfer made by a debtor is fraudulent as to a creditor whose claim arose before the transfer was made if the transfer was made to an insider for an antecedent debt, the debtor was insolvent at that time, and the insider had reasonable cause to believe that the debtor was insolvent.

6 TEX. BUS. & COM. CODE § 24.006. Claimhub alleges violations under each theory. [2]

Some courts have required claims under § 24.005(a) to be pleaded with particularity under Rule 9(b). Alexander v. Holden Bus. Forms, Inc., No. 4:08-cv-614Y, 2009 WL 2176582, at *2 (N.D. Tex. July 20, 2009); E. Poultry Distrib., Inc. v. Yarto Puez, No. 3:00-cv-1578, 2001 WL 34664163, at *2 (N.D. Tex. Dec. 3, 2001). Claimhub's fraudulent-transfer allegations are insufficient even under Rule 8. The premise for Claimhub's claim is that Omega must have had substantial assets to fund its legal work fighting the arbitration. Noting that Omega had filed for bankruptcy only 33 days after the arbitration award was confirmed, claiming $1,000 in assets and $1,000,000 in liabilities, Claimhub contends that it is "entitled to an inference that the directors and/or the corporate entities that shared its space, employees, assets and management had some knowledge of, and played some role in, Omega's fast liquidation. Moreover, it's reasonable for this Court to infer that, given the close relationship between Omega and the Defendants, that each, no doubt, benefit[t]ed." (Docket Entry No. 12, at 8).

To state a claim against an individual under TUFTA, the defendant must receive property belonging to the debtor. See Alexander, 2009 WL 2176582, at *6; Wohlstein v. Aliezer, 321 S.W.2d 756, 776–77 (Tex. App.—Houston, 2010). TUFTA does not create personal liability for individuals who facilitate fraudulent transfers. In re MortgageAmerica Corp., 714 F.2d 1266, 1272 (5th Cir. 1983) (noting that TUFTA "entails no personal liability on the part of those responsible for the transfer"); Sherman v. Main Event, Inc., No. Civ. A. 3:02-CV-1314, 2003 WL 251653, at *5 (N.D. Tex. Feb. 3, 2003); FDIC v. White, No. 3:96-CV-0560-P, 1998 WL 120298, at *2 (N.D. Tex. Mar. 5, 1998) (holding that TUFTA does "not create personal liability on the part of a co-conspirator for fraudulent conveyances to an extent or in an amount beyond property which a co-conspirator actually receives or in which he acquires an interest"). Nor is a transfer to a third party for the defendant's benefit sufficient to create personal liability. Alexander, 2009 WL 2176582, at *6.

The allegation that the defendants must have spent funds on the "costly" arbitration proceedings shortly before Omega declared bankruptcy does not plead a cause of action for fraudulent transfer under the statutes. Claimhub's argument, in essence, is that Omega had money before the arbitration—at least enough to pay lawyers' fees—and was insolvent afterward, so some of that money improperly went to the defendants. But the complaint and Claimhub's subsequent briefing do not show why this scenario is any more plausible than the scenario that the money was paid to other recipients, including those who presented its "costly" defense relating to the arbitration. Nor do the complaint and the related, properly considered, documents allege facts showing that there were transfers to the defendants made with the intent to frustrate collection of the judgment or transfers for which no reasonably equivalent value was received. The allegations in Claimhub's complaint are, at most, "merely consistent with [the defendants'] liability, [stopping] short of the line between possibility and plausibility of entitlement to relief." Iqbal, 129 S. Ct. at 1949 (citations and quotations omitted); see also Twombly, 550 U.S. at 555 ("Factual allegations must be enough to raise a right to relief above the speculative level....").

7 Claimhub's allegations of conspiracy to commit a fraudulent transfer are derivative of the TUFTA claims. See Highland Crusader Offshore Partners, LP v. LifeCare Holdings Inc., 377 Fed.Appx. 422, 428 (5th Cir. 2010) (unpublished) (per curiam) (citing Tilton v. Marshall, 925 S.W.2d 672, 681 (Tex. 1996)). Because Claimhub has not stated a claim for fraudulent transfer, it cannot state a claim for conspiracy to commit a fraudulent transfer. Claimhub's fraudulent transfer claims in Counts I, II, III, and IV and related conspiracy claim are dismissed, with leave to amend.

IV. Conclusion

Claimhub's allegations of fraud and conspiracy to commit fraud are sufficient. Its allegations of fraudulent transfers under TUFTA and conspiracy to commit fraudulent transfers are dismissed without prejudice and with leave to amend. Claimhub must file an amended complaint by August 19, 2011.

All Citations

Not Reported in Fed. Supp., 2011 WL 13247456

Footnotes

1 In their motion to dismiss, the defendants allege that Edwin LeBrun does not exist. Claimhub has requested an affidavit affirming that Edwin LeBrun has no involvement in Omega or any defendant. (Docket Entry No. 12). The request is granted. The affidavit requested must be produced by August 19, 2011.

2 Count IV alleges a violation of TEX. BUS. & COM. CODE § 24.005(b). As the defendants point out, Count IV tracks the language of TEX. BUS. & COM. CODE § 24.006(b). These claims are properly treated as arising under the latter section. See Armstrong v. Capshaw, Goss & Bowers, LLP, 404 F.3d 933. 936 (5th Cir. 2005) (requiring that courts "determine the true nature of a pleading by its substance, not its labels"); Edwards v. City of Houston, 78 F.3d 983, 995 (5th Cir. 1996) ("[W]e have oft stated that 'the relief sought, that to be granted, or within the power of the Court to grant, should be determined by substance, not a label.' ") (quoting Bros. Inc. v. W.R. Grace Mfg. Co., 320 F.2d 594, 606 (5th Cir. 1963)).

End of Document

© 2025 Thomson Reuters. No claim to original U.S. Government Works.

CASE NO. 43

2010 WL 4702303
Only the Westlaw citation
is currently available.
United States District Court,
S.D. Texas,
Houston Division.

ZYTAX, INC., Plaintiff,
v.
GREEN PLAINS RENEWABLE ENERGY, INC., Defendant.

Civil Action
No.
H
–
09
–
2582
.
|
Nov. 10, 2010.

Attorneys and Law Firms

John Denis Sheppard, Joseph M. Graham, Jr., Fulbright & Jaworski LLP, Houston, TX, for Plaintiff.

Michael Degan, Husch Blackwell LLP, Omaha, NE, Michael E. Norton, Husch Blackwell Sanders, Kansas City, MO, for Defendant.

MEMORANDUM AND ORDER

LEE H. ROSENTHAL, District Judge.

1 Zytax, Inc. sued Green Plains Renewable Energy, Inc. for breach of contract. Zytax alleged that Green Plains failed to pay for software and consulting services relating to compliance with energy regulations in various states. Green Plains has admitted that it did not pay Zytax for its products and services. In its initial answer, Green Plains alleged that the parties' contract is unenforceable because of mutual mistake and misrepresentations by Zytax. Green Plains also counterclaimed for fraud, misrepresentation, and breach of contract. Zytax moved to dismiss the counterclaims under Rule 12(b)(6) and to strike several of Green Plains's affirmative defenses under Rule 12(f). This court granted Zytax's motion, without prejudice, and granted Green Plains leave to amend its answer and counterclaims. (Docket Entry No. 24). Green Plains amended, again asserting fraud and mutual mistake as affirmative defenses and fraud, misrepresentation, and breach of contract as counterclaims. (Docket Entry No. 25). Zytax has moved to dismiss the fraud- and mistake-based affirmative defenses and the counterclaims. (Docket Entry No. 26). Green Plains responded, (Docket Entry No. 29), and Zytax replied, (Docket Entry No. 30).

Based on the motion, response, and reply; the pleadings; and the applicable law, this court denies the motion to dismiss. The reasons are explained in detail below.

I. Background

Green Plains produces, markets, and sells ethanol products throughout the United States. This business is subject to federal and state regulation, licensing requirements, and taxation. The states impose varying requirements. In its amended answer, Green Plains alleged that its failure to comply with applicable regulatory, licensing, and tax requirements could result in "fines, penalties and sanctions, as well as the potential cessation of business in those jurisdictions." (Docket Entry No. 25, ¶ 27). Green Plains alleged that it sought consulting services from Zytax because of the risks of noncompliance.

 © 2025 Thomson Reuters. No claim to original U.S. Government Works.

In the fall of 2008, Green Plains began discussions with Zytax about buying software to help achieve regulatory compliance in state and local jurisdictions. Green Plains alleged that Zytax "holds itself out as a provider of 'strategic software automation solutions for indirect tax determination and excise motor fuels compliance for the energy industry, minimizing the effort required to maintain compliance and ensure determination accuracy" and also as " 'the only proven commercial solution for energy tax complexities.' " (Id., ¶ 29). During the parties' initial discussions, Zytax submitted a written proposal to Green Plains for its software and consulting services. Green Plains alleged that Zytax made the following representations:

- " 'Zytax is quite simply the industry and government agency standard for automating the determination, compliance, and filing of indirect taxes with proven expertise in Motor Fuels and Commodities Taxation' ";

2 - "Zytax would 'monitor the changing regulatory environment on [Green Plains's] behalf, including 'Rules and Rates Maintenance & Regulatory Compliance Monitoring' and 'compliance filing requirement updates, tax authority rule and rate monitoring for supported jurisdiction' ' "; and

- "Zytax would '[m]aintain representation for required tax authority agencies including State & Federal supported jurisdiction.' "

(Id., ¶¶ 32, 34).

Green Plains alleged that Zytax representatives highlighted the risks of noncompliance, stating that " '[c]ompliance regulations are in a constant state of change and regulations vary between local jurisdictions, states and sometimes within counties .... Commodities tax liability is exponentially greater than standard tax liability. Determination inefficiencies and Compliance disputes impact cost to company through fines/fees/penalties, audit cost and cash flow organization.' " (Id., ¶ 33). Green Plains alleged that Zytax represented that its software could eliminate these risks. Zytax allegedly stated that its "Enterprise Compliance Express software would enable [Green Plains] to mitigate these risk and allow [Green Plains] to become fully compliant with all fuel reporting regulatory requirements through its fully automated software." (Id., ¶ 35). Zytax allegedly "represented that [it] would tailor its software and services to ensure compliance with all relevant taxing jurisdiction." (Id.). Green Plains also alleged that Zytax represented that most jurisdictions require tax reports to be filed electronically. (Id., ¶ 37). Green Plains alleged that Zytax identified specific steps needed to ensure compliance in 17 different jurisdictions. (Id., ¶ 36).

 © 2025 Thomson Reuters. No claim to original U.S. Government Works.

On November 17, 2008, Green Plains reached an agreement with Zytax. Green Plains would purchase Zytax software to use in meeting compliance obligations in 17 specified jurisdictions. (Id., ¶ 38). The initial agreement incorporated a Statement of Work (SOW) under which Zytax agreed to install and configure its Zytax Express with Import Compliance Software for each of the 17 jurisdictions. (Id., ¶ 39). After this initial agreement, Zytax told Green Plains that it was subject to ethanol fuel excise tax reporting obligations in six additional jurisdictions. (Id., ¶ 42). On December 29, 2008, Green Plains agreed to an amendment to the SOW, adding these six jurisdictions. Under the agreement and amended agreement, Green Plains agreed to pay Zytax a software license fee of $7,000 per jurisdiction and an annual maintenance fee of $2,100 per jurisdiction. (Id., ¶¶ 44–45).

Green Plains identified a number of Zytax employees who made representations about the problems in achieving regulatory compliance and Zytax's abilities to do so. Green Plains named eight Zytax representatives who made these representations orally. Green Plains also claimed that Zytax's representations were reflected in the following written documents: (1) the initial written proposal identifying the 17 jurisdictions where Zytax software and services were needed to help Green Plains achieve regulatory compliance; (2) the initial SOW; (3) the initial agreement; (4) a November 18, 2008, invoice from Zytax for license and maintenance fees related to compliance software for the initial 17 jurisdictions; (5) the amended SOW, which identified 6 additional jurisdictions where Zytax software and services would help Green Plains achieve regulatory compliance; (6) a December 31, 2008, invoice for license and maintenance fees related to compliance software for the 6 additional jurisdictions; (7) "[a]n email from Doug Burdick to Allen Pham dated February 9, 2009"; (8) "[a]n email from Ray Naab to Keith Gilbour dated February 11, 2009;" (9) "[a] spreadsheet prepared by Ray Naab and forwarded by email on February 12, 2009"; and (10) "[a]n email from John Beatty to Keith Gilbour dated May 28, 2009." (Id., ¶ 54).

3 Green Plains alleged that shortly after entering into the Zytax agreement, it "began to question Zytax's purported 'expertise' as it related to alternative fuels." (Id., ¶ 45). One reason was Zytax's allegedly improper preparation and late filing of tax documents that Green Plains had hired it to file with the State of Tennessee. This late filing subjected Green Plains to $90,000 in fines, which Green Plains was ultimately able to have waived. Concerned about the other jurisdictions, Green Plains began contacting them to verify the information Zytax had provided. As a result of these communications, Green Plains allegedly learned that Zytax had falsely represented Green Plains's regulatory reporting obligations in these jurisdictions. Green Plains allegedly learned that "it was required to file reports in less than half of the twenty-three jurisdictions." (Id., ¶¶ 46–48). And according to the allegations, "Zytax acknowledged that [Green Plains] was in fact, not required to file ethanol fuel excise tax reports in [11] jurisdictions for which Zytax had sold software licenses." Zytax, however, "refused to reduce and revise its invoices to remove the misrepresented jurisdictions."[1] (Id., ¶ 50). Green Plains alleged that Zytax billed it over $100,000 "for software license and maintenance fees ... for those [11] jurisdictions." (Id., ¶ 48). Green Plains has not paid these invoices. Green Plains also alleged that "many of the jurisdictions did not require electronic ... reporting, but in fact, allowed manual or simplified reporting, using state provided Excel spreadsheet template." (Id., ¶ 49).

 © 2025 Thomson Reuters. No claim to original U.S. Government Works.

Green Plains also alleged that Zytax has not performed its duties under the agreement because Zytax installed the software on only one laptop computer, provided none of the passwords that would allow Green Plains to access the software, and provided no instructions on using the software. Green Plains alleged that it never used the software. (Id., ¶ 52).

Based on these allegations, Green Plains asserted the following six affirmative defenses:

- Zytax's claims are barred because it did not substantially perform its contractual obligations;
- the agreement is unenforceable for lack of consideration;
- the agreement is subject to rescission because of the negligent or fraudulent representations of facts "relating to the number and identity of jurisdictions in which [Green Plains] allegedly had to file ethanol fuel excise tax reports, and relating to the quality, competency, accuracy, and utility of its products and services";
- the agreement "is subject to reformation or rescission due to mutual mistake of fact regarding the number and identity of jurisdictions in which [Green Plains] was obligated to file ethanol fuel excise tax reports";
- Zytax's lawsuit is barred by unclean hands; and
- the agreement is unenforceable because Zytax fraudulently induced Green Plains to sign.

4 (Id., ¶¶ 19–24).

Green Plains also asserted counterclaims for fraudulent misrepresentation, negligent misrepresentation, and breach of contract. Green Plains sought rescission of the agreement because of Zytax's alleged material breach and fraudulent or negligent representation of material facts; reformation of the agreement to eliminate Green Plains's obligation to pay licensing and maintenance fees for jurisdictions that do not require reporting; damages, including consequential damages, for Zytax's "fraudulent or negligent misrepresentations of fact"; damages, including consequential damages, for Zytax's breach of contract; attorneys' fees and costs; and any "other relief by law or equity deemed just and proper by this court." (Id., ¶ 84).

To support its counterclaim for fraudulent misrepresentation, Green Plains alleged that Zytax held "itself out as having special knowledge and expertise concerning ethanol fuel excise tax reports" and fraudulently misrepresented "the number of jurisdictions in which [Green Plains] was required to file ethanol fuel excise tax reports," specifically that Green Plains "was obligated to file ethanol fuel excise tax reports in [23] jurisdictions, when [Green Plains] was in fact only obligated to filed ethanol fuel tax reports in [11] of those jurisdictions." (Id., ¶ 61). Green Plains also alleged that Zytax misrepresented that tax reports would have to be filed electronically. Green Plains alleged that Zytax made all these representations to induce Green Plains to enter into the agreement and intended that Green Plains would rely on these representations. Green Plains also alleged that Zytax knew or should have known that the statements were false when made and knew or should have known that Green Plains would rely on the statements. Green Plans alleged that it did reasonably rely on Zytax's representations in signing the agreement. (Id., ¶ ¶ 65–68). Green Plains alleged that as a result of Zytax's misrepresentations, it "was induced to purportedly agree to pay over $100,000 for useless software and computing services." (Id., ¶ 70).

 © 2025 Thomson Reuters. No claim to original U.S. Government Works.

To support the counterclaim for negligent misrepresentation, Green Plains alleged that Zytax "knew or should have known, that [Green Plains] was not obligated to file ethanol fuel excise tax reports in [11] of the [23] jurisdictions" and that a "reasonably prudent consultant or contractor holding itself out as an expert in the area of fuel excise tax reporting would either have known or determined the extent of [Green Plains's] actual reporting requirements." (Id., ¶ 73). Green Plains alleged that Zytax made these statements "negligently with a reckless disregard of the truth," (Id., ¶ 72), inducing Green Plains "to enter into the Agreement." (Id., ¶ 77).

In support of the third counterclaim, breach of contract, Green Plains alleged that if an enforceable contract existed, Zytax breached it by "failing to accurately determine the jurisdictions in which [Green Plains] was obligated to file ethanol fuel excise tax reports," filing erroneous tax reports with the State of Tennessee, failing to timely deliver and install the Zytax Express Software, and failing to provide the promised expertise. (Id, ¶¶ 79–84).

5 Zytax moved to dismiss the counterclaims as well as the affirmative defenses based on fraud and mistake. (Docket Entry No. 26). Zytax argued that the fraud and mistake allegations were not pleaded with the particularity required by Rule 9 of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure and did not "address the deficiencies identified" previously by this court. (Id. at 1). Green Plains has responded, (Docket Entry No. 29), and Zytax has replied, (Docket Entry No. 30). The arguments are discussed below.

II. The Applicable Legal Standards

A. Rule 8 and Rule 12(b)(6)

Rule 12(b)(6) allows dismissal if a plaintiff fails "to state a claim upon which relief can be granted." FED. R. CIV. P. 12(b) (6). In Bell Atlantic Corp. v. Twombly, 550 U.S. 544, 555, 127 S.Ct. 1955, 167 L.Ed.2d 929 (2007), the Supreme Court confirmed that Rule 12(b)(6) must be read in conjunction with Rule 8(a), which requires "a short and plain statement of the claim showing that the pleader is entitled to relief." FED. R. CIV. P. 8(a)(2). Twombly abrogated the Supreme Court's prior statement in Conley v. Gibson, 355 U.S. 41, 45–46, 78 S.Ct. 99, 2 L.Ed.2d 80 (1957), that "a complaint should not be dismissed for failure to state a claim unless it appears beyond doubt that the plaintiff can prove no set of facts in support of his claim which would entitle him to relief." See Twombly, 550 U.S. at 562–63 ("Conley's 'no set of facts' language ... is best forgotten as an incomplete, negative gloss on an accepted pleading standard...."). To withstand a Rule 12(b)(6) motion, a complaint must contain "enough facts to state a claim to relief that is plausible on its face." Twombly, 550 U.S. at 570; see also Elsensohn v. St. Tammany Parish Sheriff's Office, 530 F.3d 368, 372 (5th Cir.2008) (quoting Twombly, 550 U.S. 544, 127 S.Ct. at 1974, 167 L.Ed.2d 929).

In Ashcroft v. Iqbal, —— U.S. ——, 129 S.Ct. 1937, 173 L.Ed.2d 868 (2009), the Supreme Court elaborated on the pleading standards discussed in Twombly. The Court explained that "the pleading standard Rule 8 announces does not require 'detailed factual allegations,' but it demands more than an unadorned, the-defendant-unlawfully-harmed-me accusation." Iqbal, 129 S.Ct. at 1949 (citing Twombly, 550 U.S. at 555). With respect to the "plausibility" standard described in Twombly, Iqbal explained that "[a] claim has facial plausibility when the plaintiff pleads factual content that allows the court to draw the reasonable inference that the defendant is liable for the misconduct alleged." Id. (citing Twombly, 550 U.S. at 556). The Iqbal Court noted that "[t]he plausibility standard is not akin to a 'probability requirement,' but it asks for more than a sheer possibility that a defendant has acted unlawfully." Id. (citing Twombly, 550 U.S. at 556). "Where a complaint pleads facts that are 'merely consistent with' a defendant's liability, it 'stops short of the line between possibility and plausibility of 'entitlement to relief.' " Id. (quoting Twombly, 550 U.S. at 557). "To survive a Rule 12(b)(6) motion to dismiss, a complaint 'does not need detailed factual allegations,' but must provide the plaintiff's grounds for entitlement to relief—including factual allegations that when assumed to be true 'raise a right to relief above the speculative level.' " Cuvillier v. Taylor, 503 F.3d 397, 401 (5th Cir.2007) (footnote omitted) (quoting Twombly, 550 U.S. 544, 127 S.Ct. at 1964–65, 167 L.Ed.2d 929); see also S. Scrap Material Co. v. ABC Ins. Co. (In re S. Scrap Material Co.), 541 F.3d 584, 587 (5th Cir.2008) (quoting Twombly, 550 U.S. 544, 127 S.Ct. at 1965, 167 L.Ed.2d 929), cert. denied, 129 S.Ct. 1669 (2009). "Conversely, 'when the allegations in a complaint, however true, could not raise a claim of entitlement to relief, 'this basic deficiency should ... be exposed at the point of minimum expenditure of time and money by the parties and the court.' " Cuvillier, 503 F.3d at 401 (quoting Twombly, 550 U.S. 544, 127 S.Ct. at 1966, 167 L.Ed.2d 929).

6 When a plaintiff's complaint fails to state a claim, the court should generally give the plaintiff at least one chance to amend the complaint under Rule 15(a) before dismissing the action with prejudice. See Great Plains Trust Co. v. Morgan Stanley Dean Witter & Co., 313 F.3d 305, 329 (5th Cir.2002) ("[D]istrict courts often afford plaintiffs at least one opportunity to cure pleading deficiencies before dismissing a case, unless it is clear that the defects are incurable or the plaintiffs advise the court that they are unwilling or unable to amend in a manner that will avoid dismissal."); see also United States ex rel. Adrian v. Regents of the Univ. of Cal., 363 F.3d 398, 403 (5th Cir.2004) ("Leave to amend should be freely given, and outright refusal to grant leave to amend without a justification ... is considered an abuse of discretion." (internal citation omitted)). However, a plaintiff should be denied leave to amend a complaint if the court determines that "the proposed change clearly is frivolous or advances a claim or defense that is legally insufficient on its face...." 6 CHARLES A. WRIGHT, ARTHUR R. MILLER & MARY KAY KANE, FEDERAL PRACTICE AND PROCEDURE § 1487 (2d ed.1990); see also Ayers v. Johnson, 247 F. App'x 534, 535 (5th Cir.2007) (unpublished) (per curiam) (" '[A] district court acts within its discretion when dismissing a motion to amend that is frivolous or futile.' " (quoting Martin's Herend Imports, Inc. v. Diamond & Gem Trading United States of Am. Co., 195 F.3d 765, 771 (5th Cir.1999))).

 © 2025 Thomson Reuters. No claim to original U.S. Government Works.

B. Rule 9 and Rule 12(b)(6)

Rule 9(b) states:

> In all averments of fraud or mistake, the circumstances constituting fraud or mistake shall be stated with particularity. Malice, intent, knowledge, and other condition of mind of a person may be averred generally.

FED. R. CIV. P. 9(b). "At a minimum, Rule 9(b) requires that a plaintiff set forth the 'who, what, when, where, and how' of the alleged fraud." United States ex rel. Thompson v. Columbia/HCA Healthcare Corp., 125 F.3d 899, 903 (5th Cir.1997) (quoting Williams v. WMX Techs., Inc., 112 F.3d 175, 179 (5th Cir.1997)). The pleader must "specify the statements contended to be fraudulent, identify the speaker, state when and where the statements were made, and explain why the statements were fraudulent ." Williams, 112 F.3d at 177. In Iqbal, the Court acknowledged that while Rule 9 requires pleading with particularity "when pleading 'fraud or mistake,' " it allows " '[m]alice, intent, knowledge, and other conditions of a person's mind [to] be alleged generally.' " Iqbal, —— U.S. ——, 129 S.Ct. at 1954, 173 L.Ed.2d 868 (alterations in original) (quoting FED. R. CIV. P. 9(b)); see also, Tel–Phonic Servs., Inc. v. TBS Int'l, Inc., 975 F.2d 1134, 1139 (5th Cir.1992) ("Allegations about conditions of the mind, such as defendant's knowledge of the truth and intent to deceive, however, may be pleaded generally.").

7 "To plead scienter adequately, a plaintiff must set forth specific facts that support an inference of fraud." Tuchman v. DSC Communications Corp., 14 F.3d 1061, 1068 (5th Cir.1994). In Iqbal, 129 S.Ct. at 1954, the Court explained that term "generally," as used in Rule 9, "is a relative term." The Court stated that "[i]n the context of Rule 9, ['generally'] is to be compared to the particularity requirement applicable to fraud or mistake," that "Rule 9 merely excuses a party from pleading discriminatory intent under an elevated pleading standard," and that Rule 9 "does not give [a party] license to evade the less rigid—though still operative—strictures of Rule 8." Iqbal, 129 S.Ct. at 1954 (citing 5A CHARLES A. WRIGHT & ARTHUR R. MILLER, FEDERAL PRACTICE AND PROCEDURE § 1301, at 291 (3d ed.2004)). "Rule 8 does not empower respondent to plead the bare elements of his cause of action, affix the label 'general allegation,' and expect his complaint to survive a motion to dismiss ." Id.

III. Analysis

A. The Affirmative Defense of Mutual Mistake

Zytax argues that Green Plains has not pleaded mistake with the particularity required by Rule 9. Under Texas law, the affirmative defense of mutual mistake allows parties to avoid an agreement formed under a misconception or mistake of a material fact. Nichols v. YJ USA Corp., Civ. Act. No. 3:06–CV–02366–L, 2009 WL 722997, at *17 (N.D.Tex. Mar.18, 2009) (citing Williams v. Glash, 789 S.W.2d 261, 264 (Tex.1990)). The defense applies only when the parties "were acting under the same misunderstanding of the same material fact." Grayson v. Grayson Armature Large Motor Div., Inc., No. 14–09–00748–CV, 2010 WL 2361432, at *5 (Tex.App.-Houston [14th Dist.] June 15, 2010, pet. denied) (citing Walden v. Affiliated Computer Servs., Inc., 97 S.W.3d 303, 324 (Tex.App.-Houston [14th Dist.] 2003, pet. denied)). The elements of mutual mistake are (1) a mistake of fact, (2) held mutually by the parties, (3) that materially affects the exchange. City of the Colony v. N. Tex. Mun. Water Dist., 272 S.W.3d 699, 735 (Tex.App.-Ft. Worth 2008) (citing Barker v. Roelke, 105 S.W.3d 75, 84 (Tex.App.-Eastland 2003, pet. denied)). The doctrine of mutual mistake is not available to avoid an unhappy bargain. Williams, 789 S.W.2d at 265.

"Few federal courts have addressed the requirements for pleading mistake with particularity." PYR Energy Corp. v. Samson Resources Co., No. 1:05–CV–530, 2007 WL 858804, at *2 (E.D.Tex. Mar.19, 2007). "A well-pleaded claim grounded on mistake should include averments of what was intended, what was done, and how the mistake came to be made." 5A CHARLES ALAN WRIGHT & ARTHUR R. MILLER, FEDERAL PRACTICE AND PROCEDURE § 1299 (3d. ed.); *see also PYR Energy, 2007 WL 858804, at *2. "Inasmuch as the second sentence of Rule 9(b) provides that intent and other conditions of mind may be averred generally, and since the particularity requirement is liberally construed when information as to the causative factors of the error is peculiarly within the knowledge of the opposing party, the pleading requirement set out in Rule 9(b) is not overly difficult to meet." WRIGHT & MILLER, supra, § 1299.

8 Green Plains has alleged with sufficient particularity the affirmative defense of mistake. Green Plains alleged that it agreed to purchase software and services from Zytax for 23 jurisdictions because both parties mistakenly believed that Green Plains had reporting obligations in all those jurisdictions. Green Plains allegedly discovered later that it did not have reporting requirements in 11 of those jurisdictions. Green Plains alleged that it relied on Zytax's expertise and opinion that Green Plains had reporting obligations in 23 jurisdictions. To the extent that Zytax argues that Green Plains has not identified the "who, what, when, where, and how" of the mistake, this level of particularity is not required under the applicable precedents. WRIGHT & MILLER, § 1299. The motion to dismiss the affirmative defense of mistake is denied.

B. The Affirmative Defense and Counterclaim of Fraud

Zytax moves to dismiss Green Plains's affirmative defense and counterclaim based on fraud for failing to plead with the particularity required by Rule 9(b). Green Plains alleged that Zytax misrepresented that Green Plains faced reporting regulations in 23 jurisdictions. Green Plains alleged that Zytax represented that most jurisdictions required tax reports to be filed electronically through Zytax or a similar electronic filer. In its amended complaint, Green Plains identified Zytax employees who orally made such representations. Green Plains also identified documents in which the representations were allegedly made. Green Plains alleged that it learned that these representations were false after it contacted the individual jurisdictions and discovered that 11 out of the 23 did not have any reporting requirements. Green Plains alleged that it also discovered that "many of the jurisdictions did not require electronic ... reporting, but in fact, allowed manual or simplified reporting using state provided Excel spreadsheet templates." (Docket Entry No. 25, ¶ 49).

Green Plains has identified specific allegedly false statements, the individuals who made those statements, documents allegedly containing the statements, and a factual basis showing that the statements were false. Green Plains has also alleged that the representations are of specific facts within the very areas Zytax identified as the areas of its expertise, supporting that Zytax representatives either knew that the specific statements were false or that the statements about the extent of Zytax's expertise were false. The motion to dismiss the affirmative defense and counterclaim based on fraud is denied.

C. The Negligent Misrepresentation and Breach of Contract Counterclaims

The amended complaint asserts negligent misrepresentation as an alternative to its fraud counterclaim. Texas law recognizes the tort of negligent misrepresentation as defined by the RESTATEMENT (SECOND) OF TORTS § 552. McCamish, Martin, Brown & Loeffler v. F.E. Appling Interests, 991 S.W.2d 787, 791 (Tex.1999). The elements of a negligent misrepresentation claim are: (1) the representation was made by a defendant in the course of his business, or in a transaction in which it has a pecuniary interest; (2) the defendant supplied false information for the guidance of others in their business; (3) the defendant did not exercise reasonable care or competence in obtaining or communicating the information; and (4) the plaintiff suffers pecuniary loss by justifiably relying on the representation. Roof Sys., Inc. v. Johns Manville Corp., 130 S.W.3d 430, 438 (Tex.App.-Houston [14th Dist.] 2004, no pet.) (citing Fed. Land Bank Ass'n v. Sloane, 825 S.W.2d 439, 442 (Tex.1991)).

9 Green Plains alleged that Zytax negligently represented that Green Plains was obligated to file ethanol-fuel-excise-tax reports in 23 jurisdictions. Green Plains alleges that "a reasonably prudent consultant or contractor holding itself out as an expert in the area of fuel excise tax reporting either would have known or determined the extent of Green Plains's reporting requirements." (Docket Entry No. 25, ¶ 73). Green Plains alleged that as a result of these representations, it suffered damages, including employee time and labor spent correcting Zytax's mistakes and verifying compliance requirements, (id., ¶¶ 45–47); "delays," (id., ¶ 51); and "recovery of consulting fees [Green Plains] paid to [Zytax]." (Docket Entry No. 29, at 5). These allegations are not conclusory and the factual allegations, taken as true, state a plausible claim for relief.

The breach of contract claim is also sufficiently pleaded. To prevail on a breach of contract claim, a party must establish the following elements: (1) a valid contract existed between the plaintiff and the defendant; (2) the plaintiff tendered performance or was excused from doing so; (3) the defendant breached the terms of the contract; and (4) the plaintiff sustained damages as a result of the defendant's breach. See Valero Mktg. & Supply Co. v. Kalama Int'l, 51 S.W.3d 345, 351 (Tex.App.-Houston [1st Dist.] 2001, no pet.). A breach occurs when a party fails or refuses to do something promised. Townewest Homeowners Ass'n, Inc. v. Warner Commc'n Inc., 826 S.W.2d 638, 640 (Tex.App.-Houston [14th Dist.] 1992, no writ). When one party to a contract commits a material breach of that contract, the other party is excused from further performance under the contract. See Hernandez v. Gulf Group Lloyds, 875 S.W.2d 691, 692 (Tex.1994); West v. Triple B Servs., LLP, 264 S.W.3d 440, 446 (Tex.App.-Houston [14th Dist.] 2008, no pet.). Green Plains has presented nonconclusory allegations that satisfy these elements. Green Plains alleged that Zytax breached the agreement by failing to determine the jurisdictions in which Green Plains was obligated to file ethanol-fuel-excise-tax reports, filing erroneous reports with the State of Tennessee, failing to timely deliver and install the Zytax Express software, and failing to provide promised expertise. Green Plains acknowledges that it has refused to pay Zytax, but alleged that it failed to do so because of Zytax's breach. See Hernandez, 875 S.W.2d at 692.

Zytax argues that the pleadings are deficient because they do not allege damages. Green Plains alleged that Zytax's breach of its contract caused the same damages as Zytax's negligent misrepresentation: consequential damages, including loss of employee time and labor spent correcting Zytax's mistakes and verifying compliance requirements, (id., ¶¶ 45–47); "delays," (id., ¶ 51); and "recovery of consulting fees [Green Plains] paid to [Zytax]," (Docket Entry No. 29, at 5). These allegations are not conclusory. The factual allegations, taken as true, state a plausible claim for relief.

IV. Conclusion

10 Zytax's motion to dismiss is denied.

All Citations

Not Reported in F.Supp.2d, 2010 WL 4702303

Footnotes

1 It is unclear from the amended answer the precise number of jurisdictions in which Green Plains alleges that it was not required to file excise fuel tax reports. In one section of the amended answer, Green Plains identifies the number as 11, (Docket Entry No. 25, ¶ 54), but Green Plains also alleged that it was required to file in "less than half of the twenty-three jurisdictions." (Id ., ¶ 48). Also, it is unclear from the complaint that Green Plains was not required to file in 11 jurisdictions. Green Plains alleges that "on or before November 17, 2008," the date of the initial agreement, "representatives of Zytax misrepresented that [Green Plains] was obligated to file ethanol fuel excise tax reports in each of the following jurisdictions: Illinois, Indiana, New Jersey, Oregon, and Cook County, Illinois. And it alleged that "on or before December 29, 2008," the date of the amended agreement, "representatives of Zytax repeatedly misrepresented that Zytax was obligated to file ethanol fuel excise tax reports in each of the following jurisdictions: California, Florida, Pennsylvania, and Missouri. Finally, Greens Plains alleged that it unnecessarily filed "federal Form 720 or xSTARS forms." (Id., ¶ 53). This is eight state jurisdictions, one county jurisdiction, and the federal jurisdiction, for a total of ten. Perhaps "Cook County, Illinois" describes two jurisdictions: Cook County and the State of Illinois.

End of Document © 2025 Thomson Reuters. No claim to original U.S. Government Works.

CASE NO. 44

2022 WL 214101
Only the Westlaw citation
is currently available.
United States District Court, S.D.
Texas, Corpus Christi Division.

DIAGNOSTIC AFFILIATES OF NORTHEAST HOU, LLC, Plaintiff,
v.
UNITED HEALTHCARE SERVICES, INC., et al., Defendants.

Civil Action
No.
2
:
21
-
CV
-
00131

Signed 01/18/2022
Entered 01/19/2022
Filed on 01/18/2022

Attorneys and Law Firms

Ebadullah Khan, Diagnostics Affiliates of Northeast Hou, LLC, Kingwood, TX, for Plaintiff.

Andrew G. Jubinsky, Amber Dawn Reece, Donald C. Colleluori, Figari Davenport LLP, Dallas, TX, for Defendants.

ORDER ON MOTIONS TO DISMISS FILED BY PLANS AND PLAN ADMINISTRATORS (D.E. 67, 105, 112, 119, 130, 141, 145)

NELVA GONZALES RAMOS, UNITED STATES DISTRICT JUDGE

1 Plaintiff Diagnostic Affiliates of Northeast Hou, LLC d/b/a 24 Hour Covid RT-PCR Laboratory (Diagnostic Affiliates) filed this action to recover payments for COVID-19 testing and related services against three categories of Defendants: (1) UnitedHealth Group, Inc. (UHG),[1] the parent company of subsidiaries that administer health insurance plans; (2) health insurance plan administrators, collectively referred to as United;[2] and (3) employer healthcare plans.[3] Before the Court are seven motions to dismiss directed at Diagnostic Affiliates' amended complaint (D.E. 2).

2 The amended complaint alleges nine counts as follows:

Count I: Violation of the FFCRA[4] and the CARES Act[5] (the Act(s)) – against all Defendants;

Count II: Violation of ERISA[6] for failure to pay provider charges with or without an assignment of benefits – against all Defendants;

Count III: Violation of ERISA for failure to provide a full and fair review of the claims – against all Defendants;

 © 2025 Thomson Reuters. No claim to original U.S. Government Works.

Count IV: Violation of RICO[7] – against United;

Count V: Request for a declaratory judgment[8] – against United;

Count VI: Claim for unjust enrichment and quantum meruit – against United:

Count VII: Claim for promissory estoppel – against United;

Count IX:[9] Violation of the Texas Prompt Payment of Claims Act[10] – against United; and Count X: Claim for injunctive relief – against United.

D.E. 2, pp. 72-86.

The first motion to dismiss (D.E. 67), filed by United, challenges each of the nine counts. Plaintiff responded (D.E. 99) and United replied (D.E. 121). Envision Physician Services, LLC Health and Welfare Benefit and Cafeteria Plan (Envision) and Swissport North American Holding, Inc. Health & Welfare Plan's (Swissport's) motions to dismiss (D.E. 105 and 145) adopt United's arguments and reinforce the challenges. Plaintiff responded to Envision's motion (D.E. 125) and Envision replied (D.E. 128). Delta Account Based Health Plan, H&E Equipment Services Inc. Benefit Plan, Hudson Group, Inc. Employee Benefits Plan, and Geospace Technologies Welfare Benefit Plan filed their motions, simply adopting United's motion. D.E. 112, 119, 130, 141. The briefing on United's motion will be applied to those motions accordingly. See D.E. 133, 140, 144. For the reasons set out below, the motions are GRANTED IN PART and DENIED IN PART and the following counts are DISMISSED: III, V, VI, and IX. All other counts are RETAINED.

STANDARD OF REVIEW

The test of pleadings under Rule 12(b)(6) is devised to balance a party's right to redress against the interests of all parties and the court in minimizing expenditure of time, money, and resources devoted to meritless claims. Bell Atl. Corp. v. Twombly, 550 U.S. 544, 558 (2007). Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 8(a)(2) requires only "a short and plain statement of the claim showing that the pleader is entitled to relief." Furthermore, "Pleadings must be construed so as to do justice." Fed. R. Civ. P. 8(e). The requirement that the pleader show that he is entitled to relief requires "more than labels and conclusions[;] a formulaic recitation of the elements of a cause of action will not do." Twombly, 550 U.S. at 555 (citing Papasan v. Allain, 478 U.S. 265, 286 (1986)).

3 Factual allegations are required, sufficient to raise the entitlement to relief above the level of mere speculation. Twombly, 550 U.S. at 555. Those factual allegations must then be taken as true, even if doubtful. Id. In other words, the pleader must make allegations that take the claim from conclusory to factual and beyond possible to plausible. Id. at 557. The Court stated, "[W]e do not require heightened fact pleading of specifics, but only enough facts to state a claim to relief that is plausible on its face." Id. at 570.

The Supreme Court, elaborating on Twombly, stated, "The plausibility standard is not akin to a 'probability requirement,' but it asks for more than a sheer possibility that a defendant has acted unlawfully." Ashcroft v. Iqbal, 556 U.S. 662, 678 (2009). "Threadbare recitals of the elements of a cause of action, supported by mere conclusory statements, do not suffice." Id. In dismissing the claim in Iqbal, the Court stated, "It is the conclusory nature of respondent's allegations, rather than their extravagantly fanciful nature, that disentitles them to the presumption of truth." Id. at 681.

FACTUAL CONTEXT

To address the public health emergency presented by the COVID-19 pandemic, Congress passed the FFCRA and the CARES Act. In relevant part, these statutes require group health insurance plans to cover COVID-19 diagnostic testing by qualified providers at no cost to their patients. In the absence of a negotiated rate, insurance carriers are required to pay for the testing administered to their insureds at the cash rate the provider publishes on its website (and the providers are required to post a public cash price).

The relevant terms of the FFCRA are:

> SEC. 6001. COVERAGE OF TESTING FOR COVID–19.
>
> (a) IN GENERAL.—A group health plan and a health insurance issuer offering group or individual health insurance coverage ... shall provide coverage, and shall not impose any cost sharing (including deductibles, copayments, and coinsurance) requirements or prior authorization or other medical management requirements, for the following items and services furnished during any portion of the emergency period ... beginning on or after the date of the enactment of this Act:
>
> (1) In vitro diagnostic products... for the detection of SARS–CoV–2 or the diagnosis of the virus that causes COVID–19 that are approved, cleared, or authorized ... and the administration of such in vitro diagnostic products.

(emphasis added). The CARES Act then states:

> SEC. 3202. PRICING OF DIAGNOSTIC TESTING.
>
> (a) REIMBURSEMENT RATES.—A group health plan or a health insurance issuer providing coverage of items and services described in section 6001(a) of division F of the Families First Coronavirus Response Act (Public Law 116–127) with respect to an enrollee shall reimburse the provider of the diagnostic testing as follows:
>
> (1) If the health plan or issuer has a negotiated rate with such provider in effect before the public health emergency declared under section 319 of the Public Health Service Act (42 U.S.C. 247d), such negotiated rate shall apply throughout the period of such declaration.
>
> (2) If the health plan or issuer does not have a negotiated rate with such provider, such plan or issuer shall reimburse the provider in an amount that equals the cash price for such > service as listed by the provider on a public internet website, or such plan or issuer may negotiate a rate with such provider for less than such cash price.

>
> (b) REQUIREMENT TO PUBLICIZE CASH PRICE FOR DIAGNOSTIC TESTING FOR COVID–19.—
>
> 4 (1) IN GENERAL.—During the emergency period declared under section 319 of the Public Health Service Act (42 U.S.C. 247d), each provider of a diagnostic test for COVID–19 shall make public the cash price for such test on a public internet website of such provider.

(emphasis added).

Diagnostic Affiliates alleges that it was qualified and provided COVID-19 testing to Defendants' insureds at its public cash price of $900 per test, as permitted by law, for which it has presented claims to Defendant United as insurer or as insurance administrator for the Defendant employer health care plans. In response, Defendants have engaged in a number of improper tactics and have delayed, denied, or reduced payment of the claims in a manner that violates the dictates of the FFCRA and CARES Act.

DISCUSSION

COUNT I:

VIOLATION OF THE FFCRA AND THE CARES ACT

Rubric. Defendants challenge Count I on the basis that there is no private right of action to enforce the FFCRA or CARES Act. "[T]he plaintiff has the relatively heavy burden to show Congress intended private enforcement, and must overcome the presumption that Congress did not intend to create a private cause of action." Acara v. Banks, 470 F.3d 569, 571 (5th Cir. 2006) (per curiam).

By proceeding directly to the question of an implied right of action, Diagnostic Affiliates concedes that the Acts do not create an express private right of action to enforce their provisions. D.E. 99, p. 10. So the question is whether the terms of the legislation support the conclusion that there is an implied private right of action. This is a question of law. San Juan Cable LLC v. P. R. Tel. Co., Inc., 612 F.3d 25, 29 (1st Cir. 2010); see also Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner & Smith, Inc. v. Curran, 456 U.S. 353, 378-88 (1982) (describing the analysis of whether a statute includes an implied private right of action as a matter of the legal context in which the statute was passed); Chevron, U.S.A., Inc. v. Nat. Res. Def. Council, Inc., 467 U.S. 837, 843 n.9 (1984) (statutory construction and legislative intent are matters of law).

The Supreme Court identified four factors to consider in answering this question:

> In determining whether a private remedy is implicit in a statute not expressly providing one, several factors are relevant. First, is the plaintiff 'one of the class for whose especial benefit the statute was enacted,'—that is, does the statute create a federal right in favor of the plaintiff? Second, is there any indication of legislative intent, explicit or implicit, either to create such a remedy > or to deny one? Third, is it consistent with the underlying purposes of the legislative scheme to imply such a remedy for the plaintiff? And finally, is the cause of action one traditionally relegated to state law, in an area basically the concern of the States, so that it would be inappropriate to infer a cause of action based solely on federal law?

Cort v. Ash, 422 U.S. 66, 78 (1975) (citations omitted). The Court later modified the rubric as follows:

> It is true that in Cort v. Ash, the Court set forth four factors that it considered "relevant" in determining whether a private remedy is implicit in a statute not expressly providing one. But the Court did not decide that each of these factors is entitled to equal weight. The central inquiry remains whether Congress intended to create, either expressly or by implication, a private cause of action. Indeed, the first three factors discussed in Cort —the language and focus of the statute, its legislative history, and its purpose—are ones traditionally relied upon in determining legislative intent.

5 Touche Ross & Co. v. Redington, 442 U.S. 560, 575–76 (1979) (citations omitted). This Court considers the four factors and weighs them consistent with Touche Ross.

Precedent. As a preliminary matter, the Court considers Defendants' assertion that other courts have already done this work for us, finding that there is no implied private right of action in the FFCRA or CARES Act. After examining each of the cases, discussed below, the Court concludes that they do not address the claim advanced here and are not based on reasoning that applies to this particular case.

In American Video Duplicating, Inc. v. City National Bank, 220CV04036JFWJPR, 2020 WL 6882735, at *2 (C.D. Cal. Nov. 20, 2020), the court found no private right of action for agent fees for producing Payment Protection Program (PPP) loans in the CARES Act because the Act did not require payment of any such fees. It only provided for a cap on them, if they were contracted. See also Daniel T.A. Cotts PLLC v. Am. Bank, N.A., 2:20-CV-185, 2021 WL 2196636, at *4 (S.D. Tex. Feb. 9, 2021) (same); Juan Antonio Sanchez, PC v. Bank of S. Tex., 494 F. Supp. 3d 421, 434 (S.D. Tex. 2020) (same). Here, however, payment is required regardless of a contract. And the amount is determinable using the provisions of the CARES Act.

The remaining cases offered by Defendants are even further removed from a mandatory payment scheme. In Profiles, Inc. v. Bank of America Corp., 453 F. Supp. 3d 742, 752 (D. Md. 2020), the court found no private right of action to obtain a PPP loan from the lender of the borrower's choice. The CARES Act did not address the matter of choice and it contains no mandatory language to support such a private right of action. Likewise, in Shehan v. United States Department of Justice, 1:20-CV-00500, 2020 WL 7711635, at *11 (S.D. Ohio Dec. 29, 2020), the court declined to find an implied right of action where the plaintiff complained of having been rejected for a PPP loan for fraudulent reasons. "Nothing in the statute indicates that a would-be borrower, even an eligible one, has a right to receive a PPP loan, let alone to receive one from a particular lender." Id. In contrast, COVID-19 testing providers are given the right to payment and the method for determining the amount.

In *Puckett v. United States Department of Treasury Internal Revenue Service, 1:21 CV 425, 2021 WL 2550995, at *2 (N.D. Ohio June 22, 2021), the court rejected a private right of action against the Internal Revenue Service for an economic impact payment (stimulus check). The pro se prisoner filing the case had not articulated a cause of action, had not shown that he could overcome a sovereign immunity defense, had not addressed the conditions precedent to entitlement to the payment, and filed his case after the deadline expired for issuance of checks—leaving a credit on taxes as his only remedy. Because the right to a check was qualified and time-sensitive, no private right of action was supported. And sovereign immunity would have barred the claim.

In Mescall v. United States Department of Justice, 2:20-CV-13364, 2021 WL 199277, at *2 (E.D. Mich. Jan. 19, 2021), a pro se federal prisoner complained that he was improperly disciplined in retaliation for having filed a complaint under the CARES Act because the prison was not doing enough to prevent the spread of COVID-19. The court found no private right of action under the CARES Act as there was no language indicating congressional intent to create such a claim. This case has no application here.

6 In Autumn Court Operating Co. LLC v. Healthcare Ventures of Ohio, 2:20-CV-4901, 2021 WL 325887, at *5 (S.D. Ohio Feb. 1, 2021), CARES Act funds had been paid into an account. The dispute was over ownership of the funds because of private agreements between the parties regarding ownership and operation of nursing homes that triggered the CARES Act payment and ownership of the relevant account. No private right of action under the CARES Act was articulated or found, but the case proceeded on the basis of numerous other causes of action arising out of the private agreements. *See also Healthcare Ventures of Ohio, LLC v. HVO Operations Windup LLC, 20-CV-04991, 2020 WL 6688994, at *7 (S.D. Ohio Nov. 13, 2020) (on motion for remand, finding that the dispute over the ownership of the account into which CARES Act funds had been deposited did not pose a federal question to support jurisdiction). In both of these cases, any money due under the CARES Act had been paid and thus the Act had only tangential relevance to the case. Nothing in that analysis translates here.

In *Matava v. CTPPS, LLC, 3:20-CV-01709 (KAD), 2020 WL 6784263, at *2 (D. Conn. Nov. 18, 2020), the pro se plaintiff sought to enjoin a state court from taking action to evict him from his residence. He did not join his landlord as a defendant, but sought only to interfere with the state court's jurisdiction by invoking the CARES Act. The court held that the plaintiff had failed to articulate a cause of action, a basis for federal jurisdiction, or a reason that any provision of the CARES Act, if relevant, could not be enforced by a state court. More specifically, there was no express cause of action identified under the CARES Act and no attempt to show an implied private right of action. The court further noted that the requested relief would violate the Anti-Injunction Act. The court dismissed the complaint, which sought only injunctive relief. Like the others, the Matava case has no application here.

Defendants' cases fail to address whether the FFCRA or CARES Act contains an implied right of action in favor of a COVID-19 testing provider seeking statutorily-mandated reimbursements. Neither do the cases contain any analogous fact patterns that would make their conclusions persuasive. Thus, the Court considers the matter on a clean slate, using the Supreme Court's rubric.

1. Is Plaintiff in a Class the Statutes Intended to Benefit?

Diagnostic Affiliates argues that the mandatory nature of the obligation to pay for testing indicates that it was an intended beneficiary of the statutes. It is clear that the legislative objective was to ensure that COVID-19 testing was widely available to the entire population. This required that providers be willing to supply and administer the tests, which in turn required a reliable method of payment for that service. Payment of providers was sufficiently essential for the legislature to create a mandatory scheme, using the term "shall," for determining the amount to be paid and protecting patients from any burden associated with the cost or other administrative requirements.

On this point, Diagnostic Affiliates' claim is fully distinguishable from the FFCRA and CARES Act cases that Defendants cited. Defendants also rely on one case that does not address the FFCRA or CARES Act: Universities Research Ass'n, Inc. v. Coutu, 450 U.S. 754, 772 (1981). In Coutu, workers sought back pay for the minimum wage required for the type of work they performed. But the federal statute that included the minimum wage requirement did not apply to the contract under which they worked. Because the federal statute was not properly invoked, it could not provide a private right of action. In contrast, the FFCRA and CARES Act directly apply to Diagnostic Affiliates' services.

While the parties have not identified any other case that addresses—positively or negatively—a private right of action for the cost of COVID-19 testing, the cases finding no private right of action under the FFCRA and CARES Act address very different provisions and are not persuasive. The mandatory reimbursement language in favor of testing providers supports finding an implied private right of action for the claims.[11] See Maine Cmty. Health Options v. United States, 140 S. Ct. 1308, 1320 (2020). The plain language of the statutes indicates that Diagnostic Affiliates is among the class of providers for whose benefit the payment provisions were included.

7 In the reply, Defendants assert that the FFCRA and the CARES Act were intended to benefit patients only. And an out-of-network provider may routinely assert its claim through an insured patient's rights under the applicable group health plan. D.E. 121, p. 6. But this construction of the rights and remedies in the statutes fails to account for the fact that patients were to be spared any cost or administrative burden in obtaining COVID-19 testing. No plan coverage decision is necessary because the FFCRA requires coverage. No rate decision is necessary because the CARES Act prescribes the method for determining the rate. Therefore, there is no reason to involve the patient in the enforcement of the claim.

In short, Defendants have not supplied any authority for the argument that a statute may intend to benefit only one class of persons. The FFCRA and CARES Act do intend to benefit patients. But to effectuate that, it also intends to benefit testing providers. These are not mutually exclusive concepts.

2. Is There Evidence of Legislative Intent to Create or Deny a Private Right of Action?

Envision argues that Diagnostic Affiliates pretermitted the issue of an intent to create a private right of action by admitting that "there appears to be limited extrinsic evidence of legislative intent one way or the other on the issue of a private cause of action with respect to the particular provisions at issue here." D.E. 128, p. 2 (quoting D.E. 125 at 5). But Diagnostic Affiliates did not say that there was no evidence, just limited "extrinsic" evidence. The terms of the statutes, themselves, evidence legislative intent as addressed more fully below.

The mandatory nature of the reimbursement right supports recognition of an implied private right of action. See Maine Cmty. Health Options, 140 S. Ct. at 1320. Envision argues against that proposition, citing Hawaii Motor Sports Center v. Babbitt, 125 F. Supp. 2d 1041, 1047 (D. Haw. 2000) as stating that mandatory language does not automatically imply a private right of action. But the Court does not treat the mandatory language as dispositive. Consistent with the analysis in Hawaii Motor Sports, the mandatory language is one aspect to consider when doing the four-part Cort review. Id. n.3. In Hawaii Motor Sports, the mandatory language was unavailing because the claimant was not the intended beneficiary of the statute at issue. Here, Diagnostic Affiliates is an intended beneficiary and the mandatory language works in its favor.

Envision also cites Kogan v. Robinson, 432 F. Supp. 2d 1075, 1076 (S.D. Cal. 2006) as holding that a provision that a party "shall reimburse" did not create a private right of action or any specific remedy. D.E. 128, p. 3. That conclusion was based on the structure of the statute and the fact that the requirement of reimbursement was accompanied by an opportunity for exemption from the requirement as determined by the administrative agency. The conflict in enforcement powers between those claimed by the private claimant to be implied in his favor and those expressly delegated to the administrative agency prevented treatment of that particular reimbursement requirement as creating a private right of action. No such conflict exists in the FFCRA or CARES Act.

Defendants argue that that there are enforcement provisions in the FFCRA and CARES Act that demonstrate that the legislature intended administrative enforcement to the exclusion of private enforcement. These administrative enforcement provisions have different purposes and fall short of providing any avenue for a COVID-19 testing provider to recover the reimbursements required by the statutes. And Defendants have not suggested what recourse, other than this action, Diagnostics Affiliates might have for its claims.

8 The Secretaries of Health and Human Services, Labor, and Treasury are empowered to implement the relevant FFCRA provisions through sub-regulatory guidance, program instruction or otherwise. FFCRA § 6001(c). And the same Secretaries are directed to enforce them through ERISA and the regulation and taxation of group health plans. FFCRA § 6001(b).[12] But FFCRA § 6001 is relevant here because it requires insurers to cover COVID-19 testing through their health insurance plans. This provision indicates who is responsible for payment, not how payment is to be made. Its enforcement scheme is appropriately designed for the purpose of ensuring coverage for insureds. Nothing in the amended complaint indicates Defendants have denied or reduced claims because the service is not covered or that it was provided to a person who was not an insured.

The direct requirement for reimbursement to COVID-19 testing providers is, instead, in the CARES Act § 3202(a).[13] The only enforcement provision related to that requirement is for a civil fine against providers who do not publish their cash price—the premise on which their payment is to be calculated. CARES Act § 3202(b). There is no dispute that Diagnostic Affiliates properly published its cash price. Thus, the CARES Act has no express enforcement provision—administrative or otherwise—that is relevant here for claims against insurance companies responsible for reimbursements.

Defendants rely on the concept that, "The express provision of one method of enforcing a substantive rule suggests that Congress intended to preclude others." Alexander v. Sandoval, 532 U.S. 275, 290 (2001). But the administrative enforcement provisions address other provisions and do not address the manner in which a COVID-19 testing provider can obtain its reimbursements (which are no less mandatory). Therefore, the administrative enforcement scheme cannot be said to evidence an intent to deny a private right of action.

Defendants also contend that the express creation of private enforcement rights for other provisions of the statutes indicates that the legislature would have likewise created a private enforcement right for reimbursement, had one been intended. D.E. 67, p. 7 ("Sections 3102, 5102, and 5105 of the FFCRA expressly incorporate the private enforcement provisions of Fair Labor Standards Act and Family and Medical Leave Act to remedy improper denials of emergency paid employee leave."). Diagnostic Affiliates responds that the lack of specificity in creating a private right of action for reimbursement was likely the result of the speed with which Congress had to act in response to the pandemic emergency.

These statutes broadly address multifaceted aspects of the pandemic. Under the circumstances, seeking consistency in the treatment of remedies elevates form over substance where clear rights to reimbursement were created and no other enforcement mechanism exists. An implied private right of action is a more appropriate construction of the statute than the creation of a right without any remedy.

The terms of the FFCRA and CARES Act support finding an implied private right of action to enforce the right to reimbursement for COVID-19 testing against insurance plans and administrators.

3. Is a Private Right of Action in Favor of Plaintiff Consistent with the Legislative Scheme?

9 Defendants do not directly address this question. As discussed, Congress wanted widespread COVID-19 testing, which could only be accomplished by private entities quickly incurring the cost of establishing testing sites across the country and procuring the necessary supplies to administer tests. Legislative impatience with the finer points of the relationship between providers and insurance companies to properly allocate those costs or to determine appropriate pricing is evidenced by the inclusion of a mandatory methodology for determining the rate to be paid, if the parties did not have the time or cooperation to negotiate rates. A private right of action to recover the mandated reimbursement is fully consistent with the legislative scheme.

4. Would It Be Inappropriate to Create a Federal Right, Given the Context of State Concerns?

Defendants did not address this issue, except insofar as Envision footnoted the observation that this factor is not relevant in this case. D.E. 128, p. 4 n.1. Diagnostic Affiliates argues that the regulation of group health care plans, including ERISA, already contemplates federal litigation for enforcement. D.E. 99, pp. 14-15. And the federal response to the COVID-19 pandemic is consistent with, not contrary to, state interests. Therefore, no state concerns counsel against recognizing an implied private right of action as a remedy to redress a federally-created right.

In conclusion, considering the four factors set out in Cort, and giving the greatest weight to the first three as most indicative of Congress's intent, the Court concludes that there is an implied private right of action to enforce the provisions of the FFCRA and CARES Act reimbursement requirement. Therefore, the motions are DENIED IN PART to the extent that they challenge the claims made under Count I.

COUNT II:

VIOLATION OF ERISA – FAILURE TO PAY

Defendants raise two challenges to Diagnostic Affiliates' claims for failure to pay under ERISA: (a) Diagnostic Affiliates does not have standing to advance the patients' claims; and (b) it failed to exhaust administrative remedies (and it does not escape that requirement because the exceptions for futility and deemed-exhausted claims are not properly pled). The Court considers each argument below.

Standing. With respect to standing, Diagnostic Affiliates pled that it obtained appropriate assignments of benefits from many of the patients. The fact that it may also be making claims for patients who did not execute assignments is an insufficient reason to dismiss the claim in its entirety. And this is not the stage of proceedings to evaluate the facts surrounding individual claims.

Swissport has its own variation on this argument. It contends that Diagnostic Affiliates had to specifically allege that its claims against Swissport are based entirely on Swissport's patient's assignments. D.E. 145, pp. 5-6. Given the nature of this case and the purposes of Twombly/Iqbal specificity, along with the Court's decision on the private right of action under the FCRA and CARES Act, the Court declines to require Diagnostic Affiliates to name in its pleading each plan whose patients assigned their rights for enforcement purposes.

The defense that the plans may include anti-assignment provisions negating the existing assignments and requiring notarized powers of attorney is a matter not properly before the Court on these motions to dismiss. According to the standard of review, the Court is to make its Rule 12(b) decision on the basis of the allegations on the face of the complaint, accepted as true. A defense can require dismissal at this stage only if all of the elements necessary to support the defense are apparent in the complaint. See Jones v. Bock, 549 U.S. 199, 215 (2007). Even if the plan terms were to be considered incorporated into the complaint and contain anti-assignment provisions, Defendants have not submitted any Rule 12(b)(6) evidence of their contents.

10 While Diagnostic Affiliates also pleads standing on the basis of Defendants' failure to furnish information, the Court does not rely on that argument and thus need not address Defendants' argument that a provider, as assignee, is not entitled to those documents. See D.E. 121, p. 8 (citing Mem'l Hermann Health Sys. v. Sw. LTC, Ltd., No. 4:14-CV-02572, 2016 WL 3526137, at *8 (S.D. Tex. June 7, 2016), adopted, No. 4:14-CV-2572, 2016 WL 3552281 (S.D. Tex. June 23, 2016), aff'd, 683 Fed. App'x 274 (5th Cir. 2017). Neither does the Court opine at this time on Diagnostic Affiliates' argument that the FFCRA and CARES Act altered the ERISA standing requirements.

Diagnostic Affiliates has pled sufficient factual allegations to support its standing to assert ERISA claims on behalf of the patients it served by pleading that it has obtained many assignments from patient members of the plans.

Deemed Exhaustion and Futility. Diagnostic Affiliates does not deny failing to exhaust some of the claims. And Defendants do not deny that there are exceptions to the exhaustion requirements based on inadequate claims procedures and futility. See 29 C.F.R. § 2560.503-1(l)(1) (ERISA claim processing requirements); 45 C.F.R. § 147.136(b)(2)(ii)(F) (regulations for group health plans and health insurance issuers in group and individual markets incorporating ERISA requirements); Bourgeois v. Pension Plan for Emps. of Santa Fe Int'l Corps., 215 F.3d 475, 479-80 (5th Cir. 2000) (recognizing the futility exception). They only deny that the exceptions are sufficiently pled.

Diagnostic Affiliates' amended complaint is replete with detailed factual allegations—including documentary evidence—describing the claim processing and review procedures that they have invoked with Defendants and the allegedly improper, inconsistent, insufficient, and overwhelmingly negative results they have obtained, even where all procedures are exhausted. Included are allegations of Defendants' voluminous and repetitive record requests and hostility to the claims across-the-board. These factual allegations suggest systemic issues implicating bias and conflicts of interest. And they are consistent with violations of the itemized minimum requirements for claim processing procedures set out in 29 C.F.R. § 2560.503-1. See also 45 C.F.R. § 147.136(b)(3)(1).

With respect to futility, Defendants argue that the allegations are insufficient unless they show that an adverse result was certain. D.E. 67, p. 10. Cases on which Defendants rely that reject the futility argument have involved a single patient and a single claim. See McGowin v. ManPower Intern., Inc., 363 F.3d 556, 559 (5th Cir. 2004) (citing Bourgeois, 215 F.3d 475, 480 (5th Cir. 2000)). In these cases, the claimants were complaining that results or representations made in preliminary reviews indicated that higher level reviews would be futile because the preliminary results would likely be affirmed. That was held insufficient because the lower reviews were not necessarily predictive of the possible results of a final review.

In contrast, Diagnostic Affiliates is complaining of futility because all but one or a very small fraction of the hundreds of claims submitted to final review were rejected. This reflects actual results from actual submissions at the final level, not just prognostications from preliminary results. Futility would not represent an exception to exhaustion if every single claim had to be exhausted in order to show the certainty of an adverse result. It is sufficient under McGowin and Bourgeois that the allegations reflect bias or hostility at the highest level. These allegations meet that requirement.

11 In conclusion, Diagnostic Affiliates' amended complaint contains allegations sufficient to support its standing to raise ERISA claims and the plausibility that the claims review process of those claims still pending should be deemed exhausted or futile. Therefore, the motions are DENIED IN PART to the extent they challenge Count II.

COUNT III:

VIOLATION OF ERISA – FULL AND FAIR REVIEW

Defendants challenge Count III on the basis that a complaint for declaratory and equitable relief for failure to provide a full and fair review under 29 U.S.C. § 1132(a)(3) does not apply when the claimant has a cause of action for failure to pay under 29 U.S.C. § 1132(a)(1)(B). Diagnostic Affiliates responds simply that it has adequately pled claims under each subsection. This response does not join issue with the basis of Defendants' challenge.

Defendants cite binding Supreme Court and Fifth Circuit precedent holding that a § 1132(a)(3) claim for declaratory and equitable relief is not appropriate when the claimant also has a claim for payment of benefits under § 1132(a)(1)(b)—whether or not the claimant prevails on its claim for payment. Manuel v. Turner Indus. Group, L.L.C., 905 F.3d 859, 867 (5th Cir. 2018); Rhorer v. Raytheon Eng'rs & Constructors, Inc., 181 F.3d 634, 639 (5th Cir. 1999), abrogated on other grounds by CIGNA Corp. v. Amara, 563 U.S. 421 (2011); Tolson v. Avondale Indus., Inc., 141 F.3d 604, 610 (5th Cir. 1998) (citing Varity Corp. v. Howe, 516 U.S. 489 (1996)). This construction of the availability of the ERISA remedies is based on the different goals and standards of review applicable to each. Varity, 516 U.S. at 512.

This Court is bound by these cases and Diagnostic Affiliates has failed to demonstrate that this case poses an exception to the rules they announce. Consequently, the motions to dismiss are GRANTED IN PART and the Court DISMISSES Count III.

COUNT IV:

RICO

United makes two challenges to the RICO claim. First, it argues that the conduct complained of was nothing more than ordinary claims processing. This argument reads the amended complaint too narrowly, in violation of the standard of review. Diagnostic Affiliates clearly alleges that the actions United took—requesting excessive and repetitious documentation, misrepresenting the coverage or reimbursable amount for the service, and diverting claims to its CRS Benchmark Program to pocket unearned funds—went beyond ordinary claims processing and revealed a calculated and coordinated effort to delay, deny, or reduce the recovery Diagnostic Affiliates could make for its COVID-19 testing services and to profit by doing so. The Court rejects United's challenge on this basis.

Second, United complains that Diagnostic Affiliates has not pled sufficient facts to show that any such predicate acts proximately caused its alleged injury—the failure to pay its claims in whole or in part. See generally Anza v. Ideal Steel Supply Corp., 547 U.S. 451, 461 (2006). By way of example, United cites Anza and Shannon v. Ham, 639 Fed. App'x 1001, 1004 (5th Cir. 2016) as cases in which the defendant's activities or communications may have been wrongful, but did not directly cause the plaintiff's injury.

In Anza, the fraud was perpetrated directly on a state taxing authority, which provided a tax savings to the fraudster, making the business more competitive. The plaintiff, a competing business, thus lost sales. But the Supreme Court held that the injured party was the defrauded state and that the related injury was lost tax revenue. While this provided the defendant with a competitive edge, the loss of sales by the competing plaintiff were too attenuated to maintain a RICO claim.

12 In Shannon, the RICO conduct was the defendant's misrepresentation of his licensure to sell crop insurance. The injury was mishandled insurance. The Fifth Circuit found that the misrepresentation of licensure had been ongoing for several years with no injury. And the link between any misrepresentations and the mishandling of insurance was too attenuated to support proximate causation for a RICO claim.

 © 2025 Thomson Reuters. No claim to original U.S. Government Works.

Here, as it details more fully in its response, Diagnostic Affiliates complains of communications in the claims handling process that were designed to, among other purposes, misrepresent plan coverage of the COVID-19 testing charges and create unreasonable obstacles to payment of claims so as to deny full payment and discourage efforts to enforce the payment requirements of the FFCRA, CARES Act, and plan documents in a coordinated effort among all United-related Defendants. The link between at least some of the conduct complained of and some of the injuries sustained is sufficiently direct to support proximate causation and survive Rule 12(b)(6) review.

The motion is DENIED IN PART to the extent that it challenges Count IV.

COUNT V:

DECLARATORY JUDGMENT

United has combined its challenges to Count V and Count X. D.E. 67, pp. 19-20. With respect to Count V, it makes two arguments. First, it contends that declaratory relief is improper because Diagnostic Affiliates is not entitled to relief under any of the causes of action set out in its pleadings, thus negating any entitlement to relief on the merits, declaratory or otherwise. This argument fails because United has failed to defeat all of Diagnostic Affiliates' other causes of action.

Second, United argues that even if meritorious, the causes of action for damages adequately address the claims so invocation of declaratory relief under 28 U.S.C. § 2201 is impermissibly redundant. *See Am. Equip. Co., Inc. v. Turner Bros. Crane & Rigging, LLC, 4:13-CV-2011, 2014 WL 3543720, at *3 (S.D. Tex. July 14, 2014). The American Equipment opinion cites Collin County, Texas v. Homeowners Ass'n for Values Essential to Neighborhoods, 915 F.2d 167, 170 (5th Cir. 1990) for the proposition that the federal declaratory judgment statute was created as a procedural vehicle by which to obtain a remedy only if no other satisfactory remedy is available.

Diagnostic Affiliates' response is simply that it seeks declaratory relief in addition to other remedies. D.E. 99, p. 34. This does not address the issue of why damages and/or injunctive relief are not a satisfactory remedy available through the other causes of action, thus negating the need for declaratory relief. In its amended complaint, Diagnostic Affiliates prays for declaration of statutory violations in the same breath as awarding damages and injunctive relief for those violations.

United has demonstrated that Diagnostic Affiliates' request for declaratory relief is redundant. Its motion is GRANTED IN PART and the Court DISMISSES Count V seeking a declaratory judgment.

 © 2025 Thomson Reuters. No claim to original U.S. Government Works.

COUNT VI:

UNJUST ENRICHMENT AND QUANTUM MERUIT

United first argues that the theories of unjust enrichment and quantum meruit must fail because those theories require that the plaintiff provide a benefit to the defendant. See Pepi Corp. v. Galliford, 254 S.W.3d 457, 460 (Tex. App.—Houston [1st Dist.] 2007, pet. denied) (quantum meruit); Tex. Integrated Conveyor Sys., Inc. v. Innovative Conveyor Concepts, Inc., 300 S.W.3d 348, 367 (Tex. App.—Dallas 2009, pet. denied) (unjust enrichment). According to United, any services rendered by Diagnostic Affiliates were rendered to and for the benefit of the patient insureds, not to United or to the employer health plans. See ACS Primary Care Physicians Sw., P.A. v. UnitedHealthcare Ins. Co., 514 F. Supp. 3d 927, 935 (S.D. Tex. 2021); Encompass Office Sols., Inc. v. Ingenix, Inc., 775 F. Supp. 2d 938, 966 (E.D. Tex. 2011).

13 Diagnostic Affiliates responds, citing El Paso Healthcare System, Ltd. v. Molina Healthcare of New Mexico, Inc., 683 F. Supp. 2d 454, 461 (W.D. Tex. 2010) as holding that a service provided to an insured has the effect of benefiting the insurer by fulfilling the obligation to provide health care services. That proposition was rejected by ACS Primary Care because the insurance company's responsibility is not to provide healthcare but to provide payment for health care if, as, and when provided by others to its insureds. ACS Primary Care, 514 F. Supp. 3d at 935 (citing *El Paso Healthcare). In other words, any benefit of the COVID-19 testing was received by the insured. The insurance company only incurs a liability to pay for the service.

Diagnostic Affiliates invites this Court to align itself with the holding in *El Paso Healthcare and the Third Circuit's decision in Plastic Surgery Center, P.A. v. Aetna Life Insurance Co., 967 F.3d 218, 242 (3d Cir. 2020). The Court declines the invitation, agreeing with ACS Primary Care and finding that the Plastic Surgery decision was more about three things not at issue here—New Jersey law, a specific plan provision imposing special duties on Aetna for referring the insured to a specific provider under its plan, and ERISA preemption —than about whether an ordinary health care plan is benefitted by the provision of health care to its insureds.

United also argues that the quantum meruit claim is defeated by the fact that the parties' relationship is controlled by a written contract —the health care plans. "As a general rule, the presence of an express contract bars recovery under quantum meruit." Pepi Corp, 254 S.W.3d at 462 (citing In re Kellogg Brown & Root, Inc., 166 S.W.3d 732, 740 (Tex. 2005)). Diagnostic Affiliates responds that its claim is controlled by the FFCRA and CARES Act and not the health care plans. The Court disagrees.

In this action, Diagnostic Affiliates has presented its claims to Defendants because they are responsible for payment for the services rendered to their insured patients. As United points out in its reply, the import of the FFCRA and CARES Act is to impose upon those health care plans the obligation to include COVID-19 testing as a covered service under their plans. The terms of the plans are effectively modified to prevent the imposition of cost sharing and other charges or administrative procedures on the insureds. The requirement to pay is imposed on Defendants because they have a contractual obligation to pay for the insured's health care —not because of some independent equitable purpose.

For these reasons, United's motion is GRANTED IN PART and the Court DISMISSES Count VI with respect to both quantum meruit and unjust enrichment theories.

COUNT VII:

PROMISSORY ESTOPPEL

United challenges the claim for promissory estoppel, complaining of Diagnostic Affiliates' pleading: "None of these allegations show that United made a sufficiently specific and definite promise to the Plaintiff that it would pay COVID testing claims such that Plaintiff's purported reliance on any statements would be reasonable." D.E. 67, p. 17 (citing Walker v. Walker, 631 S.W.3d 259 (Tex. App.—Houston [14th Dist.] 2020, no pet.)). Moreover, United notes that nothing in the FFCRA or CARES Act prevents United from reviewing claims for fraud and abuse. Id.

The Walker case was a summary judgment case. And United's arguments do not comport with the Rule 12(b)(6) standard of review in which the Court takes the allegations of the complaint and all reasonable inferences in favor of the plaintiff as true. Contrary to United's reading of the complaint, the allegations do provide factual support for finding that United made specific and definite representations as a commitment to future action on which Diagnostic Affiliates could reasonably rely. Anything to the contrary can be investigated in discovery and proven at trial.

14 United's motion is DENIED IN PART with respect to its challenge to Count VII.

COUNT IX:

TEXAS PROMPT PAYMENT OF CLAIMS ACT

Under the Texas Insurance Code's Prompt Payment of Claims Act (PPCA), insurance companies must pay (or deny) properly documented claims within 30 or 45 days of receipt, depending on whether the claim was submitted electronically. Tex. Ins. Code §§ 843.338 (HMO plans), 1301.103 (PPO plans). Failure to do so requires payment of a significant penalty. §§ 843.342, 1301.137.

However, those provisions require payment "in accordance with the contract" between the provider and the insurance company. §§ 843.338(1), 1301.103(1). The Texas Supreme Court has declared unequivocally that this means that contractual privity is required for a PPCA cause of action. Christus Health Gulf Coast v. Aetna, Inc., 397 S.W.3d 651, 656 (Tex. 2013). Diagnostic Affiliates does not dispute this general rule for interpreting the statute. However, there is an exception.

The terms of the PPCA apply to an out-of-network provider for providing "care related to an emergency or its attendant episode of care as required by state or federal law." §§ 843.351, 1301.069. Without reference to the particular reasons or contexts in which patients sought COVID-19 testing, Diagnostic Affiliates claims that its services were related to a federally-declared pandemic emergency. The Court need not decide whether testing in a pandemic is the type of emergency contemplated by the PPCA.

As United argues, whether or not the exception makes other parts of the PPCA applicable to Diagnostic Affiliates as an out-of-network provider, it is not eligible for the penalty because the penalty must be calculated on the basis of a contracted rate, which Diagnostic Affiliates does not have. See Tex. Med. Res., LLP v. Molina Healthcare of Tex., Inc., 620 S.W.3d 458, 469 (Tex. App.—Dallas 2021, pet. filed); see also Windmill Wellness Ranch, L.L.C. v. Blue Cross & Blue Shield of Tex., SA-19-CV-01211-OLG, 2020 WL 7017739, at *13 (W.D. Tex. Apr. 22, 2020). Diagnostic Affiliates responds, without benefit of authority, that this case is distinguishable because the statutory reimbursement provisions of the FFCRA and CARES Act supply an easily quantifiable payment rate, which it impliedly argues is the equivalent of a contracted rate.

Diagnostic Affiliates' argument fails by its own terms. While the FFCRA and CARES Act impose a statutory method of determining the rate of reimbursement, the method provides for either a negotiated rate or a unilaterally-declared publicly posted rate. And Diagnostic Affiliates relies solely on a publicly posted rate. This Court sees no reason to consider these methods as contractual rates. While Diagnostic Affiliates argues that the publicly posted rate, by virtue of the statutes, is more readily ascertainable than a "usual, customary, and reasonable" rate, the question is not about how easily determinable the rate is. Rather, the question is whether it was set by agreement.

United's motion to dismiss is GRANTED IN PART and the Court DISMISSES Count IX.

COUNT X:

INJUNCTIVE RELIEF

15 United's remaining challenge to Diagnostic Affiliates' request for injunctive relief is that it cannot show a likelihood of success on the merits. See Planned Parenthood of Hous. & Se. Tex. v. Sanchez, 403 F.3d 324, 329 (5th Cir. 2005) (likelihood of success on the merits is the first of four elements that must be shown to obtain injunctive relief). This argument is predicated on the success of United's motion to dismiss as to every one of the causes of action. Because this Court has retained a number of the causes of action, United has not demonstrated, and cannot show at the Rule 12(b)(6) stage, that Diagnostic Affiliates does not have a likelihood of success on the merits and this challenge fails. United's motion is DENIED IN PART with respect to Count X. reconsideration. No disposition at this point is final or prejudicial.

PREJUDICIAL DISMISSALS

Diagnostic Affiliates has asked that any dismissal be without prejudice. Absent a full or partial final judgment, > any order or other decision, however designated, that adjudicates fewer than all the claims or the rights and liabilities of fewer than all the parties does not end the action as to any of the claims or parties and may be revised at any time before the entry of a judgment adjudicating all the claims and all the parties' rights and liabilities.

Fed. R. Civ. P. 54(b). The Court is aware that many of these issues are in rapidly developing areas of the law and that the COVID-19 pandemic presents an unusual context for these claims. Should any party have appropriate new grounds on which to resubmit these matters to the Court, Rule 54(b) allows

CONCLUSION

For the reasons set out above, the motions to dismiss (D.E. 67, 105, 112, 119, 130, 141, and 145) are GRANTED IN PART and DENIED IN PART. The Court DISMISSES the following claims:

Count III: Violation of ERISA for failure to provide a full and fair review of the claims – against all Defendants;

Count V: Request for a declaratory judgment – against United;

Count VI: Claim for unjust enrichment and quantum meruit – against United: and Count IX: Violation of the Texas Prompt Pay Act – against United.

All other claims are RETAINED.

ORDERED on January 18, 2022.

All Citations

Not Reported in Fed. Supp., 2022 WL 214101

Footnotes

1 UHG filed its own motion to dismiss, which is addressed by separate order.

 © 2025 Thomson Reuters. No claim to original U.S. Government Works.

2 "United" refers to: United Healthcare Services, Inc., United Healthcare Benefits of Texas, Inc., United Healthcare of Texas, Inc., UMR, Inc., and OptumHealth Care Solutions, LLC (sued as OptumHealth Care Solutions, Inc.).

3 "Employer healthcare plans" refers to: American International Group, Inc. Medical Plan; Anadarko Petroleum Corp. Health Benefit Plan; Apple Inc. Health And Welfare Benefit Plan; Group Health And Welfare Plans (Aramark Uniform Services); AT&T Umbrella Benefit Plan No. 1; AT&T Umbrella Benefit Plan No. 3; Baker Hughes, A GE Company Welfare Benefits Plan; Baylor College Of Medicine Health And Welfare Benefits Plan; Brookdale Senior Living, Inc. Welfare Plan; C.H Robinson Company Group Health Major Medical Plan; Calpine Corporation Employee Benefit Plan; Caterpillar Inc. Group Insurance Master Trust; Celanese Health And Welfare Benefits Program; Centerpoint Energy Group Welfare Benefits Plan For Retirees; Citgo Petroleum Corporation Defined Contribution Master Trust; Delta Account Based Healthcare Plan; Envision Healthcare Corporation Welfare Benefits Plan; H&E Equipment Services Inc. Benefit Plan; Flour Employee Benefit Trust Plan; Fresenius Medical Care Travelling Nurses Health And Welfare Benefits Plan; Geico Corp. Consolidated Welfare Benefits Program; Geospace Technologies Welfare Benefit Plan; Hudson Group (HG) Inc. Employee Benefits Plan; IQOR Health And Welfare Plan; Jones Lang Lasalle Group Benefits Plan; Kellogg Brown & Root, Inc, Welfare Benefits Plan; Kinder Morgan, Inc. Master Employee Welfare Plan; Lexicon Pharmaceuticals Inc. Comprehensive Welfare Benefits Plan; Lineage Logistics LLC Benefits Plan; Lockton, Inc. Welfare Benefits Plan; M/I Homes, Inc. Health, Life And Dental Welfare Plan; Maersk Inc. Active Nonunion Health And Welfare Plan; The Mallinckrodt Pharmaceuticals Welfare Benefit Plan; Motiva Enterprises LLC Health and Wellness Benefit Plan; Novo Nordisk Inc. Welfare Benefit Plan Petsmart Smartchoices Benefit Plan; Procter And Gamble Retiree Welfare Benefits Plan; Railroad Employees National Health Flexible Spending Account Plan; Raising Canes USA Health And Welfare Benefits Wrap Plan; Republic Services Inc. Employee Benefit Plan; Republic National Distributing Company, LLC Welfare Benefits Plan; Saia Motor Freight Line LLC Employee Preferred Provider Plan; Siemens Corporation Group Insurance And Flexible Benefits Program; Skadden, Arps, Slate, Meagher & Flom Partners' Welfare Benefits Plan; Skywest Inc. Cafeteria Plan; Southwest Airlines Co. Welfare Benefit Plan; Spirit Airlines Inc. Health And Welfare Benefits Plan; Swissport North America Holdings, Inc. Health & Welfare Plan; Targa Resources LLC Welfare Benefits Plan; Texas Capital Bancshares Inc. Employee Benefit Plan; Textron Non-Bargained Welfare Benefits Plan; Adecco, Inc Welfare Benefits Plan; T-Mobile USA, Inc. Employee Benefit Plan; Transocean Group Welfare Benefit Plan; UHS Welfare Benefits Plan; UnitedHealth Group Ventures, LLC Health And Welfare Benefit Plan; Valero Energy Corporation Retiree Benefits Plan; Valmont Industries Inc. Welfare Benefit Plan; Walgreens

Health And Welfare Plan; WCA Management Company, LP Welfare Benefit Plan; Webber, LLC Welfare Benefit Plan; Winstead PC Flexible Benefit Plan; Group Benefits Plan For Employees Of Worleyparsons Corporation.

4 Families First Coronavirus Response Act, Pub. L. No. 116-127, § 6001(a), 134 Stat. 178 (2020) (relating to 42 U.S.C. § 1320b–5 NOTE, authority to waive peer review and administrative requirements during national emergencies).

5 Coronavirus Aid, Relief, and Economic Security Act, Pub. L. No. 116-136, § 3202(a) 134 Stat. 281 (relating to 42 U.S.C. § 256b, primary health care drug pricing agreements).

6 Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974, 29 U.S.C. § 1001 et seq.

7 Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations Act, 18 U.S.C. §§ 1961-1968.

8 28 U.S.C. § 2201.

9 The amended complaint does not include a Count VIII.

10 Texas Insurance Code §§ 843.351 and 1301.069.

11 The Court is aware that Defendants complain that the price Diagnostic Affiliates has charged is unreasonably high. The Court's view of the mandatory language of the statutes for purposes of creating a private right of action should not be read to foreclose any defense or counterclaim challenging the propriety of Diagnostic Affiliates' pricing. That issue is not presently before the Court.

12 Referring to "part A of title XXVII of the Public Health Service Act, part 7 of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974, and subchapter B of chapter 100 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986."

13 When challenging the methodology for enforcing the CARES Act, United refers to § 3201, which amends the FFCRA to provide the administrative qualifications for making particular COVID-19 testing appropriate under the statutes. The parties have not raised any issue at this juncture regarding whether Diagnostic Affiliates was using approved testing materials and methods. The issue is the right to reimbursement, which appears in § 3202. United's motion thus technically fails to challenge a private right of action for reimbursement under § 3202.

End of Document

© 2025 Thomson Reuters. No claim to original U.S. Government Works.

CASE NO. 45

2016 WL 3223313
Only the Westlaw citation
is currently available.
United States District Court,
S.D. Texas, Houston Division.

WILLIAM MARSH RICE UNIVERSITY, Plaintiff,
v.
ARROWHEAD RESEARCH CORPORATION, et al. Defendants.

Civil Action
No.
14
-
03496
|
Signed 03/08/2016

Attorneys and Law Firms

Thomas Edward Ganucheau, Patrice B. Childress, Beck Redden LLP, Houston, TX, Cole Robinson Gresham, Jay Michael Ezelle, Starnes Davis Florie LLP, Birmingham, AL, for Plaintiff.

William B. Dawson, David Joshua Tobin, Tracey B. Davies, Ashley Elizabeth Johnson, Gibson, Dunn & Crutcher LLP, Dallas, TX, Greta Ravitsky, Mark Stephen Armstrong, Epstein Becker Green, P.C., Houston, TX, John Stephen Linehan, Epstein Becker & Green, P.C., Baltimore, MD, for Defendants.

ORDER

VANESSA D. GILMORE, UNITED STATES DISTRICT JUDGE

1 Pending before the Court are Defendant Mark Tilley ("Tilley")'s and Defendant John Miller ("Miller")'s (collectively "Individual Defendants")'s Motion to Dismiss (Instrument No. 61) and Defendant Arrowhead Research Corporation ("Arrowhead" or "Corporate Defendant")'s Motion to Dismiss (Instrument No. 63).

I.

A.

This is a suit for breach of contract, fraud, fraudulent inducement, vicarious liability and tortious interference brought by a patent-holder against a patent licensee and related entities. Plaintiff William Marsh Rice University ("Rice" or "Plaintiff") claims that Tilley, Miller, and Arrowhead (collectively "Defendants") induced it to modify its license agreement with Defendant Unidym, Inc. ("Unidym"), to allow Unidym to sublicense certain patents to a third party, Samsung. Plaintiff claims that Defendants prevented Plaintiff from licensing the patents directly to Samsung, and that as a result of Rice's agreement with Unidym, Rice became unable to monetize its patents due to confusion in the marketplace and Samsung's retention of a royalty free option to license Rice's patents. Defendants Tilley, Miller, and Arrowhead move to dismiss Plaintiff's fraud-based claims and Plaintiff's vicarious liability claim, arguing primarily that the claims are breach of contract claims improperly pleaded as tort claims, and that Plaintiff cannot prove that Defendants' conduct caused Rice harm.

 © 2025 Thomson Reuters. No claim to original U.S. Government Works.

B.

According to Plaintiff, on or about April 18, 2007, it entered into a license agreement ("the 2007 License") with Carbon Nanotechnologies, Inc. for approximately ninety patents covering various aspects of carbon nanotubes technology ("CNT"). (Instrument No. 60 at 5). Plaintiff claims that the licensed patents were the product of research by Rice faculty. (Instrument No. 60 at 5). Carbon Nanotechnologies was subsequently acquired by Defendant Unidym, which was a subsidiary of Defendant Arrowhead. (Instrument No. 60 at 5).

According to Plaintiff, in the Spring of 2010, Arrowhead began negotiating with Samsung for Unidym to sublicense and monetize Rice's technology. (Instrument No. 60 at 7). Plaintiff claims, however, that in order for those deals to be finalized, Arrowhead had to obtain Rice's written consent for the sublicense, and also remedy Unidym's failures under an existing 2007 License. (Instrument No. 60 at 6-8).

In the Spring of 2010, Rice began negotiating new agreements with Unidym. (Instrument No. 60 at 10). Plaintiff claims that Tilley and Miller negotiated on behalf of Unidym. (Instrument No. 60 at 10). Plaintiff claims that Tilley and Miller were also Vice Presidents of Arrowhead. (Instrument No. 60 at 10). According to Plaintiff, Tilley and Miller represented that the pending deal with Samsung would be lucrative for all parties, and that without the deal, the technology would not be able to be commercialized. (Instrument No. 60 at 11). Plaintiff also claims that on August 31, 2010, Tilley attempted to convince Rice that the deal needed to be completed "right away" and that there was "no time for discussions." (Instrument No. 60 at 12). Plaintiff claims that substantial documentation demonstrates that Tilley, Miller, and Arrowhead attempted to persuade Rice leadership to enter into the agreement with Unidym. (Instrument No. 60 at 12-14).

2 On November 1, 2010, Rice entered into an amendment to the 2007 License with Unidym (the "Amended Agreement"). (Instrument No. 60 at 14). According to Rice, the Amended Agreement provided that Unidym would: 1) pay Rice 35% of all non-sale based sublicense consideration; 2) pay Rice a royalty rate of 4% on adjusted gross sales; 3) pay Rice annual minimum royalties of $250,000 beginning January 1, 2011; and 4) reimburse Rice for patent costs. (Instrument No. 60 at 15).

In December 2010, Unidym and Samsung entered into an agreement to sublicense Rice's technology, for which Samsung paid $4.5 million upfront. (Instrument No. 60 at 16). In January 2011, Arrowhead announced that it was selling Unidym to Wisepower Co., Ltd. ("Wisepower") for $5 million plus $140 million in potential future royalties over 10 years. (Instrument No. 60 at 16).

According to Rice, it was never paid in accordance with the Amended Agreement, and on March 25, 2011 it terminated the Amended

 © 2025 Thomson Reuters. No claim to original U.S. Government Works.

Agreement with Unidym. (Instrument No. 60 at 17). Plaintiff also claims that Tilley informed Rice in May 2011 that Unidym and Arrowhead had never intended to honor the terms of the Amended Agreement. (Instrument No. 60 at 18). According to Plaintiff, Arrowhead, Tilley, and Miller defrauded Rice to ensure that Arrowhead would receive the entire benefit of these agreements. (Instrument No. 60 at 18). Plaintiff specifically alleges that Defendants' fraud prevented Rice from monetizing its technology, because Defendants induced Rice to forego opportunities to license its CNT, and greatly diminished the value of that technology in the market following the Unidym agreement. (Instrument No. 67 at 5-6).

C.

On November 11, 2014, Plaintiffs filed an original petition and request for temporary and permanent injunction against Unidym and Arrowhead in the 113th Judicial District Court of Harris County, Texas. (Instrument No. 1-3). Plaintiff brought claims for breach of contract and tortious interference with prospective business relations against Unidym and a claim for fraudulent inducement against Unidym and Arrowhead. (Instrument No. 1-3). On December 7, 2014, Unidym and Arrowhead removed this case to the United States District Court for the Southern District of Texas pursuant to this Court's diversity jurisdiction under 28 U.S.C. § 1332(a). (Instrument No. 1).

On December 31, 2014, Plaintiff filed a First Amended Complaint, including Tilley and Miller as Defendants and adding a claim for fraud against Arrowhead, Tilley, and Miller. (Instrument No. 10).

On February 28, 2015, Arrowhead filed a motion to dismiss pursuant to Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 12(b)(6). (Instrument No. 23). Arrowhead argued that Plaintiff's fraud claim failed to allege causation and violated the statute of frauds and independent injury doctrine, and that a fraudulent inducement claim is only actionable against a party to the contract. (Id.). On March 30, 2015, Plaintiff filed a response and on April 6, 2015, Arrowhead filed a reply. (Instruments No. 32; No. 38).

On March 26, 2015, Tilley filed a motion to dismiss pursuant to Rule 12(b)(6), asserting the same arguments as Arrowhead. (Instrument No. 28). On April 16, 2015, Plaintiff filed a response and on April 23, 2015, Tilley filed a reply. (Instruments No. 42; No. 45).

On June 1, 2015, Miller filed a motion to dismiss, asserting the same arguments under Rule 12(b)(6) as Arrowhead and Tilley. (Instrument No. 52). Miller also argued that Plaintiff's claims should be dismissed pursuant to Rule 12(b)(5) for defective service of process. (Id.). On June 22, 2015, Plaintiff filed a response and on July 15, 2015, Miller filed a reply. (Instruments No. 56; No. 58).

3 To date, Defendant Unidym has failed to file an answer to Plaintiffs complaint. Accordingly, on April 23, 2015, the Court entered default against Unidym. (Instrument No. 47). On July 23, 2015, the Court denied Arrowhead's motion to dismiss, Miller's motion to dismiss, and Tilley's motion to dismiss, and ordered Plaintiff to file an amended complaint within 10 days of the Order. (Instrument No. 59). The Court found that Plaintiff's fraud and fraudulent inducement claims as plead were barred by the statute of frauds and the independent injury doctrine, however, the Court granted Plaintiff's request for leave of the Court to amend its pleadings to correct deficiencies with respect to its fraud and fraudulent inducement claims. (Instrument No. 59 at 16, 19-20). On August 2, 2015, Plaintiff filed its Second Amended Complaint, repleading the previous causes of action, and adding a claim for vicarious liability against Defendant Arrowhead. (Instrument No. 60). On August 17, 2015, Defendants Tilley and Miller filed a motion to dismiss Plaintiff's Second Amended Complaint, presenting essentially the same arguments contained in its previous motions to dismiss. See (Instrument No. 61). On August 17, 2015, Defendant Arrowhead also filed a motion to dismiss, presenting nearly the same arguments as the Individual Defendants' motion. (Instrument No. 63). On September 15, 2015, Plaintiff filed a Response to Individual Defendants' motion and a Response to Defendant Arrowhead's motion. (Instruments No. 67; No. 69). On September 21, 2015, Defendant Arrowhead filed a reply in support of its motion to dismiss. (Instrument No. 72). On September 28, 2015, the Individual Defendants filed a reply in support of its motion to dismiss. (Instrument No. 75). On February 4, 2016, the Court held a hearing on the Motions to Dismiss.

 © 2025 Thomson Reuters. No claim to original U.S. Government Works.

II.

Defendants Arrowhead, Tilley, and Miller move to dismiss Plaintiffs fraud and fraudulent inducement claims pursuant to Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 12(b)(6).

Under Rule 8 of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, a pleading must contain "a short and plain statement of the claim showing that the pleader is entitled to relief." Fed. R. Civ. P. 8(a)(2). The complaint need not contain "detailed factual allegations," but it must include "more than an unadorned, the-defendant-unlawfully-harmed-me accusation." Ashcroft v. Iqbal, 556 U.S. 662, 678 (2009). A pleading that offers labels and conclusions or a formulaic recitation of the elements of a cause of action will not suffice. Bell Atlantic Corp. v. Twombly, 550 U.S. 544, 555 (2007). Likewise, a complaint that articulates "naked assertions devoid of further factual enhancement" is similarly insufficient to satisfy the pleading requirements of Rule 8. Iqbal, 556 U.S. at 678 (internal punctuation omitted).

When a complaint does not meet the pleading requirements of Rule 8, Rule 12(b)(6) authorizes dismissal of a civil action for "failure to state a claim upon which relief can be granted." Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(b)(6). To survive a motion to dismiss, the complaint must articulate "the plaintiff's grounds for entitlement to relief—including factual allegations that when assumed to be true raise a right to relief above the speculative level." Cuvillier v. Sullivan, 503 F.3d 397, 401 (5th Cir. 2007). Stated otherwise, in order to withstand a motion to dismiss, a complaint must contain sufficient factual matter, accepted as true, to state a claim for relief that is plausible on its face. Iqbal, 556 U.S. at 678 (quoting Twombly, 550 U.S. at 570); Turner v. Pleasant, 663 F.3d 770, 775 (5th Cir. 2011). A claim for relief is plausible on its face "when the plaintiff pleads factual content that allows the court to draw the reasonable inference that the defendant is liable for the misconduct alleged." Iqbal, 556 U.S. at 678; Montoya v. FedEx Ground Package System, Inc., 614 F.3d 145, 148 (5th Cir. 2010). A claim for relief is implausible on its face when "the well-pleaded facts do not permit the court to infer more than the mere possibility of misconduct." Iqbal, 556 U.S. at 678. This "plausibility standard is not akin to a probability requirement, but asks for more than a sheer possibility that a defendant has acted unlawfully." Iqbal, 556 U.S. at 678 (internal quotations omitted). Where a complaint pleads facts that are merely consistent with a defendant's liability, it stops short of the line between possibility and plausibility of entitlement to relief. Twombly, 550 U.S. at 557.

Under this rubric, dismissal is proper only if the plaintiff's complaint: (1) does not include a cognizable legal theory, Ramming v. United States, 281 F.3d 158, 161 (5th Cir. 2001), or (2) includes a cognizable legal theory but fails to plead enough facts to state a claim to relief that is plausible on its face, Pleasant, 663 F.3d at 775; see also Frith v. Guardian Life Ins. Co., 9 F. Supp. 2d 734, 737-38 (S.D. Tex. 1998) (Gilmore, J.) (holding that dismissal pursuant to Rule 12(b)(6) "can be based either on a lack of a cognizable legal theory or the absence of sufficient facts alleged under a cognizable legal theory").

4 When ruling on a 12(b)(6) motion, the Court may consider "the complaint, its proper attachments, documents incorporated into the complaint by reference, and matters of which a court may take judicial notice."[1] Wolcott v. Sebelius, 635 F.3d 757, 763 (5th Cir. 2011) (internal citations and quotations omitted); see also Tellabs, Inc. v. Makor Issues & Rights, Ltd., 551 U.S. 308, 322 (2007). The Court does not resolve any disputed fact issues. Davis v. Monroe City Bd. of Educ., 526 U.S. 629, 633 (1999). Instead, the Court assumes all well-pleaded facts contained in the complaint are true. Wolcott, 635 F.3d at 763. The Court will not, however "accept as true conclusory allegations, unwarranted factual inferences, or legal conclusions." Great Lakes Dredge & Dock Co. LLC v. La. State, 624 F.3d 201, 210 (5th Cir. 2010). Similarly, legal conclusions masquerading as factual conclusions need not be treated as true. Blackburn v. City of Marshall, 42 F.3d 925, 931 (5th Cir. 1995); see also Iqbal, 556 U.S. at 678. Although all well-pleaded facts are viewed in the light most favorable to the plaintiff, Turner, 663 F.3d at 775; Gonzalez v. Kay, 577 F.3d 600, 603 (5th Cir. 2009), the Court "will not strain to find inferences favorable to the plaintiff." Dorsey v. Portfolio Equities, Inc., 540 F.3d 333, 338 (5th Cir. 2008) (internal citations and quotations omitted). Therefore, "to avoid a dismissal for failure to state a claim, a plaintiff must plead specific facts." Dorsey, 540 F.3d at 338.

That said, "motions to dismiss under Rule 12(b)(6) are viewed with disfavor and are rarely granted." Lormand v. US Unwired, Inc., 565 F.3d 228, 232 (5th Cir. 2009) (citation omitted). Given the harshness of dismissal, the Court will generally "afford plaintiffs at least one opportunity to cure pleading deficiencies before dismissing a case, unless it is clear that the defects are incurable or the plaintiffs advise the court that they are unwilling or unable to amend in a manner that will avoid dismissal." Great Plains Trust Co. v. Morgan Stanley Dean Witter & Co., 313 F.3d 305, 329 (5th Cir. 2002); see also United States ex rel. Adrian v. Regents of the Univ. of Cal., 363 F.3d 398, 403 (5th Cir. 2004) ("Leave to amend should be freely given.") (internal citations omitted).

Claims alleging fraud are subject to the heightened pleading requirements of Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 9(b). "A dismissal for failure to plead fraud with particularity under Rule 9(b) is treated as a dismissal for failure to state a claim under Rule 12(b)(6)." U.S. ex rel. Grubbs v. Kenneganti, 565 F.3d 180, 186 n.8 (5th Cir. 2009)(quoting United States ex rel. Thompson v. Columbia/HCA Healthcare Corp., 125 F.3d 899, 901 (5th Cir. 1997)). Rule 9(b) states:

> In alleging fraud or mistake, a party must state with particularity the circumstances constituting fraud or mistake. Malice, intent, knowledge, and other conditions of a person's mind may be alleged generally.

Fed. R. Civ. P. 9(b). What constitutes "particularity" differs from case to case, but at "a minimum Rule 9(b) requires allegations of the particulars of time, place, and contents of the false representations, as well as the identity of the person making the misrepresentation and what he obtained thereby. Put simply Rule 9(b) requires the who, what, when, where, and how to be laid out." Benchmark Elec., Inc. v. J.M. Huber Corp., 343 F.3d 719, 724 (5th Cir. 2003). Rule 9's heightened pleading standard applies to "all averments of fraud, including those in which fraud is not an element of the claim." Lone Star Ladies Inv. Club v. Schlotzky's, Inc., 238 F.3d 363, 368 (5th Cir. 2001).

III.

Defendants Arrowhead, Tilley, and Miller move to dismiss Plaintiff's fraud, fraudulent inducement, and vicarious liability claims. (Instruments No. 61; No. 63).

5 The elements for fraud and fraudulent inducement are the same, namely (1) a material misrepresentation; (2) that is false; (3) made with knowledge of its falsity or recklessness as to its truth; (4) made with the intention that it should be acted upon by another party; (5) relied upon by the other party; and (6) causing injury. DeSantis v. Wackenhut, 793 S.W.2d 670, 688 (Tex. 1990). To show reliance for a fraudulent inducement claim, a plaintiff must prove that it actually entered into a binding agreement based on the misrepresentation. Haase v. Glazner, 62 S.W.3d 795, 799-800 (Tex. 2001). "A promise of future performance constitutes an actionable misrepresentation if the promise was made with no intention of performing at the time it was made." Formosa Plastics Corp. USA v. Presidio Engineers & Contractors, Inc., 960 S.W.2d 41, 48 (Tex. 1998). Entering into a contract with no intention to perform can be actionable as fraud, while deciding later not to perform merely constitutes a breach of contract. Tony Gullo

Motors I, L.P. v. Chapa, 212 S.W.3d 299, 304 (Tex. 2006).

A.

The Court's July 23, 2015 Order found that Plaintiff had not adequately pleaded causation in support of its fraud and fraudulent inducement claims, but allowed Plaintiff leave to file a Second Amended Complaint to replead its claims. (Instrument No. 59). Defendants argue that Plaintiff's Second Amended Complaint has still failed to allege causation of an injury to Rice. (Instrument No. 63 at 9).

To establish the element of causation in a fraud or fraudulent inducement claim, a plaintiff must show that the defendant's misrepresentations were a cause-in-fact of foreseeable losses. Hartford Fire Ins. Co. v. C. Springs 300, Ltd., 287 S.W.3d 771, 781 (Tex. App.—Houston [1st Dist.] 2009, pet. denied) "The test for cause in fact, or 'but for causation,' is whether the act or omission was a substantial factor in causing the injury without which the harm would not have occurred." Marathon Corp. v. Pitzner, 106 S.W.3d 724, 727 (Tex. 2003) (citations omitted). A plaintiff must also plead detrimental reliance, by showing that the defendant's representations induced it to act or refrain from acting to its detriment. TCA Bldg. Co. v. Entech, Inc., 86 S.W.3d 667, 674 (Tex. App.—Austin 2002, no pet.). A court may consider the causation issue by removing the misconduct from the plaintiff's narrative, and evaluating the effect on the plaintiff's purported harm. In re Online Travel Co. (OTC) Hotel Booking Antitrust Litig., 997 F. Supp. 2d 526, 547 (N.D. Tex. 2014).

The Court's July 23, 2015 Order found that Plaintiff had not sufficiently alleged that there was any potential for a deal with Samsung prior to the Amended Agreement. (Instrument No. 59 at 13-14). As a result, the Court found that Plaintiff had not adequately pleaded the required element of causation in order to establish claims of fraud or fraudulent inducement against Defendants. (Instrument No. 59 at 14). Defendants' Motions to Dismiss the Second Amended Complaint again assert that Plaintiff has failed to establish the requisite element of causation, despite Rice's elaborations on the nature of the lost opportunity allegedly caused by Defendants' actions. (Instrument No. 72 at 8-9).

In response to the Court's July 23, 2015 Order, Plaintiff's Second Amended Complaint modifies its claims from the First Amended Complaint. (Instrument No. 60). Plaintiff has extensively repleaded the causation element of its fraud and fraudulent inducement claims, pinpointing the precise opportunities that Rice forewent on the basis of Defendants' actions, and the effect of Defendants' actions on the market for Rice's CNT. (Instrument No. 60).

Plaintiff's Second Amended Complaint explains in detail how Rice was placed in a worse position after Defendants' alleged fraud. (Instruments No. 60 at 17-21; No. 67 at 5-6). Plaintiff alleges sufficient facts regarding Rice's opportunities, absent Defendants' fraud, to license the technology at issue to other members of the relevant market, including companies such as Wisepower and Toray, in addition to the opportunity to license to Samsung independent of any Amended Agreement with Unidym. (Instrument No. 60 at 19). Defendants argue that the addition of more companies that Rice could have licensed to prior to the 2010 Amended Agreement, does not demonstrate that Rice could have licensed the CNT absent Unidym's involvement, without more facts to suggest that Rice in fact took concrete steps to pursue such alternative licensing deals. (Instrument No. 75 at 2-3).

6 Viewing the pleadings in the light most favorable to Plaintiff, Defendants' alleged actions induced Rice to pursue an Amended Agreement, instead of pursuing damages for breach of its original 2007 Agreement. (Instrument No. 60 at 18-19); see Turner v. Pleasant, 663 F.3d 770, 775 (5th Cir. 2011) (finding that all well-pleaded facts are viewed in the light most favorable to the plaintiff). Plaintiff further alleges that it forewent opportunities to license its technology to Samsung, Wisepower, Toray, and other companies on the basis of fraudulent information provided by Defendants. (Instrument No. 60 at 19). The Court's July 23, 2015 Order previously found that Rice would not have entered into the Amended Agreement if a true market existed to license Rice's technology to Samsung or others, because the Amended Agreement offered "demonstrably less favorable terms." (Instrument No. 59 at 13). However, Plaintiff's Second Amended Complaint specifically alleges that Defendants' fraudulent representations about the nature of the Amended Agreement induced Rice to accept detrimental terms. (Instrument No. 60 at 19). In light of these repleaded facts, Rice's acceptance of an agreement with less favorable terms than its 2007 Agreement actually supports its fraud claims. Moreover, Plaintiff's assertion that Samsung, Wisepower, and Toray were interested in its technology is plausible based on the facts as repleaded, as evidenced by the rapid monetization by Unidym of that technology after the Amended Agreement was executed. (Instrument No. 19-20).

Plaintiff further alleges that after the Amended Agreement with Unidym, and the subsequent termination of that agreement in 2011, Rice's technology suffered from "ongoing difficulty of overcoming the confusion in the marketplace related to the Unidym license." (Instrument No. 60 at 21). Rice's Second Amended Complaint offers further support for its argument that, but for Defendants' actions, Rice would have been in a better position to monetize its technology. (Instrument 60 at 20-21). Defendants' respond by arguing that any suggestion of a subsequent cloud over Rice's CNT fails to account for other market forces, such as a simple lack of interest in Rice's technology. (Instrument No. 75 at 3).

Defendants assertion that Samsung's sublicense on Rice's CNT would not have an effect on the value of that technology is not logical in light of the claims raised in Plaintiff's Second Amended Complaint. See (Instrument No. 63 at 16-17). Plaintiff plausibly alleges in its Opposition to Defendant Arrowhead's Motion to Dismiss that Samsung did not pursue a deal with Rice after the termination of the Amended Agreement with Unidym because Samsung "already had the rights to license the technology for free." (Instrument No. 69 at 13). In addition, Plaintiff plausibly asserts that other companies were not willing to take a license, or were only willing to take a license at significantly reduced rates, because Samsung retained an option to take a license at any time. (Instrument No. 69 at 13). Defendants' alleged actions, outlined in detail in the Second Amended Complaint, were a plausible proximate cause of Samsung's acquisition of a royalty free option to use Rice's technology. (Instrument No. 60 at 11-14). Plaintiff's allegation regarding a cloud on its technology subsequent to the Unidym deal is further supported by Plaintiff's inability to monetize the technology even in a much later license deal with IPXnano, LLC. See (Instrument No. 60 at 21). Viewing the alleged facts in the light most favorable to Plaintiff, Samsung's retention of a royalty free option on Rice's technology plausibly could have caused a cloud on the market for that technology. See (Instrument No. 67 at 6).

Accordingly, the Court finds that Plaintiff has adequately repleaded the element of causation in its fraud and fraudulent inducement claims against Defendants. See Benchmark, 343 F.3d at 724; Marathon, 106 S.W.3d at 727.

B.

Defendant Arrowhead claims that Plaintiff has failed to specifically plead consequential damages as required by Rule 9(g) of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure. (Instrument No. 63 at 21). In order to support the premise that consequential damages must be specifically plead, Defendant Arrowhead cites Great Am. Indemnity Co. v. Brown, 307 F.2d 306, 308 (5th Cir. 1962). Applying the Fifth's Circuit rubric from Brown, Plaintiff argues that the Second Amended Complaint sufficiently pleads consequential damages. (Instrument No. 69 at 14).

7 In Brown, the Fifth Circuit held that Rule 9(g) of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure is "designed to inform defending parties as to the nature of the damages claimed in order to avoid surprise; and to inform the court of the substance of the complaint." Brown, 307 F.2d at 308; (Instrument No. 69 at 14). Plaintiff's Second Amended Complaint pleads that Rice was damaged in its ability to license to other parties, and if not for Defendant's actions, Rice would have avoided subsequent damages by terminating its 2007 Agreement with Unidym. (Instrument No. 60 at 23, 25). Therefore, Plaintiff's allegations sufficiently allege consequential damages such as to place Defendants on notice of the nature of the damages claimed, and to meet the Rule 9(g) pleading standard. See Brown, 307 F.2d at 308.

Accordingly, the Court finds that Plaintiff has adequately pleaded consequential damages for fraud against Defendants.

C.

The Court's July 23, 2015 Order found that Rice's fraud and fraudulent inducement claims as pleaded against Arrowhead were barred by the statute of frauds. (Instrument No. 59 at 16). The Court found that Arrowhead's assurances that Unidym would perform the Amended Agreement, were not actionable because the statute of frauds prevents pleading breach of contract claims disguised as fraud claims. See (Instrument No. 59 at 15-16). Plaintiff's Second Amended Complaint repleads its fraud and fraudulent inducement against Arrowhead, Tilley and Miller as torts independent of Unidym's breach, and therefore, outside the purview of the statute of frauds. (Instrument No. 60 at 22-25). Defendants again argue that Plaintiff's fraud and fraudulent inducement claims are barred by the statute of frauds. (Instrument No. 61 at 13; No. 63 at 9).

A "promise by one person to answer for the debt, default, or miscarriage of another person" is "not enforceable unless the promise or agreement, or a memorandum of it is (1) in writing; and (2) signed by the person to be charged with the promise or agreement or by someone lawfully authorized to sign for him." Tex. Bus. & Com. Code § 26.01(b)(2). This rule applies to sureties and guaranties. See Charles E. Beard, Inc. v. Cameronics Tech. Corp., 729 F. Supp. 528, 531 (E.D. Tex. 1989) aff'd sub nom. Charles E. Beard, Inc. v. McDonnell Douglas Corp., 939 F.2d 280 (5th Cir. 1991). Furthermore, plaintiffs cannot rely on fraud claims to circumvent the statute of frauds and recover the benefit of an unenforceable bargain. Haase v. Glazner, 62 S.W.3d 795, 799 (Tex. 2001). Where a plaintiff seeks "to recover what he would have gained had the promise been performed, it is apparent that his action, while cast in language sounding in tort, is an indirect attempt to recover for the breach of the unenforceable promise and is, therefore, barred by the statute of frauds." Webber v. M.W. Kellogg Co., 720 S.W.2d 124, 129 (Tex. App.—Houston 1986, write ref'd n.r.e.) (citations omitted).

Plaintiff's Second Amended Complaint seeks to hold Defendants liable for harm allegedly caused by Defendants' fraud. (Instruments No. 60 at 24-26; No. 67 at 21; No. 69 at 15). Plaintiff claims that Defendants' alleged fraud prevented a direct deal between Plaintiff and Samsung, rather than money lost by Unidym's breach of contract. (Instrument No. 60 at 24-26). Plaintiff claims "out-of-pocket" damages as opposed to "benefit of the bargain" damages, which it argues are not barred by the statute of frauds. See Haase, 62 S.W.3d at 799-800.

The statute of frauds may not be used as a shield to execute a fraud. United States v. Henderson, 19 F.3d 917, 923 (5th Cir. 1994). Plaintiff's Second Amended Complaint pinpoints the consequences of the alleged fraud by Arrowhead, Tilley and Miller such as to avoid the issue of the statute of frauds. (Instruments No. 60 at 24-26; No. 67 at 21; No. 69 at 15). Rice now focuses its fraud and fraudulent inducement claims on the foregone licensing opportunities prior to the signing of the Amended Agreement, as well as the subsequent "cloud" on its CNT, hindering monetization of its technology even after the Amended Agreement termination. Since Plaintiff has now pleaded fraud claims apart from the contract, the statute of frauds does not apply. See Lam v. Phuong Nguyen, 335 S.W.3d 786, 790 (Tex. App. 2011) (finding that statute of frauds does not apply to reliance damages that are not part of the benefit of the alleged bargain between the parties).

8 Accordingly, the Court finds that Plaintiff's fraud and fraudulent inducement claims against Defendants, as repleaded in the Second Amended Complaint, are not barred by the statute of frauds. See Tex. Bus. & Com. Code § 26.01(b)(2); Nguyen, 335 S.W.3d at 790.

D.

i.

Arrowhead argues that Plaintiff's fraudulent inducement claim can only be brought against a party to the Amended Agreement. (Instruments No. 61 at 15; No. 63 at 14). Plaintiff argues that by partaking in the benefits of the fraud, Arrowhead should be directly liable for fraudulent inducement, regardless of its relationship to the contract at issue. (Instrument No. 69 at 16-17).

As discussed extensively in the Court's July 23, 2015 Order, asserting a fraudulent inducement claim against a third party to the contract is inconsistent with Texas case law. In "a fraudulent inducement claim, the elements of fraud must be established as they relate to an agreement between the parties." Haase, 62 S.W.3d at 798-99. Fraudulent inducement is "a species of fraud that requires the plaintiff and defendant to have entered into an enforceable contract." Bohnsack v. Varco, L.P., 668 F.3d 262, 272-73 (5th Cir. 2012). While a fraudulent inducement claim may be brought against the agent of a contracting party, absent such an agency relationship, such claims against third parties fail. See River Capital Advisors of N. Carolina, Inc. v. FCS Advisors, Inc., No. 4:10-CV-471, 2011 WL 831282, at *6 (E.D. Tex. Feb. 7, 2011), see also Kingston v. Helm, 82 S.W.3d 755 (Tex. App.—Corpus Christi 2002, pet. denied).

"An agent is one who is authorized by a person or entity to transact business or manage some affair for the person or entity." Townsend v. Univ. Hosp.-Univ. of Colorado, 83 S.W.3d 913, 921 (Tex. App.—Texarkana 2002, pet. denied). The existence of an agency relationship is a question of law based on the established facts. Ross v. Texas One Partnership, 796 S.W.2d 206, 210 (Tex. App.—Dallas 1990, writ denied, per curiam, 806 S.W.2d 222 (1991)). The party alleging agency has the burden to prove such a relationship. Buchoz v. Klein, 184 S.W.2d 271, 271 (Tex.1944).

In its Second Amended Complaint, Rice has still not alleged that Arrowhead was acting in an agency capacity for Unidym. Plaintiff has alleged that Unidym was a subsidiary of Arrowhead. (Instrument No. 60 at 5). The fact that Arrowhead was Unidym's parent company does not establish agency. See McFee v. Chevron Int'l Oil Co., 753 S.W.2d 469, 471 (Tex. App.—Houston [1st Dist.] 1988, no writ). Plaintiff continues to allege that Arrowhead had its own interests in the Amended Agreement separate and apart from those of Unidym. (Instrument No. 60 at 7). According to Plaintiff, Arrowhead wanted Plaintiff and Unidym to amend the 2007 License, so that Arrowhead could later sell Unidym to Wisepower. (Instrument No. 60 at 16).

Accordingly, the Court finds that Plaintiff has failed to plead a cognizable fraudulent inducement claim directly against Arrowhead. Arrowhead's motion to dismiss as to ii.

Plaintiff's fraudulent inducement claim against Arrowhead is GRANTED. (Instrument No. 63 at 21-22).

The existence of an agency relationship is a question of law based on the established facts. Ross v. Texas One Partnership, 796 S.W.2d 206, 210 (Tex. App.—Dallas 1990, writ denied, per curiam, 806 S.W.2d 222 (1991)). The party alleging agency has the burden to prove such a relationship. Buchoz v. Klein, 184 S.W.2d 271, 271 (Tex.1944).

9 Here, Plaintiff has alleged that Tilley and Miller acted as dual agents of Arrowhead and Unidym, and made a series of representations that induced Rice to enter into the Amended Agreement with Unidym. (Instrument No. 60 at 22). Defendants Tilley and Miller do not contest that they acted as agents of Unidym in the period leading up to the execution of the 2010 Amended Agreement. (Instrument No. 61 at 15). However, Defendants Tilley and Miller argue, as they did regarding Plaintiff's fraud claim, that Rice did not suffer an injury through entering into the 2010 Amended Agreement. (Instrument No. 61 at 15). As discussed extensively above, Plaintiff's Second Amended Complaint has repleaded its fraud and fraudulent inducement claims to stand independently of a contract action, emphasizing that Rice seeks redress for injuries for failure to terminate its 2007 Agreement with Unidym, and for subsequent tarnishment of its CNT patents following the termination of the Amended Agreement. (Instruments No. 60 at 17-21; No. 67 at 5-6).

Moreover, Plaintiff has repleaded with particularity the circumstances constituting fraudulent inducement by Tilley and Miller. Plaintiff's Second Amended Complaint details specific meetings or conversations between Tilley and Miller, and Nila Bhakuni, Director of the Office of Technology Transfer, in June through September of 2010. (Instrument No. 60 at 13-14). The Second Amended Complaint alleges Tilley and Miller made statements that induced Rice to enter into the Amended Agreement, with knowledge that the benefits they were offering would not be realized by Rice. (Instrument No. 60 at 11-14).

Defendants Tilley and Miller's Motion to Dismiss also argues that Rice has failed to establish its fraud claims specifically against Miller. (Instrument No. 61 at 7-8). However, as Rice's pleadings point out, the Second Amended Complaint specifies with sufficient particularity the type of assertions made by Tilley and Miller in its meetings with Rice to induce its entry into the Amended Agreement, and the specific dates, times, and persons present at those meetings. (Instruments No. 60 at 4, 7, 8-9, 9-15, 22; No. 67 at 23).

Accordingly, the Court finds that Plaintiff has adequately pleaded a fraudulent inducement claim against Tilley and Miller. *Benchmark Elec., Inc. v. J.M. Huber Corp., 343 F.3d 719, 724 (5th Cir. 2003).

E.

The Court's July 23, 2015 Order found that Rice's fraud claims as pleaded against Arrowhead were barred by the "independent injury doctrine" and "economic loss rule." (Instrument No. 59 at 19-20). Defendants now argue that Plaintiff's Second Amended Complaint does not remedy the previously identified pleading deficiencies, and that Plaintiff's fraud claims remain barred by the independent injury doctrine. (Instruments No. 61 at 10; No. 63 at 10).

The "independent injury doctrine" and "economic loss rule" essentially refer to the same principle under Texas law. *LVI Facility Servs., Inc. v. Watson Rd. Holding Corp., No. A-12-CV-672-LY, 2013 WL 5519588, at *11 (W.D. Tex. Oct. 1, 2013). Texas courts have consistently recognized that "mere nonfeasance under a contract creates liability only for breach of contract." Crawford v. Ace Sign, Inc., 917 S.W.2d 12, 13 (Tex. 1996). "Thus, tort damages are generally not recoverable unless the plaintiff suffered an injury that is independent and separate from the economic losses recoverable under a breach of contract claim." Esty v. Beal Bank S.S.B., 298 S.W.3d 280, 301 (Tex. App.—Dallas 2009, no pet.). This rule does not apply to fraudulent inducement claims, and "tort damages are recoverable for a fraudulent inducement claim irrespective of whether the fraudulent representations are later subsumed in a contract or whether the plaintiff only suffers an economic loss related to the subject matter of the contract." Formosa Plastics Corp. USA v. Presidio Engineers & Contractors, Inc., 960 S.W.2d 41, 47 (Tex. 1998) The independent injury rule, however, does apply to claims for negligent misrepresentation and to claims for fraud. Esty, 298 S.W.3d at 301.

10 The parties dispute whether the independent injury doctrine, or economic loss rule, precludes recovery for tort claims brought by non-contracting parties. The economic loss rule can apply where there is no privity of contract, but the rule "does not swallow all claims between contractual and commercial strangers." Sharyland Water Supply Corp. v. City of Alton, 354 S.W.3d 407, 419 (Tex. 2011). "In deciding whether the economic loss rule applies [courts] examine the source of the defendant's duty and the nature of the claimed injury." Clark v. PFPP Ltd. P'ship, 455 S.W.3d 283, 288 (Tex. App.—Dallas 2015, no pet.). "To determine whether the claim sounds in tort or contract, the focus is on the substance of the cause of action and not simply the manner in which it was pleaded." Id. "[A] party states a tort claim when the duty allegedly breached is independent of the contractual undertaking and the harm suffered is not merely the economic loss of a contractual benefit." Chapman Custom Homes, Inc. v. Dallas Plumbing Co., 445 S.W.3d 716, 718 (Tex. 2014).

Plaintiff's Second Amended Complaint repleads beyond Plaintiff's prior contract-based loss theory. (Instrument No. 60 at 13-16). Plaintiff now alleges that its injuries encompass more than the failure of Unidym to satisfy its obligations under the Amended Agreement. (Instrument No. 60 at 13-16). As discussed with respect to causation, the Court has already established that Plaintiff has adequately repleaded causation with respect to injuries beyond those emanating from the Amended Agreement itself. Plaintiff now alleges more than merely the economic loss of a contractual benefit. Plaintiff repleaded distinct injuries arising from Defendants' alleged fraud, including market harm that would not have occurred but for the Defendants' alleged misrepresentations. Plaintiff now seeks damages distinct from simply the benefit of the bargain between Rice and Unidym, and to that extent, Rice has adequately pleaded an injury independent from the contract.

Furthermore, the Court finds that the independent injury doctrine does not apply to fraudulent inducement claims. See Esty, 298 S.W.3d at 301. Accordingly, the independent injury doctrine has no bearing as against Plaintiff's surviving claim against Tilley and Miller for fraudulent inducement.

Accordingly, the Court finds that Plaintiff's fraud claims against Defendants, as repleaded in the Second Amended Complaint, are not barred by the independent injury doctrine.

F.

Rice's Second Amended Complaint adds a new cause of action asserting that Arrowhead is vicariously liable "for the fraudulent inducement and fraud committed by Unidym, Tilley, and Miller." (Instrument No. 60 at 26). "[A]gency [and] vicarious liability...are not, in and of themselves, independent causes of action." Crooks v. Moses, 138 S.W.3d 629, 637 (Tex. App.— Dallas 2004, no pet.). Instead, "[f]or these doctrines to be applicable in this context, the alleged tortfeasor must, in fact, be liable for damages. In other words, if the alleged tortfeasor is not liable as a matter of law, then determination of agency and vicarious liability issues are never reached." Id.

Defendant Arrowhead argues that it is not vicariously liable for the actions of Tilley and Miller because Rice has not adequately pleaded fraud or fraudulent inducement by Tilley and Miller. (Instrument No. 63 at 23). Defendant Arrowhead further argues that it cannot be held vicariously liable for the actions of Unidym as a matter of law, because Unidym was a subsidiary company. (Instrument No. 63 at 23-24).

Under Texas law it is well established that an "employer may be vicariously liable for an employee's misrepresentations committed within the scope of employment even though the employer had no knowledge of the fraud or misrepresentations and received no benefit from them." Bank of Texas, NA. v. Glenny, 405 S.W.3d 310, 317 (Tex. App. 2013). Plaintiff has pleaded that Arrowhead is vicariously liable for fraud and fraudulent inducement on the basis of the actions of its agents, Tilley and Miller. (Instrument No. 63 at 23-24). This Court has found that fraudulent inducement claims has been adequately pleaded as against Tilley and Miller. The allegations in the Second Amended Complaint establish that Tilley and Miller were acting as agents of Arrowhead at the time they acted to induce Rice to enter into the Amended Agreement. (Instrument No. 60 at 10). The Complaint alleges that Tilley was acting as "Vice President, Advanced Materials for Arrowhead," and Miller was acting as "Vice President, Business Development for Arrowhead." (Instrument No. 60 at 10).

11 Accordingly, Plaintiff has adequately pleaded that Arrowhead is vicariously liable for the fraudulent inducement committed by Tilley and Miller.

 © 2025 Thomson Reuters. No claim to original U.S. Government Works.

To the extent Rice alleges that Arrowhead is vicariously liable for torts committed by Unidym, that theory fails as a matter of law. The Fifth Circuit has explained that, "[g]enerally, there is no vicarious liability under Texas law if the parent and the subsidiary corporations are entirely separate legal entities," as Arrowhead and Unidym are here. Am. Eagle Ins. Co. v. United Technologies Corp., 48 F.3d 142, 147 (5th Cir. 1995). See also Dkt. 59, at 18 ("the fact that Arrowhead is Unidym's parent company does not establish agency"). Instead, the parent can be vicariously liable for its subsidiary only where the corporate form can be disregarded, which is allowed only in narrow and exceptional circumstances. Town Hall Estates-Whitney, Inc. v Winters, 220 S.W.3d 71, 86 (Tex. App.—Waco 2007, no pet.). Rice has simply not pled that it can pierce the corporate veil so as to implicate Arrowhead for Unidym's torts. (Instrument No. 60).

Accordingly, Rice's allegation that Arrowhead is vicariously liable for the actions of Unidym fails as a matter of law.

IV.

Based on the foregoing, IT IS HEREBY ORDERED THAT Arrowhead's motion to dismiss is GRANTED in part and DENIED in part. (Instrument No. 61). IT IS FURTHER ORDERED THAT Tilley and Miller's motion to dismiss is DENIED. (Instrument No. 63).

The Clerk shall enter this Order and provide a copy to all parties.

SIGNED on this the 8th day of March, 2016, at Houston, Texas.

All Citations

Not Reported in Fed. Supp., 2016 WL 3223313

Footnotes

1 Matter which a court may take judicial notice includes, for example, matters of public record. See Fin. Acquisition Partners LP v. Blackwell, 440 F.3d 278, 286 (5th Cir. 2006).

End of Document

© 2025 Thomson Reuters. No claim to original U.S. Government Works.

CASE NO. 46

2023 WL 4240277
Only the Westlaw citation
is currently available.
United States District Court,
S.D. Texas, Houston Division.

Adam LEE, et al., Plaintiffs,
v.
SAMSUNG ELECTRONICS AMERICA, INC., Defendant.

No.
4
:
21
-
cv
-
1321
|
Signed June 28, 2023

Attorneys and Law Firms

Stuart Andrew Davidson, Anny M. Martin, Robbins Geller Rudman & Dowd LLP, Baco Raton, FL, Eric S. Dwoskin, Bradley M. Beall, Robbins Geller, Boca Raton, FL, Alexander D. Kruzyk, Pardell, Kruzyk & Giribaldo PLLC, Austin, TX, Aaron David Radbil, Greenwald Davidson Radbil PLLC, Austin, TX, for Plaintiffs Adam Lee, Kimberly Einiger, Howard Roscoe, Anastasia Danilova.

Aaron David Radbil, Greenwald Davidson Radbil PLLC, Austin, TX, Anny M. Martin, Stuart Andrew Davidson, Robbins Geller Rudman & Dowd LLP, Baco Raton, FL, for Plaintiffs Keith Covington, Myra Mendez, Paula Murray, Gregory Elliott.

Christopher Mohr Odell, Arnold & Porter Kaye Scholer LLP, Houston, TX, Elisabeth S. Theodore, Arnold & Porter Kaye Scholer LLP, Washington, DC, Robert J. Katerberg, Arnold and Porter, Washington, DC, Elie Salamon, Arnold & Porter Kay Scholer LLP, New York, NY, for Defendant.

MAGISTRATE JUDGE'S REPORT AND RECOMMENDATION ON DEFENDANT'S MOTION TO DISMISS PLAINTIFFS' CONSOLIDATED THIRD AMENDED COMPLAINT

Dena Hanovice Palermo, United States Magistrate Judge

1 Before the Court is Samsung Electronics America, Inc.'s ("Defendant") motion to dismiss Plaintiffs' Consolidated Third Amended Complaint. Def.'s Mot. Dismiss Consol. Third Am. Compl., ECF No. 91.[1] Plaintiffs Adam Lee, Kimberly Einiger, Howard Roscoe, Anastasia Danilova, Keith Covington, Myra Mendez, Paula Murray, and Gregory Elliot (collectively "Plaintiffs") filed the instant case based on their purchases of Defendant's black stainless steel appliances, and after numerous opportunities to amend, asserted claims for violations of various state consumer protection laws and common law unjust enrichment. Pls.' Consol. Third Am. Compl., ECF No. 87 ("complaint").[2] Defendant moves to dismiss all Plaintiffs' claims, arguing that they are time-barred and fail to sufficiently allege violations of the consumer protection statutes and claims for unjust enrichment. ECF No. 91 at 11–12.

 © 2025 Thomson Reuters. No claim to original U.S. Government Works.

In response, Plaintiffs argue that pursuant to each state's discovery rule, their claims are timely, and that their complaint sufficiently puts Defendant on notice of their claims. Pls.' Resp., ECF No. 101 at 7–29.

Based on a careful review of the complaint, the Court recommends that the motion to dismiss be granted in part and denied in part.[3] Specifically, the Court finds that aside from Myra Mendez's claims which are not tolled, Plaintiffs' claims are timely under each state's discovery rule. The Court further finds that Plaintiffs have adequately pled each of their claims, except for Adam Lee's unconscionability claim under the TDPTA.

I. BACKGROUND.

2 Plaintiffs bring this action on behalf of themselves, and all others similarly situated, who purchased Samsung appliances with a "black stainless steel" finish. ECF No. 87 ¶¶ 1–4, 25. The gravamen of Plaintiffs' complaint is that they paid an additional cost for the finish of their appliances based on Defendant's representation that their appliances' finish is a durable "black stainless steel." Id. ¶¶ 5, 17, 20, 23, 24. Plaintiffs claim that the appliances do not have a black stainless steel finish, but instead are coated with a thin plastic, which is prone to peel, chip, flake, discolor, and prematurely degrade. Id. ¶¶ 5, 21. Plaintiffs also allege that "Defendant heavily promotes its Black Stainless Steel Appliances as a premium kitchen product with a superior aesthetic," specifically referencing advertising these appliances "as a premium, durable, luxury metal finish." Id. ¶¶ 2–3, 16–17, 20–21.

In its motion to dismiss, Defendant makes four arguments. First, Defendant contends that Plaintiffs' consumer protection claims fail because they do not sufficiently allege: (1) a misrepresentation or omission; (2) a duty to disclose; (3) materiality; and (4) reliance or causation. ECF No. 91 at 16–25, 25–27, 27–29, 29–31. Second, Defendant argues that Plaintiffs' conclusory allegations of unfair or unconscionable practices fail to state a claim. Id. at 31–32. Third, Defendant contends that Plaintiffs cannot raise a claim for unjust enrichment due to adequate remedies available by statute. Id. at 32–33. Finally, Defendant asserts that Murray's unjust enrichment claim, and all the claims asserted by Lee, Danilova, Covington, and Mendez are time-barred. Id. at 33–35.

II. UNDER FEDERAL RULE OF CIVIL PROCEDURE 12(B)(6), THE COURT MAY DISMISS A COMPLAINT FOR FAILING TO STATE A CLAIM.

A court may dismiss a complaint for "failure to state a claim upon which relief can be granted." FED. R. CIV. P. 12(b)(6). "Motions to dismiss under Rule 12(b)(6) are viewed with disfavor and are rarely granted." ADR Int'l Ltd. v. Inst. for Supply Mgmt. Inc., No. 4:22-CV-01914, 2023 WL 2719446, at *2 (S.D. Tex. Mar. 30, 2023) (quoting Lormand v. U.S. Unwired, Inc., 565 F.3d 228, 232 (5th Cir. 2009)).

"Under Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 8(a)(2), a pleading must contain a short and plain statement of the claim showing that the pleader is entitled to relief." Pierce v. Hous. Cmty. Coll. Sys., No. 4:21-CV-00346, 2022 WL 4292337, at *2 (S.D. Tex. Sept. 15, 2022), appeal dismissed, No. 22-20527, 2022 WL 19401688 (5th Cir. Oct. 21, 2022) (quoting Ashcroft v. Iqbal, 556 U.S. 662, 677–78 (2009)) (cleaned up). The complaint must include "more than labels and conclusions, and a formulaic recitation of the elements of a cause of action will not do." Lincoln v. Turner, 874 F.3d 833, 839 (5th Cir. 2017) (quoting Bell Atl. Corp. v. Twombly, 550 U.S. 544, 555 (2007)) (cleaned up).

"[A] complaint must contain sufficient factual matter ... to state a claim to relief that is plausible on its face." Gross v. United States, No. 22-40230, 2023 WL 2401585, at *2 (5th Cir. Mar. 8, 2023) (quoting Iqbal, 556 U.S. at 678). "A claim is plausible when the [pled] factual contents allow the court to draw the reasonable inference that the defendant is liable for the misconduct alleged." ADR, 2023 WL 2719446, at *2 (quoting Bowlby v. City of Aberdeen, Miss., 681 F.3d 215, 219 (5th Cir. 2012)). "[A] complaint 'does not need detailed factual allegations,' but must provide the plaintiff's grounds for entitlement to relief—including factual allegations that when assumed to be true 'raise a right to relief above the speculative level.' " Id. (quoting Culliver v. Taylor, 503 F.3d 397, 401 (5th Cir. 2007)).

"Ultimately, the question for the court to decide is whether the complaint states a valid claim when viewed in the light most favorable to the plaintiff." Oliveria v. City of Jersey Vill., No. 4:21-CV-03564, 2023 WL 2652252, at *3 (S.D. Tex. Mar. 27, 2023). The court should not "strain to find inferences favorable to the plaintiffs." Stringer v. Town of Jonesboro, 986 F.3d 502, 512 (5th Cir. 2021) (quoting R2 Invs. LDC v. Phillips, 401 F.3d 638, 642 (5th Cir. 2005)). Importantly, the court should not evaluate the merits of the allegation but must satisfy itself only that the plaintiff has adequately pled a legally cognizable claim. Bright v. City of Killeen, Tex., 532 F. Supp. 3d 389, 396 (W.D. Tex. 2021) (citing U. S. ex rel. Riley v. St. Luke's Episcopal Hosp., 355 F.3d 370, 376 (5th Cir. 2004)).

3 The court must accept well-pled facts as true, but legal conclusions are not entitled to the same assumption of truth. Oliveria, 2023 WL 2652252, at *3 (citing Iqbal, 556 U.S. at 678–79). A court may consider "the complaint, any documents attached to the complaint, and any documents attached to the motion to dismiss that are central to the claim and referenced by the complaint." ADR, 2023 WL 2719446, at *6 (quoting Lone Star Fund V (U.S.), L.P. v. Barclays Bank PLC, 594 F.3d 383, 387 (5th Cir. 2010)).

III. PLAINTIFFS' TDTPA, UCL, FAL, CLRA, CHAPTER 93A, TEXAS, CALIFORNIA, AND MASSACHUSETTS UNJUST ENRICHMENT CLAIMS ARE TIMELY.

"A statute of limitations may support dismissal under Rule 12(b)(6) where it is evident from the plaintiff's pleadings that the action is barred and the pleadings fail to raise some basis for tolling ...." Click v. Gen. Motors LLC, No. 2:18-CV-455, 2020 WL 3118577, at *13–14 (S.D. Tex. Mar. 27, 2020) (citing Jones v. Alcoa, Inc., 339 F.3d 359, 366 (5th Cir. 2003)). Under Rule 12(b)(6), Defendant bears the burden to demonstrate that the factual allegations in the complaint show that the action is time-barred and fail to raise a basis for tolling. Simon v. Roche Diagnostics Corp., No. 4:20-CV-3625, 2020 WL 9457065, at *1 (S.D. Tex. Dec. 4, 2020), aff'd, 851 F. App'x 533 (5th Cir. 2021). "The Fifth Circuit has indicated that pleading a factual basis for tolling limitations is enough to preclude dismissal on the basis of limitations in the context of a Rule 12(b)(6) motion." Click, 2020 WL 3118577, at *13 (citing Wellborn v. Sears, Roebuck & Co., 970 F.2d 1420, 1425 (5th Cir. 1992)).

Defendant argues that Murray's unjust enrichment claim and all claims brought by Lee, Danilova, Covington, and Mendez are time-barred based on their respective purchase dates and that the complaint fails to identify circumstances that give rise to applying the discovery rule. ECF No. 91 at 33. Plaintiffs do not contest that limitations have run, but instead respond that the discovery rule tolled limitations. ECF No. 101 at 29–31.

The Court finds that Mendez's claim for unjust enrichment under New York law and claim under GBL § 349 are time-barred. Plaintiffs other objected-to claims are timely filed.

A. Mendez's claims are time-barred.

GBL § 349 claims are subject to a three-year statute of limitations. Malek v. AXA Equitable Life Ins. Co., No. 20-CV-04885, 2023 WL 2682408, at *8 (E.D.N.Y. Mar. 29, 2023). The statute of limitations "runs from the time when the plaintiff was injured." Id. (cleaned up). "[I]n a case involving alleged omissions or misrepresentations, the injury occurs when the omission or misrepresentation was made." Id. Mendez purchased her appliances in 2017, and therefore, the three-year limitations period expired in 2020, well before she filed suit on November 7, 2022. See Pls. Second Am. Compl., ECF No. 61; ECF No. 87 ¶ 105.

The New York Court of Appeals has rejected the argument that a GBL § 349 claim's statute of limitations may be determined to run from the time the plaintiff learns or reasonably should have learned that she was deceived. Malek, 2023 WL 2682408, at *8 (citing Corsello v. Verizon N.Y., Inc., 18 N.Y.3d 777, 789 (2012); Wender v. Gilberg Agency, 276 A.D.2d 311, 312 (1st Dep't 2000) (GBL § 349 claims were "time-barred as the three-year limitations period ... the date of discovery rule is not applicable and cannot serve to extend that limitations period")). Accordingly, Mendez's contention that her GBL § 349 claim was tolled pursuant to the discovery rule is unavailing. [4]

4 Unjust enrichment claims seeking monetary damages are also subject to a three-year limitations period. Carter v. CIOX Health, LLC, 260 F. Supp. 3d 277, 289 (W.D.N.Y. 2017). "[A]n unjust enrichment claim accrues 'upon occurrence of the wrongful act giving rise to the duty of restitution.' " Lim v. Radish Media Inc., No. 22-1610, 2023 WL 2440160, at *1 (2d Cir. Mar. 10, 2023) (quoting Golden Pac. Bancorp v. F.D.I.C., 273 F.3d 509, 520 (2d Cir. 2001)). As above, Mendez's unjust enrichment claim expired in July 2020, before she filed suit. ECF No. 87 ¶ 105.

The discovery rule also does not toll unjust enrichment claims under New York law. See Malek, 2023 WL 2682408, at *12; Cohen v. S.A.C. Trading Corp., 711 F.3d 353, 364 (2d Cir. 2013) (citing Coombs v. Jervier, 906 N.Y.S.2d 267 (2d Dep't 2010)). Therefore, Mendez's GBL § 349 and unjust enrichment claims are time-barred and should be dismissed. [5]

B. Plaintiffs have sufficiently alleged facts demonstrating that their remaining claims are tolled by the discovery rule.

The discovery rule is a limited exception to the statute of limitations that applies " 'when it is difficult for the injured party to learn of the negligent act or omission' with due diligence." Lee v. Samsung Elecs. Am., Inc., No. 4:21-CV-1321, 2022 WL 4243957, at *20 (S.D. Tex. Sept. 13, 2022) (quoting Maroney v. Chip Buerger Custom Homes, Inc., No. 03-17-00355-CV, 2018 WL 3041087, at *2 (Tex. App.—Austin 2018, pet. denied) (mem. op., not designated for publication)). Under the discovery rule, the statute of limitations does not begin to run until the date the plaintiff knew or exercising reasonable diligence, should have known, of the facts giving rise to the cause of action. Id. (citing Computer Associates Intern., Inc. v. Altai, Inc., 918 S.W.2d 453, 455 (Tex. 1996); and J.M. Krupar Constr. Co. v. Rosenberg, 95 S.W.3d 322, 329 (Tex. App.—Houston [1st Dist.] 2002, no pet.)). A plaintiff need not know the full extent of the injury before limitations begin to run. Id.

Defendant argues that the discovery rule is inapplicable because: (1) Plaintiffs disavowed any "defect-related allegations" related to the peeling or chipping of the coating; and (2) Plaintiffs identify Defendant's website and certain periodicals which "disclosed that the appliances had a non-steel coating," thereby discrediting Plaintiffs' argument that peeling had to occur for Plaintiffs to discover the misrepresentation. ECF No. 91 at 34–35. Plaintiffs respond that the discovery rule applies because they could not have known at the time of purchase that their appliances were coated in black plastic, rather than black stainless steel; thus, the misrepresentation was not discoverable until the plastic coating flaked, peeled, or chipped. ECF No. 101 at 29–31.

Plaintiffs do not readopt a defect-related view of their claims, but instead allege that the coating is not what Defendant represented the coating to be. ECF No. 87 ¶¶ 51–53, 55, 56. Plaintiffs would not have known of Defendant's misrepresentation and omission until the plastic coating began to peel, something that steel does not typically do. As the Court previously ruled, "[v]iewing the pleadings in the light most favorable to Plaintiffs, the fact that their appliances were coated in black plastic and not made of black stainless steel could not have been easily discovered at the time of purchase." Lee, 2022 WL 4243957, at *21. Taking their allegations as true, Plaintiffs discovered that their appliances were made with a plastic coating when the finish started to peel, flake, or bubble. See id. The facts alleged do not suggest that Plaintiffs knew or should have known through reasonable diligence about the issue any earlier. See id. (determining the same as to Danilova and Lee). As a result, the Court finds it plausible that the fact that their appliances were coated in black plastic and not made of black stainless steel could not have been easily discovered at the time of purchase. [6] See id.

1. Murray and Covington's unjust enrichment, CLRA, FAL, and UCL claims are not time-barred.

5 Under California law, unjust enrichment claims are subject to a three-year limitations period, which "is not deemed to have accrued until the discovery, by the aggrieved party, of the facts constituting the fraud or mistake.". CAL. CODE CIV. P. § 338(d); see also Corbrus, LLC v. 8th Bridge Cap., Inc., No. 2:19-CV-10182, 2020 WL 4287586, at *11 (C.D. Cal. July 27, 2020) (unjust enrichment claims sounding in fraud are subject to a three-year statute of limitations period).[7] "CLRA and FAL claims are subject to a three-year statute of limitations; UCL claims to a four-year statute [of limitations]." Brown v. Madison Reed, Inc., 622 F. Supp. 3d 786, 799 (N.D. Cal. 2022). "Because the[ ] three [California] statutes 'proscribe misleading, false, or otherwise deceptive practices or statements in transactions for the sale or lease of goods to consumers,' a cause of action under each 'accrues when a defendant misrepresents or omits material information regarding a product or service and a consumer makes a purchase as a result of such deceptive practices.' " Id. The discovery rule applies to claims under the CLRA, FAL, and UCL and unjust enrichment claims under California law. See id.; Beasley v. Conagra Brands, Inc., 374 F. Supp. 3d 869 (N.D. Cal. 2019).

Covington purchased his appliance in August 2018, but alleged that "in September 2022, [he] discovered that the 'black stainless steel' finish on his refrigerator was peeling off, flaking, and prematurely degrading." ECF No. 87 ¶¶ 97, 101. Because his discovery did not take place until September 2022, Covington timely filed his CLRA, UCL, FAL, and unjust enrichment claims on November 7, 2022, less than three years after discovery. See ECF No. 61.

Murray purchased her black stainless steel appliances on May 1, 2019, but "a few months after purchasing, ... [Murray] discovered that the ... finish on her oven and refrigerator was peeling off, flaking, and prematurely degrading." ECF No. 87 ¶¶ 111, 114. Murray timely filed her CLRA, UCL, FAL and unjust enrichment claims on October 22, 2021 because she filed her claims less than three years after discovery. See Murray v. Samsung Electronics America*, Inc.*, Cause No. 4:22-cv-00037, Pl.'s Compl., ECF No. 1.

2. Lee's TDTPA and Texas unjust enrichment claims are timely.

Under the TDTPA, actions "must be commenced within two years after the date on which the false, misleading, or deceptive act or practice occurred or within two years after the consumer discovered or in the exercise of reasonable diligence should have discovered the occurrence of the false, misleading, or deceptive act or practice." TEX. BUS. & COM. CODE § 17.565. Under Texas law, unjust enrichment claims are subject to a two-year limitations period. Lee, 2022 WL 4243957, at *19. The discovery rule applies to unjust enrichment claims. Janvey v. Suarez, 978 F. Supp. 2d 685, 708 (N.D. Tex. 2013); Clark v. Dillard's, Inc., 460 S.W.3d 714, 721–23 (Tex. App.—Dallas 2015, no pet.).

6 Lee purchased his appliances throughout 2016 and 2017 but alleged that he did not discover the "black stainless steel" finish was in fact a plastic coating until mid-2020 when the coating began peeling, flaking, and degrading.

ECF No. 87 ¶¶ 61, 65. Plaintiff timely filed his TDTPA and unjust enrichment claims on April 21, 2021 because he filed suit less than two years after his discovery. See Pl.'s Compl., ECF No.1.

3. Danilova's Chapter 93A and unjust enrichment claims are timely.

Chapter 93A claims are governed by a four-year statute of limitations and unjust enrichment claims are subject to a three-year statute of limitations. MASS. GEN. LAWS ANN. ch. 260, § 5A; Monteferrante v. Williams-Sonoma, Inc., 241 F. Supp. 3d 264, 270 (D. Mass. 2017). Under the discovery rule, which applies to both unjust enrichment and Chapter 93A claims, the "limitations period is subject to tolling until the plaintiff knew or should have known of the alleged injury." Lambert v. Fleet Nat. Bank, 449 Mass. 119, 126 (2007) (citing Albrecht v. Clifford, 436 Mass. 706, 714–715 (2002); Schwartz v. Travelers Indem. Co., 50 Mass.App.Ct. 672, 678 (2001)); Monteferrante, 241 F. Supp. 3d at 274.

Danilova purchased her appliances in August 2016, but alleged that "in mid-2021, [she] discovered that the 'black stainless steel' finish on her appliances was peeling off, flaking, and prematurely degrading." ECF No. 87 ¶¶ 91, 95. Danilova timely filed her Chapter 93A and unjust enrichment claims on July 19, 2021, within three years of her discovery. See Pls.' First Amend. Compl., ECF No. 13.

Defendant's motion to dismiss based on the statute of limitations should be granted as to Mendez's claims, but denied as to Lee, Danilova, Murray, and Covington's claims.

IV. PLAINTIFFS ADEQUATELY STATED CLAIMS FOR CONSUMER FRAUD.

Plaintiffs' complaint asserts claims under the consumer protection statutes of seven different states, alleging that: (1) Defendant misrepresented its appliances' finish by representing the finish as "black stainless steel" and not a thin plastic coating; and (2) unlawfully failed to disclose the thin, plastic coating to consumers. Plaintiffs pursue their consumer claims on both an affirmative misrepresentation and an omission or duty to disclose theories of liability. Defendant argues that Plaintiffs insufficiently pled the following four elements: (1) a misrepresentation or omission; (2) a duty to disclose; (3) materiality; and (4) reliance or causation. ECF Nos. 91 at 17–31; 101 at 7–22; 103 at 6–12.

A. The consumer protection claims share common elements.

"[T]o state a claim under the [T]DTPA, a plaintiff must allege that (1) she 'is a consumer under the DTPA;' (2) that defendant 'committed a false, misleading, or deceptive act under section 17.46(b) of the DTPA, breached an express or implied warranty, or engaged in an unconscionable action or course of action;' and (3) that this act '[was] the producing cause of [plaintiff's] actual damages.' " Hopkins v. Green Dot Corporation, No. 5:16-CV-365-DAE, 2016 WL 4468272, at *4 (W.D. Tex. Aug. 24, 2016) (quoting Brown v. Bank of Galveston, N.A., 963 S.W.2d 511, 513 (Tex. 1998)).

To state a claim under the NDTPA, a plaintiff must allege: (1) "an act of consumer fraud by the defendant;" (2) plaintiff relied on the misrepresentation which caused the harm; and (3) plaintiff suffered damages. Motogolf.com, LLC v. Top Shelf Golf, LLC, 528 F. Supp. 3d 1168, 1178 (D. Nev. 2021), reconsideration denied, No. 220CV00674APGEJY, 2022 WL 834790 (D. Nev. Mar. 21, 2022) (citing Picus v. Wal-Mart Stores, Inc., 256 F.R.D. 651, 658 (D. Nev. 2009)).

7 To state a claim under Chapter 93A, "a complaint must allege that 'a defendant's unfair or deceptive conduct cause[d] customers to receive a product or service worth less than the one for which the customers paid.' " Lee v. Conagra Brands, Inc., 958 F.3d 70, 80 (1st Cir. 2020) (quoting Bellermann v. Fitchburg Gas & Elec. Light Co., 470 Mass. 43, 18 N.E.3d 1050, 1060 n.10 (2014)).

To state a CLRA claim, "a plaintiff must allege: (1) a misrepresentation; (2) reliance on that misrepresentation; and (3) damages caused by that misrepresentation." Rojas-Lozano v. Google, Inc., 159 F. Supp. 3d 1101, 1112 (N.D. Cal. 2016) (citing In re Sony PS3 Other OS Litig., 551 F. App'x 916, 920 (9th Cir.2014); Moore v. Apple, Inc., 73 F. Supp. 3d 1191, 1200 (N.D. Cal. 2014)).

"To state a claim under the UCL, a plaintiff must establish that the practice is either unlawful (i.e., is forbidden by law), unfair (i.e., harm to victim outweighs any benefit) or fraudulent (i.e., is likely to deceive members of the public)." Sud v. Costco Wholesale Corp., 229 F. Supp. 3d 1075, 1084 (N.D. Cal. 2017), aff'd, 731 F. App'x 719 (9th Cir. 2018) (cleaned up). Additionally, a plaintiff must "plead that the alleged misrepresentation was directly related to the plaintiff's injurious conduct, and that the plaintiff actually relied on the alleged misrepresentation." In re Sony Grand Wega KDF-E A10/A20 Series Rear Projection HDTV Television Litig., 758 F. Supp. 2d 1077, 1092 (S.D. Cal. 2010) (citing In re Tobacco II Cases, 46 Cal.4th 298, 326–27, 93 Cal.Rptr.3d 559, 207 P.3d 20 (2009)).

"The FAL makes it unlawful for any person to make or disseminate ... before the public ... any statement ... which is untrue or misleading, and which is known, or which by the exercise of reasonable care should be known, to be untrue or misleading." Dana v. Hershey Co., 180 F. Supp. 3d 652, 668 (N.D. Cal. 2016), aff'd, 730 F. App'x 460 (9th Cir. 2018) (citing CAL. BUS. & PROF. CODE § 17500). [8] Further, the FAL requires that a plaintiff demonstrate that he "suffered injury in fact" and "lost money or property as a result of the [false advertising]." See McCoy v. Nestle USA, Inc, 173 F. Supp. 3d 954, 963 (N.D. Cal. 2016), aff'd sub nom. McCoy v. Nestle USA, Inc., 730 F. App'x 462 (9th Cir. 2018) (quoting Hinojos v. Kohl's Corp., 718 F.3d 1098, 1103 (9th Cir. 2013)).

"[U]nder GBL § 349, a plaintiff must sufficiently allege: '(1) the act or practice was consumer-oriented; (2) the act or practice was misleading in a material respect; and (3) the plaintiff was injured as a result.' " Borenkoff v. Buffalo Wild Wings, Inc., No. 16-CV-8532 (KBF), 2018 WL 502680, at *3 (S.D.N.Y. Jan. 19, 2018) (quoting Spagnola v. Chubb Corp., 574 F.3d 64, 74 (2d Cir. 2009)).

"To state a claim under FDUTPA, a plaintiff must allege three elements: '(1) a deceptive act or unfair practice; (2) causation; and (3) actual damages.' " Gov't Employees Ins. Co. v. Sosa, No. 8:21-CV-2556-VMC-JSS, 2022 WL 18661398, at *4–6 (M.D. Fla. Dec. 29, 2022), report and recommendation adopted sub nom. Gov't Employees Ins. Co. v. Kalin, No. 8:21-CV-2556-VMC-JSS, 2023 WL 240000 (M.D. Fla. Jan. 18, 2023) (quoting Marrache v. Bacardi U.S.A., Inc., 17 F.4th 1084, 1097–98 (11th Cir. 2021)).

8 "To state a claim under SCUTPA, the plaintiff must show '(1) that the defendant engaged in an unlawful trade practice, (2) that the plaintiff suffered actual, ascertainable damages as a result of the defendant's use of the unlawful trade practice, and (3) that the unlawful trade practice engaged in by the defendant had an adverse impact on the public interest.' " PTA-FLA, Inc. v. ZTE Corp., 715 F. App'x 237, 242 (4th Cir. 2017) (quoting Havird Oil Co. v. Marathon Oil Co., 149 F.3d 283, 291 (4th Cir. 1998)).

The Court agrees that there are similar core elements within each of these state claims and follows the parties' lead by addressing each of the four raised issues: misrepresentation or omission, duty to disclose, materiality, and reliance or causation.

B. Plaintiffs sufficiently allege misrepresentation and omission.

Defendant contends that Plaintiff's allegations fail to meet: (1) Rule 9(b)'s standard for fraud; [9] (2) each state's "reasonable consumer" standard; and (3) each state's threshold giving rise to Defendant's duty to disclose. The Court finds that Plaintiffs' complaint contains sufficient allegations to meet both Rule 9(b)'s heightened standard and the "reasonable consumer" standard, and suitably alleges that Defendant had a duty to disclose.

1. Plaintiffs' misrepresentation allegations meet Rule 9(b)'s heightened pleading standard.

Rule 9(b) requires that "a party must state with particularity the circumstances constituting fraud or mistake.' " FED. R. CIV. P. 9(b). "The Fifth Circuit has held that '[a]t a minimum,' the Rule 9(b) standard requires 'that the plaintiff specify the particulars of time, place, and contents of the false representations.' " Apex Transit, LLC v. Bridgestone Americas, Inc., No. 5:21-CV-00053, 2022 WL 10713065, at *3 (S.D. Tex. Mar. 4, 2022) (quoting Williams v. WMX Techs., Inc., 112 F.3d 175, 178 (5th Cir. 1997)). "Stated simply, 'Rule 9(b) requires "the who, what, when, where, and how" to be laid out.' " Canidae, LLC v. Cooper, No. 6:21-CV-0019-H-BU, 2022 WL 3588936, at *13 (N.D. Tex. Aug. 4, 2022), report and recommendation adopted, No. 6:21-CV-019-H-BU, 2022 WL 3588046 (N.D. Tex. Aug. 22, 2022) (quoting Benchmark Elecs., Inc. v. J.M. Huber Corp., 343 F.3d 719, 723 (5th Cir. 2003)).

In their complaint, Plaintiffs allege that Defendant's advertising on Lowe's, Best Buy's, Home Depot's, and their own websites represented the "black stainless steel" finish option was a "black stainless steel" and not a thin, plastic coating. ECF No. 87

¶¶ 40–42. Plaintiffs allege that at the time of their purchases, Defendant advertised and marketed their "black stainless steel" finish as a "premium, durable, luxury metal finish, while simultaneously concealing the truth that it is merely a temporary, thin, black plastic coating easily capable of flaking, peeling, chipping, discoloring, and degrading." Id. ¶ 40. Plaintiffs also allege that on Defendant's website, it advertised that "[t]he premium stainless steel exterior has a special coating to help eliminate fingerprints and smudges – so your fridge always looks its best." Id. ¶ 43. [10]

9 Clearly these allegations establish the who, what, when, where, and how of Plaintiffs' fraudulent misrepresentation claims: Defendant misrepresented that the appliances' finish was "black stainless steel" and not a thin, plastic coating in advertisements and interviews published on its website and on other sellers' websites at the time of Plaintiffs' purchases. The Court finds that Plaintiffs' misrepresentation claims meet Rule 9(b)'s heightened pleading standing.

Defendant also argues that Plaintiffs' alleged misrepresentation that the "black stainless steel" finish was a premium, durable luxury constitutes "non-actionable puffery." ECF No. 91 at 24. "Puffery is defined as 'statements that are generalized, vague and unspecific' such that a reasonable consumer could not rely." Lee, 2022 WL 4243957, at *5 (citing Walters v. Pella Corp., No. 2:14-CV-00544, 2015 WL 2381335, at *5 (D.S.C. May 19, 2015)). "Misrepresentations are not merely puffery or opinion if they are of a material fact." Id. (quoting Click, 2020 WL 3118577, at *4). However, "[a] defendant's superior knowledge of the facts supports treating contrary representations and praise as actionable." Berry v. FCA US, LLC, No. 2:19-CV-00023, 2022 WL 18671067, at *7–8 (S.D. Tex. Mar. 25, 2022).

Here, reading the complaint as a whole, Plaintiff's alleged misrepresentation is that Defendant represented that the finish was "black stainless steel," a material known to be durable and not prone to chipping, peeling, and degrading. The complaint's inclusion of Defendant's other statements that the finish was durable, premium, and luxurious further supports Plaintiffs' allegation that they reasonably assumed that the finish was made of "black stainless steel," not plastic. See Izquierdo v. Panera Bread Co., 450 F. Supp. 3d 453, 461 (S.D.N.Y. 2020) (court considered other representations, such as the defendant's commitment to "clean food" and "menu transparency" in determining whether a reasonable consumer would be misled into thinking the defendant's blueberry bagel was made with real blueberries, instead of imitation blueberries). But, insofar as Plaintiffs seek to raise misrepresentation claims based on Defendant's use of the terms "premium," "practical," "luxury", and "durable", such terms would constitute non-actionable puffery. See Lee, 2022 WL 4243957, at *5.

2. Plaintiffs' omission allegations also meet Rule 9(b)'s heightened pleading standard.

In claims involving omission of facts, "Rule 9(b) typically requires the claimant to plead the type of facts omitted, the place in which the omissions should have appeared, and the way in which the omitted facts made the representations misleading.' " Carroll v. Fort James Corp., 470 F.3d 1171, 1174 (5th Cir. 2006) (quoting Riley, 355 F.3d at 381).

 © 2025 Thomson Reuters. No claim to original U.S. Government Works.

Plaintiffs' omission allegations satisfy Rule 9(b). Plaintiffs allege that:

> Defendant sells the Black Stainless Steel Appliances with a "black stainless steel" finish that it advertises as premium, durable, luxury metal finish, while concealing and omitting that the Black Stainless Steel Appliances are, in fact, not black stainless steel at all, but simply stainless steel coated with a temporary, thin, black plastic material that (unbeknownst to consumers) is prone to peeling, chipping, flaking, discoloring, or prematurely degrading—conditions which stainless steel are not typically subject to.

ECF No. 87 ¶ 5. Plaintiffs also allege that Defendant "was obligated to disclose the true nature of the 'black stainless steel' finish ... because Defendant had exclusive knowledge of the material facts not known to Plaintiffs, since only Defendant had exclusive access to its design calling for the application of a temporary, thin, plastic coating as opposed to the promised premium, durable, luxury metal finish.' " Id. ¶ 52.

10 As alleged, the fact omitted is that the appliances' finish is a thin plastic coating, the place is in the product description, and the omitted facts that make the representations misleading are that the "black stainless steel" option misleads consumers into believing they are purchasing appliances with a black stainless steel finish, rather than appliances coated with thin plastic.

3. Plaintiffs' misrepresentation and omission allegations meet the "reasonable consumer" standard.

Plaintiffs' alleged misrepresentation and omission must also satisfy the "reasonable consumer" standard.[11] See Sharifan v. NeoGenis Labs, Inc., 622 F. Supp. 3d 478, 490 (S.D. Tex. 2022) (TDPTA); State ex rel. Wilson v. Ortho-McNeil-Janssen Pharms., Inc., 777 S.E.2d 176, 193 (S.C. 2015) (SCUTPA); Tomasella v. Nestle USA, Inc., 962 F.3d 60, 71 (1st Cir. 2020) (Chapter 93A); In re Scotts EZ Seed Litig., 304 F.R.D. 397, 409–10 (S.D.N.Y. 2015) (GBL § 349); Becerra v. Dr Pepper/Seven Up, Inc., 945 F.3d 1225, 1228 (9th Cir. 2019) (CLRA, UCL, FAL); Kurimski v. Shell Oil Co., 570 F. Supp. 3d 1228, 1243 (S.D. Fla. 2021) (FDUTPA).

The "reasonable consumer" standard is generally similar in these states: Plaintiffs must "show that members of the public are likely to be deceived" by the alleged misrepresentation or omission. Becerra, 945 F.3d at 1228 (quoting Williams v. Gerber Prods. Co., 552 F.3d 934, 938 (9th Cir. 2008)); Tomasella, 962 F.3d at 71; Suero, 2022 WL 17985657, at *9; Kurimski, 570 F. Supp. 3d at 1243. This means that there is "a probability that a significant portion of the general consuming public or of targeted consumers, acting reasonably in the circumstances, could be misled." Becerra, 945 F.3d at 1228–29 (cleaned up).

Here, Plaintiffs allege that "they, like all ordinary, reasonable consumers, would not have purchased the Black Stainless Steel Appliances or paid a premium price for the 'black stainless steel' finish if they had known that it was simply a temporary, thin, black plastic coating capable of peeling, flaking, and discoloration." ECF No. 87 ¶ 22. Plaintiffs point to Defendant's advertising and marketing of a special, premium, luxury "black stainless steel" finish that, because it is an upgrade, costs more than other finishes. Id. ¶¶ 41–45, 55, 57, 59.

Defendant argues that the reasonable consumer allegations are implausible because: (1) a "black stainless steel" finish does not imply any manufacturing technique; (2) the appliance's plastic coating is fully disclosed on Defendant's website; (3) Defendant publicly disclosed its use of a plastic coating; (4) Defendant's description of "black stainless steel" finish is consistent with widespread industry practice; and (5) the plain meaning of "finish" indicates to consumers that the stainless steel appliance is coated with another material at the completion of manufacturing. ECF No. 91 at 19–25. Defendant's arguments are without merit.

11 Defendant first argues that the phrase "black stainless steel" does not represent anything about the black stainless steel manufacturing process, and so it is unbelievable that reasonable consumers would understand "black stainless steel" to mean that "the stainless steel became black during manufacturing, rather than via application of a coating at the end." ECF No. 91 at 19. This argument is unconvincing. The selection of a "black stainless steel" finish, as opposed to the other available options on Defendant's appliances, conveys that a reasonable consumer could expect a finish made of black stainless steel. Because of this, it would be misleading to a reasonable consumer that their selection of "black stainless steel" finish actually led to production of a stainless steel appliance with a thin, plastic finish.

One case that Defendant relies on is Bizco v. Ferrara Candy Co., No. 22-CV-01967, 2023 WL 2572384, at *2 (N.D. Ill. Mar. 20, 2023). In Bizco, the court determined that a candymaker's use of the phrase "Made with Real Milk" was not misleading to consumers because although the product's fat came from vegetable oil and not milk, milk was still an ingredient—therefore, a reasonable consumer would not equate "Made with Real Milk" to "Made with Real Milk Fat." 2023 WL 2572384, at *2. Here, Plaintiffs alleged that Defendant represented a "black stainless steel" finish to their appliances, but actually finished appliances with a plastic coating. Nothing in the complaint alleges any steel was involved in the finish. A reasonable consumer would assume that a "black stainless steel" finish should consist of stainless steel and not plastic. See Izquierdo, 450 F. Supp. 3d at 461 (reasonable consumer was likely to be misled that the defendant's "blueberry bagel" label indicated the bagel consisted of real blueberries and not imitation blueberries).

Next, Defendant argues that its own website disclosed that the appliance featured a "premium stainless steel exterior" with "a special coating to help eliminate fingerprints and smudges," which indicates to a reasonable consumer that the option of "black stainless steel" finish would come with a coating. ECF No. 91 at 19–20. But, Plaintiffs do not allege that a reasonable consumer (and they, themselves) did not expect any coating at all. Instead, Plaintiffs allege that they expected the finish of their appliance to be made of "black stainless steel," as selected, and not a thin plastic. ECF No. 87 ¶¶ 5, 16, 17, 20, 21, 40, 41, 52, 55. Nothing in the purported disclosure communicates to consumers that the coating is made of plastic and not steel or that the coating is what contains the coloring. See id. ¶ 43. Accordingly, Plaintiffs' allegation that Defendant's website discloses a coating to eliminate fingerprints and smudges does not undermine the plausibility that "black stainless steel" could mislead reasonable consumers.

Along the same vein, Defendant argues that the Consumer Reports article referenced in the complaint publicly disclosed that the "black stainless steel" finish was actually "stainless with an acrylic coating." ECF No. 91 at 23. None of the cases that Defendant cites support the proposition that a single article is sufficient to establish public disclosure. See ECF No. 91 at 23–24.[12] Here, unlike those cases, nothing demonstrates that the "disclosure"—that the black stainless steel appliances were actually stainless steel finished with an acrylic coating—was contained in a record filed in a criminal or civil case, clarified with an asterisk on the appliances' packaging, disclosed in an explanatory video on Defendant's website, or disclosed in numerous publications. See ECF Nos. 87, 91, 101, 103. A statement in one publication does not undermine Plaintiffs' allegation that a reasonable consumer would be misled into thinking "black stainless steel" finish did not mean a plastic coating.

12 Defendant next argues that the term "finish" does not communicate that the appliance's finish is made of stainless steel, but instead means that "a different material is applied to the surface at the completion of manufacturing," in line with the Merriam-Webster[13] definition of "finish." ECF No. 91 at 20 (citing ECF No. 87 ¶¶ 5, 7–13, 16–23). Again, the cases Defendant cited do not support this finding. For example, in In re Ford Motor Co. DPS6 Powershift Transmission Prod. Liab. Litig., the court concluded that the dictionary definition of "automatic" made it implausible that a reasonable consumer would expect that an automatic transmission did not mean a transmission that changed gears on its own, but instead meant that when prompted by the driver's gear change, the transmission's components would "automatically" act. 483 F. Supp. 3d 838, 845 (C.D. Cal. 2020).

Here, Defendant provides a "black stainless steel" option for the finish of its appliances, in addition to "black," "white," and "stainless steel." ECF No. 87 ¶¶ 57, 58. The plain meaning of "finish" as a final treatment or coating of a surface" does not exclude "black stainless steel" as a material that could be used. Furthermore, there is nothing different about this case's context that leads to a different interpretation of "finish." Accordingly, Plaintiffs' allegations that include the term "finish" do not undermine the plausibility that "black stainless steel" could mislead a significant portion of reasonable consumers.

Finally, Defendant argues that "until recently, every manufacturer shared the same basic 'technique for creating' a 'black stainless steel' appliance: 'the black finish is applied over the stainless steel base as a type of foil.' " ECF No. 91 at 21. Defendant asserts that "[t]he fact that [Defendant's] use of 'black stainless steel' was consistent with the 'prevalent understanding of the term' in the 'marketplace' thus undermines any allegation that reasonable consumers would be confused." Id. at 22.

This argument lacks merit. As an initial matter, even the use of the word "foil" denotes a metal coating, as opposed to a plastic coating. See https://www.merriam-webster.com/dictionary/foil (last visited May 30, 2023) (foil means a "very thin sheet metal"). Furthermore, there is no indication that "black stainless steel" is generally understood, in the marketplace or elsewhere, to indicate only a color choice and not the material used to make the finish or coating. And there is nothing before the Court to show that Defendant clearly expressed to Plaintiffs, either within the websites' item description or on a product label, that the "black stainless steel" finish represented a black plastic coating over a stainless steel appliance. Plaintiffs did not jump to an illogical conclusion in assuming that "black stainless steel" as a finish option represented that the finish was made of stainless steel—and nothing indicates that Plaintiffs ignored any other representations on packaging or item descriptions that clearly indicated that the "black stainless steel" finish consisted of a black, plastic coating over a stainless steel appliance. [14]

13 The Court finds that Defendant's misrepresentation and omission would have misled a reasonable consumer, as the Plaintiffs were misled.

4. Plaintiffs sufficiently allege that Defendant had a duty to disclose.

Defendant contends that Plaintiffs' complaint fails to plead that Defendant had exclusive knowledge of the undisclosed information, which is required to establish a duty to disclose. ECF No. 91 at 25–26 (citing cases)). [15]

Plaintiffs allege that "Defendant was obligated to disclose the true nature of the 'black stainless steel' finish used on its Black Stainless Steel Appliances because Defendant had exclusive knowledge of the material facts not known to Plaintiffs, since only Defendant had exclusive access to its design calling for the application of a temporary, thin, plastic coating as opposed to the promised premium, durable, luxury metal finish." ECF No. 87 at 21, ¶ 52. The complaint also specifically addresses California, New York, and Florida law. Plaintiffs allege under California law, Defendant had a duty to disclose because: (1) Defendant was in a superior position to know the truth about the plastic coating; (2) Plaintiffs could not reasonably have been expected to learn that the finish was made of plastic and not stainless steel; (3) Defendant knew Plaintiffs could not reasonably have been expected to learn of the plastic coating; and (4) Defendant actively concealed the plastic coating as a "black stainless steel" finish "by knowingly and continually selling, advertising, marketing, and refusing to recall its Black Stainless Steel Appliances from the market." ECF No. 87 ¶ 234. Under New York and Florida law, Plaintiffs allege that Defendant had a duty to disclose because Defendant possessed exclusive knowledge that it was manufacturing, selling, and distributing products that were not as advertised, which it intentionally concealed from Plaintiffs, and Defendant made incomplete representations about the "black stainless steel" finish, while "purposefully withholding material facts from [Plaintiffs] that contradicted these representations." Id. ¶ ¶ 52, 235, 299, 335.

Defendant argues that it lacked exclusive knowledge of the plastic finish because this information "was publicized and available for all to see." ECF No. 91 at 26. In support, Defendant relies on cases where allegedly omitted information was either widely known or distributed. For example, in Hauck, the court found that the defendant could not be held liable for failing to disclose information that was already public prior to the plaintiff's purchase and where the plaintiff conceded that the information alleged to be in the defendant's exclusive knowledge "was made public and discussed extensively in the press." 2019 WL 1493356, at *13.

14 Here, Plaintiffs allege that Defendant had "exclusive access" to the design of the "black stainless steel" finish, which it decided and designed to be a thin, plastic coating. ECF No. 87 at 21, ¶ 52. The existence of one article and Defendant's use of "coating" on its website does not undermine these allegations or otherwise establish that the public knew or should have known that the "black stainless steel" finish consisted of a plastic coating prone to peeling, chipping, and degrading. See Weeks v. Google LLC, No. 18-CV-00801 NC, 2018 WL 3933398, at *11 (N.D. Cal. Aug. 16, 2018) (finding plaintiffs' allegations sufficient to establish defendant's exclusive knowledge even despite allegations that the omission was found in a few consumer complaints and reviews online). Accordingly, the Court finds that Plaintiffs sufficiently pled a duty to disclose based on Defendant's exclusive knowledge that the "black stainless steel" finish was merely a thin, plastic coating. [16]

C. Plaintiffs sufficiently pled materiality.

Defendant argues that Plaintiffs failed to sufficiently plead materiality because there are no allegations in the complaint that the "precise nature of the manufacturing process used to give the products their 'finish' was somehow important to a reasonable consumer's choice of the product" and nothing in the complaint suggests "that a reasonable consumer would perceive a different manufacturing technique as superior to [Defendant's] fingerprint-resistant acrylic coating." ECF No. 91 at 27–29.

To establish a cause of action under each of the consumer protection statutes, a plaintiff must show that the misrepresentation or omission was likely to affect consumers' conduct or decision regarding a product, or put another way, the misrepresentation or omission was of a fact reasonably relevant to the transaction and of which a reasonable person would attach importance. See Tomasella, 962 F.3d at 72 (under Chapter 93A, "the misleading effects must be 'material,' that is likely to affect consumers' conduct or decision with regard to a product"); Woods v. Maytag Co., No. 10-CV-0559 ADS WDW, 2010 WL 4314313, at *16 (E.D.N.Y. Nov. 2, 2010) (GBL § 349 requires a plaintiff to plead that defendant engaged in a materially misleading "deceptive act or practice" so as to induce purchase of the product); Poole, 135 Nev. at 287 (a material fact is one that is reasonably relevant to the transaction and one to which a reasonable person would attach importance); Hodsdon v. Mars, Inc., 891 F.3d 857, 862 (9th Cir. 2018) (under the UCL, materiality depends on whether a "reasonable consumer would deem it important in determining how to act in the transaction at issue") (quoting Collins v. eMachines, Inc., 202 Cal.App.4th 249, 134 Cal.Rptr.3d 588, 593 (2011)); Rino-K&K Compression, Inc. v. Hilco Indus., LLC, No. MO:21-CV-00036-DC, 2022 WL 2903120, at *6 (W.D. Tex. May 4, 2022) (Materiality under the TDTPA depends on "whether a reasonable person would attach importance to and would be induced to act on the information in determining his choice of actions in the transaction in question.") (quoting Hannon, Inc. v. Scott, No. 02-10-00012-CV, 2011 WL 1833106, at *6 (Tex. App.—Fort Worth May 12, 2011, pet. denied)); Morchem Indus., Inc. v. Rockin Essentials LLC, No. 1:20-CV-24735-KMM, 2021 WL 5014105, at *8 (S.D. Fla. June 16, 2021) (Under FDUTPA, "deception occurs if there is a representation, omission, or practice that is likely to mislead the consumer acting reasonably in the circumstances, to the consumer's detriment.") (quoting Lombardo v. Johnson & Johnson Consumer Companies, Inc., 124 F. Supp. 3d 1283, 1287 (S.D. Fla. 2015));[17] Bracken v. Simmons First Nat. Bank, No. CIV.A. 6:13-1377-TMC, 2014 WL 2613175, at *6 (D.S.C. June 9, 2014) ("Under South Carolina law, unfair or deceptive trade practices have an adverse impact on the public interest if those acts have the potential for repetition.") (citing Haley Nursery Co. v. Forrest, 298 S.C. 520, 381 S.E.2d 906, 908 (S.C.1989)).

15 In their complaint, Plaintiffs allege that "Defendant withheld material information from Plaintiffs and similarly situated purchasers of Black Stainless Steel Appliances." ECF No. 87 ¶ 19. Plaintiffs also allege that "[they], like all ordinary, reasonable consumers, would not have purchased the Black Stainless Steel Appliances or paid a premium purchase price for the 'black stainless steel' finish if they had known that it was simply a temporary, thin, black plastic coating capable of peeling, flaking, and discoloration." Id. ¶ 22.

Defendant's argument that Plaintiffs did not allege that the appliance's manufacturing process or technique was important to a reasonable consumer is beside the point. Here, Plaintiffs selected and paid an extra cost for a "black stainless steel" finish because they expected to receive an appliance with a stainless steel finish. Plaintiffs have demonstrated that Defendant's misrepresentation that the finish was "black stainless steel" and not a thin, plastic coating was likely to affect a consumer's decision as to whether to select and pay more for the black stainless steel finish. Nothing about that allegation depends on Defendant's manufacturing process or technique—it instead relies entirely on Defendant's utilized materials. See Izquierdo, 450 F. Supp. 3d at 462 (it is materially misleading to "suggest a product contains a greater proportion of a preferred ingredient that it actually does").

Accordingly, Plaintiffs have sufficiently pled materiality.

D. Plaintiffs adequately pled reliance and/or causation.

Defendant argues that Plaintiffs failed to sufficiently allege reliance on Defendant's alleged misrepresentation or omission. ECF No. 91 at 29–31. Defendant contends that "no Plaintiff actually alleges that he or she subjectively was led to believe that the appliances lacked a coating, and that this belief was what induced them to make their purchase and consequently caused their harm." Id. at 30 (emphasis in original). Defendant asserts that instead of alleging Plaintiffs read any of Defendant's advertisements or statements regarding the "black stainless steel" option, the complaint alleges that Plaintiffs relied on "generalized 'prior favorable experiences' with [Defendant's] products, a 'belief' in the 'reliability' of [Defendant's] 'brand' or both" in deciding to make their purchases. Id. Finally, Defendant argues that "[e]ven minimal research would have naturally led Plaintiffs to the same kind of consumer statements Plaintiffs feature in the [complaint] that discuss the nature and existence of the finish." Id. at 31.

Of the consumer protection statutes which require a showing of reliance,[18] a plaintiff must show that she subjectively and personally was deceived by the defendant's misrepresentation or omission and/or that her reliance caused her to suffer the loss of money or property.[19]

16 Here, Plaintiffs allege that Defendant misled consumers by offering a "black stainless steel" finish option for their appliances, when the finish actually consisted of a thin, plastic coating, and then charged consumers a premium price, upwards of an additional several hundred dollars, for selecting its "black stainless steel" appliances. ECF No. 87 ¶¶ 40, 41, 56–58, 78, 86, 107, 108, 113. Each Plaintiff alleges they selected the "black stainless steel" option in reliance on Defendant's misrepresentation that the "black stainless steel" finish was made of a durable, black stainless steel and not a thin, plastic coating—thereby showing that each Plaintiff viewed and relied upon both Defendant's misrepresentation and omission in making their selection. The misrepresentation was that the finish was "black stainless steel;" the omission was that the finish was in fact a black, plastic coating. Id. ¶¶ 41, 42, 61, 63, 75, 84, 86, 91, 99, 107, 111, 118.

Further, each Plaintiff alleges they paid a premium price for the "black stainless steel" finish in anticipation that this choice of appliance finish was a durable metal and not a thin plastic. Id. ¶¶ 57, 58, 64, 78, 87, 93, 94, 100, 108, 113, 120. Plaintiffs allege that the finish is worth less than its premium price and was manufactured with a subpar material: plastic instead of metal. Id. ¶¶ 56, 88, 109, 119. Each Plaintiff alleges that had they known the "black stainless steel" finish was actually a thin plastic coating, they would not have selected and paid a premium for the finish or they would not have purchased the appliance at all. Id. ¶¶ 56, 59. Plaintiffs have sufficiently alleged reliance/causation. See Mewhinney v. London Wineman, Inc., 339 S.W.3d 177, 183 (Tex. App.—Dallas 2011, pet. denied) (reliance requirement met where evidence indicated consumer specifically relied on the defendant's misrepresentation when deciding to purchase product); see also Tsao v. Ferring Pharm., Inc., No. 4:16-CV-01724, 2017 WL 746451, at *9–10 (S.D. Tex. Jan. 4, 2017), report and recommendation adopted, No. 4:16-CV-1724, 2017 WL 749009 (S.D. Tex. Feb. 24, 2017) (TDTPA requires more than conclusory allegation that consumer purchased product in reliance on misrepresentation—plaintiff failed to support assertion that she relied upon defendant's "promise" with specific facts).

Defendant is incorrect in its assertion that Plaintiffs alleged they relied on independent research and prior favorable experiences with Defendant in selecting and purchasing the additional "black stainless steel" finish. Although prior favorable experiences initially led Plaintiffs to look at Defendant's appliances, Plaintiffs clarify that ultimately their selection and purchase of the "black stainless steel" option was due to their reliance on Defendant's representation that the finish would be what it was represented to be: black stainless steel. ECF No. 87 ¶¶ 60, 61, 74, 75, 83, 84, 90, 91, 96, 98, 119. Nothing in the complaint alleges that any of Plaintiffs' prior research informed their decision to select the "black stainless steel" finish. Further, the Court is unpersuaded by Defendant's argument that Plaintiffs needed only minimal research to discover their foolishness in relying on Defendant's representation that the finish was black stainless steel and not a plastic coating. At this stage of proceedings, the Court must accept as true Plaintiffs' allegations that they relied upon Defendant's misrepresentation and omission in selecting and purchasing the "black stainless steel" finish. See Click, 2020 WL 3118577, at *5 (under a 12(b)(6) review, the plaintiff's allegations are taken as true).

The Court finds that Plaintiffs have sufficiently alleged reliance and causation.[20] The Defendant's motion to dismiss should be denied as to their contentions that Plaintiffs insufficiently pled their consumer claims.

V. PLAINTIFFS SUFFICIENTLY ALLEGED UNFAIR PRACTICES UNDER THE FDUTPA, SCUTPA, CHAPTER 93A, AND UCL, BUT INSUFFICIENTLY ALLEGED UNCONSCIONABLE PRACTICES UNDER THE TDTPA.

17 Defendant argues that Plaintiffs have failed to plead claims for unfair or unconscionable practices under the five cited consumer protection statutes[21] which permit claimants to raise claims for "unfair" or "unconscionable" practices separate from allegations of deceptive and fraudulent practices. ECF No. 91 at 31. Defendant continues that despite mentioning the words "unfair" and "unconscionable," Plaintiffs offer "no facts or explanation of what about [Defendant's] practices is alleged to be improper." Id. (emphasis in original). Plaintiffs respond that their allegations are sufficient and cite to large portions of their complaint, but do not identify any allegations relied upon in making this assertion. ECF No. 101 at 22, 23, 26–28.

A. Lee failed to sufficiently allege that Defendant engaged in an unconscionable act or course of action under the TDTPA.

"The DTPA defines an unconscionable action as one which 'takes advantage of the lack of knowledge, ability, experience, or capacity of the consumer to a grossly unfair degree' and to the consumer's detriment." Moskovits v. Mercedes-Benz Fin. Services USA, LLC, No. 4:21-CV-2260, 2022 WL 3969547, at *5 (S.D. Tex. July 18, 2022) (quoting TEX. BUS. & COM. CODE § 17.45(5), report and recommendation adopted, No. 4:21-CV-02260, 2022 WL 3998507 (S.D. Tex. Aug. 31, 2022), appeal dismissed sub nom. Moskovits v. Mercedes-Benz Fin. Services USA, L.L.C., No. 22-20522, 2023 WL 2770957 (5th Cir. Mar. 22, 2023). "To prove an unconscionable action or course of action, a plaintiff must show that (1) the defendant took advantage of his lack of knowledge, and (2) 'the resulting unfairness was glaringly noticeable, flagrant, complete, and unmitigated.' " Id. (quoting Bradford v. Vento, 48 S.W.3d 749, 760 (Tex. 2001)).

In his response, Lee fails to defend the alleged deficiencies of his claim.[22] Even so, the Court finds that his claim is insufficiently pled. Lee does not identify which of Defendant's act(s) of are unconscionable. Additionally, Lee has not pled that Defendant took advantage of his lack of knowledge, ability, experience, or capacity to a grossly unfair degree, much less how Defendant did so. See Moskovits, 2022 WL 3969547, at *5; see also Franklin v. Apple Inc., 569 F. Supp. 3d 465, 480–81 (E.D. Tex. 2021) (dismissing claim where plaintiff made no supporting factual allegations regarding the alleged unconscionable acts); Diamond Beach Owners Ass'n v. Stuart Dean Co., Inc., No. 3:18-CV-00173, 2018 WL 7291722, at *7 (S.D. Tex. Dec. 21, 2018) ("Simply repeating the term 'unconscionable' multiple times in the First Amended Complaint is insufficient, without more, to invoke the DTPA's consumer protections."), report and recommendation adopted, No. 3:18-CV-00173, 2019 WL 245462 (S.D. Tex. Jan. 17, 2019).

Because it is insufficiently pled, the Court should grant Defendant's motion to dismiss Lee's unconscionability claim.

B. Plaintiffs have alleged claims for unfair practice under the FDUTPA, SCUTPA, and Chapter 93A.

Defendant argues that Plaintiffs have failed to allege any "unfair" claims "distinct from their deception claims." ECF No. 91 at 31. Although it appears that Plaintiffs primarily focus their various consumer claims on Defendant's deceptive conduct, courts have found that allegations of deceptive practices also satisfy pleading requirements for unfair practices.[23] See Badawi v. Brunswick Corp., No. 8:21-CV-1825-TPB-AAS, 2022 WL 613807, at *3 (M.D. Fla. Mar. 2, 2022) ("An unfair and deceptive practice under FDUTPA includes conduct such as an omission 'that is likely to mislead the consumer acting reasonably in the circumstances, to the consumer's detriment.'

") (quoting PNR, Inc. v. Beacon Prop. Mgmt., Inc., 842 So. 2d 773, 777 (Fla. 2003)); Kirby v. Red Bull N. Am., Inc., No. 3:19-CV-2701-CMC, 2020 WL 509139, at *3 (D.S.C. Jan. 31, 2020) (SCUTPA); Gov't Employees Ins. Co. v. Barron Chiropractic & Rehab., P.C., No. 1:16-CV-10642-ADB, 2017 WL 3526255, at *7 (D. Mass. Aug. 16, 2017) (Chapter 93A). Therefore, even though the complaint repeatedly discusses the misleading and deceptive misrepresentation and omission, the Court finds that this conduct also constitutes an unfair practice under FDUTPA, Chapter 93A, and SCUTPA.

C. Covington and Murray sufficiently allege a claim under the unfair prong of the UCL.

18 California law defines unfair competition as "unlawful, unfair or fraudulent business practice and unfair, deceptive, untrue or misleading advertising." CAL. BUS. & PROF. CODE § 17200. "Because section 17200 is written in the disjunctive, it establishes three varieties of unfair competition—acts or practices which are unlawful, or unfair or fraudulent. A practice is prohibited as unfair or deceptive even if not unlawful or vice versa." Brooks v. Bank of Am., N.A., No. 20-CV-01348-BAS-LL, 2021 WL 1541643, at *3 (S.D. Cal. Apr. 20, 2021) (quoting Lippitt v. Raymond James Fin. Servs. Inc., 340 F.3d 1033, 1043 (9th Cir. 2003)); see also Lee v. Pep Boys-Manny Moe & Jack of Cal., 186 F. Supp. 3d 1014, 1034 (N.D. Cal. 2016) ("Under the unfairness prong of the UCL, a practice may be deemed unfair even if not specifically proscribed by some other law.").

"To state a claim under the unfair prong of the UCL, a plaintiff needs to plead conduct that either: (1) 'offends an established public policy,' or (2) 'is immoral, unethical, oppressive, unscrupulous or substantially injurious to consumers' and the utility of that conduct is outweighed by the harm to the consumer." Teton Glob. Investments LLC v. LC Inv. 2010, No. 20-CV-01756-AJB-MSB, 2021 WL 5861565, at *2 (S.D. Cal. Aug. 11, 2021) (quoting Davis v. HSBC Bank Nev., N.A., 691 F.3d 1152, 1169 (9th Cir. 2012)). "The determination of whether a business practice is unfair 'involves an examination of [that practice's] impact on its alleged victim, balanced against the reasons, justifications and motives of the alleged wrongdoer. In brief, the court must weigh the utility of the defendant's conduct against the gravity of the harm to the alleged victim....' " Id. (citing Wilner v. Sunset Life Ins. Co., 78 Cal. App. 4th 952, 965 (2000)).

Here, Plaintiffs allege that Defendant's practice of "lulling consumers into believing that the Black Stainless Steel Appliances featured a premium, durable, luxury 'black stainless steel' finish, when in fact it was a temporary, thin, plastic coating that was prone to peel, chip, flake, bubble, and prematurely degrade through the ordinary use of the Black Stainless Steel Appliances" inflicted harm on consumers and provided no benefit or utility. ECF No. 87 ¶¶ 252, 253. Plaintiffs specifically allege that Defendant's actions are "unfair" because Defendant falsely represented the "black stainless steel" finish as a "premium, durable, luxury metal finish" to cause consumers to purchase the premium finish, leaving consumers with a plastic coating that is prone to "peel, chip, flake, bubble, and prematurely degrade." Id. ¶ 259.

Such allegations are sufficient to demonstrate that Defendant's actions are unfair under the balancing test. See Brooks, 2021 WL 1541643, at *5; see also Hawkins v. Kroger Co., No. 15-CV-2320 JM (BLM), 2019 WL 1506845, at *5 (S.D. Cal. Apr. 4, 2019) (finding that "nothing more" than the allegation that defendant's action causes harm and provides little utility was required to state a claim under the UCL's unfair prong). [24]

19 To summarize, Defendant's motion to dismiss should be granted as to Plaintiffs' unconscionability claim under the TDTPA but should be denied as to Plaintiffs' claims for unfair business practices under the FDUTPA, SCUTPA, Chapter 93A, and UCL.

VI. PLAINTIFFS SHOULD BE PERMITTED TO ALTERNATIVELY PLEAD UNJUST ENRICHMENT CLAIMS.

Even though Plaintiffs have raised unjust enrichment claims under various state laws, "[t]he law is essentially the same." Lee, 2022 WL 4243957, at *17. "As one court summarized it: 'unjust enrichment requires the same essential showing in every jurisdiction—the defendant unjustly obtained a benefit at the plaintiff's expense such that restitution is warranted.' " Id. (quoting In re Checking Acct. Overdraft Litig., 307 F.R.D. 630, 653 (S.D. Fla. 2015)).

Defendant asserts that "Plaintiffs' unjust enrichment claims fail because they are premised on the same underlying theory of fraud as their statutory claims: that [Defendant] 'knowingly accepted ... unjust benefits' by selling 'the Black Stainless Steel Appliances with a thin, black plastic coating—instead of a durable metal finish." ECF No. 91 at 32. Defendant specifies that because Plaintiffs' fraud claims fail, so too must Plaintiffs' unjust enrichment claims. Id. at 32. For the same reasons detailed above, the Court rejects Defendant's incorporated argument. [25]

Defendant next argues that Plaintiffs' claims for unjust enrichment should be dismissed because other adequate legal remedies via consumer fraud claims are available to Plaintiffs. Id. at 32–33. Specifically, Defendant argues that the "mere availability of these remedies renders the equitable theory of unjust enrichment unavailable." Id. at 33.

As this Court previously explained regarding Plaintiffs' unjust enrichment claims, "Plaintiffs may plead alternative theories." Lee, 2022 WL 4243957, at *18; see also Berry, 2022 WL 18671067, at *10–11 (permitting fraud, breach of warranty, and unjust enrichment claims to proceed); Click, 2020 WL 3118577, at *10 (rejected defendant's argument to dismiss plaintiffs' unjust enrichment claim of alternate, available remedies, and instead, permitted plaintiffs to plead unjust enrichment claim in the alternative). "Rule 8(a)(3) provides that a pleading 'may include relief in the alternative or different types of relief.' " Lee, 2022 WL 4243957, at *18 (quoting FED. R. CIV. P. 8(a)(3)). As a result, pleading alternative theories is an insufficient basis for granting a motion to dismiss. See id. (citing Gordon v. Sig Sauer, Inc., No. CV H-19-585, 2020 WL 6118466, at *16 (S.D. Tex. Oct. 16, 2020)). At this juncture, the Court recommends permitting Plaintiffs to plead their unjust enrichment claims in the alternative. Thus, Defendant's motion to dismiss Plaintiffs unjust enrichment claims, aside from Mendez's time-barred unjust enrichment claim,[26] should be denied.

VII. CONCLUSION

20 The Court recommends that Defendant's motion to dismiss, ECF No. 91, should be GRANTED IN PART AND DENIED IN PART, AS FOLLOWS:

- Defendant's Motion to Dismiss should be GRANTED as to Mendez's GBL § 349 claim and unjust enrichment claim. Such claims are time-barred and should be DISMISSED WITH PREJUDICE.
- Defendant's Motion to Dismiss should be GRANTED as to Lee's unconscionability claim under the TDTPA. This claim is insufficiently pled and should be DISMISSED WITH PREJUDICE.
- Defendant's Motion to Dismiss should be DENIED as to all remaining claims.

The Parties have fourteen days from service of this Report and Recommendation to file written objections. 28 U.S.C. § 636(b)(1)(C); FED. R. CIV. P. 72(b). Failure to file timely objections will preclude review of factual findings or legal conclusions, except for plain error. Quinn v. Guerrero, 863 F.3d 353, 358 (5th Cir. 2017).

All Citations

Not Reported in Fed. Supp., 2023 WL 4240277

Footnotes

1 The District Judge to whom this case is assigned referred this case for all pretrial proceedings in accordance with 28 USC § 636(b). Order, ECF No. 31.

2 The complaint alleges that Defendant violated the following consumer protection laws: (1) the Texas Deceptive Trade Practices Act ("TDTPA") under TEX. BUS. & COM. CODE ANN. §§ 17.01–.63 (West 2023); (2) the Nevada Deceptive Trade Practices Act ("NDTPA") under NEV. REV. STAT. ANN. §§ 598.0903–.0999 (West 2021); (3) the Massachusetts Regulation of Business Practices for Consumer Protection ("Chapter 93A") under MASS. GEN. LAWS ANN. ch. 93A (West 2023); (4) the California Consumer Legal Remedies Act ("CLRA") under CAL. CIV. CODE §§ 1750–84 (West 2023); (5) the California Unfair Competition Law ("UCL") under CAL. BUS. & PROF. CODE §§ 17200–10 (West 2023); (6) the California False Advertising Law ("FAL") under CAL. BUS. & PROF. CODE §§ 17500–09 (West 2023); (7) the New York Deceptive Practices Act ("GBL § 349") under N.Y. GEN.

BUS. LAW §§ 349–350-F-1 (McKinney 2014); (8) the Florida Deceptive and Unfair Trade Practices Act ("FDUTPA") under FLA. STAT. ANN. § 501.201–.213 (West 2023); and (9) the South Carolina Unfair Trade Practices Act ("SCUTPA") under S.C. CODE ANN. §§ 39-5-10–39-5-180 (2023). ECF No. 87.

3 A motion to dismiss is a dispositive motion appropriate for a report and recommendation. See 28 U.S.C. § 636(b)(1)(A); Davidson v. Georgia-Pac., L.L.C., 819 F.3d 758, 763 (5th Cir. 2016).

4 Mendez has not pled any other basis for equitable tolling. See Malek, 2023 WL 2682408, at *9.

5 For the sake of completeness, the Court also addresses the merits of Mendez's consumer protection and unjust enrichment claims.

6 Defendant also briefly argues that Plaintiffs cannot rely on fraudulent concealment tolling. ECF No. 91 at 35. Plaintiffs do not address fraudulent concealment tolling in their response and instead focus their argument on the applicability of the discovery rule. See ECF No. 101. Because the discovery rule applies, the Court does not undertake analysis of fraudulent concealment.

7 Defendant mistakenly asserts that Covington and Murray's unjust enrichment claims are subject to a two-year statute of limitations. ECF No. 91 at 34. The case Defendant cited, Deirmenjian v. Deutsche Bank, A.G., 526 F. Supp. 2d 1068, 1090 (C.D. Cal. 2007), relied upon § 339, which governs claims for quantum meruit, in deciding unjust enrichment claims are subject to a two-year statute of limitations. Section 338, which governs unjust enrichment claims, provides a three-year statute of limitations. See BASF Corp. v. Cesare's Collision Repair & Towing, Inc., 364 F. Supp. 3d 1115, 1122 (E.D. Cal. 2019) ("California law provides a three-year limitations period for unjust enrichment claims and a two-year limitations period for quantum meruit claims.") (citing CAL. CODE CIV. P. §§ 338(d), 339; Fed. Deposit Ins. Corp. v. Dintino, 167 Cal. App. 4th 333, 347–48, 84 Cal.Rptr.3d 38 (2008); Iverson, Yoakum, Papiano & Hatch v. Berwald, 76 Cal. App. 4th 990, 996, 90 Cal.Rptr.2d 665 (1999)). Section 338 applies here.

8 The FAL "does not encompass omissions." Id. at 668.

9 Defendant contends that Rule 9(b)'s heightened pleading standard is applicable to Plaintiffs' consumer fraud claims. ECF No. 91 at 17. Plaintiffs do not address which pleading standard, Rule 8 or Rule 9(b), govern their claims. See ECF No. 101. "Federal courts have previously applied this heightened pleading requirement to claims like those at issue here." See Lee, 2022 WL 4243957 at *9 (collecting cases). Whether Rule 8 or 9(b)'s standard applies, Plaintiffs' consumer fraud claims meet the heightened standard.

10 The Court rejects Defendant's argument that the only permissible misrepresentation the Court allowed to proceed was "the fact that the products had a coating at all." ECF. No. 103 at 5 (quoting R&R re: Def.'s Mtn to Dismiss Pls.' Amd. Compl., ECF No. 47 at 32). There is nothing in the Report and Recommendation or transcript of the Court's scheduling conference on February 3, 2023, that expressly disallowed Plaintiffs from proceeding with their current alleged misrepresentation. See ECF No. 47 at 51–52; Transcript re: Sched. Conf., ECF No. 83 at 7–10.

11 Defendant asserts that all of Plaintiffs' state consumer fraud claims "require an objectively deceptive misrepresentation or omission, i.e., one that would deceive a 'reasonable' consumer." ECF No. 91 at 17. Plaintiffs do not contest this assertion. See ECF No. 101. But, from the Court's review of Defendant's cited cases, whether the NDTPA applies the "reasonable consumer" standard to this element is unclear. See Poole v. Nev. Auto Dealership Invs., LLC, 449 P.3d 479, 485 (Nev. App. 2019) (under NDTPA, the plaintiff must establish a "material fact" as a matter "a reasonable man would attach importance to," as opposed to the reasonable consumer standard which considers whether a reasonable consumer would be deceived). Regardless, the Court finds Plaintiffs' allegations satisfy the reasonable consumer standard.

12 See Piescik v. CVS Pharmacy, Inc., 576 F. Supp. 3d 1125, 1133 (S.D. Fla. 2021) (a reasonable consumer would not be misled by "kills 99.99% of germs" label, where same label disclosed that did not mean "kills 99.99% of all germs"); Barrett v. Milwaukee Elec. Tool, Inc., No. 14-CV-1804, 2016 WL 4595947, at *5 (S.D. Cal. Jan. 26, 2016) (a video on the defendant's website showed it was unreasonable to interpret "100% Handcrafted" to mean without the use of equipment or automated processes); Abecassis v. Wyatt, 902 F. Supp. 2d 881, 900 (S.D. Tex. 2012) (widespread media reports and public documents did not contain explicit information of the defendant's wrongdoing, and therefore, a genuine issue of material fact as to whether ATA claims were tolled by fraudulent concealment existed); Cordova v. Johnson, 993 F. Supp. 473, 515 (W.D. Tex. 1998) (records relating to a mental condition were public because were filed in a criminal case); Wolph v. Acer Am. Corp., 2009 WL 2969467, at *4 (N.D. Cal. Sept. 14, 2009) (determining whether the defendant had a duty to disclose, plaintiffs own allegations failed to demonstrate that the defendant had exclusive knowledge).

13 Merriam-Webster defines "finish" as "the final treatment or coating of a surface." https://www.merriam-webster.com/dictionary/finish?src=search-dict-box (last visited June 16, 2023).

14 The courts in Defendant's cited cases all found the reasonable consumer standard unmet where the plaintiff disregarded common sense and readily available information. For example, in Reinitz v. Kellogg Sales Co., No. 21-CV-1239, 2022 WL 1813891, at *3 (C.D. Ill. June 2, 2022), the court found that the public understood that a product's specific flavor did not indicate the use of specific ingredients as plaintiff suggested, but rather the intended taste—especially where the label did not include ingredient. Here, Plaintiffs here do not ignore common sense or general knowledge in asserting Defendant's misrepresentation and omission would mislead a reasonable consumer.

15 Defendant only briefly mentions duty to disclose standards for South Carolina, Nevada, and Massachusetts, but does not discuss them in relation to the sufficiency of the allegations in this case. ECF No. 91 at 25-26 (citing Tomasella, 962 F.3d at 72-75 (1st Cir. 2020) (Massachusetts); and Harrell v. BMW of N. Am., LLC, 517 F. Supp. 3d 527, 539 (D.S.C. 2021) (South Carolina)). Thus, Defendant's argument that it did not have a duty to disclose the plastic coating under South Carolina, Nevada, and Massachusetts law is waived for inadequate briefing. See ADR, 2023 WL 2719446, at *5 n.4 (an argument is waived for inadequate briefing when a party fails to identify the relevant legal standards or merely mentions or alludes to a legal theory) (citing JTB Tools & Oilfield Servs., L.L.C. v. United States, 831 F.3d 597, 601 (5th Cir. 2016)).

16 Finding that Plaintiffs have sufficiently alleged exclusive knowledge, the Court need not decide whether a duty to disclose arises by means of "superior knowledge."

17 Florida law treats this as an analysis of an FDUTPA's reliance and causation elements. See Moss v. Walgreen Co., 765 F. Supp. 2d 1363, 1367 (S.D. Fla. 2011); Randolph v. J.M. Smucker Co., 303 F.R.D. 679, 691 (S.D. Fla. 2014).

18 To establish reliance or causation under the FDUTPA, "a plaintiff must simply prove that an objective reasonable person would have been deceived," which the Court has already found. Hasemann v. Gerber Products Co., 331 F.R.D. 239, 257 (E.D.N.Y. 2019) (quoting Fitzpatrick, 635 F.3d at 1283); see also Randolph, 303 F.R.D. at 691.

19 See In re ZF-TRW Airbag Control Units Products Liab. Litig., 601 F. Supp. 3d 625, 765–66 (C.D. Cal. 2022), opinion clarified sub nom. In re: ZF-TRW Airbag Control Units Products Liab. Litig., No. LAML1902905JAKFFMX, 2022 WL 19425927 (C.D. Cal. Mar. 2, 2022) (Under the UCL, CLRA, and FAL, plaintiff may establish causation "by showing that in [misrepresentation's] absence the plaintiff in all reasonable probability would not have engaged in the injury-producing conduct."); Picus v. Wal-Mart Stores, Inc., 256 F.R.D. 651, 658 (D. Nev. 2009) (plaintiff's allegation that she relied on "Made in the USA" label and suffered damages as a result satisfied reliance and causation elements of NDTPA claim); Pennington v. CarMax Auto Superstores Inc., No. CIV.A. H-09-1937, 2012 WL 948389, at *3 (S.D. Tex. Mar. 19, 2012) ("[T]DTPA requires the claimant to prove it detrimentally relied on a false, misleading or deceptive act or practice."); O'Hara v. Diageo-Guinness, USA, Inc., 306 F. Supp. 3d 441, 453 (D. Mass. 2018), on reconsideration, 370 F. Supp. 3d 204 (D. Mass. 2019) (Chapter 93A requires a plaintiff to allege "he suffer[ed] an 'objective, identifiable harm that goes beyond the deception [or unfairness] itself.' Allegations that the deceptive conduct inflated the product's price, causing the plaintiff to overpay, suffice.") (quoting Shaulis v. Nordstrom, Inc., 865 F.3d 1, 10 (1st Cir. 2017)); Devey v. Big Lots, Inc., No. 21-CV-6688L, 2022 WL 6827447, at *4 (W.D.N.Y. Oct. 12, 2022) ("To establish the requisite causal connection between an alleged written misrepresentation and the resulting injury, plaintiff must plausibly allege that she actually viewed the misleading statement prior to making her decision to purchase, and must set forth 'where, when and how [she] came to view' it."); Turkewitz v. Philips Oral Healthcare, Inc., No. 2:17-CV-2603-DCN, 2020 WL 833021, at *3 (D.S.C. Feb. 20, 2020) (SCUTPA requires proof that defendant "caused him to suffer the loss of money and/or property").

20 In addressing reliance/causation in its reply, Defendant cites Elson v. Black, 56 F.4th 1002 (5th Cir. 2023), for the proposition that Plaintiffs fail to sufficiently plead their consumer fraud claims. ECF No. 103 at 11–12. Defendant argues that in Elson, the Court faulted the plaintiffs for "failing to specify 'when they viewed the allegedly fraudulent representations' and how much time elapsed between viewing the representations and purchasing the product; for merely averring generally that they saw online advertisements without 'specify[ing] where on the website they saw them" or which exact YouTube video or Facebook post they saw; and for merely paraphrasing the type of representation they supposedly relied on without identifying the exact statement.' " ECF No. 103 at 12 (citing Elson, 56 F.4th at 1009–10 & n.7). The Court refers Defendant to the above analysis under Rule 9(b), but notes that Plaintiffs alleged they viewed the misrepresentation when they selected their finish option upon purchase on Defendant's and Defendant's vendor's websites under the finish options—screenshots of the exact location of the misrepresentation are included in the complaint. See ECF No. 87 ¶¶ 41, 42, 45, 57, 58. Plaintiffs' allegations satisfy Elson.

21 The TDTPA, UCL, FDUTPA, SCUTPA, and Chapter 93A each allow claimants to raise claims complaining of unfair or unconscionable practices. TEX. BUS. & COM. CODE § 17.50(a); CAL. BUS. & PROF. CODE § 17200 (unfair practices); FLA. STAT. § 501.204(1) (unfair and unconscionable practices); MASS. GEN. LAWS ch. 93A(a), § 2 (unfair practices); S.C. CODE § 39-5-20(a) (unfair practices).

22 Lee includes a citation to several pages of his complaint but does not identify which allegations he relies upon in concluding that he met his pleading requirement. ECF No. 101 at 22.

23 "To establish an unfair practice [under FDUTPA], the plaintiff must show that it is one that offends established public policy and one that is immoral, unethical, oppressive, unscrupulous or substantially injurious to consumers." Marrache v. Bacardi U.S.A., Inc., 17 F.4th 1084, 1097 (11th Cir. 2021) (cleaned up). Under SCUTPA, "[a]n unfair act is one that 'is offensive to public policy or when it is immoral, unethical, or oppressive[.]' " Lee, 2022 WL 4243957, at *9 (quoting World Cam, 2021 WL 4132100, at *6). "[A]n act is unfair within the meaning of Chapter 93A if it is 'oppressive or otherwise unconscionable in any respect.' " Odemena v. Devlin, No. 14-CV-12591-ADB, 2015 WL 13376541, at *4 (D. Mass. June 24, 2015) (quoting Datacomm Interface, Inc. v. Computerworld, Inc., 396 Mass. 760, 778 (1986)).

24 Also, "[t]he actual weighing of the parties' respective interests is not appropriately resolved at the pleading stage." Brooks, 2021 WL 1541643, at *5 (citing In re Solara Med. Supplies, LLC Customer Data Sec. Breach Litig., No. 3:19-CV-2284-H-KSC, 2020 WL 2214152, at *12 (S.D. Cal. May 7, 2020) (defendant's arguments against plaintiff's unfair practices UCL claim "are better suited for a motion for summary judgment when the record is more fully developed"); In re Anthem, Inc. Data Breach Litig., 162 F. Supp. 3d 953, 990 (N.D. Cal. 2016) (holding, on a motion to dismiss, that "[w]hether Defendants' public policy violation is outweighed by the utility of their conduct under the balancing test is a question to be resolved at a later stage in this litigation"); Puentes v. Wells Fargo Home Mort., 160 Cal. App. 4th 638, 645 n.5 (2008) (noting that "[t]he issue of whether a practice is deceptive or unfair is generally a question for the trier of fact," though it "may be disposed of by summary judgment on undisputed facts")).

25 The Court also notes that Defendant's assertion that it could not knowingly accept unjust benefits because "it openly disclosed the acrylic coating" is unconvincing considering the whole of Plaintiffs' allegations, which the Court must accept as true at this time. ECF No. 91 at 32.

26 Concerning Mendez's unjust enrichment claim, Defendant argues that she has failed to allege that Defendant received a direct and specific benefit from her purchase of the appliances at issue, as required under New York law. ECF No. 91 at 33 (citing Legurnic v. Ciccone, 63 F. Supp. 3d 241, 248 (E.D.N.Y. 2014)). "The Second Circuit has explained that, under the law of New York, 'the requirement of a connection between plaintiff and defendant is a modest one: [an unjust enrichment] claim will not be supported if the connection between the parties is too attenuated.' " Miami Products & Chem. Co. v. Olin Corp., No. 1:19-CV-00385 EAW, 2022

WL 3701159, at *4 (W.D.N.Y. Aug. 26, 2022) (quoting Myun-Uk Choi v. Tower Rsch. Cap. LLC, 890 F.3d 60, 69 (2d Cir. 2018)). "There need not be a direct relationship between the parties." Id. "[T]his means that under New York law, while 'a product's indirect purchaser cannot assert an unjust enrichment claim against an entity that manufactured one of that product's ingredients ... [,] the indirect purchaser can assert such an unjust enrichment claim against the manufacturer of the product itself.' " Id. (quoting Waldman v. New Chapter, Inc., 714 F. Supp. 2d 398, 403 (E.D.N.Y. 2010) (emphasis in original). Here, Mendez asserts an unjust enrichment claims against Defendant, the manufacturer. Accordingly, the Court finds that Mendez's allegations sufficiently state a claim for unjust enrichment. See id.

End of Document

© 2025 Thomson Reuters. No claim to original U.S. Government Works.

CASE NO. 47

2014 WL 12599332
Only the Westlaw citation
is currently available.
United States District Court,
S.D. Texas, McAllen Division.

Cayetano POLANCO, Plaintiff,
v.
INNOVATION VENTURES, LLC
dba Living Essentials, LLC, Defendant.

CIVIL ACTION
NO.
7
:
13
-
CV
-
568

Signed 05/05/2014

Attorneys and Law Firms

Oscar Rodolfo Alvarez, McAllen, TX, for Plaintiff.

Edward Michael Rodriguez, Erin Hudson, Atlas Hall & Rodriguez LLP, Brownsville, TX, Gerald Edwards Hawxhurst, Crone Hawxhurst LLP, Los Angeles, CA, for Defendant.

ORDER GRANTING IN PART AND DENYING IN PART DEFENDANT INNOVATION'S MOTION TO DISMISS

Randy Crane, United States District Judge

I. Factual and Procedural Background

1 Now before the Court is the "Motion to Dismiss Pursuant to Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 12(b)(6)" filed by Defendant Innovation Ventures, LLC ("Innovation"). (Dkt. No. 5).[1] Plaintiff Cayetano Polanco originally filed suit against Innovation and Susser Holdings Corporation ("Susser") on September 13, 2013 in the 139th District Court, Hidalgo County, Texas. (Dkt. No. 1-2). Plaintiff's Original Petition alleges that in September 2012, he suffered a heart attack as a direct and proximate result of ingesting a "5-hour ENERGY" drink manufactured by Innovation and sold to Plaintiff by Susser at its "Stripes" convenience store No. 56 in McCamey, Texas. Id. at ¶¶ 10-11. Plaintiff asserts causes of action for negligence, strict liability premised on "design defect" and "failure to warn" theories, and breach of implied warranties. Id. at ¶¶ 20-44. On October 14, 2013, Innovation removed the case to this Court on the grounds that the action meets the requirements of federal diversity jurisdiction: an amount in controversy exceeding $75,000, exclusive of interest and costs, and opposing parties who are citizens of different States absent the improper joinder of "non-diverse" Defendant Susser. (Dkt. No. 1); see 28 U.S.C. §§ 1332(a)(1), 1441, 1446.[2] Plaintiff moved to remand on the basis that Susser was a proper Defendant to his claims, and in the alternative moved for leave to join another non-diverse Defendant, Stripes, LLC ("Stripes"), as the targeted non-manufacturing seller of the product. (Dkt. Nos. 6, 7).[3] The Court denied both motions without prejudice, finding that

 © 2025 Thomson Reuters. No claim to original U.S. Government Works.

Susser was improperly joined to the action at the time of removal, and that the record before the Court persuaded that adding Stripes would serve little purpose other than to defeat diversity jurisdiction. (Dkt. No. 23).

Having found the exercise of jurisdiction proper, the Court now turns to the instant Motion through which Innovation seeks dismissal of all claims against it under Rule 12(b)(6). (Dkt. No. 5). Upon consideration of the Motion and the parties' responsive briefing (Dkt. Nos. 9, 14), in light of the relevant law, the Court finds that the Motion must be granted with respect to Innovation's request to dismiss the cause of action for breach of implied warranties, and otherwise denied.

II. Innovation's Motion to Dismiss

A. Rule 12(b)(6) Standard of Review

A party may move to dismiss under Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 12(b)(6) for "failure to state a claim upon which relief can be granted." FED. R. CIV. P. 12(b)(6). Rule 12(b)(6) is read in conjunction with the pleading standard set forth in Rule 8(a), which requires "a short and plain statement of the claim showing that the pleader is entitled to relief." FED. R. CIV. P. 8(a)(2); see Ashcroft v. Iqbal, 556 U.S. 662, 677-68 (2009). This standard does not require detailed factual allegations. Iqbal, 556 U.S. at 678 (quoting Bell Atl. Corp. v. Twombly, 550 U.S. 544, 555 (2007)). However, a party's "obligation to provide the 'grounds' of his 'entitle[ment]' to relief requires more than labels and conclusions, and a formulaic recitation of the elements of a cause of action will not do." Twombly, 550 U.S. at 555 (internal citations omitted). To survive a Rule 12(b)(6) motion, the complaint must contain "sufficient factual matter, accepted as true, to 'state a claim to relief that is plausible on its face.' " Iqbal, 556 U.S. at 678 (quoting Twombly, 550 U.S. at 570). A claim has facial plausibility when the pleaded factual content allows the court, drawing upon its "judicial experience and common sense," to reasonably infer that the defendant is liable for the misconduct alleged. Id. at 678 (citing Twombly, 550 U.S. at 556), 679. "But where the well-pleaded facts do not permit the court to infer more than the mere possibility of misconduct, the complaint has alleged—but it has not 'show[n]'—'that the pleader is entitled to relief.' " Id. at 679 (quoting FED. R. CIV. P. 8(a)(2)).

B. Strict Liability-Design Defect

2 Under Texas law, a defendant may be held strictly liable for its products sold "in a defective condition unreasonably dangerous to the user or consumer." Caterpillar, Inc. v. Shears, 911 S.W.2d 379, 381-82 (Tex. 1995) (quoting RESTATEMENT (SECOND) OF TORTS 402A(1) (1965)) (internal quotations and emphasis omitted). "A product may be unreasonably dangerous because of a defect in manufacturing, design, or marketing." Id. at 382. Plaintiff pleads only the latter two defects, and Innovation first moves for dismissal of Plaintiff's claim premised on the theory that the 5-hour ENERGY product he ingested was defective in its design. (Dkt. No. 5). To assert a design defect claim, a plaintiff must show that: "(1) the product was defectively designed so as to render it unreasonably dangerous; (2) a safer alternative design existed; and (3) the defect was a producing cause of the injury for which the plaintiff seeks recovery." Timpte Indus., Inc. v. Gish, 286 S.W.3d 306, 311 (Tex. 2009)

(citing Hernandez v. Tokai Corp., 2 S.W.3d 251, 256-57 (Tex. 1999); TEX. CIV. PRAC. & REM. CODE § 82.005(a)).

Innovation claims that Plaintiff's pleading contains "no allegations describing how and why the product was designed defectively." (Dkt. No. 5). The section of Plaintiff's Original Petition setting forth the design defect claim, although conclusory in its allegation that the 5-hour ENERGY product consumed by Plaintiff "was unreasonably dangerous and defective," also incorporates Plaintiff's previous factual allegations. See (Dkt. No. 1-2 at ¶¶ 27, 32). Among those allegations are that "[r]eliable scientific and medical evidence establish that 'energy drinks' containing caffeine and amino acids (e.g. taurine) present material adverse health risks including the risk of heart attack, detrimental heart effects and death." Id. at ¶ 13. Plaintiff has provided some factual basis, however slight, for claiming a defect in the product's design.

Innovation also asserts that Plaintiff does not allege facts showing that a safer alternative existed, "including facts that would make a 'safer design' plausible, rather than speculative." (Dkt. No. 5). Plaintiff in fact alleges that "[t]here are practicable, feasible[,] safer alternatives to achieve 'energy' and increased awareness," and the Court finds that its "plausibility" analysis should not infringe upon what is likely the province of an expert. (Dkt. No. 1-2 at ¶ 31); see Ford Motor Co. v. Ledesma, 242 S.W.3d 32, 42 (Tex. 2007) ("[E]xpert testimony is generally encouraged if not required to establish a products liability claim."); Champion v. Great Dane Ltd. P'ship, 286 S.W.3d 533, 538 (Tex.App.-Houston [14th Dist.] 2009, no pet.) (requirements to prove design defect generally require competent expert testimony). For the same reason, the Court cannot accept Innovation's argument that the design defect claim should be dismissed for failure "to plausibly allege causation." (Dkt. No. 5). Standing alone, Plaintiff's allegation that he "was told by his treating physician at the Hospital that the energy drink was the cause of his heart attack" would not prove producing cause, but this and Plaintiff's additional allegations regarding the cardiac risks uncovered by "scientific and medical evidence" at least offer a theory of causation that the Court cannot simply assume to be implausible. See (Dkt. No. 1-2 at ¶ 11). The Court concludes that Plaintiff has pleaded some factual basis for each element of his design defect claim, and that Innovation's request to dismiss this claim under Rule 12(b)(6) must be denied.

C. Strict Liability-Failure to Warn

Innovation next argues that since Plaintiff expressly conditions his marketing defect/"failure to warn" claim on the allegation that the 5-hour ENERGY product he consumed was defective in its design, this claim fails along with his design defect claim. (Dkt. No. 5) (citing Dkt. No. 1-2 at ¶ 38). Since the Court has already found that Plaintiff's design defect claim survives Innovation's Rule 12(b)(6) challenge, it cannot accept the premise on which this argument relies. Moreover, "[a] product may be unreasonably dangerous if a manufacturer fails to warn of a foreseeable risk arising from the use of the product, and the lack of adequate warnings or instructions renders an otherwise adequate product unreasonably dangerous." McLennan

v. Am. Eurocopter Corp., Inc., 245 F.3d 403, 427 (5th Cir. 2001) (quoting Coleman v. Cintas Sales Corp., 40 S.W.3d 544, 549-50 (Tex.App.-San Antonio 2001, pet. denied)) (internal quotations omitted); Caterpillar, 911 S.W.2d at 382. Plaintiff may plead in the alternative, and has provided some factual basis for claiming that the absence of adequate warnings regarding the cardiac risks associated with 5-hour ENERGY rendered the product unreasonably dangerous. See (Dkt. No. 1-2 at ¶¶ 12-18, 36). The Court must therefore deny the request to dismiss Plaintiff's failure to warn claim on the grounds alleged in Innovation's Motion.

D. Negligence

3 Innovation hinges its request for dismissal of Plaintiff's negligence claim on the district court's observation in Romo v. Ford Motor Co., 798 F.Supp.2d 798 (S.D. Tex. 2011), that "where the allegations and evidence are directed to whether the product is unreasonably dangerous and no other potentially negligent conduct is alleged ..., the negligence theories are subsumed by the strict liability theories asserted." Romo, 798 F.Supp.2d at 807-08 (quoting Kallasy v. Cirrus Design Corp., 2006 WL 1489248, at *4 (N.D. Tex. May 30, 2006)) (internal quotations omitted); (Dkt. No. 5). In Garrett v. Hamilton Standard Controls, Inc., 850 F.2d 253 (5th Cir. 1988), a decision also cited by Innovation and Romo, the Fifth Circuit explained that Texas law clearly allows a plaintiff to bring a product liability action under strict liability and negligence theories of recovery. Garrett, 850 F.2d at 255; see (Dkt. No. 5); Romo, 798 F.Supp.2d at 808. Negligence stands in contrast to strict liability in that the former " 'looks at the act of the manufacturer and determines if it exercised ordinary care,' " but both theories of recovery obviously share the requirement that the plaintiff prove causation. Id. at 256-57 (quoting Syrie v. Knoll Int'l, 748 F.2d 304, 307 (5th Cir. 1984)).

> Thus, although a negligence claim requires a different showing from a strict liability claim, a manufacturer logically cannot be held liable for failing to exercise ordinary care when producing a product that is not defective because: (1) if a product is not unreasonably dangerous because of the way it was manufactured, it was not negligent to manufacture it that way and (2) even if the manufacturer was somehow negligent in the design or production of the product, that negligence cannot have caused the plaintiff's injury because the negligence did not render the product "unreasonably dangerous."

Id. at 257.

Innovation argues that since Plaintiff's negligence claim "is based expressly on his allegations that 5-hour ENERGY was unreasonably dangerous due to a purported design or manufacturing defect," his negligence claim is "subsumed" by his strict liability claims and is subject to dismissal. (Dkt. No. 5). The Court first observes that Plaintiff has not alleged a manufacturing defect, and has additionally alleged a marketing defect consisting of Innovation's failure to warn. In any event, assuming Plaintiff's negligence claim is "subsumed" by either of these strict liability theories, it is not accordingly dismissed unless Plaintiff fails to meet his burden "to prove that the injury resulted from a defect in the product." See Kalassy, 2006 WL 1489248, at *4. For the reasons explained supra, Plaintiff has at least met his Rule 12(b)(6) burden on causation, and therefore the Court cannot dismiss his negligence claim on the grounds advanced by Innovation.

E. Breach of Implied Warranties

Finally, Innovation moves for the dismissal of Plaintiff's cause of action for "breach of implied warranties" for failure to allege all of its required elements, or to allege any facts to support those elements. (Dkt. No. 5). Plaintiff pleads that at the time Innovation manufactured, designed, and marketed 5-hour ENERGY, it knew of the product's intended use and "impliedly warranted its products to be of merchantable quality and safe and fit for their intended use." (Dkt. No. 1-2 at ¶ 42). Plaintiff alleges that Innovation breached this warranty "because '5-hour ENERGY' is unreasonably dangerous and unfit for the ordinary purposes for which it is used," and that Plaintiff suffered injuries as a direct and proximate result of the breach. Id. at ¶¶ 43-44. Whether Plaintiff is alleging breach of the implied warranties of merchantability or fitness for a particular purpose, or both, Innovation correctly points out that this cause of action requires that the plaintiff provide particular and timely notice of the breach to the defendant. (Dkt. No. 5); see TEX. BUS. & COM. CODE § 2.607(c)(1) ("[T]he buyer must within a reasonable time after he discovers or should have discovered any breach notify the seller of breach or be barred from any remedy."); U.S. Tire-Tech, Inc. v. Boeran, B.V., 110 S.W.3d 194, 201-03 (Tex.App.-Houston [1st Dist.] 2003, pet. denied) (§ 2.607(c)(1) notice requirement applies to claims for breach of implied warranties of merchantability and fitness for a particular purpose, and neither manufacturer's general knowledge of concerns about product nor commencement of lawsuit satisfies this requirement); Lochinvar Corp. v. Meyers, 930 S.W.2d 182, 189 (Tex.App.-Dallas 1996, no writ) (buyer has burden to allege and prove proper notice under § 2.607(c)(1), and "[f]ailure to notify the seller of the breach, thereby allowing the seller an opportunity to cure, bars recovery" for breach of implied warranty). Plaintiff does not allege that he provided such notice, either in the section setting forth his cause of action for breach of implied warranties or in the incorporated factual allegations. The Court therefore agrees with Innovation that this cause of action must be dismissed for failure to state a plausible claim to relief.

III. Conclusion

4 For the foregoing reasons, the Court hereby ORDERS that Defendant Innovation's Motion to Dismiss under Rule 12(b)(6) is GRANTED with respect to Innovation's request to dismiss Plaintiff's cause of action for breach of implied warranties, and otherwise DENIED.

SO ORDERED this 5th day of May, 2014, at McAllen, Texas.

All Citations

Not Reported in Fed. Supp., 2014 WL 12599332

Footnotes

1 Innovation alleges that it was sued incorrectly as Innovation Ventures, LLC d/b/a Living Essentials, LLC. (Dkt. No. 5; see Dkt. No. 1-2).

2 Plaintiff obtained a default judgment against Susser in state court on the same day that Innovation removed the case, but upon removal the Court granted Susser's motion to vacate that judgment. (Dkt. No. 4; Dkt. No. 4-1; 12/04/13 Minute Entry).

3 Plaintiff did not contest, and the Court has found, that the amount in controversy exceeds the jurisdictional minimum. See (Dkt. Nos. 6, 23).

End of Document

© 2025 Thomson Reuters. No claim to original U.S. Government Works.

CASE NO. 48

5B Fed. Prac. & Proc. Civ. § 1356 (4th ed.)

Federal Practice and Procedure (Wright & Miller) | September 2025 Update

Federal Rules of Civil Procedure

Chapter 4. Pleadings and Motions

Rule 12. Defenses and Objections: When and How Presented; Motion for Judgment on the Pleadings; Consolidating Motions; Waiving Defenses; Pretrial Hearing

Authors: Arthur R. Miller and A. Benjamin Spencer

C. Presentation of Defenses and Objections

---

§ 1356 Motions to Dismiss—Purpose of the Rule 12(b)(6) Motion

Primary Authority

- Fed. R. Civ. P. 12

Forms

- 2C West's Federal Forms, District Courts—Civil §§ 11:11, 11:80 to 11:90.50

The purpose of a motion under Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 12(b)(6) is to test the formal sufficiency of the statement of the claim for relief; the motion is not a procedure for resolving a contest between the parties about the facts or the substantive merits of the plaintiff's case.[1] Thus, the provision must be read in conjunction with Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 8(a),[2] which sets forth the requirements for pleading a claim for relief in federal court and calls for "a short and plain statement of the claim showing that the pleader is entitled to relief."[3] Only when the plaintiff's complaint fails to meet this pleading standard—which has traditionally been understood to be a liberal standard[4] but which the Supreme Court has more recently interpreted to be more stringent[5]—is it subject to dismissal under Rule 12(b)(6).

 © 2025 Thomson Reuters. No claim to original U.S. Government Works.

The motion under subdivision (b)(6) is available to test a claim for relief in any pleading, whether it be in the plaintiff's original complaint, a defendant's counterclaim, a defendant's crossclaim or counterclaim thereto, or a third-party claim or any other Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 14 claim.[6] Most commonly, of course, a Rule 12(b)(6) motion is directed against the plaintiff's complaint, and for convenience the discussion that follows will use that context as a model.

The motion under Rule 12(b)(6) should be distinguished from a number of other motions that may be made under Rule 12. The Rule 12(b)(6) motion addresses itself solely to the question of whether the complaint fails to state a claim[7] and is not designed to correct inartistic pleadings or to force compliance with the requirements of Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 10 as to the form of the pleadings.[8] If the complaint is ambiguous or does not contain sufficient information to allow a responsive pleading to be framed, a motion under Rule 12(b)(6) is not appropriate; the proper remedy is a motion for a more definite statement under Rule 12(e).[9] Similarly, an attempt to eliminate or strike improper or redundant matter from the complaint should be made under Rule 12(f).[10] However, repeated refusals by the plaintiff to conform to the dictates of Rule 8 and Rule 10 as to the proper form or content of the pleading may result in a dismissal for failure to state a claim.[11] Finally, the Rule 12(b)(6) motion is directed to the claim for relief and not to the defensive portion of any pleading. If a party wishes to attack a defense, he should move under Rule 12(f), which provides for the striking of "any insufficient defense."[12]

The Rule 12(b)(6) motion also must be distinguished from a motion for summary judgment under Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 56, which goes to the merits of the claim—indeed, to its very existence—and is designed to test whether there is a genuine issue of material fact.[13] The Rule 12(b)(6) motion, as has been mentioned above, only tests whether the claim has been adequately stated in the complaint. Thus, as the many cases cited in the note below make clear, on a motion under Rule 12(b)(6), the district court's inquiry essentially is limited to the content of the complaint;[14] a motion for summary judgment, on the other hand, often involves the use of pleadings, depositions, answers to interrogatories, and affidavits. This distinction between the two procedural provisions is not substantial in many situations, however, because Rule 12(d) provides that if "matters outside the pleadings are presented to and not excluded by the court, the motion must be treated as one for summary judgment under Rule 56." This conversion principle is discussed in a later section.[15]

Westlaw. © 2025 Thomson Reuters. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

Footnotes

1 Purpose of motion

Neitzke v. Williams, 490 U.S. 319, 326–327, 109 S. Ct. 1827, 104 L. Ed. 2d 338 (1989) ("Rule 12(b)(6) authorizes a court to dismiss a claim on the basis of a dispositive issue of law. This procedure, operating on the assumption that the factual allegations in the complaint are true, streamlines litigation by dispensing with needless discovery and factfinding.").

Ghee v. Comcast Cable Communications, LLC, 2023 WL 3813503, *2 (11th Cir. 2023) ("The purpose of a motion to dismiss under Rule 12(b)(6) 'is to test the facial sufficiency of' a complaint.") (quoting Brooks v. Blue Cross & Blue Shield, 116 F.3d 1364, 1368 (11th Cir. 1997)).

Hower v. Damron, 2022 WL 16578864, *4 (6th Cir. 2022) ("The very purpose of Rule 12(b)(6) is to enable defendants to challenge the legal sufficiency of complaints without subjecting themselves to discovery.") (internal quotation marks omitted) (quoting Yuhasz v. Brush Wellman, Inc., 341 F.3d 559, 566 (6th Cir. 2003)).

Savannah Heights Limited Partnership v. District of Columbia Housing Authority, 2022 WL 566459, *3 n.5 (D.C. Cir. 2022) ("No discovery is required because the Owners failed to state an actionable claim. The very purpose of Rule 12(b)(6) is to dispose of cases that do not warrant reaching the costly discovery phase because, under the facts as alleged by the Owners, they could never win."), citing Wright & Miller.

"[A] primary purpose of a Rule 12(b)(6) motion is to weed out cases that do not warrant reaching the (oftentimes) laborious and expensive discovery process because, based on the factual scenario on which the case rests, the plaintiff could never win. In short, plaintiffs are not required to submit evidence to defeat a Rule 12(b)(6) motion, but need only sufficiently allege in their complaint a plausible claim." Foley v. Wells Fargo Bank, N.A., 772 F.3d 63, 72 (1st Cir. 2014).

"As the Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit has observed, Rules 8 and 12(b)(6) of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure * * * help 'to prevent settlement extortion-using discovery to impose asymmetric costs on defendants in order to force a settlement advantageous to the plaintiff regardless of the merits of his suit.'" Pension Ben. Guar. Corp. ex rel. St. Vincent Catholic Medical Centers Retirement Plan v. Morgan Stanley Inv. Management Inc., 712 F.3d 705, 719 (2d Cir. 2013), citing American Bank v. City of Menasha, 627 F.3d 261, 266 (7th Cir. 2010).

Pirraglia v. Novell, Inc., 339 F.3d 1182 (10th Cir. 2003) (court's function is not to weigh potential evidence, but to assess whether plaintiff's complaint alone is legally sufficient to state claim).

 © 2025 Thomson Reuters. No claim to original U.S. Government Works.

In re Rockefeller Center Properties, Inc. Securities Litigation, 311 F.3d 198 (3d Cir. 2002).

Edwards v. City of Goldsboro, 178 F.3d 231 (4th Cir. 1999) ("The purpose of a Rule 12(b)(6) motion is to test sufficiency of complaint; importantly, a Rule 12(b)(6) motion does not resolve contests surrounding the facts, the merits of a claim, or the applicability of defenses.").

A Rule 12(b)(6) dismissal is only appropriate when a complaint does not present a legal claim. It is not the proper tool for questioning the validity of factual allegations. Johnson v. Revenue Management Corp., 169 F.3d 1057 (7th Cir. 1999).

"The purpose of the rule is to allow the court to eliminate actions that are fatally flawed in their legal premises and destined to fail, and thus spare litigants the burdens of unnecessary pretrial and trial activity." Advanced Cardiovascular Systems, Inc. v. Scimed Life Systems, Inc., 988 F.2d 1157, 1160 (Fed. Cir. 1993) (Newman, J.).

Peck v. Hoff, 660 F.2d 371, 374 (8th Cir. 1981), citing Wright & Miller.

"Plaintiff's original complaint and first amended complaint were both dismissed without prejudice with leave to amend, based on two motions to dismiss Defendants filed pursuant to Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 12(b)(6). In making these rulings, Judge Byron did not speak to the merits of Plaintiff's claims, but rather addressed the sufficiency of Plaintiff's pleadings. In the absence of any authority to the contrary, the undersigned does not find that such rulings establish that Plaintiff's claims were meritorious, or that the questions of law and fact were close." Grayson v. No Labels, Inc., 2024 WL 473775, *25 (M.D. Fla. 2024), quoting Wright & Miller, report and recommendation adopted, 2024 WL 863117 (M.D. Fla. 2024).

Ideal Holdings of Michigan, LLC v. High Consultants, LLC, 2024 WL 4220667, *2 (E.D. Mich. 2024) ("The Court agrees that this pro se motion does not actually challenge the legal sufficiency of the claims pleaded by Plaintiffs. Rather, the motion is simply a narrative of this pro se Defendant's version of events and his views about the claims."), quoting Wright & Miller.

See also
Shed v. Oklahoma Department of Human Services, 729 Fed. Appx. 653, 658 (10th Cir. 2018) ("[T]he purpose of motion practice under Rule 12(b)(6) * * * is not for the court to 'identify' pleading deficiencies as to each defendant, with such deficiencies to be 'corrected' by serial amendments.") (citation omitted).

Smith v. Cash Store Management, Inc., 195 F.3d 325 (7th Cir. 1999) (court erred in dismissing because assessing factual support for suit is not office of Rule 12(b)(6)).

Compare

A court may not grant a motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim merely because the plaintiff failed to respond to it pursuant to local rules. Such a result would thwart the purpose of the motion, which is simply to assess the legal sufficiency of the complaint. Thus, a court still must determine whether the complaint states a claim, even if the plaintiff fails to respond. Alternatively, the court can dismiss the action as a sanction, but must in that case weigh the following factors: the prejudice of the nonresponse to the moving party, the amount of interference with the judicial process, and the culpability of the nonmoving party. Issa v. Comp USA, 354 F.3d 1174 (10th Cir. 2003).

2 Read in conjunction

Bell Atlantic Corp. v. Twombly, 550 U.S. 544, 555, 127 S. Ct. 1955, 1964-1965, 167 L. Ed. 2d 929 (2007).

Zixiang Li v. Kerry, 710 F.3d 995, 998 (9th Cir. 2013).

Genova v. Total Card, Inc., 193 F. Supp. 3d 360, 364 (D.N.J. 2016), quoting Wright & Miller.

Ogle v. BAC Home Loans Servicing LP, 924 F. Supp. 2d 902, 907 (S.D. Ohio 2013).

Gallentine v. Housing Authority of City of Port Arthur, Tex., 919 F. Supp. 2d 787, 795 (E.D. Tex. 2013) ("A Rule 12(b)(6) motion to dismiss must be read in conjunction with Rule 8(a) of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure.").

Guilbeaux v. 3927 Foundation, Inc., 177 F.R.D. 387 (E.D. Tex. 1998), quoting Wright & Miller.

3 Rule 8(a)(2)

See §§ 1215 to 1226.

See also

With limited exceptions such as those set out in Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 9(b), Rule 8(a)'s simplified pleading standard applies to all civil actions. Swierkiewicz v. Sorema N. A., 534 U.S. 506, 122 S. Ct. 992, 152 L. Ed. 2d 1 (2002).

4 Liberal standard

Erickson v. Pardus, 551 U.S. 89, 94, 127 S. Ct. 2197, 167 L. Ed. 2d 1081 (2007) (referring to "the liberal pleading standards set forth by Rule 8(a)(2)").

"'[A] well-pleaded complaint may proceed even if it strikes a savvy judge that actual proof of those facts is improbable, and that a recovery is very remote and unlikely.' Twombly, 550 U.S. at 556, 127 S. Ct. 1955. The factually supported claim against Finnegan at issue on appeal lies well within that liberal pleading standard and therefore survives a Rule 12(b)(6) motion to dismiss based on qualified immunity." Stanley v. Finnegan, 899 F.3d 623, 628 (8th Cir. 2018).

Gelboim v. Bank of America Corp., 823 F.3d 759, 780 (2d Cir. 2016) (when there are two plausible interpretations on motion to dismiss, court should not decide which one is correct from factual allegations).

Vasaturo v. Peterka, 177 F. Supp. 3d 509, 510 (D.D.C. 2016) (pleading rules are not supposed to impose great burden on plaintiff).

5 Supreme Court interpretation

Ashcroft v. Iqbal, 556 U.S. 662, 129 S. Ct. 1937, 173 L. Ed. 2d 868 (2009) ("While legal conclusions can provide the framework of a complaint, they must be supported by factual allegations.").

Bell Atlantic Corp. v. Twombly, 550 U.S. 544, 127 S. Ct. 1955, 167 L. Ed. 2d 929 (2007) (pleading a claim sufficiently under Rule 8(a)(2) requires that a pleader "state a claim to relief that is plausible on its face").

6 Any pleading

Counterclaim

Walker Process Equipment, Inc. v. Food Machinery & Chemical Corp., 382 U.S. 172, 86 S. Ct. 347, 15 L. Ed. 2d 247 (1965).

King County v. Rasmussen, 299 F.3d 1077, 1090 (9th Cir. 2002) (affirming 12(b)(6) dismissal of the defendant's counterclaims).

Shenzhen Kangi Electronic & Plastic Co., Ltd. v. Kehoe, 2023 WL 3847108, *4 (N.D. Ill. 2023) ("Kangdi's Motion to Dismiss Kehoe's Counterclaims is granted in part and denied in part.").

Trustees of General Assembly of Lord Jesus Christ of Apostolic Faith, Inc. v. Patterson, 2023 WL 3767737, *1 (E.D. Pa. 2023) ("[T]he RICO counterclaim fails under Rule 12(b)(6) because Patterson does not have civil RICO standing and has failed to plead facts showing a pattern of racketeering activity.").

Crossclaim

Pietak v. State Farm Fire & Cas. Co., 189 F.3d 474 (9th Cir. 1999) (affirming district court's dismissal of a * * * compulsory crossclaim under Rule 12(b)(6)).

"A cross-defendant may move to dismiss a crossclaim pursuant to Rule 12(b)(6) if the crossclaim 'fail[s] to state a claim upon which relief can be granted.'" Shoppes at Mirador Square LLC v. Wild Oats Markets Incorporated, 2023 WL 2561567, *6 n.2 (D. Ariz. 2023), quoting Whitaker v. Tesla Motors, Inc., 985 F.3d 1173, 1175 (9th Cir. 2021).

Third-party claim

Burton v. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co., 105 Fed. Appx. 154, 157 (9th Cir. 2004) ("Because Burton did not allege any culpable conduct by State Farm that occurred between June 8, 1997 and June 7, 2000, we affirm the district court's August 28, 2002 order granting State Farm's 12(b)(6) motion to dismiss Burton's third party claims for common law bad faith and infliction of emotional distress.").

ELG Utica Alloys, Inc. v. Niagara Mohawk Power Corp., 2019 WL 5086020, *1 (N.D. N.Y. 2019) ("Presently before the Court is CBS's Motion to Dismiss National Grid's Third-Party Claims under Rule 12(b)(6) of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure. For the reasons that follow, the motion to dismiss is denied in part and granted in part.").

7 Addressed solely to pleadings

Calcutti v. SBU, Inc., 224 F. Supp. 2d 691 (S.D. N.Y. 2002).

Edwards v. Physician's Credit Bureau, 2001 WL 1678783 (S.D. Ohio 2001) (unpublished).

Trustees of Hotel Industry Pension Fund v. Carol Management Corp., 880 F. Supp. 1548 (S.D. Fla. 1995), citing Wright & Miller.

Payne v. North Carolina Farm Bureau Mut. Ins. Co., 67 N.C. App. 692, 313 S.E.2d 912, 913 (1984), quoting Wright & Miller.

8 Form of pleading

Dismissals for mere technical defects or ambiguities in pleadings are not favored. Arfons v. E. I. Du Pont De Nemours & Co., 261 F.2d 434 (2d Cir. 1958).

Nagler v. Admiral Corporation, 248 F.2d 319, 322 (2d Cir. 1957).

On a motion to dismiss, a court must look to the essence of each claim and not merely the form in which it is pleaded. Calcutti v. SBU, Inc., 224 F. Supp. 2d 691 (S.D. N.Y. 2002).

Pleadings are not to be held to the rigid standards of the common law, and neither absolute clarity nor absolute precision is required. U.S. v. Provident Nat. Bank, 259 F. Supp. 373 (E.D. Pa. 1966).

The fact that the complaint is something less than artistically drafted is not a pertinent consideration in deciding a motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim. Goldstein v. North Jersey Trust Co., 39 F.R.D. 363 (S.D. N.Y. 1966).

 © 2025 Thomson Reuters. No claim to original U.S. Government Works.

The court is not permitted to impose a sanction as drastic as a dismissal to force the production of a legally artistic pleading, but must look beyond the mountain of words to the meaning sought to be conveyed. Stanley v. Harper Buffing Mach. Co., 28 F.R.D. 579 (D. Conn. 1961).

See also the discussions of Rule 8 and Rule 10 in §§ 1201 to 1286, §§ 1321 to 1327.

9 More definite statement

Swierkiewicz v. Sorema N. A., 534 U.S. 506, 122 S. Ct. 992, 152 L. Ed. 2d 1 (2002).

"[T]he fact that a careful Judge, in the exercise of that wise discretion controlled by the prescribed principles of [Rule 12(e)], might so conclude [that a party cannot be reasonably required to frame a responsive pleading] does not permit him to dismiss the complaint for failure to state a claim. It may well be that [plaintiff]'s complaint as now drawn is too vague, but that is no ground for dismissing his action." Paylor v. Hartford Fire Ins. Co., 748 F.3d 1117, 1126 n.4 (11th Cir. 2014) (quoting Mitchell v. E–Z Way Towers, Inc., 269 F.2d 126, 130 (5th Cir. 1959)).

Beanal v. Freeport-McMoran, Inc., 197 F.3d 161 (5th Cir. 1999), citing Wright & Miller.

Scott v. City of Chicago, 195 F.3d 950 (7th Cir. 1999) (if complaint is unclear court should keep case moving and require plaintiff to prepare more definite statement under Rule 12(e)).

Sisk v. Texas Parks and Wildlife Dept., 644 F.2d 1056, 1059 (5th Cir. 1981), citing Wright & Miller.

Mere vagueness or lack of detail is not a ground for a motion to dismiss, but the pleading should be attacked by a motion for a more definite statement. Harman v. Valley Nat. Bank of Ariz., 339 F.2d 564 (9th Cir. 1964).

It was error for the district court to dismiss the action on the ground that the complaint was not clear as to which allegations referred to one claim and which to another claim. Robins v. Rarback, 325 F.2d 929 (2d Cir. 1963).

Mitchell v. E-Z Way Towers, Inc., 269 F.2d 126 (5th Cir. 1959).

Drake University v. Des Moines Area Community College Foundation, 2024 WL 4132499, *2 (S.D. Iowa 2024) (noting that defendant's motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim should have been made as a motion seeking relief under Rule 12(e) because it challenged the complaint as an impermissible "shotgun" pleading), citing Wright & Miller.

 © 2025 Thomson Reuters. No claim to original U.S. Government Works.

"The Court finds that White has failed to adequately link her factual allegations to her claims, creating a situation where although her claims conform to the liberal notice pleading requirements of Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 8, she fails to adequately link the causes of action to their attendant factual predicates, in violation of Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 12(e). * * * [T]he Court finds that the Plaintiff should be required to replead." White v. City of Grenada, Mississippi, 2021 WL 4449276, *5 (N.D. Miss. 2021), citing Wright & Miller.

Brownlee v. Mississippi Department of Public Safety, 2019 WL 4144307, *4 (N.D. MS Oxford Div. 2019) ("In short, the Plaintiffs fail to adequately link their factual allegations to their claims. This failure creates a situation where although the Complaint conforms to the liberal notice pleading requirements of Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 8, it fails to adequately link the Plaintiffs' causes of actions to their attendant factual predicates, running afoul of Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 12(e). * * * In such cases, the proper remedy is a motion for a more definite statement under Rule 12(e), or an order allowing the Plaintiffs to amend."), citing Wright & Miller.

The proper response to a pro se prisoner's Section 1983 complaint, which lacked allegations specific enough for correctional officers to answer with respect to some claims, was a motion for more definite statement rather than a motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim. Cunnningham v. Grozik, 2002 WL 1777278 (N.D. Ill. 2002).

See §§ 1374 to 1379 for further discussion of Rule 12(e).

See also

Neither vagueness nor lack of detail is a sufficient ground on which to grant a Rule 12(b)(6) motion. Kress v. Food Employers Labor Relations Ass'n, 217 F. Supp. 2d 682 (D. Md. 2002).

Despite a complaint stating a claim sufficiently, the court can order the pleader to provide a more definite statement before proceeding. 3rd Eye Surveillance, LLC v. United States, 124 Fed. Cl. 438, 442 (2015).

But see

Atlas Glass & Mirror, Inc. v. Tri-North Builders, Inc., 997 F.3d 367, 372 (1st Cir. 2021) ("The Rule 12(b)(6) standard is 'intended to screen out claims in which the factual allegations of the complaint are too scanty or too vague to render the claims plausible'") (quoting Ríos-Campbell v. U.S. Dep't of Com., 927 F.3d 21, 25 (1st Cir. 2019)).

"The district court concluded that Kyrkanides's due process claim, as alleged in the motion to amend, could not survive dismissal under Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 12(b)(6). The court first determined that Kyrkanides's vague and conclusory allegations that his 'good name, honor, and integrity' were harmed failed to state a viable claim that he was deprived of a liberty interest without due process." Kyrkanides v. University of Kentucky, 2020 WL 7062675, *1 (6th Cir. 2020).

When a count of the complaint was so sketchy that it was hard to tell just what the plaintiff really claimed, the count was dismissed with leave to serve an amended complaint realleging the count in intelligible form. Dack v. Shanman, 227 F. Supp. 26 (S.D. N.Y. 1964).

10 Rule 12(f)

Anderson v. Royal Crest Dairy, Inc., 253 F. Supp. 2d 1136 (D. Colo. 2003) (motion to dismiss inappropriate method of striking paragraph containing evidence perceived to be irrelevant or inadmissible).

Amentler v. 69 Main Street, LLC, 2008 WL 4149125, *1 (D. N.J. 2008), citing Wright & Miller.

"The court notes that the proper course for Beech to have followed here would have been to move to strike the allegedly duplicative allegations contained in the complaint prior to filing their response to the pleading per Rule 12(f)." Dudley v. Business Exp., Inc., 882 F. Supp. 199, 208 n.11 (D. N.H. 1994).

Hill v. U.S., 751 F. Supp. 909 (D. Colo. 1990).

See §§ 1380 to 1383.

Compare

"Handi–Craft argues that Whittlestone's claim for lost profits and consequential damages should be stricken from the complaint, because such damages are precluded as a matter of law. Thus, Handi–Craft's 12(f) motion was really an attempt to have certain portions of Whittlestone's complaint dismissed or to obtain summary judgment against Whittlestone as to those portions of the suit—actions better suited for a Rule 12(b)(6) motion or a Rule 56 motion, not a Rule 12(f) motion." Whittlestone, Inc. v. Handi-Craft Co., 618 F.3d 970, 974 (9th Cir. 2010).

11 Proper form required

Okusami v. Psychiatric Institute of Washington, Inc., 959 F.2d 1062, 1067 (D.C. Cir. 1992), citing Wright & Miller.

DeWitt v. Pail, 366 F.2d 682 (9th Cir. 1966).

A dismissal for failure to comply with the rules of proper pleading, although a severe sanction, was justified in view of the plaintiff's flagrant refusal to follow the sound and proper directions of the district court as to filing an amended complaint. Maddox v. Shroyer, 302 F.2d 903 (D.C. Cir. 1962).

 © 2025 Thomson Reuters. No claim to original U.S. Government Works.

When the plaintiff, acting as his own attorney against the court's advice, failed to state a claim in a series of pleadings filed over a two-year period, an amended complaint that was redundant, prolix, and argumentative was properly dismissed. Rakonick v. Hamilton-Brown Shoe Co., 103 F.2d 553 (C.C.A. 8th Cir. 1939).

Kappus v. Western Hills Oil, Inc., 24 F.R.D. 123 (E.D. Wis. 1959).

12 Insufficient defense
See § 1381.

But compare
F.T.C. v. Bay Area Business Council, Inc., 2003 WL 21003711 (N.D. Ill. 2003) (although insufficient defenses are properly addressed by Rule 12(f) motions to strike, under that motion, affirmative defenses must comply with pleading requirements of Rule 8(a) and Rule 12(b)(6)).

13 Distinguished from summary judgment
Evans v. United States Marshals Service, 177 F. Supp. 3d 177, 180 (D.D.C. 2016), quoting Wright & Miller.

Wheeling Hosp., Inc. v. Ohio Valley Health Services and Educ. Corp., 2010 WL 4977987 (N.D. W. Va. 2010), citing Wright & Miller.

Brown v. Mitchell, 308 F. Supp. 2d 682 (E.D. Va. 2004) (Rule 12(b)(6) and summary judgment are "significantly different motions" that have different standards and require different analyses).

See §§ 2725 to 2725.3.

14 Inquiry limited
"We do not consider Estrada's contention that he was denied 'effective discovery.' The district court's Rule 12(b)(6) ruling was based solely on his pleadings, and evidence adduced through discovery would have had no effect on the ruling." Estrada v. Stewart, 703 Fed. Appx. 755, 761 n.4 (11th Cir. 2017) (citating Chudasama v. Mazda Motor Corp., 123 F.3d 1353, 1367 (11th Cir. 1997)).

Bowers v. Ophthalmology Grp., 733 F.3d 647, 655 (6th Cir. 2013) ("[U]nlike a Rule 56 motion that relies on evidence, a Rule 12(b)(6) motion is based solely on the pleadings.").

Doe ex rel. Magee v. Covington County School Dist. ex rel. Bd. of Educ., 649 F.3d 335 (5th Cir. 2011), judgment aff'd on reh'g en banc, 675 F.3d 849 (5th Cir. 2012).

MacArthur v. San Juan County, 309 F.3d 1216 (10th Cir. 2002).

 © 2025 Thomson Reuters. No claim to original U.S. Government Works.

Browning v. Clinton, 292 F.3d 235 (D.C. Cir. 2002).

Friedl v. City of New York, 210 F.3d 79 (2d Cir. 2000).

Loyd v. Paine Webber, Inc., 208 F.3d 755 (9th Cir. 2000).

Henthorn v. Department of Navy, 29 F.3d 682 (D.C. Cir. 1994) (court should not consider factual allegations in plaintiff's response to motion to dismiss, especially when they contradict allegations set forth in complaint).

"We may not look beyond the pleadings." Cinel v. Connick, 15 F.3d 1338, 1341, (5th Cir. 1994) (Duhe, J.).

Loofbourrow v. C.I.R., 208 F. Supp. 2d 698 (S.D. Tex. 2002) (court will not look beyond "four corners" of pleadings).

See also
Smithrud v. City of St. Paul, 746 F.3d 391, 395 (8th Cir. 2014) ("[T]he court generally must ignore materials outside the pleadings, but it may consider some materials that are part of the public record or do not contradict the complaint, as well as materials that are necessarily embraced by the pleadings.").

Gebhardt v. D.A. Davidson & Co., 203 Mont. 384, 387, 661 P.2d 855, 857 (1983), citing Wright & Miller.

Breliant v. Preferred Equities Corp., 109 Nev. 842, 858 P.2d 1258 (1993), citing Wright & Miller.

15 Conversion into summary judgment motion
See § 1366.

See also
Sacchetti v. Gallaudet University, 181 F. Supp. 3d 107, 117 (D.D.C. 2016) (trial court is sole decision maker for deciding whether motion to dismiss is converted into summary judgment and this decision should be based on whether summary judgment would be fair to both parties).

Bellavia Blatt & Crossett, P.C. v. Kel & Partners LLC, 151 F. Supp. 3d 287, 291 (E.D. N.Y. 2015) (court had discretion whether to exclude materials outside pleadings or convert motion to dismiss into motion for summary judgment), aff'd, 670 Fed. Appx. 731 (2d Cir. 2016).

Martin v. Mears, 602 P.2d 421, 426 (Alaska 1979), quoting Wright & Miller.

End of Document

© 2025 Thomson Reuters. No claim to original U.S. Government Works.

CASE NO. 49

2021 WL 3831986
Only the Westlaw citation
is currently available.
United States District Court,
S.D. Texas, Houston Division.

Yuqi "Richard" LIN, Plaintiff,
v.
VERITEX COMMUNITY BANK, N.A. f/k/a Green Bank, N.A., Defendant.

Civil Action
No.
H
-
20
-
1904
|
Signed 01/04/2021

Attorneys and Law Firms

Donald D. Jackson, Paul D. Clote, McGinnis Lochridge LLP, Houston, TX, for Plaintiff.

Brian Wade Clark, Andrew Douglas Robertson, Kane Russell Coleman Logan PC, Dallas, TX, for Defendant Veritex Community Bank, N.A.

Pete Thomas Patterson, Patterson PC, Houston, TX, for Defendant RG Opportunities I, L.P.

Mark David Hunter, Hunter Taubman et al, Coral Gables, FL, for Defendant New City Advisors, LLC.

MEMORANDUM AND ORDER

NANCY F. ATLAS, SENIOR UNITED STATES DISTRICT JUDGE

1 This case is before the Court on the Motion to Dismiss [Doc. # 24] filed by Defendant Veritex Community Bank, N.A. ("Veritex"), seeking dismissal of Plaintiff Yuqi Richard Lin's First Amended Complaint ("Complaint") [Doc. # 23]. Lin filed a Response [Doc. # 25], and Veritex filed a Reply [Doc. # 26]. Having reviewed the record and the applicable legal authorities, the Court denies the Motion to Dismiss the breach of contract claim and grants the Motion to Dismiss the breach of fiduciary duty claim.

I. BACKGROUND

Lin is a resident of Beijing, China. He and other Chinese nationals established RG Opportunities I, LLP ("RGO") as a mechanism to invest in businesses in the United States. Because the investors are not United States citizens, they were required to file I-526 Petitions with the United States Citizenship and Immigration Services ("USCIS"). Before a foreign investor's investment can be finalized, USCIS approval of his I-526 Petition is required.

On September 14, 2016, Veritex and RGO entered into a Subscription Escrow Agreement ("Escrow Agreement").[1] The parties to the Escrow Agreement were (1) RGO, who deposited the investors' funds into the escrow account; (2) Veritex, the Escrow Agent; (3)

 © 2025 Thomson Reuters. No claim to original U.S. Government Works.

New City Advisors LLC, the Subscriber Representative; and (4) NESF Escrow Services Corp., the Escrow Administrator. See Escrow Agreement, Exh. 1 to Motion to Dismiss. The investors were referred to in the Escrow Agreement as "Subscribers." See id. A Subscriber invested in units of five hundred thousand dollars ($500,000.00), referred to in the Escrow Agreement as the "Subscription Proceeds." See id. Lin was a Subscriber, but was not a party to the Escrow Agreement.

The Escrow Agreement required RGO to provide Veritex with "schedules disclosing the name, address and Tax Identification Number (as applicable) of each of the Subscribers, and such other information as will enable the Escrow Agent to attribute to a particular Subscriber all Subscription Proceeds received by the Escrow Agent." See id., ¶ 1(d). When Veritex, the Escrow Agent, received a written direction from RGO and the Subscriber Representative stating that a Subscriber had filed his I-526 Petition, "the Escrow Agent shall ... disburse 25% of such Subscriber's Subscription Proceeds ($125,000.00), in accordance with the Written Direction." See id., ¶ 3(a). When Veritex received a written direction from RGO and the Subscriber Representative "with certification from the USCIS that a minimum of two (2) Subscribers ... have received approval of their I-526 Petitions, the Escrow Agent shall ... disburse (i) an additional 65% of the Subscription Proceeds ($325,000.00) for each Subscriber who has filed his/her I-526 Petition and had 25% of his/her Subscription Proceeds previously disbursed from the Escrow Account ...." See id., ¶ 3(b). The remaining 10% ($50,000.00) of each Subscriber's $500,000.00 would be held in a "holdback subaccount (the "Subscription Holdback Account") within the Escrow Account." See id. "Funds held in the Subscription Holdback Account shall be disbursed in $50,000.00 increments upon receipt by the Escrow Agent of Written Direction from [RGO] and Subscriber Representative which shall only be given following [RGO's] receipt of evidence that a Subscriber's 1-526 application has been approved." See id.

2 The Escrow Agreement provides:

> Notwithstanding anything to the contrary provided in this Agreement, the Escrow Agent shall rely conclusively and without any further inquiry on the written directions, including but not limited to written directions pertaining to disbursements, furnished to the Escrow Agent by RGO and the Subscriber Representative. The parties to this Agreement acknowledge and agree that the Subscriber Representative is fully authorized to act on behalf of the Subscribers. The Escrow Agent shall have no duty to take notice of any request or direction of any Subscriber, but shall in all cases rely conclusively and without inquiry on the written directions of the Subscriber > Representative with respect to all matters pertaining to Subscribers and the individual and collective interests of all Subscribers under this Agreement.

Id., ¶ 3(e). The "Duties of the Escrow Agent" section of the Escrow Agreement provides, in relevant part:

> In performing its duties under this Agreement, or upon the claimed failure to perform any of its duties hereunder, the Escrow Agent shall not be liable to anyone for any damages, losses or expenses which may be incurred as a result of the Escrow Agent's so acting or failing to so act; except to the extent that a court of competent jurisdiction determines that the Escrow Agent's gross negligence or willful misconduct was the primary cause of such damages.

Id., ¶ 6(a). This section of the Escrow Agreement further limits the Escrow Agent's liability by providing that the Escrow Agent incurs no liability with respect to:

> any action taken or omitted to be taken in reliance upon any instrument delivered to the Escrow Agent and believed by it to be genuine and to have been signed or presented by the proper party or parties. The Escrow Agent shall be under no duty to inquire into or investigate the validity, accuracy or content of any such instrument.

Id.

Lin alleges that after his I-526 Petition was approved, but before at least two Subscribers' I-526 Petitions were approved, Veritex released his remaining $375,000.00 to RGO in violation of ¶ 3(b) of the Escrow Agreement. See Complaint, ¶ 10. The Written Direction, dated March 2, 2017, identified Lin as the applicable Subscriber. See Written Direction, Exh. 2 to Motion. The Written Direction did not mention, or include certification, that USCIS had approved a second I-526 Petition. See id. Lin alleges that, as a result of Veritex's violation of the Escrow Agreement, he "lost his investment, and has been damaged in the amount of $375,000.00." See Complaint, ¶ 11.

Lin alleges that he is a third-party beneficiary of the Escrow Agreement and, as a result, has standing to sue Veritex for breach of that contract. Lin alleges also that Veritex breached its fiduciary duty to Lin.

Veritex filed its Motion to Dismiss. Veritex argues that Lin has failed to allege a legal and factual basis for third-party beneficiary status. Veritex argues also that Lin has failed to allege a breach of contract claim and a breach of fiduciary duty claim that are "plausible on their face." The Motion to Dismiss has been fully briefed and is now ripe for decision.

II. LEGAL STANDARD FOR RULE 12(b)(6) MOTION TO DISMISS

3 A motion to dismiss under Rule 12(b)(6) of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure "is viewed with disfavor and is rarely granted." See Leal v. McHugh, 731 F.3d 405, 410 (5th Cir. 2013) (quoting Turner v. Pleasant, 663 F.3d 770, 775 (5th Cir. 2011)); Shaikh v. Texas A&M Univ. Coll. of Med., 739 F. App'x 215, 218 (5th Cir. June 20, 2018). The Court accepts the factual allegations in the complaint as true, and construes the facts in the light most favorable to the plaintiff. See Alexander v. Verizon Wireless Servs., L.L.C., 875 F.3d 243, 249 (5th Cir. 2017) (citing Kelly v. Nichamoff, 868 F.3d 371, 374 (5th Cir. 2017)). The complaint must, however, contain sufficient factual allegations, as opposed to legal conclusions, to state a claim for relief that is "plausible on its face." See Ashcroft v. Iqbal, 556 U.S. 662, 678 (2009); Cicalese v. Univ. of Texas Med. Branch, 924 F.3d 762, 765 (5th Cir. 2019); Patrick v. Wal-Mart, Inc., 681 F.3d 614, 617 (5th Cir. 2012).

When considering a Motion to Dismiss, the Court's review is limited to the complaint or counterclaim, documents attached to the relevant pleading, and documents attached to the motion to dismiss that are central to the claim and are referenced in the complaint. See Lone Star Fund V (U.S.), L.P. v. Barclays Bank PLC, 594 F.3d 383, 387 (5th Cir. 2010) (citing Collins v. Morgan Stanley Dean Witter, 224 F.3d 496, 498–99 (5th Cir. 2000)). Documents attached to a party's briefing may be considered by the Court only if the documents are sufficiently referenced in the complaint and no party questions their authenticity. See Walch v. Adjutant General's Dep't of Tex., 533 F.3d 289, 294 (5th Cir. 2008). In this case, both parties have submitted the Escrow Agreement as part of the record on the Motion to Dismiss. Veritex has submitted the Written Direction at issue, a document whose authenticity is not questioned.

III. ANALYSIS

A. Third-Party Beneficiary Status

Texas law allows a third party to sue for breach of a contract that is clearly intended for his direct benefit. See City of Houston v. Williams, 353 S.W.3d 128, 145 (Tex. 2011) (citing Stine v. Stewart, 80 S.W.3d 586, 589 (Tex. 2002) (per curiam)). In determining whether there is intent to benefit a third party, the Court must consider "the entire agreement, giving effect to all its provisions." Williams, 353 S.W.3d at 145. "The contract need not have been executed solely to benefit the noncontracting party." Id. Courts do not "create a third-party benefit by implication; the presumption is the parties contracted only for themselves, absent a clear showing of intent otherwise." Id. (citing MCI Telecomms. Corp. v. Tex. Utils. Elec. Co., 995 S.W.2d 647, 651-52 (Tex. 1999)). There is no requirement, however, for the contract to use the term " 'third-party beneficiary' or any similar magic words." Id. (citing Stine, 80 S.W.3d at 590-91).

The Escrow Agreement reflects an intent to provide a direct benefit the Subscribers, including Lin. The Escrow Agreement made clear that its purpose was to facilitate the Subscribers' purchases of $500,000.00 investment units. See Escrow Agreement, p. 1. The Escrow Agreement required that Subscriber information be provided to the Escrow Agent to enable the Escrow Agent to "attribute to each Subscriber the escrowed funds received by Escrow Agent." See id., ¶ 1(a) and (d). The Escrow Agreement required RGO to secure a Payment Guaranty to protect any Subscriber whose I-526 Petition was denied if funds were not available in the Escrow Account or RGO's operating account to refund that Subscriber's investment. See id., ¶ 1(c). The Escrow Agreement provided that if RGO rejected any Subscriber's investment, or if any Subscriber withdrew his investment, the Escrow Agent would disburse that Subscriber's funds "to the Subscriber." See id., ¶ 2(a) and (b). The Escrow Agreement required that the Subscribers be provided a copy of the contract. See id., ¶ 3(f). "These benefits are not offered to the world at large" but are provided only to Subscribers. Certain benefits, such as the Payment Guaranty and the disbursement of investment funds "to the Subscriber" in certain circumstances, are for the Subscribers' direct benefit. Indeed, the Escrow Agreement had no clear purpose other than to benefit the Subscribers. See Basic Capital Mgmt., Inc. v. Dynex Commercial, Inc., 348 S.W.3d 894, 900 (Tex. 2011).

4 The parties to the Escrow Agreement expressed a clear intent to benefit the Subscribers. Accordingly, the Subscribers, including Plaintiff Lin, have standing to sue for breach of the Escrow Agreement.

B. Breach of Contract Claim

Under Texas law, a breach of contract action requires proof of four elements: (1) a valid contract; (2) performance by the plaintiff; (3) breach by the defendant; and (4) damages to the plaintiff as a result of the breach. See S & S Emergency Training Sols., Inc. v. Elliott, 564 S.W.3d 843, 847 (Tex. 2018). Veritex argues that Plaintiff has not alleged the existence of a valid contract between him and Veritex. As discussed above, Lin has alleged a legal and factual basis for his third-party beneficiary status that allows him to sue for breach of the Escrow Agreement.

Veritex argues also that Lin has not adequately alleged the third and fourth elements – breach and damages. Lin alleges that Veritex breached the Escrow Agreement by releasing $375,000.00 of his investment to RGO without receiving certification that at least two of the Subscribers' I-526 Petitions had been approved by USCIS. See Complaint, ¶¶ 8, 10, 11. Lin alleges that, as a result of Veritex's breach, he "lost his investment, and has been damaged in the amount of $375,000.00." Id., ¶ 11. These allegations, accepted as true for purposes of a Motion to Dismiss, satisfy the federal pleading requirements for a breach of contract claim.

C. Breach of Fiduciary Duty Claim

Veritex argues that Lin has failed to allege a legal and factual basis for his breach of fiduciary duty claim. Under Texas law, an escrow agent under a written escrow agreement owes a fiduciary duty to both parties to the escrow agreement, but does not owe a fiduciary duty to a non-party. See Gary E. Patterson & Assocs., P.C. v. Holub, 264 S.W.3d 180, 203 (Tex. App.--Houston [1st Dist.] 2008, pet. denied); see also In re Lopez, 2019 WL 3987748, *4 (Bankr. S.D. Tex. Aug. 22, 2019) (escrow agent's "fiduciary duties were strictly limited to the two parties to the contract"). Therefore, under Texas law, Veritex did not owe a fiduciary duty to Lin, a non-party to the written Escrow Agreement. Because there is no fiduciary duty owed by Veritex to Lin, the breach of fiduciary duty claim is dismissed. [2]

 © 2025 Thomson Reuters. No claim to original U.S. Government Works.

IV. CONCLUSION AND ORDER

Lin has alleged, and the Escrow Agreement supports, Lin's third-party beneficiary status allowing him to assert a breach of contract claim against Veritex. He has alleged an adequate factual basis for the breach of contract claim and, therefore, the claim survives the Motion to Dismiss.

Under Texas law, Lin cannot assert a breach of fiduciary duty claim against an Escrow Agent serving under a written Escrow Agreement to which Lin is not a party. Accordingly, it is hereby ORDERED that Veritex's Motion to Dismiss [Doc. # 24] is DENIED as to the breach of contract claim and GRANTED as to the breach of fiduciary duty claim.

All Citations

Not Reported in Fed. Supp., 2021 WL 3831986

Footnotes

1 The Escrow Agreement is "construed and enforced according to the laws of the State of Texas ... and applicable laws of the United States of America." Escrow Agreement, ¶ 9.

2 By Order [Doc. # 21] entered October 14, 2020, the Court directed Plaintiff to file an Amended Complaint and denied Veritex's Motion to Dismiss the original Complaint. Plaintiff filed the Amended Complaint by the November 5, 2020 deadline. Because Plaintiff has been given a prior opportunity to amend his complaint, the Court does not herein grant leave to amend again.

End of Document

© 2025 Thomson Reuters. No claim to original U.S. Government Works.

CASE NO. 50

2020 WL 6146565
Only the Westlaw citation
is currently available.
United States District Court,
S.D. Texas, Houston Division.

ENVENTURE GLOBAL TECHNOLOGY INC., Plaintiff,
v.
WEATHERFORD U.S., L.P., Defendant.

Civil Action
No.
H
-
19
-
2397
|
Signed 10/02/2020

Attorneys and Law Firms

Lisa H. Meyerhoff, Myall S. Hawkins, Sharad Kotagiri Bijanki, Seyfarth Shaw LLP, Houston, TX, for Plaintiff.

Leslie V. Payne, Carlos Ignacio Ruiz, Christopher Michael First, James Boone Baxter, Heim Payne Chorush LLP, Houston, TX, for Defendant.

MEMORANDUM AND ORDER

NANCY F. ATLAS, SENIOR UNITED STATES DISTRICT JUDGE

1 This patent case is before the Court on the Motion to Dismiss Third Amended Counterclaims ("Motion to Dismiss") [Doc. # 131] filed by Counterclaim-Defendant Enventure Global Technology, Inc. ("Enventure"), to which Counterclaim-Plaintiff Weatherford U.S., L.P. and Weatherford Technology Holdings, LLC (collectively, "Weatherford") filed an Opposition [Doc. # 142], and Enventure filed a Reply [Doc. # 143]. Having carefully reviewed the Third Amended Counterclaims [Doc. # 117], the parties' briefing, and the applicable legal authorities, the Court denies the Motion.

I. BACKGROUND

Enventure filed this lawsuit against Weatherford alleging patent infringement of several patents. Weatherford filed its Third Amended Counterclaims asserting, inter alia, five counterclaims alleging that Enventure is infringing Weatherford's patents, U.S. Patents No. 6,896,057, No. 6,722,443, No. 6,712,151, No. 6,976,536, and No. 7,228,915 (the "Weatherford Patents").

Enventure moved to dismiss the infringement counterclaims. Enventure asserts that in 2008 Weatherford granted a license to Enventure in exchange for Shell Oil Company ("Shell") licensing certain patents to Weatherford. Enventure argues that this 2008 License grants it the authority to use the technology covered by the Weatherford Patents. The Motion to Dismiss has been fully briefed and is now ripe for decision.

II. STANDARD FOR MOTION TO DISMISS

 © 2025 Thomson Reuters. No claim to original U.S. Government Works.

A motion to dismiss under Rule 12(b)(6) of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure "is viewed with disfavor and is rarely granted." See Leal v. McHugh, 731 F.3d 405, 410 (5th Cir. 2013) (quoting Turner v. Pleasant, 663 F.3d 770, 775 (5th Cir. 2011)); Shaikh v. Texas A&M Univ. Coll. of Med., 739 F. App'x 215, 218 (5th Cir. June 20, 2018). The Court accepts the factual allegations in the complaint as true, and construes the facts in the light most favorable to the plaintiff. See Alexander v. Verizon Wireless Servs., L.L.C., 875 F.3d 243, 249 (5th Cir. 2017) (citing Kelly v. Nichamoff, 868 F.3d 371, 374 (5th Cir. 2017)). The complaint must, however, contain sufficient factual allegations, as opposed to legal conclusions, to state a claim for relief that is "plausible on its face." See Ashcroft v. Iqbal, 556 U.S. 662, 678 (2009); Cicalese v. Univ. of Texas Med. Branch, 924 F.3d 762, 765 (5th Cir. 2019); Patrick v. Wal-Mart, Inc., 681 F.3d 614, 617 (5th Cir. 2012).

When considering a Motion to Dismiss, the Court's review is limited to the complaint or counterclaim, documents attached to the relevant pleading, and documents attached to the motion to dismiss that are central to the claim and are referenced in the complaint. See Lone Star Fund V (U.S.), L.P. v. Barclays Bank PLC, 594 F.3d 383, 387 (5th Cir. 2010) (citing Collins v. Morgan Stanley Dean Witter, 224 F.3d 496, 498-99 (5th Cir. 2000)). Documents attached to a party's briefing may be considered by the Court if the documents are sufficiently referenced in the complaint and no party questions their authenticity. See Walch v. Adjutant General's Dep't of Tex., 533 F.3d 289, 294 (5th Cir. 2008). "In so attaching, the defendant merely assists the plaintiff in establishing the basis of the suit, and the court in making the elementary determination of whether a claim has been stated." Collins, 224 F.3d at 499.

III. ANALYSIS

2 Enventure seeks dismissal of Weatherford's infringment counterclaims based on the existence and terms of the 2008 License. Enventure asserts that, pursuant to the 2008 License, it was the licensee of any Weatherford patents that involve a modification of a device, method, or product described and claimed in one or more of the patents identified in the 2008 License. Enventure argues that the Weatherford Patents asserted in the Third Amended Counterclaims are covered by the 2008 License because they are modifications of the Shell/Enventure Patent No. 6,634,431 ("the '431 Patent"), one of the patents in the 2008 License.

A. Matters Outside the Pleading

It is uncontroverted that neither the 2008 License nor the '431 Patent is referenced in the Third Amended Counterclaims. Enventure notes that Weatherford asserts infringement counterclaims, which require that the alleged infringer have acted "without authority." See Motion to Dismiss, p. 5 (citing 35 U.S.C. § 271(a)). Therefore, Enventure argues, the 2008 License is central to Weatherford's infringement counterclaims. The 2008 License, however, is not central to Weatherford's claims. Indeed, Weatherford alleges in the Third Amended Counterclaims that it has not licensed its rights in the Weatherford Patents to Enventure. See Third Amended Counterclaims, ¶¶ 174; 192; 208; 226; 243.

 © 2025 Thomson Reuters. No claim to original U.S. Government Works.

The 2008 License may be central to an affirmative defense of license. It is not, however, central to Weatherford's infringement counterclaims, and it is not referenced in the Third Amended Counterclaims. Therefore, the Court excludes the 2008 License and the '431 Patent from its consideration when ruling on the Motion to Dismiss.

B. Failure to Plead Affirmative Defense

"In responding to a pleading, a party must affirmatively state any avoidance or affirmative defense," including license. FED. R. CIV. P. 8(c)(1). An affirmative defense must be pled with "enough specificity or factual particularity to give the plaintiff 'fair notice' of the defense that is being advanced." Woodfield v. Bowman, 193 F.3d 354, 362 (5th Cir. 1999).

Enventure did not affirmatively assert the license defense in its Answer to the Third Amended Counterclaims [Doc. # 123]. Enventure argues that it raised the license defense by raising as an affirmative defense the failure to state a claim upon which relief can be granted, and by denying Weatherford's allegations that it has not licensed its rights in the Weatherford Patents and that Enventure acted without a license. See Reply, pp. 5-7. Such general denials are not sufficient to satisfy the pleading requirement of Rule 8(c)(1). See Glass Containers Corp. v. Miller Brewing Co., 643 F.2d 308, 313 (5th Cir. 1981). Indeed, the Fifth Circuit has stated that pleading the affirmative defense of "license" does not preserve an "implied license" defense when the only evidence presented was of a written license. See Ramirez v. Nichols, 496 F. App'x 383, 386 (5th Cir. 2012).

Nonetheless, "a technical failure to comply with Rule 8(c) is not fatal." LSREF2 Baron, LLC v. Tauch, 751 F.3d 394, 398 (5th Cir. 2014). Therefore, the Court will allow Enventure to file an amended answer to Weatherford's Third Amended Counterclaims in order to assert the affirmative defense of license.

C. Consideration of Issues on Motion to Dismiss

Even if the Court were to consider the 2008 License and the '431 Patent, and even if Enventure had properly asserted the affirmative defense of license, the Court would deny the Motion to Dismiss. There are disputed issues regarding the correct interpretation of the 2008 License. There are disputed issues that will require the Court to compare multiple patents to determine whether the Weatherford Patents are modifications of the '431 Patent. These disputed issues are not proper for resolution on a motion to dismiss, where the Court's focus is whether the facts as pled in the counterclaims are sufficient under the federal pleading requirements. See Ashcroft v. Iqbal, 556 U.S. 662, 678 (2009); Latham v. Wood, 748 F. App'x 621, 622 (5th Cir. 2019). Weatherford alleges with sufficient factual specificity that it owns the Weatherford Patents and that Enventure is infringing. Indeed, Enventure does not challenge the adequacy of these allegations except to argue that patent infringement claims against a licensee should be dismissed for failure to state a claim upon which relief can be granted. See Motion to Dismiss, pp. 6-7.

 © 2025 Thomson Reuters. No claim to original U.S. Government Works.

3 The allegations in the Third Amended Counterclaims, taken as true for purposes of the Motion to Dismiss, satisfy the federal pleading requirements. As a result, dismissal is inappropriate and is denied. Issues regarding the effect of the 2008 License and whether the Weatherford Patents are modifications of the '431 Patent may be raised, if appropriate, in a subsequent motion for summary judgment filed after relevant discovery is completed.

IV. CONCLUSION AND ORDER

The 2008 License is not referenced in Weatherford's Third Amended Counterclaims, and Enventure has not affirmatively pled a license defense. Additionally, Enventure in its Motion to Dismiss relies on issues requiring interpretation of the 2008 License and comparisons among multiple patents, issues that are not properly resolved on a motion to dismiss in this case. As a result, it is hereby ORDERED that Enventure's Motion to Dismiss Third Amended Counterclaims [Doc. # 131] is DENIED.

All Citations

Not Reported in Fed. Supp., 2020 WL 6146565

End of Document

© 2025 Thomson Reuters. No claim to original U.S. Government Works.

CASE NO. 51

2019 WL 7037744
Only the Westlaw citation
is currently available.
United States District Court,
S.D. Texas, Houston Division.

IIITEC, LIMITED, Plaintiff,
v.
WEATHERFORD TECHNOLOGY HOLDINGS, LLC, Defendant.

Civil Action
No.
H
-
19
-
3386
|
Signed 12/20/2019

Attorneys and Law Firms

David Martin Lodholz, Terry Blaine Joseph, Matthews Lawson McCutcheon Joseph PLLC, Houston, TX, for Plaintiff.

Billy Martin Donley, Baker Hostetler LLP, Houston, TX, Kevin W. Kirsch, Pro Hac Vice, Baker & Hostetler, LLP, Cincinnati, OH, for Defendant.

MEMORANDUM AND ORDER

NANCY F. ATLAS, SENIOR UNITED STATES DISTRICT JUDGE

1 This case is before the Court on the Motion to Dismiss or for More Definite Statement ("Motion to Dismiss") [Doc. # 25] filed by Defendant Weatherford Technology Holdings, LLC ("Defendant" or "Weatherford").[1] Plaintiff iiiTec, Limited ("Plaintiff" or "iiiTec") filed a Response [Doc. # 37], and Weatherford filed a Reply [Doc. # 44]. Having reviewed the record and the applicable legal authorities, the Court denies the Motion to Dismiss.[2]

I. BACKGROUND

Plaintiff iiiTec alleges in the First Amended Complaint that Petrowell Limited ("Petrowell") developed a "radio frequency identification device ("RFID") controlled circulating sub for use in the drilling market of the oilfield service industry." First Amended Complaint [Doc. # 14], ¶ 9. Petrowell later discovered that Marathon Oil Company ("Marathon") held United States patents covering the use of RFID in downhole operations. See id. Plaintiff alleges that in early 2006, "Petrowell signed an exclusive license agreement with Marathon for all applications in the downhole environment for RFID technology." Id., ¶ 10. Later that same year, Marathon moved its RFID technology to a new company, In-Depth Systems, Inc. ("In-Depth"). See id., ¶ 11.

Plaintiff alleges that in August 2008, it entered into a Technology Development Agreement ("TDA") with Marathon and Petrowell.[3] See id., ¶ 14. Under the TDA, Marathon is granted rights to new developments and/or improvements to the RFID technology made during the course of the TDA, which are defined as "Assigned IP" in the TDA. See id., ¶ 16 (citing TDA ¶ 9.9). The TDA provides further that Marathon "shall grant to In-Depth or Developers [Petrowell and Plaintiff] licenses in any Assigned IP" depending on Marathon's agreement with In-Depth and others. Id. (quoting TDA ¶ 9.9). The TDA states that if assigned to the Developers, the Assigned IP license to Plaintiff shall be exclusive in the Drilling Field or Coiled Tubing Field. Id. (citing TDA ¶ 9.9).

 © 2025 Thomson Reuters. No claim to original U.S. Government Works.

Plaintiff alleges that the TDA included a "Program Plan" for "Program Tools" to be developed, and for the Developers to pay a technology development fee to Marathon. See id., ¶¶ 21-22. Plaintiff alleges that as it developed a specific "Program Tool," it received a license covering that tool.[4] See id., ¶ 22. Plaintiff alleges that the amount of the technology development fee was calculated based on a stated value for each tool and the "Gross Revenues" Plaintiff received from selling, renting, or using the tool. See id., ¶ 23. Plaintiff alleges that, pursuant to the terms of the TDA, it paid a 17.5% fee, totaling $290,801.24, to Marathon in February 2013. See id., ¶ 24.

2 In April 2017, Weatherford and Marathon entered into an IP Purchase Agreement which stated that Marathon assigned ownership rights in the Assigned IP. See id., ¶ 26. Plaintiff alleges that the TDA prevents Marathon from assigning its rights or obligations under that agreement "without the prior written consent of the Developers [and] any purported assignment or delegation without such consent [is] voidable and ineffective." Id. (quoting TDA ¶ 23). Plaintiff alleges that it has not consented to any assignment of the Assigned IP to Weatherford. See id., ¶ 29. Plaintiff alleges that the IP Purchase Agreement provides also that the RFID Technology "shall remain subject to any and all rights and licenses granted" under the TDA. Id., ¶ 27.

Plaintiff filed this lawsuit against Weatherford seeking primarily a declaratory judgment that any assignment of the Assigned IP by Marathon to Weatherford is invalid. See First Amended Complaint, Count 1. As an alternative, and only if there is a finding that the assignment to Weatherford is valid without Plaintiff's consent, Plaintiff seeks a declaratory judgment that it has a valid license under the TDA that is binding on Weatherford (Count 2), and asserts a breach of contract claim (Count 3). In Count 4 of the First Amended Complaint, Plaintiff seeks to recover its reasonable and necessary attorney fees.

Weatherford filed its Motion to Dismiss and Motion for Sanctions. Weatherford argues that the transfer of the Assigned IP from Marathon to Weatherford does not require Plaintiff's consent, that the TDA does not grant Plaintiff a license in the Assigned IP, and that there is no viable breach of contract claim because Weatherford is not a party to the TDA. The pending motions have been fully briefed and are now ripe for decision. The Court denies the Motion to Dismiss and the Motion for Sanctions.

II. STANDARD FOR MOTION TO DISMISS

A motion to dismiss under Rule 12(b)(6) of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure "is viewed with disfavor and is rarely granted."

See Leal v. McHugh, 731 F.3d 405, 410 (5th Cir. 2013) (quoting Turner v. Pleasant, 663 F.3d 770, 775 (5th Cir. 2011)); Shaikh v. Texas A&M Univ. Coll. of Med., 739 F. App'x 215, 218 (5th Cir. June 20, 2018). The Court accepts the factual allegations in the complaint as true, and construes the facts in the light most favorable to the plaintiff. *See Alexander v. Verizon Wireless Servs., L.L.C., 875 F.3d 243, 249 (5th Cir. 2017) (citing Kelly v. Nichamoff, 868 F.3d 371, 374 (5th Cir. 2017)). The complaint must, however, contain sufficient factual allegations, as opposed to legal conclusions, to state a claim for relief that is "plausible on its face." See Ashcroft v. Iqbal, 556 U.S. 662, 678 (2009); Cicalese v. Univ. of Texas Med. Branch, 924 F.3d 762, 765 (5th Cir. 2019); Patrick v. Wal-Mart, Inc., 681 F.3d 614, 617 (5th Cir. 2012). When there are well-pleaded factual allegations, a court should presume they are true, even if doubtful, and "then determine whether they plausibly give rise to an entitlement to relief." See Iqbal, 556 U.S. at 679; Doe v. Robertson, 951 F.3d 383, 387 (5th Cir. 2014).

"The court's review is limited to the complaint, any documents attached to the complaint, and any documents attached to the motion to dismiss that are central to the claim and referenced by the complaint." Lone Star Fund V (U.S.), L.P. v. Barclays Bank PLC, 594 F.3d 383, 387 (5th Cir. 2010) (citing Collins v. Morgan Stanley Dean Witter, 224 F.3d 496, 498-99 (5th Cir. 2000)); see also Ironshore Europe DAC v. Schiff Hardin, L.L.P., 912 F.3d 759, 763 (5th Cir. 2019); Walch v. Adjutant General's Dep't of Tex., 533 F.3d 289, 294 (5th Cir. 2008) (on a Rule 12(b)(6) motion, documents attached to the briefing may be considered by the Court if the documents are sufficiently referenced in the complaint and no party questions their authenticity).

III. ANALYSIS

A. Count 1 - Assignment to Weatherford Without Consent

3 Weatherford argues that Count 1 should be dismissed because the TDA's requirement for the Developers' consent prior to assignment applies only to an assignment of the TDA itself, not to the assignment of the Assigned IP to Weatherford under the IP Purchase Agreement. The TDA provides that Marathon "may not assign or delegate its rights or obligations under [the TDA] without the prior written consent of the Developers [and] any purported assignment or delegation without such consent will be voidable and ineffective." TDA [Doc. # 15-1], ¶ 23. Plaintiff alleges clearly and plausibly that ownership of the Assigned IP is a "right" that Marathon obtained under ¶ 9.6 of the TDA[5] and, therefore, assignment of that right requires Plaintiff's prior written consent to be effective. See First Amended Complaint, ¶¶ 26, 29.

The TDA requires Plaintiff's consent for Marathon to assign its "rights or obligations under [the TDA]," and Plaintiff alleges plausibly that Marathon's ownership of the Assigned IP is a right it acquired under ¶ 9.6 of the TDA. Therefore, Plaintiff alleges a plausible factual basis for its assertion that Marathon's assignment of the Assigned IP -- a right under the TDA – required Plaintiff's prior written consent. The Court denies Weatherford's Motion to Dismiss Count 1 of the First Amended Complaint.

B. Count 2 - Existence of License in Assigned IP [6]

Weatherford argues that Count 2 should be dismissed because the TDA does not grant a license to Plaintiff. In the First Amended Complaint, Plaintiff alleges that the development of Program Tools granted a license, effective upon development of the specific Program Tool, to the Developer. See id., ¶ 22. Plaintiff alleges that the existence of a license allowed Plaintiff to market the Program Tools it developed, and required it to pay a "technology development fee" to Marathon in an amount based in part on the "Gross Revenues" received by Plaintiff in connection with marketing the tool. See id., ¶¶ 22-23 (citing TDA ¶ 10.2; TDA Exh. 4 and Amended Exh. 4). Paragraph 10.2 of the TDA requires Plaintiff to pay Marathon a "technology development fee on the Gross Revenue of both sales and rental of all Exclusive Tools and Non-Exclusive Tools...." TDA ¶ 10.2. Moreover, Plaintiff alleges that the parties to the TDA intended and treated the Program Tools as being licensed as each tool was developed, even if the language in the TDA is ambiguous. See id., ¶ 25.

Weatherford argues that the technology development fee was not based on the existence of a license, but was required under the TDA whether or not there was a license. Weatherford's argument is not persuasive at this stage of the proceedings. Paragraph 10.4 of the TDA provides that Plaintiff "will not be responsible for payment" of technology development fees until it has received payment for the tools from its customer. See TDA, ¶ 10.6. If, during the term of the TDA, the total amount of technology development fees paid to Marathon by the Developers equals "US $23.7MM," Plaintiff is no longer required to pay the technology development fee. See TDA, ¶ 10.5.

Plaintiff's allegations plausibly state a factual basis for the existence of a license under the TDA based on the parties' intent and conduct under the TDA, particularly in connection with the payment to Marathon of the technology development fee based on marketing of the "Program Tools," tools which Plaintiff argues it would not be allowed to market absent a license from Marathon. Therefore, the allegations in the First Amended Complaint are adequate to avoid dismissal under Rule 12(b)(6). The Motion to Dismiss Count 2 is denied.

C. Count 3 - Breach of TDA

4 Weatherford argues that Count 3 should be dismissed because it was not a party to the TDA. Plaintiff alleges that the IP Purchase Agreement between Weatherford and Marathon stated that the Assigned IP "shall remain subject to any and all rights and licenses" granted under the TDA. See id., ¶¶ 27-28. Plaintiff argues that, as a result, Weatherford obtained the Assigned IP subject to Plaintiff's right to receive a license, and assumed Marathon's rights and obligations under the TDA.

Weatherford argues that Plaintiff's position "is not true" and "simply makes no sense." See Reply [Doc. # 44], pp. 9, 10. While Weatherford's argument may ultimately succeed, it is not a basis for dismissing Count 3. Plaintiff alleges a plausible factual basis for its position that Weatherford obtained the Assigned IP subject to the TDA, and assumed Marathon's obligations under that agreement. The Motion to Dismiss Count 3 is denied.

D. Count 4 - Claim for Attorney Fees

Weatherford seeks dismissal of Plaintiff's claim for attorney fees. Weatherford argues that Plaintiff is not entitled to recover fees because Counts 1 through 3 should be dismissed. As explained above, the Court denies the Motion to Dismiss Counts 1 through 3. Therefore, the Motion to Dismiss Count 4 is likewise denied.

IV. CONCLUSION AND ORDER

Based on the foregoing, Plaintiff has adequately alleged a plausible claim for relief in this case. Accordingly, it is hereby ORDERED that the Motion to Dismiss or for More Definite Statement [Doc. # 25] is DENIED. It is further ORDERED that the Motion for Sanctions [Doc. # 30] is DENIED.

All Citations

Not Reported in Fed. Supp., 2019 WL 7037744

Footnotes

1 Also pending is Weatherford's Motion for Sanctions [Doc. # 30], to which Plaintiff filed a Response [Doc. # 41], and Weatherford filed a Reply [Doc. # 46]. Because the Court denies the Motion to Dismiss or for More Definite Statement, sanctions under Rule 11 of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure are inappropriate. The Motion for Sanctions is denied.

2 The information Weatherford seeks through its alternative request for a more definite statement can be obtained through discovery. Therefore, the Motion for More Definite Statement is denied.

3 The TDA is attached to the First Amended Complaint as Exhibit 2.

4 Plaintiff alleges that even if the TDA is ambiguous, “the Parties actually treated the Program Tools as being licensed to Plaintiff iiiTec as they were developed.” First Amended Complaint, ¶ 25.

5 Paragraph 9.6 of the TDA states:

> Any IP that is conceived, originated or developed solely or jointly by any Developer Entity, with or without [Marathon] and any third party, in the course of the Program, and any IP that is derived by any Developer Entity from, arising out of, or relating to the RFID Technology or Confidential Information, shall belong to [Marathon] and be owned solely by [Marathon], and the Developer Entities hereby assign to [Marathon] all right, title and interest therein, including all interest in..."Assigned IP."

6 Counts 2 and 3 are asserted only as an alternative to Count 1 in the event there is a finding that Marathon's assignment of the Assigned IP to Weatherford is valid.

End of Document

© 2025 Thomson Reuters. No claim to original U.S. Government Works.

CASE NO. 52

2017 WL 1474093
Only the Westlaw citation
is currently available.
United States District Court,
S.D. Texas, Houston Division.

Larry Eugene BALCEROWICZ,
Jr., a/k/a Larry Michael Johnson,
TDCJ-CID # 1672723, Plaintiff,
v.
David W. SWEETIN, et al., Defendants.

Civil Action
No.
H
-
12
-
0310
|
Signed 04/06/2017

Attorneys and Law Firms

Larry Balcerowicz, Jr., Houston, TX, pro se.

Jennifer Lynn Daniel, Kyle M. Smith, Craig McCam Jacobs, Office of the Attorney General, Austin, TX, for Defendants.

MEMORANDUM OPINION AND ORDER

KEITH P. ELLISON, UNITED STATES DISTRICT JUDGE

1 Plaintiff Larry Eugene Balcerowicz, also known as Larry Michael Johnson, a state inmate at the time of filing, filed this pro se section 1983 lawsuit raising claims of deliberate indifference to his health and serious medical needs against prison correctional officers Warden David W. Sweetin, Assistant Warden Christopher G. Carter, Major David Forrest, and Peggy Haggard (collectively the "Correctional Defendants"), and against prison medical care providers Thomas Powell, P.A., Randall Healy, P.A., and Maureen Liles, R.N. (collectively the "Medical Defendants"). All of the named defendants are sued in their individual capacities. (Docket Entry No. 12.)

The Correctional Defendants filed a motion to dismiss (Docket Entry No. 15), to which plaintiff filed a response (Docket Entry No. 18). The Medical Defendants filed a motion for summary judgment (Docket Entry No. 24), to which plaintiff filed a response (Docket Entry No. 26). The Medical Defendants filed a reply to plaintiff's response (Docket Entry No. 27), followed by a sur-reply filed by plaintiff (Docket Entry No. 28).

Based on careful consideration of the motions and the various responsive pleadings, the exhibits, the record, and the applicable law, the Court GRANTS the motion to dismiss, GRANTS the motion for summary judgment, and DISMISSES this lawsuit for the reasons that follow.

I. BACKGROUND AND CLAIMS

Plaintiff alleges in his complaint that, on or about November 2, 2010, he arrived at the Estelle Unit from the Garza Transfer Facility. Plaintiff states that he had been evaluated by medical staff at the Garza Transfer Facility, where he reported his hearing impairment, asthma, and history of short "black out" seizures, but that he was not examined or evaluated by medical personnel upon his arrival at the Estelle Unit. He claims that he was not seen by Estelle Unit medical personnel until he suffered an asthma attack on November 9, 2010, and was treated by the medical staff and prescribed an asthma inhaler. He complained to one or more of the Medical Defendants that he had not been evaluated by Estelle Unit personnel upon his arrival, and had not received his asthma medication or any work restrictions.

 © 2025 Thomson Reuters. No claim to original U.S. Government Works.

Plaintiff reports that a few months later, he was assigned to work in the outdoor field squad. He reports no specific beginning date, but does state that on June 24, 2011, he complained to medical personnel that his working in the fields was causing problems with his asthma and seizures. Plaintiff states that he also sent I-60 complaints to the Correctional Defendants complaining that he was being "worked against restrictions" in the field squad. He complains here that he was only able to get a drink of water once an hour, and that he developed headaches, "shakes," and breathing difficulties. On July 26, 2011, he asked defendant Healy for medical restrictions to keep him from working in the fields; Healy responded that medical staff cannot make work assignment decisions. The next day, July 27, 2011, plaintiff reportedly "fell out" while working the fields and "woke up" in the infirmary, claiming that he had a "space out" seizure from being outside.

2 As to the Correctional Defendants, plaintiff claims that Sweetin "ignored all pleas for help medical and safety. I wrote letters and requests for his help and authority power," that Carter "failed to respond and help to all pleas of help and assistance," that Forrest "refused to help me. Failed to help w/my pleas for med & safety," and that Haggard "ignored and refused to help me w/my pleas for help medically & security & safety." (Docket Entry No. 1, p. 3.) As to the Medical Defendants, plaintiff states that Powell and Healy "refused and denied me proper medical help and treatment," and that Liles "refused and denied me proper medical treatment and held against a P.A. Dr.s [sic] orders and advice." Id. Construed liberally, plaintiff's complaint raises claims against all of the defendants for deliberate indifference to his health and serious medical needs. He seeks monetary compensation and injunctive relief.

II. THE CORRECTIONAL DEFENDANTS

In their pending Rule 12(b)(6) motion to dismiss, the Correctional Defendants argue that plaintiff's claims against them should be dismissed because he fails to state a viable section 1983 Eighth Amendment deliberate indifference claim.

A. Rule 12(b)(6) Standards

In reviewing the adequacy of a complaint under Rule 12(b)(6) of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, a court must accept all well-pleaded facts as true and view all facts in the light most favorable to the plaintiff. Thompson v. City of Waco, 764 F.3d 500, 502 (5th Cir. 2014). It need not, however, accept a plaintiff's legal conclusions as true. Ashcroft v. Iqbal, 556 U.S. 662, 678 (2009). To survive dismissal under Rule 12(b)(6), a plaintiff must plead "enough facts to state a claim to relief that is plausible on its face." Bell Atl. Corp. v. Twombly, 550 U.S. 544, 570 (2007). "A claim has facial plausibility when the plaintiff pleads factual content that allows the court to draw the reasonable inference that the defendant is liable for the misconduct alleged." Iqbal, 556 U.S. at 678. As recognized by the Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals, the court's task "is to determine whether the plaintiff stated a legally cognizable claim that is plausible, not to evaluate the plaintiff's likelihood of success." Doe ex rel. Magee v. Covington Cnty. Sch. Dist. ex rel. Keys, 675 F.3d 849, 854 (5th Cir. 2012) (en banc).

On a Rule 12(b)(6) motion, a district court generally "must limit itself to the contents of the pleadings, including attachments thereto." Collins v. Morgan Stanley Dean Witter, 224 F.3d 496, 498 (5th Cir. 2000). The court may also consider documents attached to either a motion to dismiss or an opposition to that motion when the documents are referred to in the pleadings and are central to a plaintiff's claims. Id.; see also Walch v. Adjutant General's Dep't of Tex., 533 F.3d 289, 293-94 (5th Cir. 2008) (considering exhibits attached to an opposition because no party questioned the authenticity of the documents and they were sufficiently referenced in the complaint to permit their consideration on a motion to dismiss). Although no documents were attached to plaintiff's complaint or defendants' motion to dismiss in the instant case, plaintiff attached documents to his response in opposition to the motion to dismiss. The Correctional Defendants do not challenge the authenticity of the documents; to the contrary, the same documents are among those submitted by the Medical Defendants in support of their own motion for summary judgment. Consequently, in considering the pending motion to dismiss, the Court will include the exhibits attached to plaintiff's response in opposition to the motion.

A pleading filed pro se is to be liberally construed, and "a pro se complaint, however inartfully pleaded, must be held to less stringent standards than formal pleadings drafted by lawyers." Erickson v. Pardus, 551 U.S. 89, 94 (2007). Under this standard, pleadings filed by a pro se litigant are entitled to a liberal construction that affords all reasonable inferences which can be drawn from them. Haines v. Kerner, 404 U.S. 519, 520-21 (1972); Oliver v. Scott, 276 F.3d 736, 740 (5th Cir. 2000). Because plaintiff is proceeding pro se, he will be afforded the benefit of liberal construction under Haines.

B. Deliberate Indifference

3 Plaintiff claims that the Correctional Defendants violated his Eighth Amendment rights through deliberate indifference to his health and safety.

A claim for deliberate indifference to a prisoner's health and safety requires proof that an officer knew of and disregarded an excessive risk to the inmate's physical health or safety, and that the inmate suffered physical harm or injury as a result. The inmate must show that the officer was aware of facts from which the inference could be drawn that a substantial risk of serious harm exists, and that the officer did in fact draw the inference and disregarded it. Farmer v. Brennan, 511

U.S. 825, 838 (1994). The failure of an officer to alleviate a significant risk which he should have perceived, but did not, does not constitute deliberate indifference. Moreover, mere negligence or a lack of reasonable care which falls short of being deliberately indifferent does not give rise to a constitutional violation. Id. at 832-33; Horton v. Cockrell, 70 F.3d 397, 401 (5th Cir. 1995). To meet this standard, a prisoner must establish more than mere negligence or an unreasonable response. Gobert v. Caldwell, 463 F.3d 339, 346 (5th Cir. 2006).

C. Analysis

The record shows that plaintiff had been evaluated immediately prior to his transfer to the Estelle Unit, as shown by his Correctional Managed Care Intake History and Health Screening dated November 2, 2011. (Docket Entry No. 24-3, p. 22.) The form indicated that plaintiff had an asthma inhaler with him and was allowed to keep it on his person. That same day, prison physician Dr. Lieninger ordered that plaintiff be given a permanent bottom bunk restriction and a prescription for his regular seizure medication.

Plaintiff's medical and prison records also show that, on November 4, 2010, his Medical and Mental Health Transfer Screening form was completed at the Estelle Unit. Id., pp. 278-79. The form noted that plaintiff was complaining of left-sided chest pain, and that he was taking phenytoin, an anti-seizure medication. He was approved for release to general population, and was given housing restrictions. Id., p. 279. His work restrictions were noted as "12, 19, 20, 23, 25, & 27."[1] Id. On November 4, 2010, he was seen by defendant registered nurse Liles at the Estelle Unit after complaining of left-sided chest pain of two days duration. Id., pp. 219. The medical chart entry noted that plaintiff had been in a fight two days prior at the Lychner Jail. Id. Plaintiff was provided a cold pack and ibuprofen, and was returned to his cell.

Thus, plaintiff's allegations and his medical records show that he was provided an intake evaluation, work restrictions, housing assignment and bunk restrictions, as well as prescriptions for his regular medications. He was allowed to keep his asthma inhaler on his person. He was seen, evaluated, and treated for complaints of muscle pain in his chest two days after his arrival at the Estelle Unit.

Plaintiff asserts that unidentified persons assigned him at an unidentified time to work in the fields. In arguing that the Correctional Defendants were deliberately indifferent to his health and safety, he states that they were aware of his hearing impairment and had knowledge of facts "from which they could infer that plaintiff's assignment to work in the fields would expose him to a substantial risk of serious harm." (Docket Entry No. 18, p. 3.) Specifically, he argues that his hearing impairment could have resulted in his being shot by armed guards if he were to venture out of bounds and not hear their warnings. Id. Or, he continues, he could not hear shouts to "move out of the way" of a falling tree. Id., p. 4. However, plaintiff does not allege in his complaint that the defendants knew, or could infer from known facts, that plaintiff's field work exposed him to a serious risk of being shot or struck by falling trees and that they deliberately disregarded those risks. Rather, plaintiff claims that working in the hoe squad caused him to overheat, and that the Corrections Defendants deliberately ignored the substantial risk of his overheating if assigned to the hoe squad.

4 Plaintiff makes no correlation between his hearing impairment and a substantial risk of overheating. That is, he fails to allege facts showing that defendants could infer, from their knowledge of his hearing impairment, that his working in the fields would expose him to a substantial risk of serious overheating. To the contrary, plaintiff sets forth no factual allegations establishing that, at the time he was assigned to the hoe squad, the Correctional Defendants knew that the work assignment would expose plaintiff to an excessive risk of overheating and that they disregarded that risk. He further fails to allege and show that the Correctional Defendants were both aware of the facts from which the inference could be drawn that a substantial risk of serious harm existed, and that they drew the inference.

At some point after his assignment to the hoe squad, plaintiff sent an internal communication to the Unit Classification Committee, stating his belief that the work was dangerous for him because of his hearing impairment. He was not removed from the work assignment. Id., pp. 5-6. Plaintiff did not inform anyone that he was experiencing physical problems working in the heat until July 26, 2011, following his claim that he had experienced a seizure while working outside, despite having purportedly taken his anti-seizure medications.[2] He complained to staff immediately after the alleged seizure that he "should not be outside working and needs restrictions changed." (Docket Entry No. 18, p. 25.) His physical examination revealed "chest clear, no wheezes, not on resp rx," "no tremors, good gait, no leg edema or atrophy." The nursing staff noted no seizure activity. Id., p. 21. His respirations were "even & unlabored" when he was brought in from the field. Id., p. 25. On July 27, 2011, his medical care providers added a work restriction for "no work in direct sunlight." (Docket Entry No. 26, Exhibit H.) Plaintiff does not claim that he was required to work outside in the field squad after that date.

Plaintiff fails to allege facts showing that the Correctional Defendants knew, or could infer from their existing knowledge, that his working in the fields would expose him to a substantial risk of serious overheating or seizure activity, and that they disregarded that risk. He further fails to allege and show that the Correctional Defendants were both aware of the facts from which such inference could be drawn that a substantial risk of serious harm existed, and that they drew the inference.

Plaintiff does not state a viable Eighth Amendment claim for deliberate indifference as to the Correctional Defendants, and the Correctional Defendants are entitled to dismissal of plaintiff's claims against them.

III. THE MEDICAL DEFENDANTS

The Medical Defendants move for summary judgment and argue that plaintiff fails to establish an Eighth Amendment violation for deliberate indifference to his serious health and medical needs.

A. Summary Judgement Standards

5 Summary judgment should be granted when the moving party conclusively establishes that there is no genuine issue of material fact. FED. R. CIV. P. 56(c); Celotex Corp. v. Catrett, 477 U.S. 317, 323-25 (1986). There is no issue for resolution at trial unless there is sufficient evidence favoring the nonmoving party for a jury to return a verdict for that party. Anderson v. Liberty Lobby, Inc., 477 U.S. 242, 247-48 (1986). The moving party may satisfy its burden by negating the existence of an essential element of the nonmoving party's case. Celotex Corp., 477 U.S. at 325. Alternatively, if the moving party will not bear the burden of proof at trial on a particular issue, it may meet its initial burden by pointing out the absence of evidence supporting that element of the nonmoving party's case. Id.; Stults v. Conoco, Inc., 76 F.3d 651, 656 (5th Cir. 1996); Transamerica Ins. Co. v. Avenall, 66 F.3d 715, 718-719 (5th Cir. 1995).

Once the moving party has carried its burden, the burden shifts to the nonmoving party to show that summary judgment is not appropriate. Exxon Corp. v. Baton Rouge Oil, 77 F.3d 850, 853 (5th Cir. 1996). The nonmoving party cannot discharge its burden by alleging legal conclusions or unsubstantiated assertions, nor can it rest on the allegations of the pleadings; instead, it must present affirmative evidence in order to demonstrate the existence of a genuine issue of material fact and defeat a motion for summary judgment supported by competent evidence. Anderson, 477 U.S. at 248-250; Matsushita Elec. Indus. Co., Ltd. v. Zenith Radio Corp., 475 U.S. 574, 587 (1986).

"At the summary judgment stage, facts must be viewed in the light most favorable to the nonmoving party only if there is a "genuine" dispute as to those facts." Scott v. Harris, 550 U.S. 372, 380 (2007). When the record taken as a whole could not lead a rational trier of fact to find for the nonmoving party, there is no genuine issue for trial. Id. However, when opposing parties tell two different stories, one of which is blatantly contradicted by the record, so that no reasonable jury could believe it, a court should not adopt the version of the facts for purposes of ruling on a motion for summary judgment. Id.

B. Deliberate Indifference

Under the Eighth Amendment, prison officials have a duty to provide adequate medical care to prisoners. Farmer v. Brennan, 511 U.S. 825, 832 (1994); Rogers v. Boatright, 709 F.3d 403, 409 (5th Cir. 2013). To allege an Eighth Amendment violation, an inmate must show that prison officials or prison medical care providers acted with deliberate indifference toward his serious medical needs, resulting in the unnecessary and wanton infliction of pain. Id.

To prevail under the "extremely high standard" of deliberate indifference, a prisoner "must show that the officials refused to treat him, ignored his complaints, intentionally treated him incorrectly, or engaged in any similar conduct that would clearly evince a wanton disregard for any serious medical needs." Domino v. Tex. Dep't of Crim. Justice, 239 F.3d 752, 756 (5th Cir. 2001). "An incorrect diagnosis by prison medical personnel does not suffice to state a claim for deliberate indifference." Id. Moreover, "unsuccessful medical treatment, acts of negligence, or medical malpractice do not constitute deliberate indifference." Id.

Deliberate indifference is especially difficult to show when, as here, the inmate has been provided with ongoing medical treatment. See Gobert v. Caldwell, 463 F.3d 339, 346 (5th Cir. 2006). The decision not to provide additional or different treatment "is a classic example of a matter for medical judgment" rather than a basis for a deliberate indifference claim. Estelle v. Gamble, 429 U.S. 97, 107 (1976); Domino, 239 F.3d at 756. An inmate's disagreement with medical treatment does not state a claim for deliberate indifference. Gobert, 463 F.3d at 346-47; Norton v. Dimizana, 122 F.3d 286, 292 (5th Cir. 1997). Records showing that an inmate was given medical examinations, treatments, and medications may rebut an inmate's allegations of deliberate indifference in denying or delaying medical care. See Varnado v. Lynaugh, 920 F. 2d 320, 321 (5th Cir. 1991).

C. Analysis

6 Plaintiff contends that the Medical Defendants were deliberately indifferent to his health and serious medical needs in denying him medical care and appropriate work restrictions. He claims that, due to their deliberate indifference, he sustained an asthma attack and, later, a seizure or episode of overheating while working outside in the field squad. He asserts that defendants' knowledge of his hearing impairment and history of a seizure disorder was sufficient to put them on notice that he should not work outside in the fields.

In support of their motion for summary judgment, the Medical Defendants have submitted an affidavit of Steven Bowers, M.D., who reviewed the medical records of plaintiff and testified as follows:

> An Intake History and Health Screening form was completed on November 2, 2010, and was signed by [plaintiff]. The Intake History and Health Screening form requests various information such as the patient's family medical history, the patient's personal medical history, the dates and types of treatment received, history of hospitalization, if the patient has any current medical, mental health or dental complaints, if the patient has used illegal drugs or alcohol, current medications, and a visual exam, etc. [Plaintiff's] Intake form noted that he had asthma, a back injury, a fish allergy, seizures, that he wore glasses and a hearing aid, he had a prior head injury, a problem with his right wrist, and a history of mental illness. In section A of the intake form, the writer noted [plaintiff] had an inhaler, KOP (keep on person), for his asthma; and that he was on medication for his seizures. The same day [plaintiff] entered the Texas Department of Criminal Justice, Licensed Vocational Nurse (LVN) Gomez received verbal orders from [a physician] for [plaintiff] to have a permanent bottom bunk restriction on his HSM-18 form and for the patient to be started on Dilantin 100mg (seizure medication), three capsules every evening, with 11 refills.
>
> [Plaintiff] arrived at the Estelle Unit on November 4, 2010. He was seen in the clinic by Registered Nurse (RN) Liles the day of his arrival for complaints of chest pain from a fight he had two days ago at Lynchner jail. The patient indicated that it hurt under his chest in the ribcage area. RN Liles noted the area was tender to palpation, there was no obvious bruising or deformities, and that the patient indicated he had pain with inhalation with no radiation of pain. [Plaintiff] was given Ibuprofen 200mg three times a day for three days and instructed to submit a sick call request if the problem persisted after three days of medication. There is nothing in the medical record that indicates [plaintiff] had any complaints regarding his asthma or that he requested an inhaler. On November 8, 2010, Donna Stebbins sent an email to the Estelle Scheduling Group stating, "Please schedule CCC (Chronic Care Clinic) for Seizure D/O (disorder) ASAP also HSM-18 (Health Unit for Classification form) update."

On November 9, 2010, [plaintiff] was seen in the clinic by RN Calyen for complaints of pain to his left chest area. The patient reported getting into a fight two weeks ago at a county jail. The examination showed the patient's oxygen saturation level was 97% (normal), and that he had wheezy breath sounds. PA Powell was asked to come assess the patient. PA Powell ordered an Albuterol Unit Dose Nebulizer treatment at that time and a Proventil Inhaler was ordered KOP. The patient was instructed to increase his fluid intake and to return to the clinic if the wheezing worsened. Ibuprofen was also ordered for his chest pain. There is nothing in the record that indicates [plaintiff] had an asthma attack on November 9, 2010, only that he had asthmatic symptoms. PA Powell prescribed the appropriate medical treatment to [plaintiff] and no further complaint was received regarding this issue for the remainder of 2010.

7 Upon entry to TDCJ [plaintiff] was referred to Assistive Disability Services (ADS) for his loss of hearing. His first appointment was scheduled for November 23, 2010 and he was a no show for his appointment. He was also a no show on December 13, 2010, December 14, 2010, January 5, 2011, January 10, 2011, January 25, 2011, March 7, 2011, March 24, 2011, August 2, 2011, and January 24, 2012. The patient was not seen for the first time by ADS until August 5, 2011. The caseworker noted the patient appear[ed] to have moderate to severe hearing loss and can hear better when facing the person speaking. It was also noted the patient appears to have some difficulty with speech and a delayed response to questions. The record noted the patient was provided information on developing program goals, available through ADS, program management, patient rights, and methods of communicating with his caseworker. The caseworker determined that the patient currently had no ADS needs and that his case management would be reviewed every 180 days.

It should be noted that [plaintiff] was scheduled for a Chronic Care Clinic appointment for his seizures and to update his Health Unit for Classification form (HSM-18) on December 20, 2010, but he was a no show for the appointment. PA Powell requested that the patient be rescheduled for the appointment.

On January 14, 2011, [plaintiff] was seen in the clinic by Licensed Vocational Nurse

(LVN) Phlegm for complaints that he had an asthma attack earlier and officers wanted him to be checked. It was noted that the patient had a cough but that his lungs were clear, his oxygen saturation level was 98%, and that his peak flow readings were normal at 400, 375, and 400. LVN Phlegm consulted with RN Liles and the patient was instructed to drink plenty of fluids, avoid factors which trigger an attack (strong odors, smoke, etc[.]), and to return to the clinic as needed.

On January 25, 2011, PA Powell changed [plaintiff's] evening medications to the morning pill window, per the patient's request, due to his work schedule being from 10:00pm [to] 6am but noted that the patient had not had any Dilantin for 20 days. PA Powell requested that RN Lackey notify the patient of the change and the need to comply with his medications. On February 14, 2011, PA Powell renewed [plaintiff's] prescription for a Proventil Inhaler.

On April 13, 2011, [plaintiff] was scheduled for a Chronic Care Clinic appointment, an HSM-18 update, and follow-up for his seizure disorder but he was a no show for his appointment. PA Healy requested that the patient be rescheduled within the week. On April 22, 2011, [plaintiff] was again a no show for his clinical appointment. On April 22, 2011, PA Healy noted that [plaintiff] had been a no show for two Chronic Care Clinic appointments and that the patient had very poor compliance with his seizure medication. PA Healy's plan of care was to discontinue the Dilantin due to the patient's noncompliance with the recommended treatment plan, and to reschedule for Chronic Care Clinic in 90 days. On April 27, 2011, PA Powell renewed the patient's prescription for Dilantin.

On June 28, 2011, [plaintiff] submitted a sick call request to see the doctor in the Chronic Care Clinic about his asthma and seizures. He was informed that he had an appointment already scheduled.

On July 26, 2011, [plaintiff] was seen in the Chronic Care Clinic by PA Healy. PA Healy noted that the interview was conducted by him writing to the patient and that the patient was able to respond verbally. The patient claimed that he had been on seizure medication since he was 12 and that his last seizure was two weeks ago. The examination showed the patient's lungs were clear with no wheezes, and that he was not currently on an inhaler, that his right wrist exam was within normal limits, no tremors were noted, cranial nerves 2-12 grossly intact, he had a good gait, and no leg edema or atrophy. PA Healy's plan of care was continue low bunk restriction; a classification notation for permanent chronic medical conditions —seizures; that there was no need for an asthma Chronic Care Clinic at that time [sic]; changed Dilantin to evenings pursuant to the patient's request; a follow-up Chronic Care Clinic appointment in one year; no repetitive use of hands, no work in direct sunlight, and no temperature extremes work restrictions to the patient's HSM-18 form; Dilantin level testing; and prescriptions for Ibuprofen 600mg (for wrist pain) and renewal of Dilantin (for seizures).

8 On July 27, 2011, [plaintiff] was brought to the Estelle Unit emergency room after officers found him sitting on the ground. The nurse noted the patient was alert and oriented times three, that his respirations were even and unlabored, his skin was warm and moist, and that no injuries were noted. The patient complained of a headache and indicated that he should not be outside working and he needs his restrictions changed. The patient was then seen by PA Healy. PA Healy noted that the patient was deaf and had a seizure disorder; that the patient had been assigned to the field squad, and that he may have had a mild seizure outside today but that no seizure activity had been noted by the nurses. PA Healy added a sedentary work only and no work in direct sunlight restrictions to the patients HSM-18 form.

On August 10, 2011, [plaintiff] was seen in the clinic by PA Powell for complaints of seizures, zone-out episodes, headaches, and blurred vision. PA Powell's examination of the patient was normal except for decreased sensation noted in his forehead and check; decreased hearing in both ears; sensory was normal except for V1, V2, and V3 (sensory branches of the 5th cranial nerve supplying the upper, middle and lower face) on the left with a slight decrease; and his grip was weak in the right (history of fractured wrist) with the remainder of his motor skills being normal. PA Powell's assessment was seizure disorder. The plan of care was for the patient to continue taking the Dilantin for seizures; keep well hydrated; to keep a log book of seizures (time, type, and how long); follow-up in one week with log book; laboratory work up (CMP, CBC, and Dilantin level testing); and prescriptions for Ibuprofen 800mg and an antacid. Dilantin level testing was performed on August 10, 2011 and was a 9.2 ug/ml, which is slightly below the recommended therapeutic range (10-20). On August 18, 2011, [plaintiff] was seen by PA Powell for follow-up on his seizures. The log book showed the patient had four episodes during the past week with his symptoms best described as Petit Mal, or absence seizures (tongue rolling and lip biting). Absence seizures are characterized by a brief impairment of consciousness, which usually lasts no more than a few seconds. PA Powell increased [plaintiff's] Dilantin to 400mg per day and a follow-up appointment in two weeks. Dilantin level testing performed on August 30, 2011, showed the patient's level was a 16.1 ug/ml which is within the therapeutic range. On August 31, 2011, [plaintiff] was seen by PA Powell for a referral for evaluation and a referral to audiology for a hearing test. PA Powell noted the patient's speech is understandable; that the patient reads lips; and that he does not have some hearing. PA Powell's examination noted the patient's left eardrum was perforated. PA Powell referred the patient to audiology for hearing testing and for an intake physical.

On September 13, 2011, [plaintiff] submitted a sick call request with complaints of severe headaches and pains from his blackout seizures. On September 14, 2011, [he] was seen by PA Healy for a physical examination. It is noted the patient had no complaints of blackout, syncope, or face numbness at that time; appeared well rested; normal gait and stance; sits/stands with ease; no tremors; not icteric (jaundice); and that the patient requested Ibuprofen for his headaches. PA Healy's plan of care was to add a no work exposure to loud noises restriction to the patient's HSM-18 form and a prescription for Ibuprofen 800mg twice a day.

 © 2025 Thomson Reuters. No claim to original U.S. Government Works.

On October 3, 2011, [plaintiff] was seen in sick call by PA Powell for complaints of wrist pain since September 2010. The patient stated his wrist was in a cast for six weeks, removed, and then he received no further treatment. [Plaintiff] relates that he requested that the Nurse Manager look into the fact this [sic] his restrictions were not complied with and that he did not request to be seen for his wrist. The record notes the patient declined the exam. PA Powell discussed restrictions and the fact that medical only assigns recommendations for restrictions and not specific job assignments.

9 On January 30, 2012, [plaintiff] had an ADS case management interview. During the interview, the patient indicated that he had been missing lay-ins and needs to be shaken awake. The patient was advised that he is not currently eligible for adaptive aids because he must have his hearing tested to determine eligibility. Plaintiff reported that he was scheduled on November 17, 2011 for hearing testing but was a no show for the appointment because he was not aware of it. The caseworker noted that she was going to contact the unit major to discuss.

On February 24, 2012, [plaintiff] was seen in the Estelle Unit emergency room for complaints of a seizure and head wound. At first, the patient indicated he had a seizure. A 3cm long wound was noted between the patient's eyes with scratches on his face, neck and both lips so security was called in to take pictures. The patient's wounds were treated, and he remained alert and oriented without any neurological changes, and was then released to security.

On April 1, 2012, the patient was escorted to the clinic for complaints of blurred vision, seizures, numbness, and head pain. The record notes that when the patient entered the clinic he asked, 'What is this for, I put in to see the doctor?' The nurse noted the patient became angry and showed aggression when he was asked why he was being seen. The patient was informed that there was not a doctor there today, and that the nurse could see him and then refer him to a provider, if necessary. During this episode, the nurse noted the patient had no distress or respiratory problems. The patient indicated he wanted to refuse the appointment and was escorted back to his cell.

On July 31, 2012, [plaintiff] was seen by Dr. Robertson in the Chronic Care Clinic for follow-up for his seizures and asthma. Dr. Robertson noted that the patient was only 71% compliant with his medication, and he complained of a seizure a few weeks ago, that he complained of shortness of breath and wheezing, and a history of a closed head injury as a child. Dr. Robertson's examination of the patient was within normal limits. Dr. Robertson's plan of care was a laboratory work-up including Dilantin level testing, a complete blood count, complete metabolic panel, and lipids; a prescription for Motrin 800mg, Proventil Inhaler, Atrovent Inhaler, an antacid; and a dental consult for a night guard for teeth.

In summary, [plaintiff's] claim that he did not receive an intake physical is not accurate. The record shows that on November 2, 2010, an Intake History and Health Screening form was completed. This form indicated that [plaintiff] came into TDCJ with an inhaler and was allowed to keep it on his person. That same day, Dr. Lieninger ordered that [plaintiff] was to be given a permanent bottom bunk restriction on his HSM-18 form and a prescription for Dilantin 100mg (seizure medication), three capsules every evening with 11 refills. [Plaintiff] claims that he had an asthma attack on November 9, 2010 but the medical record does not support his claim. The record shows his oxygen saturation level on November 9, 2010 was at a normal level (97%) and his peak flow readings were normal. During this visit, PA Powell prescribed an Albuterol Inhaler and instructed the patient to return to the clinic if his symptoms worsened.

 © 2025 Thomson Reuters. No claim to original U.S. Government Works.

[Plaintiff] was scheduled for the Chronic Care Clinic on three separate occasions (December 20, 2010, April 13, 2011 and April 22, 2011) to be examined and to have his HSM-18 form updated but he was a no show for these appointments. [Plaintiff] claims that he was denied medical restrictions but his failure to appear for his scheduled Chronic Care Clinic appointments delayed any review of his work restrictions. Medical personnel are not responsible for job assignments and they only provide medically indicated work restrictions. After [plaintiff] began to experience difficulty working in the fields in July 2011, PA Powell and PA Health [sic] modified his work restrictions.

10 My review of the medical record shows RN Liles only saw the plaintiff on two occasions. On each of these occasions, RN Liles performed an examination of the patient, completed the nursing protocol, and followed the protocol appropriately based on her examination findings.

(Docket Entry No. 24, Exhibit C, pp. 2-8.) Bowers further testified that,

> My review showed that between the time [plaintiff] entered TDCJ on November 2, 2010 and July 31, 2011, he only submitted seven sick call requests. One requested a pill window pass, one requested a change in time for him to receive his medication, one requested a refill for his inhaler which was given, one requested new glasses, one requested that his seizure medication be renewed which was given, one requested the name of his seizure medication, and the last requested a Chronic Care Clinic appointment for his asthma and seizure.

Id., p. 8.

In his pleadings, plaintiff specifically alleges that, on August 16, 2011, he had a small, forty-second "space out" seizure and went to the infirmary so it could be documented. He was escorted by a prison officer. When they arrived at the infirmary, defendant Maureen Liles, R.N., told the officer to return plaintiff to his cell because if he could "walk and talk," there was nothing she could do. (Docket Entry No.

26, p. 3; Docket Entry No. 28, p. 2.) Plaintiff complains that defendant Liles's refusal to see him resulted in lack of medical documentation that he had a seizure on that date. However, according to the prison's response to plaintiff's step 2 grievance, officers had neglected to inform Liles that plaintiff only wanted to document the episode, not seek treatment. (Docket Entry No. 26, Exhibit A.) Regardless, plaintiff was seen in clinic two days later on August 18, 2011, and was able to have his seizure episode documented and his medication increased. (Docket Entry No. 26, Exhibit A.) Plaintiff fails to establish that defendant Liles caused him any injury or harm by not seeing him on August 16, 2011.

Plaintiff fails to present probative summary judgment evidence demonstrating that Liles was deliberately indifferent to his serious medical needs, and the Medical Defendants are entitled to dismissal of plaintiff's claims against her.

Plaintiff further argues that defendant Thomas Powell, P.A., was deliberately indifferent to his health and serious medical needs by not renewing a prescription for plaintiff's asthma inhaler. He asserts that Powell examined him on November 9, 2010, following an episode of asthma, and prescribed him an inhaler for ninety days. He further asserts that a nurse gave him an inhaler in February of 2011, but that Powell refused to renew the prescription when the inhaler ran out.

Plaintiff's medical records show that, on November 9, 2010, Powell prescribed Proventil for plaintiff, with two puffs to be taken four times a day for ninety days. Plaintiff was allowed to keep the inhaler with him at all times, a policy known as "Keep on Person," or KOP. Even so, plaintiff's compliance with his inhaler usage was recorded as only 28%. (Docket Entry No. 24, Exhibit A, p. 5; Exhibit B, pp. 214-18.) When the prescription expired in February 2011, Powell renewed the prescription for another ninety days. Id., Exhibit A, p. 5. Plaintiff submitted a "sick call request" for a new inhaler shortly after Powell ordered the refill, and was informed that the new prescription was valid until May 2011. Plaintiff's compliance with this renewal prescription was recorded as 37%. Id.

11 Plaintiff sent no further sick call requests to Powell regarding inhaler refills after the prescription expired in May 2011. Id., Exhibit B, pp. 226-238. To the contrary, plaintiff states that he sent an e-mail requesting a renewal to defendant Randall Healy. Nevertheless, plaintiff argues that Powell should have automatically renewed the prescription in May 2011 without waiting to hear from plaintiff. In support of his argument, plaintiff proffers nothing more than his bare assertion that chronic care medications such as asthma inhalers should be automatically renewed every ninety days, even if not requested by the inmate. Stated differently, plaintiff contends that it is the care provider, not the inmate, who is responsible for ensuring medication compliance. Plaintiff fails to direct this Court to any applicable authority supporting his position. Nor does plaintiff show that the non-automatic renewal of his inhaler prescription in May 2011 caused him any injury or harm. Plaintiff fails to show that defendant Powell was deliberately indifferent to plaintiff's health or serious medical needs in not automatically renewing his inhaler prescription.

Plaintiff further claims that defendant Powell was deliberately indifferent to his health and safety needs in not examining him and giving him work restrictions upon his arrival at the Estelle Unit. In particular, plaintiff asserts that Powell failed to provide work restrictions based on his hearing impairment that would have excluded his working outside in the fields.

According to medical and prison records submitted by defendants, plaintiff underwent a Correctional Managed Care Intake History and Health Screening on November 2, 2011. (Docket Entry No. 24-3, p. 22.) The form, which was signed by plaintiff, indicated that plaintiff reported a personal history of asthma and paranoid schizophrenia and complained that his "wrist is out of place." Id. He was given a "routine referral" to medical and mental health. Id., p. 23. The records also show that plaintiff underwent a Correctional Managed Care TB History and Classification, Immunization Review, and Intake Interview that same day. Id., pp. 41-44. These forms and interviews clearly evince inquiries regarding lab testing, immunizations, and authorizations to test and immunize. Id.

On November 4, 2010, a Medical and Mental Health Transfer Screening form was completed at the Estelle Unit regarding plaintiff. Id., pp. 278-79. The form noted that plaintiff was complaining of left-sided chest pain, and that he was taking phenytoin, an anti-seizure medication. He was approved for release to general population, and was given housing restrictions of "IIB-2? C-2? [sic]" Id., p. 279. He was provided a lower bunk restriction. Id., p. 226. Significantly, his work restrictions were noted as "12, 19, 20, 23, 25, & 27." Id. Thus, plaintiff is incorrect in asserting that he was not provided work restrictions upon his arrival at the Estelle Unit. According to the records, Powell first saw plaintiff on November 9, 2010, at which point plaintiff's medical and work restrictions had already been determined. Powell did not learn about plaintiff's work assignment complaints until October 3, 2011, at which time Powell informed him that "medical only assigns recommendations for restriction and not specific job assignments." Id. at 45.

Plaintiff fails to present probative summary judgment evidence demonstrating that Powell was deliberately indifferent to his health or serious medical needs, and the Medical Defendants are entitled to dismissal of plaintiff's claims against him.

Plaintiff also raises deliberate indifference claims against defendant Randall Healy, P.A. He alleges that Healy failed to modify his work restrictions or provide proper medications and/or refills of medications, resulting in physical injury. Specifically, plaintiff alleges that he saw Healy on July 26, 2011, and told him about the problems he experienced working in the field. Plaintiff complains that, instead of changing his medical restrictions, Healy told him to take breaks while in the field. As shown by the medical records and Dr. Bowers's affidavit, Healy examined plaintiff and found no abnormalities. He also changed the timing of plaintiff's Dilantin dose at plaintiff's request. Work restrictions were added to plaintiff's HSM-18 form for no repetitive use of hands, no work in direct sunlight, and no temperature extremes. Dilantin level testing was ordered, and plaintiff's prescriptions for Ibuprofen 600mg and Dilantin were renewed.

12 Plaintiff does not demonstrate that Healy refused to treat him, ignored his complaints, intentionally treated him incorrectly, or engaged in any similar conduct that would clearly evince a wanton disregard for serious medical needs. Domino, 239 F.3d at 756. Plaintiff's disagreements with Healy's decisions as to renewing or not renewing his prescriptions does not constitute deliberate indifference. Varnado, 920 F.2d at 321. Moreover, Healy added restrictions to plaintiff's HSM-18 form on July 26, 2011, including restrictions against working in direct sunlight or temperature extremes. It is undisputed that medical personnel can issue work or medical restrictions, but that job assignments are made by prison officials.

Plaintiff fails to present probative summary judgment evidence demonstrating that Healy was deliberately indifferent to his health or serious medical needs, and the Medical Defendants are entitled to dismissal of plaintiff's claims against him.

IV. INJUNCTIVE RELIEF

Plaintiff reports that he has been released from prison and is no longer incarcerated. His requests for injunctive relief regarding his conditions of confinement are DENIED AS MOOT.

V. CONCLUSION

The motion to dismiss filed by defendants Warden David W. Sweetin, Assistant Warden Christopher G. Carter, Major David Forrest, and Peggy Haggard (Docket Entry No. 15) is GRANTED, and plaintiff's claims against them are DISMISSED WITH PREJUDICE for failure to state a viable claim for which relief may be granted under section 1983.

The motion for summary judgment filed by defendants Thomas Powell, P.A., Randall Healy, P.A., and Maureen Liles, R.N. (Docket Entry No. 24) is GRANTED and plaintiff's claims against them are DISMISSED WITH PREJUDICE.

Any and all pending motions are DENIED AS MOOT.

All Citations

Not Reported in Fed. Supp., 2017 WL 1474093

Footnotes

1 These restrictions included: no climbing, no work in direct sunlight, no temperature extremes, no work with chemicals or irritants, and no work around machines with moving parts.

2 Plaintiff's medical care provider ordered that, as of that day, medical personnel were to actually watch plaintiff take and swallow his medications. (Docket Entry No. 18, p. 20.)

End of Document

© 2025 Thomson Reuters. No claim to original U.S. Government Works.

CASE NO. 53

2012 WL 1355591
Only the Westlaw citation
is currently available.
United States District Court,
S.D. Texas,
Houston Division.

AMERICAN GENERAL LIFE INSURANCE COMPANY, Plaintiff,
v.
David F. MICKELSON, Defendant.

Civil Action
No.
H
–
11
–
3421
.
|
April 18, 2012.

Attorneys and Law Firms

Jessica Lynne Wilson, David T. McDowell, Edison McDowell & Hetherington LLP, Houston, TX, for Plaintiff.

Brian Thomas Swift, The B. Swift Law Firm, P.C., Houston, TX, Christopher R. Erwin, Erwin Legal, PC, Irvine, CA, David Beitchman, Beitchman Zekian, Encino, CA, for Defendant.

MEMORANDUM AND ORDER

KEITH P. ELLISON, District Judge.

1 Pending before the Court is Defendant's Motion to Dismiss for Failure to State a Claim (Doc. No. 9). After considering the parties' arguments and the applicable law, the Court finds that Defendant's Motion to Dismiss should be denied.

I. BACKGROUND [1]

Plaintiff American General is in the business of underwriting and issuing policies of life insurance. (Compl., Doc. No. 1, ¶ 6.) Defendant David Mickelson entered into an Agent Contract with Plaintiff to solicit applications for Plaintiff's insurance plans. (Id. ¶¶ 7–8; Agent Contract, Doc. No. 15–3.) Plaintiff contends that Defendant marketed American General life insurance to a customer named Adele Ciccati, and Plaintiff paid Defendant $83,329 .20 in commissions when the policy was issued to Ciccati in January 2007. (Compl.¶ 8.) The policy was rescinded and the premiums paid for the policy were returned to Ciccati in March 2011, and thus Plaintiff contends that, under the Agent Contract, Defendant must return the commissions issued for that policy. (Id. ¶¶ 9–10 .)

Plaintiff brings claims for breach of contract and breach of fiduciary duty. Plaintiff asserts that Plaintiff and Defendant have a fiduciary relationship, and that Defendant owed Plaintiff a duty to discharge his duties in good faith and with reasonable diligence, and not to materially prejudice Plaintiff's interest. (Id. ¶ 16.) A portion of Defendant's debt has been offset by other commissions payable to Defendant, but Defendant remains liable to American General for $78,511.90. (Id. ¶ 11.)

 © 2025 Thomson Reuters. No claim to original U.S. Government Works.

Defendant moves to dismiss for failure to state a claim under Rule 12(b)(6). Although Defendant initially moved to dismiss both claims, he withdrew his motion to dismiss with respect to Plaintiff's breach of contract claim. (Reply, Doc. No. 16, at 2.) Thus, the Court considers only Defendant's arguments about Plaintiff's breach of fiduciary duty claim.

II. LEGAL STANDARD

A court may dismiss a complaint for "failure to state a claim upon which relief can be granted." Fed.R.Civ.P. 12(b)(6). "To survive a Rule 12(b)(6) motion to dismiss, a complaint 'does not need detailed factual allegations,' but must provide the plaintiff's grounds for entitlement to relief—including factual allegations that when assumed to be true 'raise a right to relief above the speculative level.' " Cuvillier v. Taylor, 503 F.3d 397, 401 (5th Cir.2007) (citing Bell Atl. Corp. v. Twombly, 550 U.S. 544, 555, 127 S.Ct. 1955, 167 L.Ed.2d 929 (2007)). That is, a complaint must "contain sufficient factual matter, accepted as true, to 'state a claim to relief that is plausible on its face.' " Ashcroft v. Iqbal, 556 U.S. 662, 129 S.Ct. 1937, 1949, 173 L.Ed.2d 868 (2009) (quoting Twombly, 550 U.S. at 570). A claim has facial plausibility "when the plaintiff pleads factual content that allows the court to draw the reasonable inference that the defendant is liable for the misconduct alleged." Id. (citing Twombly, 550 U.S. at 556). The plausibility standard is not akin to a "probability requirement," but asks for more than a sheer possibility that a defendant has acted unlawfully. Id. A pleading need not contain detailed factual allegations, but must set forth more than "labels and conclusions, and a formulaic recitation of the elements of a cause of action will not do." Twombly, 550 U.S. at 555 (citation omitted).

2 Ultimately, the question for the court to decide is whether the complaint states a valid claim when viewed in the light most favorable to the plaintiff. The court must accept well-pleaded facts as true, but legal conclusions are not entitled to the same assumption of truth. Iqbal, 129 S.Ct. at 1950 (citation omitted). The court should not " 'strain to find inferences favorable to the plaintiffs' " or "accept 'conclusory allegations, unwarranted deductions, or legal conclusions.' " R2 Investments LDC v. Phillips, 401 F.3d 638, 642 (5th Cir.2005) (quoting Southland Sec. Corp. v. Inspire Ins. Solutions, Inc., 365 F.3d 353, 362 (5th Cir.2004)). A district court can consider the contents of the pleadings, including attachments thereto, as well as documents attached to the motion, if they are referenced in the plaintiff's complaint and are central to the claims. Collins v. Morgan Stanley Dean Witter, 224 F.3d 496, 499 (5th Cir.2000). Importantly, the court should not evaluate the merits of the allegation, but must satisfy itself only that plaintiff has adequately pled a legally cognizable claim. United States ex rel. Riley v. St. Luke's Episcopal Hosp., 355 F.3d 370, 376 (5th Cir.2004). "Motions to dismiss under Rule 12(b)(6) are viewed with disfavor and are rarely granted." Lormand v. U.S. Unwired, Inc., 565 F.3d 228, 232 (5th Cir.2009) (citation omitted); Duke Energy Intern., L.L.C. v. Napoli, 748 F.Supp.2d 656 (S.D.Tex.2010). The Court should generally "afford plaintiffs at least one opportunity to cure pleading deficiencies before dismissing a case, unless it is clear that the defects are incurable or the plaintiffs advise the court that they are unwilling or unable to amend in a manner that will avoid dismissal." Great Plains Trust Co. v. Morgan Stanley Dean Witter & Co., 313 F.3d 305, 329 (5th Cir.2002).

III. ANALYSIS

As an initial matter, Defendant states that the Court may not consider the Agent Contract attached to Plaintiff's Response to the Motion to Dismiss. (Reply at 2.) However, a court may consider a document attached to a response to a motion to dismiss when that document is sufficiently referenced in the complaint and its authenticity is unquestioned. Walch v. Adjutant General's Dept. of Tex., 533 F.3d 289, 293–94 (5th Cir.2008) (relying on documents that were "explicitly referenced in the complaint, acknowledged in the answers, and attached to [Plaintiff]'s opposition to the Defendants' motions to dismiss"); see also U.S. ex rel. Colquitt v. Abbott Laboratories, No. 3:06–cv–1769–M, 2012 WL 1081453, at *29 (N.D.Tex. Mar.30, 2012); Keel v. Wal–Mart Stores, Inc., No. 1:11–CV–248, 2012 WL 488248, at *2 (E.D.Tex. Jan.11, 2012). In the present case, Plaintiff's Complaint references the Agent Contract and states that "this lawsuit arises out of the Agent Contract." (Compl.¶ 7.) It also notes Defendant's obligations under the contract. (Id. ¶¶ 10, 13.) Defendant also states, in his initial disclosures, that he is in possession of a "[c]opy of an agency agreement between plaintiff and defendant." (Doc. No. 13, at 3.) Defendant does not object to the authenticity of the Agent Contract attached to Plaintiff's Response or assert that he is in possession of a different contract, but rather withdrew a portion of his Motion to Dismiss based on this copy of the contract. Accordingly, the Court is satisfied that the Agent Contract is central to Plaintiff's claims and that Defendant has not objected to the authenticity of the document, and will consider its contents in evaluating Defendant's Motion to Dismiss.

3 Under Texas law, the elements of a breach of fiduciary duty claim are: (1) a fiduciary relationship between the plaintiff and defendant, (2) a breach by the defendant of his fiduciary duty to the plaintiff, and (3) an injury to the plaintiff or benefit to the defendant as a result of the defendant's breach. Jones v. Blume, 196 S.W.3d 440, 447 (Tex.App.-Dallas 2006, pet. denied); Punts v. Wilson, 137 S.W.3d 889, 891 (Tex.App.-Texarkana 2004, no pet.). Defendant asserts that Plaintiff has not alleged facts sufficient to show that a fiduciary relationship exists. The parties agree that there are two types of fiduciary duties under Texas law: duties that arise as a matter of law and duties that arise out of the parties' past relationship and previous dealings. See Ins. Co. of N. Am. v. Morris, 981 S.W.2d 667, 674 (Tex.1998). "An agency relationship creates, as a matter of law, a fiduciary relationship." Harding Co. v. Sendero Resources, Inc., —— S.W.3d ——, 2012 WL 840383 (Tex.App.-Texarkana 2012, no pet. h.) (citing Johnson v. Brewer & Pritchard, P.C., 73 S.W.3d 193, 200 (Tex.2002)). "[T]he agent owes his principal loyalty and good faith, integrity of the strictest kind, fair, honest dealing, and the duty not to conceal matters which might influence his actions to his principal's prejudice." Hartford Cas. Ins. Co. v. Walker County Agency, Inc., 808 S.W.2d 681, 688 (Tex.App.-Corpus Christi 1991). An agent also has a fiduciary duty to "account for profits arising out of the employment ... and the duty to deal fairly with the principal in all transactions between them." Brewer & Pritchard, 73 S.W.3d at 200 (citing Restatement (Second) of Agency § 387). At a minimum, a fiduciary duty encompasses a duty of good faith and fair dealing, requiring the parties to "deal fairly" with one another. Crim Truck & Tractor Co. v. Navistar International Transportation Corp., 823 S.W.2d 591, 594 (Tex.1992), superseded by statute on other grounds, Tex.Rev.Civ. Stat. Ann. art. 4413, § 6.06(e) (Vernon 2001).

The Court must consider the substance of an agreement to act on a principal's behalf in determining the nature of the relationship. See National Plan Adm'rs, Inc. v. National Health Ins. Co., 235 S.W.3d 695, 702–03 (Tex.2007); Horizon Offshore Contrs., Inc. v. Aon Risk Servs. of Tex., 283 S.W.3d 53, 57–59 (Tex.App.-Houston [14th Dist.] 2009, pet. denied) ("under the unambiguous language of the Agreement," the defendant was not acting as the plaintiff's agent and thus no fiduciary relationship was established). Unlike National Plan Administrators and Horizon, however, the Agent Contract at issue in this case specifically establishes an agency relationship, and provides that, upon demand, Defendant must pay Plaintiff any unearned commissions or service fees received by him with respect to premiums or payments that have been returned to the policy owner by Plaintiff for any reason. (Compl. ¶ 10; Agent Contract ¶ 4.7.) Thus, Plaintiff has asserted facts sufficient to show that the Defendant breached a fiduciary duty by failing to return the unearned commissions. See American General Life Ins. Co. v. Rasche, 273 F.R.D. 391, 393, 397 (S.D.Tex.2011) (interpreting a similar agent contract, which "requires defendant to return any unearned commissions paid to him in the event that American General returns premiums to the policy owner" and "does not explicitly state that no fiduciary relationship exists," to impose a fiduciary duty of good faith and fair dealing).

4 Additionally, Defendant argues that Plaintiff has not alleged facts sufficient to show a breach of the duty. However, Plaintiff's Complaint contends that Defendant failed to return the commissions associated with Ciccati's rescinded policy after they were demanded by Plaintiff. Thus, Plaintiff has stated a claim for breach of fiduciary duty.

IV. CONCLUSION

For the reasons discussed in this order, Defendant's Motion to Dismiss is DENIED.

IT IS SO ORDERED.

All Citations

Not Reported in F.Supp.2d, 2012 WL 1355591

Footnotes

1 The following facts are drawn from Plaintiff's Complaint (Doc. No. 1) and are accepted as true for purposes of the Motion to Dismiss.

 © 2025 Thomson Reuters. No claim to original U.S. Government Works.

End of Document

© 2025 Thomson Reuters. No claim to original U.S. Government Works.

CASE NO. 54

2011 WL 2455724
Only the Westlaw citation
is currently available.
United States District Court,
S.D. Texas,
Houston Division.

Vicente CORTEZ, Plaintiff,
v.
PHARIA L.L.C., Defendant.

Civil Action
No.
H
–
10
–
5068
.
|
May 18, 2011.

Attorneys and Law Firms

Lu Ann Trevino, The Trevino Law Firm, Houston, TX, for Plaintiff.

Jason Anderson, Weinstein and Riley PS, Seattle, WA, for Defendant.

MEMORANDUM AND ORDER

FRANCES H. STACY, United States Magistrate Judge.

1 Pending is Defendant Pharia L.L.C.'s Motion to Dismiss Pursuant to FRCP 12(b)(6) (Document No. 2). Having considered the motion, the response in opposition, the claims alleged herein, and the applicable law, the Court ORDERS, for the reasons set forth below, that Defendant's Motion to Dismiss is GRANTED and Plaintiff's claims are DISMISSED WITH PREJUDICE.

I. Background

This is a Fair Debt Collection Practices Act ("FDCPA") case, 15 U.S.C. § 1692 et seq., that was timely removed by Defendant from the County Court at Law # 2 of Harris County, Texas. In this action, Plaintiff Vicente Cortez ("Cortez") alleges that Defendant Pharia L.L.C. ("Pharia") engaged in unfair debt collection practices when it sued him to collect on a debt in a Harris County justice of the peace court (hereafter referred to as "JP lawsuit") after the applicable statute of limitations had expired:

> Plaintiff complains of Defendant ... for violations of the Fair Debt Collection Practices Act, 15 U.S.C. § 1692 et seq. Specifically, Defendant ... filed suit styled Cause No. CV41C0173244, Pharia, LLC v. Vicente Cortez, In the Justice Court, Precinct 4, Place 1, Harris County, Texas, against Plaintiff after statute of limitation expired.

Original Petition, attached to Notice of Removal (Document No. 1) at 2. Cortez also alleges that Pharia misstated the amount owed in the JP lawsuit:

 © 2025 Thomson Reuters. No claim to original U.S. Government Works.

> Plaintiff further complains of Defendant ... for violation of the Fair Debt Collection Practices Act. Pharia used false representations in its attempt to collect an alleged debt in violation of 15 U.S.C. § 1692e(5) and 15 U.S.C. § 1692f(1). Specifically, Defendant demanded from and then sued Plaintiff the sum of $2,741.69 when the true amount of the alleged debt was never more than $2,303.16." Id.

Pharia seeks to dismiss Cortez' claims under Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 12(b)(6) for failure to state a claim and on the basis of res judicata.

II. Standard of Review

Rule 12(b)(6) provides for dismissal of an action for "failure to state a claim upon which relief can be granted." FED. R. CIV. P. 12(b)(6). When a district court reviews the sufficiency of a complaint before it receives any evidence either by affidavit or admission, its task is inevitably a limited one. See Scheuer v. Rhodes, 416 U.S. 232, 94 S.Ct. 1683, 1686, 40 L.Ed.2d 90 (1974). The issue is not whether the plaintiff ultimately will prevail, but whether the plaintiff is entitled to offer evidence to support the claims. Id.

In considering a motion to dismiss under Rule 12(b)(6), the district court must construe the allegations in the complaint favorably to the pleader and must accept as true all well-pleaded facts in the complaint. See Lowrey v. Tex. A & M Univ. Sys., 117 F.3d 242, 247 (5th Cir.1997). To survive dismissal, a complaint must plead "enough facts to state a claim to relief that is plausible on its face." Bell Atl. Corp. v. Twombly, 550 U.S. 544, 127 S.Ct. 1955, 1974, 167 L.Ed.2d 929 (2007). "A claim has facial plausibility when the plaintiff pleads factual content that allows the court to draw the reasonable inference that the defendant is liable for the misconduct alleged." Ashcroft v. Iqbal, ––– U.S. ––––, ––––, 129 S.Ct. 1937, 1949, 173 L.Ed.2d 868 (2009). While a complaint "does not need detailed factual allegations ... [the] allegations must be enough to raise a right to relief above the speculative level, on the assumption that all the allegations in the complaint are true (even if doubtful in fact)." Twombly, 127 S.Ct. at 1964–65 (citations and internal footnote omitted).

2 Pharia's motion to dismiss based on res judicata may be addressed under Rule 12(b)(6) because the elements of res judicata are evident on the face of the pleadings, see Kansa Reinsurance Co. v. Mktg. Corp. of Tex., 20 F.3d 1362, 1366 (5th Cir.1994), and are matters of which the Court may take judicial notice. Hall v. Hodgkins, 305 F. App'x 224, 227 (5th Cir.2008). Generally, a court must limit itself to the contents of the pleadings and the attachments thereto in a motion to dismiss. Collins v. Morgan Stanley Dean Witter, 224 F.3d 496, 498 (5th Cir.2000). However, documents attached to the pleadings, a motion to dismiss, or responses thereto may be considered if those documents are sufficiently referenced in the pleadings, central to the plaintiff's claim, and of unquestioned authenticity. See Walch v. Adjutant Gen.'s Dep't of Tex., 533 F.3d 289, 294 (5th Cir.2008) (court's consideration of discharge letters, which "were explicitly referenced in the complaint, acknowledged in the answers, and attached to [plaintiff's] opposition to the Defendant's motion to dismiss ... is consistent with our precedents"); see also 5B CHARLES ALAN WRIGHT & ARTHUR R. MILLER, FEDERAL PRACTICE AND PROCEDURE § 1357, at 376 (3d ed. 2004) ("Numerous cases ... have allowed consideration of matters incorporated by reference or integral to the claim ... items appearing in the record of the case, and exhibits attached to the complaint whose authenticity is unquestioned ...."). Here, judicial notice is taken of the pleadings in the JP lawsuit. See Jefferson v. Lead Indus. Ass'n, Inc., 106 F.3d 1245, 1250 n. 14 (5th Cir.1997) (the court may take judicial notice of matters of public record, such as court documents, in considering a Rule 12(b)(6) motion).

 © 2025 Thomson Reuters. No claim to original U.S. Government Works.

III. Discussion

Pharia argues, in its motion to dismiss, that res judicata bars Cortez' claims herein because: (1) the exact same claims were raised by Cortez as counterclaims in the JP lawsuit; (2) the claims were rejected by the court in the JP lawsuit; and (3) the dismissal of those claims was a final adjudication of the claims. In addition and in the alternative, Pharia argues in the motion to dismiss that Cortez has not stated a claim under the FDCPA.

In determining whether res judicata bars Cortez's federal claims as a matter of law, the Court must give the state court judgment the same preclusive effect as would be given that judgment under Texas law. Hogue v. Royse City, Tex., 939 F.2d 1249, 1252 (5th Cir.1991). "For res judicata to apply, there must be: (1) a prior final judgment on the merits by a court of competent jurisdiction; (2) identity of parties or those in privity with them; and (3) a second action based on the same claims that were raised or could have been raised in the first action." Citizens Ins. Co. of Am. v. Daccach, 217 S.W.3d 430, 449 (Tex.2007). Res judicata applies to justice court judgments on the merits only when the particular claim in question has been adjudicated in that court. See TEX. CIV. PRAC. & REM.CODE § 31.005 (West 2008).

3 Here, the record shows that Cortez asserted as counterclaims in the JP lawsuit the exact same claims he raises herein. In the Amended Counterclaim he filed in the JP lawsuit, Cortez alleged as follows:

> Counter Claimant/Defendant complains of Counter Defendant, Plaintiff PHARIA L.L.C. for violation of the Fair Debt Collection Practices Act, 15 U.S.C. § 1692 et seq. Specifically, Counter Defendant/ Plaintiff PHARIA, L.L.C. filed this lawsuit against Counter Claimant/Defendant after the statute of limitations had expired.
>
> Counter Claimant/Defendant further complains of Counter Defendant/Plaintiff, PHARIA, L.L.C., N.A., for violation of the Fair Debt Collection Practices Act. Pharia used false representations in its attempt to collect an alleged debt in violation of 15 U.S.C. § 1692e and 15 U.S.C. § 1692f. Specifically, Counter Claimant/ Plaintiff demanded from and then sued

> Fuertes [sic] the sum of $2,741.69 when the true amount of the alleged debt was never more than $2,303.16

See Amended Counter Claim in JP lawsuit, attached to Defendant's Motion to Dismiss (Document No. 2) as 2–1. Cortez has admitted in this case that his counterclaims in the JP lawsuit were dismissed. See Original Petition, attached to Defendant's Notice of Removal (Document No. 1). at 2. In addition, the record shows, and Cortez does not dispute, that he did not appeal the rulings in the JP lawsuit. Those rulings therefore became final.

Because the justice court was a court of competent jurisdiction to hear Cortez's counterclaim, see TEX. GOV'T CODE § 27.031(a) (1) (West Supp.2010), and because Cortez does not dispute that the dismissal of his counterclaims in the JP lawsuit constituted a final judgment on the merits of those counterclaims, those same claims, which have been raised by Cortez herein, are barred by res judicata. See Elliott v. West, No. 01–09–00425–CV, 2011 WL 1233434, at *3 (Tex.App.-Houston [1st Dist.] Mar. 31, 2011, no pet. h.) (holding that res judicata barred plaintiff's claims which were previously adjudicated in justice court).

IV. Conclusion and Order

Based on the foregoing, and the conclusion that the claims asserted by Plaintiff Vincente Cortez are the same claims that were finally adjudicated against Cortez in the JP lawsuit, it is ORDERED that Defendant Pharia L.L.C.'s Motion to Dismiss (Document No. 2) is GRANTED and Plaintiff Vicente Cortez's claims against Defendant Pharia L.L.C are DISMISSED WITH PREJUDICE.

All Citations

Not Reported in F.Supp.2d, 2011 WL 2455724

End of Document

© 2025 Thomson Reuters. No claim to original U.S. Government Works.

CASE NO. 55

5B Fed. Prac. & Proc. Civ. § 1357 (4th ed.)

Federal Practice and Procedure (Wright & Miller) | September 2025 Update

Federal Rules of Civil Procedure

Chapter 4. Pleadings and Motions

Rule 12. Defenses and Objections: When and How Presented; Motion for Judgment on the Pleadings; Consolidating Motions; Waiving Defenses; Pretrial Hearing

Authors: Arthur R. Miller and A. Benjamin Spencer

C. Presentation of Defenses and Objections

---

§ 1357 Motions to Dismiss—Practice Under Rule 12(b)(6)

Primary Authority

- Fed. R. Civ. P. 12

Forms

- 2C West's Federal Forms, District Courts—Civil §§ 11:11, 11:80 to 11:90.50

Federal pleading standards are applied to determine whether a complaint in a federal court action states a claim for relief.[1] For purposes of a motion to dismiss under Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 12(b)(6), those standards dictate that (1) the complaint is construed in the light most favorable to the plaintiff,[2] (2) its non-conclusory[3] allegations are taken as true,[4] and (3) all reasonable inferences that can be drawn from the pleading are drawn in favor of the pleader.[5] However, it is clear that the district judge does not have to accept each and every allegation in the complaint as true in considering its sufficiency. Courts have used varying language to draw the line between what is admitted for purposes of a Rule 12(b)(6) motion to dismiss and what is not considered admitted. For example, federal courts have said that they accept the truth of a pleading's "facts,"[6] "non-conclusory allegations,"[7] "factual allegations,"[8] "material allegations,"[9] "well-pleaded facts,"[10] and "well-pleaded factual allegations."[11] Nothing appears to turn on the differences in these semantic formulations of the standard.

 © 2025 Thomson Reuters. No claim to original U.S. Government Works.

Conversely, a number of federal courts also have said that there are other types of allegations that need not be accepted as true on a Rule 12(b)(6) motion. Various phrases have been used by the federal courts to express this point. Among these are that the district court is not bound by a pleading's "legal conclusions,"[12] or its "unwarranted inferences,"[13] or its "mere conclusory statements."[14] Once again, these different verbalizations can be considered more or less synonymous in terms of the judicial application of Rule 12(b)(6).

If, after following these tenets, the court concludes that the complaint states any legally cognizable claim for relief, the court must deny the motion to dismiss and permit the action to continue.[15] Ultimately, the burden is on the moving party to prove that no legally cognizable claim for relief exists.[16]

District courts primarily consider the allegations in the complaint when deciding a Federal Rule 12(b)(6) motion to dismiss; if matters outside of the pleadings are presented and not excluded by the court on a motion under Rule 12(b)(6), then—pursuant to Rule 12(d)—the motion must be treated as one for summary judgment under Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 56 and the opposing party must be given an opportunity to respond.[17] However, courts resolving Rule 12(b)(6) motions may consider matters incorporated by reference or integral to the claim, items subject to judicial notice, matters of public record, orders, items appearing in the record of the case, and exhibits attached to the complaint whose authenticity is unquestioned without converting the motion into one for summary judgment under Rule 12(d).[18]

As for timing, a motion made under Rule 12(b)(6) that raises the defense of failure to state a claim upon which relief may be granted must be made before the service of a responsive pleading, but according to Rule 12(h)(2) the defense is preserved and may be raised as late as trial.[19] Technically therefore, a post-answer Rule 12(b)(6) motion is untimely[20] and the cases indicate that some other vehicle, such as a motion for judgment on the pleadings or for summary judgment, must be used to challenge the plaintiff's failure to state a claim for relief at that point.[21] However, circuit courts tend to be forgiving of district courts that consider the merits of late-filed Rule 12(b)(6) motions.[22]

Most federal courts will not grant a motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim only because the nonmoving party failed to respond to the motion. The court is still required to conduct the Rule 12(b)(6) inquiry to determine if the complaint states a valid claim for relief.[23] Additionally, if a party does not make a formal motion under Rule 12(b)(6), the district judge on his or her own initiative may note the inadequacy of the complaint and dismiss it for failure to state a claim as long as the procedure employed is fair to the parties.[24] This power is enhanced in the context of a complaint brought by a prisoner proceeding in forma pauperis under 28 U.S.C.A. § 1915, which permits the court to dismiss complaints it deems to be "frivolous." [25]

 © 2025 Thomson Reuters. No claim to original U.S. Government Works.

A district court need not deal with a 12(b)(6) motion itself in the first instance, however. A district court has the power to designate a magistrate judge appointed under the Federal Magistrates Act to conduct hearings and to make recommendations regarding the disposition of a motion to dismiss under Rule 12(b)(6). [26] Note, though, that based on limitations in the Act and under Article III of the Constitution, magistrates have no power to rule on such dispositive motions. [27] Thus, Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 72 provides that magistrate judges only may make a recommended disposition to the district court regarding whether to grant motions under Rule 12(b)(6), to which the parties may object and which the district judge then must review de novo. [28]

The motion to dismiss under Rule 12(b)(6) raises only an issue of law. [29] Further, a court has no discretion as to whether to dismiss a complaint that it determines is formally or substantively insufficient. [30] However, as will be discussed later in this section, district courts have some leeway under the pleading standards of the federal rules in deciding when a complaint is formally insufficient and whether to permit leave to replead. [31]

A district court's ruling on a Rule 12(b)(6) motion is reviewed de novo by the court of appeals, [32] although there are some instances in which components of the underlying dismissal determination may be reviewed under a more deferential standard. [33] Because the motion raises a question of law and the lower court's decision is based only on the sufficiency of the complaint, any documents attached thereto or incorporated by reference, and the doctrine of judicial notice, that standard is entirely appropriate. Inasmuch as a denial of a motion to dismiss does not produce a final judgment, appellate review most frequently involves a grant of the Rule 12(b)(6) motion. [34] Further, because an amended complaint entirely supersedes the previous complaint, prior dismissals of superseded complaints are not amenable to appellate review if the amended complaint abandons the claims that were subject to the previous dismissal. [35]

The court of appeals will evaluate the complaint in the same manner as the district court, meaning the same principles of construction will apply. Thus, for example, the appellate court will accept the facts pleaded as true and read the complaint in the light most favorable to the pleader, [36] but it has no obligation to conjure up unpleaded allegations. [37] Although some courts of appeal will not accept arguments raised, or consider facts presented, for the first time on appeal, [38] the Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit has held to the contrary with regard to factual allegations that are consistent with the complaint. [39]

Substantively, the sufficiency of a complaint (i.e., whether it states a claim for relief) is ordinarily judged under the standard provided by Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 8(a)(2), [40] although Rule

 © 2025 Thomson Reuters. No claim to original U.S. Government Works.

12(b)(6) also has been used to enforce the special heightened pleading requirements for fraud and mistake prescribed by Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 9(b).[41] To state a claim under Rule 8(a), as announced by the Supreme Court in Bell Atlantic Corporation v. Twombly,[42] the complaint must contain "enough facts to state a claim to relief that is plausible on its face."[43]

Twombly's plausibility standard—clarified and made applicable to all federal civil cases in Ashcroft v. Iqbal[44]—replaced the long-standing test from the 1957 case Conley v. Gibson.[45] The Conley test admonished courts not to dismiss a complaint for failure to state a claim "unless it appear[ed] beyond doubt that the plaintiff c[ould] prove no set of facts in support of his claim which would entitle him to relief.[46] Accordingly, for many years after the promulgation of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure the motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim was viewed with disfavor and was rarely granted; in many cases and in many courts, that restrained approach to the use of the motion continued to be the norm for several decades.[47]

The Twombly Court concluded that the "no set of facts" language from Conley "has earned its retirement,"[48] and asserted that the "accepted pleading standard" is: "once a claim has been stated adequately, it may be supported by showing any set of facts consistent with the allegations in the complaint."[49] Most importantly, the Court in Twombly created a new factual plausibility standard by requiring facts that "raise the right to relief above the speculative level" to the plausible level in order for the claim to survive the motion to dismiss.[50] Two years later, the Iqbal Court added that in determining plausibility, conclusory statements are not entitled to the presumption of truth ordinarily accorded to factual allegations when resolving motions to dismiss under Rule 12(b)(6)[51] and that district judges may consider "judicial experience" and "common sense" when deciding a Rule 12(b)(6) motion to dismiss.[52] The Iqbal Court also reiterated the statement in Twombly that "[w]here a complaint pleads facts that are 'merely consistent with' a defendant's liability, it 'stops short of the line between possibility and plausibility of "entitlement to relief." ' "[53] For a lengthy discussion of these important cases and a fuller analysis of the pleading standard under Rule 8(a)(2), see § 1216 in this Treatise.

It is worth pausing to note the Supreme Court's declaration that a complaint that pleads facts that are merely consistent with liability will be deemed insufficient in the face of a motion to dismiss. That does not mean that the mere existence of an alternative explanation entitles a defendant to dismissal. Rather, there must be a factual context that supports an inference of liability as one plausible explanation for what has been alleged. As a Sixth Circuit opinion stated, "[I]f a plaintiff's claim is plausible, the availability of other explanations—even more likely explanations—does not bar the door to discovery. But you can't assess the plausibility of an inference in a vacuum. The reasonableness of one explanation for an incident depends, in part, on the strength of competing explanations. * * * Where, as here, the complaint alleges facts that are merely consistent with liability * * * as opposed to facts that demonstrate discriminatory intent * * *, the existence of obvious alternative explanations simply illustrates the unreasonableness of the inference sought and the implausibility of the claims made." [54]

 © 2025 Thomson Reuters. No claim to original U.S. Government Works.

Compare that passage with the Seventh Circuit, which stated, "'Plausibility' in this context does not imply that the district court should decide whose version to believe, or which version is more likely than not. * * * In other words the court will ask itself could these things have happened, not did they happen. For cases governed by Rule 8, it is not necessary to stack up inferences side by side and allow the case to go forward only if the plaintiff's inferences seem more compelling than the opposing inferences." [55] See also a decision of the Second Circuit, which stated that "[a] court * * * may not properly dismiss a complaint that states a plausible version of the events merely because the court finds a different version more plausible." [56]

Another aspect of the pleading standard under Twombly and Iqbal worth noting is its embrace of the term "conclusory" to identify the class of allegations not entitled to the presumption of truth for purposes of a motion to dismiss. This harkens back to some of the nomenclature of the code pleading regime, [57] such as "facts" and "conclusions," that the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure were designed to supplant. [58] Nonetheless, it is clear that a plaintiff cannot simply make a bald "conclusory" statement that she has a valid claim of some legally recognizable type against the defendant. [59] Further, a court will not accept conclusory allegations concerning the legal effect of the events the plaintiff has set out if these allegations do not reasonably follow from the pleader's description of what happened, or if these allegations are contradicted by the description itself. [60] Thus one plaintiff's conclusory allegation that he had been deprived of his "property and personal rights and professional status, contrary to the Constitution and laws of the United States," and therefore had a right of action under the Civil Rights Act of 1964, was not accepted as true, since the plaintiff's more specific allegations that the defendant had uttered a derogatory word in reference to him indicated that at best he had an action for slander under state law. [61] In another case, the plaintiff's allegation that there was a conspiracy in violation of the Sherman Antitrust Act was not accepted, inasmuch as the complaint itself indicated that only one business entity was involved and a conspiracy claim requires at least two parties. [62]

What is less clear is what the precise line is between a conclusory allegation and a factual allegation. Courts vary in how narrowly or expansively they define the conclusory category. [63] This variation is understandable, because the term "conclusory" is an imprecise concept that was destined to result in it being largely a matter that is in the eye of the beholder. Indeed, in both Twombly and Iqbal the Justices were sharply divided over whether the core allegations of the complaint were properly regarded as mere "legal conclusions." [64]

Many federal courts have concluded that the complaint should not be dismissed merely because the plaintiff's allegations do not support the legal theory he or she intends to proceed on, since the district court is under a duty to examine the complaint to determine if the allegations provide for relief on any possible legal theory.[65] Relatedly, in 2014 the Supreme Court decided the case of Johnson v. City of Shelby, Mississippi,[66] which clarified that the Twombly-Iqbal factual plausibility standard applies only to the facts pled. Thus a plaintiff who pleads facts sufficient to satisfy the Twombly-Iqbal standard, but does not perfectly invoke the correct legal theory should not be dismissed under Rule 12(b)(6).[67] Similarly, it need not appear that the plaintiff can obtain the particular relief prayed for in the complaint, as long as the district judge can ascertain from what has been alleged that some relief may be granted by the court.[68] Nonetheless, as is discussed more fully in this Treatise's analysis of Rule 8, the pleader must set forth sufficient information to outline the legal elements of a viable claim for relief or to permit inferences to be drawn from the complaint that indicate that these elements exist.[69]

 © 2025 Thomson Reuters. No claim to original U.S. Government Works.

Nor should the complaint be dismissed merely because the district court believes that the case is legally or factually doubtful or that it is unlikely that the plaintiff will prevail in the action on the merits.[70] Whether the plaintiff ultimately can prevail on the merits is a matter properly determined on the basis of proof, which means on a summary judgment motion or at trial by the judge or a jury, and not merely on the face of the pleadings.[71] Likewise, courts have refused to consider presumptions in favor of the defendant on a motion to dismiss since presumptions are evidentiary standards that are inappropriate for evaluation at the pleadings stage.[72] The district court should be especially reluctant to dismiss on the basis of the pleadings when the asserted theory of liability is novel or even "extreme," since it is important that new legal theories be explored and assayed in the light of actual facts rather than a pleader's suppositions.[73]

A significant number of federal courts have adopted a more lenient attitude towards pro se plaintiffs on a Rule 12 motion than is accorded other plaintiffs, although this does not mean that they have granted such litigants complete amnesty from the requirement of the rules.[74] In the same vein, some courts appear to have adopted a stricter stance against defendants trying to dismiss civil rights claims.[75] In any event, in many contexts the motion for summary judgment provides a more expeditious and effective procedure than the Rule 12(b)(6) motion for quickly terminating an action that does not appear to entitle the plaintiff to relief on its substantive merits.[76]

A dismissal under Rule 12(b)(6) is likely to be granted by the district court when the plaintiff includes allegations that show on the face of the complaint that there is some insuperable bar to securing relief.[77] In such cases, dismissal is justified because the allegations of the complaint itself clearly demonstrate that whatever interpretation is given to the facts the plaintiff does not have a claim that is legally redressible; in a real sense, the plaintiff has pleaded himself or herself out of federal court.[78]

A good example of these propositions is Massey v. Merrill Lynch & Company,[79] in which the plaintiffs alleged fraud in a direct (as opposed to a derivative) lawsuit. However, the complaint and the attached exhibits plainly established that the allegedly fraudulent representations were made to the corporation itself, not to the plaintiffs as individual shareholders. Accordingly, the facts alleged in the complaint made recovery in a non-derivative shareholder action impossible, so the district court dismissed the complaint under Rule 12(b)(6) and the Seventh Circuit affirmed. Similarly, when the complaint in an action for negligence contained allegations indicating that the sole proximate cause of the injury was the negligence of the plaintiff and not that of the defendant, the complaint was dismissed for insufficiency. [80]

 © 2025 Thomson Reuters. No claim to original U.S. Government Works.

As the case law makes clear, the complaint also is subject to dismissal under Rule 12(b)(6) when its allegations indicate the existence of an affirmative defense that will bar the award of any remedy. [81] However, for this to occur the applicability of the defense has to be clearly indicated and must appear on the face of the pleading to be used as the basis for the motion. [82] This situation should be distinguished from cases that involve instances in which the statement of the claim itself is defective as a matter of the applicable substantive law. In a situation involving the barring effect of an affirmative defense, the claim is stated adequately from that perspective, but in addition to the claim the contents of the complaint include matters of avoidance that effectively vitiate the pleader's ability to recover on the claim. In both situations the complaint is said to have a built-in defense and is essentially self-defeating. [83] Thus, the problem is not that the plaintiff merely has anticipated the defendant's answer and tried to negate a defense he believes his opponent will attempt to use against him. Rather, the plaintiff's own allegations show that a defense exists that legally defeats the claim for relief. Of course, the district court in its discretion may choose to postpone dealing with this problem by deciding that a motion for summary judgment—which provides an opportunity for an investigation of the facts surrounding the bare allegations in the pleading—is a more appropriate procedural device to deal with the built-in defense than a motion to dismiss under Rule 12(b)(6). [84]

The most common situation in which the affirmative defense appears on the face of the pleading and provides a basis for a motion to dismiss under Rule 12(b)(6) is a complaint showing that the governing statute of limitations has run on the plaintiff's claim for relief—as the many illustrative cases cited in the note below attest. [85] Because Rule 9(f) makes allegations of time material, the inclusion of dates in the complaint indicating that the action is untimely renders it subject to dismissal for failure to state a claim. [86] This particularly is true if the action sued on is statutory in origin, because the bar of the statute of limitations then is said to extinguish not only the remedy but the underlying substantive right as well. [87]

Another instance where a self-defeating affirmative defense appears in the pleading is where the complaint reveals the claim's susceptibility to arbitration. A particularly illustrative case regarding the pleading requirements for an affirmative defense in this context is Guidotti v. Legal Helpers Debt Resolution, LLC. [88] In Guidotti, the Third Circuit held that a motion to compel arbitration should be resolved under the Rule 12(b)(6) standard when the affirmative defense of arbitrability of claims is “apparent” on the face of the complaint. [89] But if the complaint does not establish on its face that the parties agreed to arbitrate and the opposing party has not presented reliable evidence that it did not intend to be bound by an arbitration agreement, a motion to compel arbitration should be decided under the Rule 56 summary-judgment standard.[90] Not all federal courts will resolve a successful motion to compel arbitration by dismissing under Rule 12(b)(6), however; some courts will dismiss under Rule 12(b)(1), and others will not dismiss at all—they will merely stay proceedings, something outside of Rule 12's scope.[91] Regardless of which vehicle is used to enforce an arbitration agreement, litigants must take care not to waive their right to compel arbitration by pursuing a motion to dismiss that makes no mention of compelling arbitration.[92]

 © 2025 Thomson Reuters. No claim to original U.S. Government Works.

Other affirmative defenses that have been considered on a motion to dismiss under Rule 12(b)(6) include the plaintiff's assumption of risk,[93] the presence of contributory negligence,[94] federal preemption of a state cause of action,[95] various types of estoppel,[96] an assertion of illegality,[97] a wide range of forms of legal immunity from suit,[98] the applicability of various statutory exceptions to liability,[99] the equitable doctrine of laches,[100] a claim of privilege,[101] the plaintiff's execution of a release,[102] the barring effect of res judicata and related preclusion principles,[103] a failure to exhaust administrative remedies,[104] a claim of improper joinder,[105] and the applicability of the statute of frauds.[106] Rule 12(b)(6) motions also have been used to raise capacity,[107] standing,[108] ripeness,[109] wrong defendant,[110] and real party in interest defenses.[111]

Although dismissal is appropriate when an affirmative defense appears on the face of the complaint, a plaintiff is not required to plead the negation of an affirmative defense in order to survive a motion to dismiss.[112] The Supreme Court reiterated this rule in 2007, in Jones v. Bock,[113] where the Court unanimously held "that failure to exhaust is an affirmative defense under the PLRA, and that inmates are not required to specially plead or demonstrate exhaustion in their complaints."[114] Chief Justice Roberts, writing for the Court, "conclude[d] that failure to exhaust is an affirmative defense under the PLRA," and accordingly held "that inmates are not required to specially plead or demonstrate exhaustion in their complaints." In doing so, the Court dismissed the notion "that Congress implicitly meant to transform exhaustion from an affirmative defense to a pleading requirement by the curiously indirect route of specifying that courts should screen PLRA complaints and dismiss those that fail to state a claim." As noted in the preceding paragraph, however, failure to exhaust can be a basis for dismissal for failure to state a claim.[115]

Over the years a number of federal courts have gone against the general rule that the complaint will be construed liberally on a Rule 12(b)(6) motion in the context of "traditionally disfavored" causes of action, such as defamation.[116] For example, in National Bowl-O-Mat Corporation v. Brunswick Corporation,[117] the district court dismissed the third count of the defendant's counterclaim for failing to state a claim for defamation. Two of the "pleading deficiencies" noted by the court were the defendant's failure to set out the alleged defamatory statements with sufficient particularity to allow the court to determine if they would support the action, and the defendant's failure to plead dates indicating that the action was not barred by the statute of limitations.

 © 2025 Thomson Reuters. No claim to original U.S. Government Works.

Had the court applied the usual liberal standard for construing a complaint prescribed by Rule 8(a) and then-Rule 8(f) [now Rule 8(e)], it probably would have assumed, for purposes of the motion, that the statements were defamatory and that the action was timely. [118] The Federal Rules of Civil Procedure impose no special pleading requirements for defamation, so a plaintiff asserting a state-law defamation claim in federal court should only need to satisfy the ordinary Rule 8 standard. [119] That said, there are district courts that have occasionally applied a state's heightened pleading standards to defamation actions. [120]

The impropriety of using a stricter pleading standard on a motion to dismiss in a disfavored action extends beyond state causes of action and can be traced back to the Supreme Court's 1993 decision in Leatherman v. Tarrant County Narcotics Intelligence & Coordination Unit, [121] which struck down a stringent pleading standard in civil rights cases alleging municipal liability under Section 1983 of Title 42, and its 2002 decision in Swierkiewicz v. Sorema N.A., [122] which struck down another special pleading rule applied in some employment discrimination cases. In both cases the Court makes it clear that Rule 8 announces a pleading standard that is applicable to all cases except those governed by Rule 9(b) or a heightened pleading requirement in a federal statute. [123] Thus, the notion that a federal court can demand more than a statement of a claim for relief that is plausible on its face and enforce that standard by a motion to dismiss under Rule 12(b)(6) is antithetical to the Leatherman and Swierkiewicz philosophy (as updated by Twombly and Iqbal). [124] Although some federal courts may determine that they can impose heightened pleading standards because of a belief that the pleading burden is an element of the governing substantive law or that the long-standing heightened pleading traditionally imposed in disfavored actions have somehow been incorporated into the federal rule pleading practice, these views seem quite dubious given the relative clarity and breadth of the Supreme Court's language in both the Leatherman and Swierkiewicz opinions.

Gove v. Sargento Foods, Incorporated, [125] is a recent example of the impact of the Leatherman and Swierkiewicz philosophy on stricter pleading requirements for disfavored actions and the philosophy's interplay with Twombly and Iqbal. In Gove, the district court dismissed the plaintiff's Title VII claims for workplace harassment, retaliation, and sex and age discrimination. With respect to the hostile work environment claim specifically, the district court found the harassment the plaintiff described in his complaint was not "severe or pervasive" but "[a]t worst * * * merely vulgar and inappropriate" and demanded more specifics about the nature of the abusive work environment and particular actions taken by individual coworkers or administrators. However, the Seventh Circuit reversed, agreeing with the plaintiff that the district court erred by demanding too much specificity in his complaint. Citing Twombly, Iqbal, and Swierkiewicz, the panel explained that the plaintiff "did not need to allege every evidentiary element of his claims" at the 12(b)(6) stage; all that was required was that his complaint contain facts sufficient to state a claim that is plausible on its face. And "[b]ecause the district court imposed a pleading standard stricter than the applicable notice-pleading regime of Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 8," the Seventh Circuit reversed the district court's dismissal of the plaintiff's claims.

The exceptions to the Leatherman and Swierkiewicz proposition that Rule 8's pleading standard applies in all cases are cases falling under Rule 9(b) or a federal statute that contains a heightened pleading requirement. One such federal statute is the Private Securities Litigation Reform Act of 1995 (PSLRA). In Tellabs, Incorporated v. Makor Issues & Rights, Incorporated,[126] the Supreme Court interpreted the special pleading requirements for determining whether a plaintiff's allegations are sufficient as to scienter in securities-fraud claims under the PSLRA. The proper inquiry is "whether all of the facts alleged, taken collectively, give rise to a strong inference of scienter, not whether any individual allegation, scrutinized in isolation, meets that standard."[127] The Court held that an allegation of scienter will survive "only if a reasonable person would deem the inference of scienter cogent and at least as compelling as any opposing inference one could draw from the facts alleged."[128]

As the numerous case citations in the note below make clear, dismissal under Rule 12(b)(6) generally is not with prejudice—meaning, not immediately final or on the merits—because the district court normally will give the plaintiff leave to file an amended complaint to see if the shortcomings of the original document can be corrected.[129] The federal policy of deciding cases on the basis of the substantive rights involved rather than on technicalities requires that the plaintiff be given every opportunity to cure a formal defect in the pleading. This is true even when the district judge doubts that the plaintiff will be able to overcome the shortcomings in the initial pleading.[130] Thus, the cases make it clear that leave to amend the complaint should be refused only if there is no basis for concluding that the plaintiff can state a claim and thus permitting an amendment would be futile.[131] A district court's refusal to allow leave to amend is reviewed for abuse of discretion by the court of appeals.[132] A wise judicial practice would be to allow at least one amendment regardless of how unpromising the initial pleading appears because it usually is unlikely that the district court will be able to determine conclusively on the face of a defective pleading whether the plaintiff actually can state a claim for relief.[133] Such a practice would be in line with the more forgiving treatment courts typically give to initial attempts to amend.[134]

In the 1981 case Federated Department Stores, Incorporated v. Moitie,[135] the Supreme Court noted in a footnote that a Rule 12(b)(6) dismissal is a judgment on the merits.[136] Numerous courts have taken this to indicate that a Rule 12(b)(6) dismissal of a claim—with or without prejudice—implicates res judicata principles, barring any further attempt to present the same claim in the future.[137] The ostensible rationale for this is that plaintiffs have liberal opportunities to amend their complaints, so an inability to do so that results in a Rule 12(b)(6) dismissal leading to an entry of a final judgment indicates the absence of a valid claim for relief.[138] A denial of a Rule 12(b)(6) motion, however, is not a final determination on the merits for purposes of res judicata.[139]

 © 2025 Thomson Reuters. No claim to original U.S. Government Works.

Notwithstanding the liberal amendment policy of the federal rules, it seems dubious that a Rule 12(b)(6) dismissal should dispose of more than the question of whether a particular statement constitutes a claim for relief,[140] especially in courts other than the original forum, given the federal courts' lack of uniformity in dealing with pleading amendments and Rule 12(b)(6) dismissals and the discretionary character of Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 15 amendments. The situation is further complicated by the Supreme Court's ruling in 2001 in Semtek International Inc. v. Lockheed Martin Corporation,[141] in which the Court held that in diversity of citizenship cases, the claim preclusive effect of a Rule 12(b)(6) motion should be determined based on the preclusion law of the state in which the federal diversity court sits.[142] The Court noted that the language in Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 41(b)[143] about judgment on the merits does not pertain to claim preclusion and that it is a question of federal common law whether a Rule 12(b)(6) dismissal has that effect.[144]

Thus, reading the Semtek and Moitie decisions together, it appears that federal common law, not the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, dictates the claim preclusive effect of a Rule 12(b)(6) dismissal and that the federal rule of decision is that in diversity of citizenship actions, the preclusion law of the forum state governs. However, in federal question actions, many courts unfortunately have concluded that a Rule 12(b)(6) dismissal carries claim preclusive effect, presumably with regard to the transaction and occurrence embraced by the allegations in the dismissed complaint.[145] In light of Semtek, it is doubtful that this result is mandated by Rule 41(b).

Several technical problems arise with regard to the amendment of the complaint following a successful motion under Rule 12(b)(6). First, there is a split of authority as to whether the plaintiff can amend once as a matter of right under Rule 15(a) despite the dismissal if no responsive pleading has been served or whether the plaintiff must obtain the court's permission for any amendment when the dismissal order does not expressly grant leave to replead or expressly negates any right to amend.[146] The better view is that the right to amend is retained, because a dismissal order is not one of the two events that triggers termination of the right to amend as a matter of course under Rule 15(a)(1).[147] Once there has been an entry of judgment, of course, any ability to amend as of right ends,[148] although the entry of judgment should be delayed until the time to amend as of right has expired.[149] To avoid the problems that arise when the plaintiff attempts to exercise the automatic right of amendment after the trial court has entered the dismissal, those courts that consider amendment to be a matter of right should be careful to ascertain whether the plaintiff wishes to amend the complaint and should prescribe a reasonable time period in the order within which the plaintiff may exercise that right to amend the complaint.

A related problem arises when a plaintiff who has lost an appeal from a judgment following the dismissal of his complaint returns to the trial court and asks for permission to file an amended pleading. Some authority indicates that under certain circumstances only the appellate court can grant leave to amend at this stage of the proceedings.[150] These problems are analyzed in greater detail in the discussion under Rule 15 concerning the amendment of pleadings, the discussion under Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 59 on the amendment of judgments, and the discussion under Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 60 relating to relief from a judgment or order. [151]

One final point, peculiar to multidistrict litigation. One court of appeals has held that a transferee court under Section 1407 has the power to dismiss a complaint under Rule 12(b)(6). [152] This is not surprising inasmuch as Section 1407(a) of Title 28 of the United States Code—which establishes the procedure for consolidation of multidistrict litigation—gives the transferee court plenary power over the pretrial process of the cases before it including the ability to terminate one or more of the transferred cases. [153]

Westlaw. © 2025 Thomson Reuters. No Claim to Orig. U.S. Govt. Works.

Footnotes

1

Federal law

ML Healthcare Services, LLC v. Publix Super Markets, Inc., 881 F.3d 1293, 1299 (11th Cir. 2018) ("In federal diversity actions, state law governs substantive issues, but federal law governs procedural issues.").

Karnatcheva v. JPMorgan Chase Bank, N.A., 704 F.3d 545, 548 (8th Cir. 2013) ("We apply federal pleading standards—Rules 8 and 12(b)(6)—to state substantive law to determine if a complaint makes out a claim under state law").

Windy City Metal Fabricators & Supply, Inc. v. CIT Technology Financing Services, Inc., 536 F.3d 663, 679 (7th Cir. 2008) ("It is well settled that a federal court sitting in diversity applies federal pleading requirements even when the claim pleaded arises under state rather than federal law") (internal quotation marks omitted).

Vess v. Ciba-Geigy Corp. USA, 317 F.3d 1097, 1102 (9th Cir. 2003) ("The Federal Rules of Civil Procedure apply irrespective of the source of subject matter jurisdiction, and irrespective of whether the substantive law at issue is state or federal.").

Carter v. Norfolk Community Hosp. Ass'n, Inc., 761 F.2d 970 (4th Cir. 1985).

See also

Klocke v. Watson, 936 F.3d 240 (5th Cir. 2019), as revised, (Aug. 29, 2019) ("Because the TCPA's burden-shifting framework imposes additional requirements beyond those found in [FRCP] 12 and 56 and answers the same question as those rules, the state law cannot apply in federal court.").

But compare

"Whether a defendant has been fraudulently joined and whether the claim against that defendant should be dismissed pursuant to Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(b)(6) do not involve the same inquiry. Said another way, Plaintiffs' claims against the Purchaser Defendants may fail under Rule 12(b)(6), but those defendants have not necessarily been fraudulently joined. The fraudulent joinder analysis looks at whether it is possible that a state court would deny a motion to dismiss the claim against the non-diverse defendant. Integral to this analysis is what Hawai'i law demands when determining whether a complaint fails to state a claim upon which relief can be granted." Carpenter v. PNC Bank, N.A., 386 F. Supp. 3d 1339 (D. Haw. 2019) (citations and internal quotation marks omitted).

2 Light most favorable to pleader

Holland v. Carnival Corporation, 50 F.4th 1088 (11th Cir. 2022) ("Because the procedural posture of this case involves a Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 12(b)(6) motion, we must accept the allegations of plaintiff's complaint as true and construe them in the light most favorable to the plaintiff.").

Levy v. West Coast Life Insurance Company, 44 F.4th 621, 626 (7th Cir. 2022) ("We review 'a district court's dismissal under Rule 12(b)(6) de novo, construing the complaint in the light most favorable to the plaintiff. * * *'").

Product Solutions International, Inc. v. Aldez Containers, LLC, 46 F.4th 454, 458 (6th Cir. 2022) ("[W]e construe the complaint in the light most favorable to the plaintiff, draw all reasonable inferences in its favor, and accept all well-pleaded allegations in the complaint as true.").

Doe v. Princeton University, 30 F.4th 335, 340 (3d Cir. 2022) ("On a motion to dismiss, a court must 'accept all factual allegations in the complaint as true and view them in the light most favorable to the plaintiff.'").

Franklin v. United States, 49 F.4th 429, 435 (5th Cir. 2022) ("We review a district court's ruling on a motion to dismiss de novo, 'accepting all well-pleaded facts as true and viewing those facts in the light most favorable to the plaintiffs.'").

3 Disregard of conclusory statements

Ashcroft v. Iqbal, 556 U.S. 662, 129 S. Ct. 1937, 173 L. Ed. 2d 868 (2009) ("[T]he tenet that a court must accept as true all of the allegations contained in a complaint is inapplicable to legal conclusions. Threadbare recitals of the elements of a cause of action, supported by mere conclusory statements, do not suffice.").

Tavernaro v. Pioneer Credit Recovery, Inc., 43 F.4th 1062, 1067 (10th Cir. 2022) ("We 'disregard conclusory statements and look only to whether the remaining[ ] factual allegations plausibly suggest the defendant is liable.'").

O'Brien v. Deutsche Bank National Trust Company, 948 F.3d 31, 35 (1st Cir. 2020) ("In assessing the sufficiency of the complaint under Rule 12(b)(6), we first 'disregard all conclusory allegations that merely parrot the relevant legal standard,' and then 'inquire whether the remaining factual allegations state a plausible, rather than merely a possible, assertion of defendants' liability.'").

Harper v. Professional Probation Services Inc., 976 F.3d 1236, 1240 n.4 (11th Cir. 2020) ("A complaint may be dismissed for failure to state a claim when, ignoring any 'mere conclusory statements,' the remaining allegations do not 'plausibly suggest' that the defendant is liable."), quoting Ashcroft v. Iqbal, 556 U.S. 662, 678, 681, 129 S. Ct. 1937, 173 L. Ed. 2d 868 (2009).

Simio, LLC v. FlexSim Software Products, Inc., 983 F.3d 1353, 1365 (Fed. Cir. 2020) ("We disregard conclusory statements when evaluating a complaint under Rule 12(b)(6).").

Wikimedia Foundation v. National Security Agency, 857 F.3d 193, 208 (4th Cir. 2017) ("[L]egal conclusions pleaded as factual allegations, 'unwarranted inferences,' 'unreasonable conclusions,' and 'naked assertions devoid of further factual enhancement' are not entitled to the presumption of truth.").

4 Allegations taken as true

Erickson v. Pardus, 551 U.S. 89, 127 S. Ct. 2197, 167 L. Ed. 2d 1081 (2007).

Bell Atlantic Corp. v. Twombly, 550 U.S. 544, 127 S. Ct. 1955, 167 L. Ed. 2d 929 (2007).

Mitchell v. Kirchmeier, 28 F.4th 888, 895 (8th Cir. 2022) ("A claim survives a Rule 12(b)(6) motion to dismiss only if the complaint's nonconclusory allegations, accepted as true, make it not just 'conceivable' but 'plausible' that the defendant is liable.").

In re Dynamic Random Access Memory (DRAM) Indirect Purchaser Antitrust Litigation, 28 F.4th 42, 46 (9th Cir. 2022) ("In conducting [a] review [of the district court's dismissal of a complaint for failure to state a claim under Rule 12(b)(6)], we accept all nonconclusory facts alleged in the complaint as true and determine whether those allegations 'plausibly give rise to an entitlement to relief.'").

Allen v. Vertafore, Incorporated, 28 F.4th 613, 616 (5th Cir. 2022) ("In reviewing a motion to dismiss, we 'accept[ ] all well-pleaded facts as true and view[ ] those facts in the light most favorable to the plaintiff.'").

 © 2025 Thomson Reuters. No claim to original U.S. Government Works.

Kaplan v. Lebanese Canadian Bank, SAL, 999 F.3d 842, 854 (2d Cir. 2021) ("In reviewing a Rule 12(b)(6) dismissal, we must accept as true all nonconclusory factual allegations in the complaint.").

Cruz-Arce v. Management Administration Services Corporation, 19 F.4th 538, 543 (1st Cir. 2021) ("[W]e accept all well-pleaded, non-conclusory facts set forth in the complaint as true. * * *").

Compare
The court is not required to draw unreasonable inferences or "to accept as plausible wholly unrealistic assertions." Brown v. Medtronic, Inc., 628 F.3d 451, 461 (8th Cir. 2010).

Lormand v. US Unwired, Inc., 565 F.3d 228, 239 (5th Cir. 2009) ("Usually, under Rule 12(b)(6), we must draw all reasonable inferences in the plaintiff's favor. However, for scienter only, as required by the PSLRA, 'a court must take into account plausible inferences opposing as well as supporting a strong inference of scienter.'"), quoting Indiana Elec. Workers' Pension Trust Fund IBEW v. Shaw Group, Inc., 537 F.3d 527, 533 (5th Cir. 2008).

But see
Under the PSLRA, a court considering a Rule 12(b)(6) motion must draw all reasonable inferences from the allegations, including inferences unfavorable to the plaintiff, in determining whether or not the plaintiff has pled scienter sufficiently. In re Metricom Securities Litigation, 2004 WL 966291 (N.D. Cal. 2004), aff'd, 182 Fed. Appx. 714 (9th Cir. 2006).

5 Drawing all reasonable inferences in favor of the pleader
Melendez v. Sirius XM Radio, Inc., 50 F.4th 294 (2d Cir. 2022) ("We review the district court's grant of [a] motion to dismiss de novo, '* * * drawing all reasonable inferences in favor of the plaintiff.'").

Healy v. Fox, 46 F.4th 739, 743 (8th Cir. 2022) ("To determine whether a complaint states a facially plausible claim, we accept the factual allegations in the complaint as true and draw all reasonable inferences in the nonmovant's favor.").

Boquist v. Courtney, 32 F.4th 764, 773 (9th Cir. 2022) ("A court must 'draw all reasonable inferences in favor of the nonmoving party [in considering a motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim].').

United States ex rel. Sibley v. University of Chicago Medical Center, 44 F.4th 646, 662 (7th Cir. 2022) ("[A] ruling on a motion to dismiss considers only the pleadings and draws all reasonable inferences in the pleader's favor.").

Cruz-Arce v. Management Administration Services Corporation, 19 F.4th 538, 543 (1st Cir. 2021) ("[W]e accept all well-pleaded, non-conclusory facts set forth in the complaint as true and draw all reasonable inferences therefrom to the pleader's behoof.").

 © 2025 Thomson Reuters. No claim to original U.S. Government Works.

Ray v. Roane, 948 F.3d 222, 226 (4th Cir. 2020) ("In reviewing a motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim, we must" * * * draw all reasonable inferences in favor of the plaintiff.'").

6 Facts

Kugler v. Helfant, 421 U.S. 117, 125-126 n.5, 95 S. Ct. 1524, 1531 n.5, 44 L. Ed. 2d 15 (1975).

Everything

Maxwell v. Henry, 815 F. Supp. 213 (S.D. Tex. 1993) ("everything").

7 Non-conclusory allegations

Mitchell v. Kirchmeier, 28 F.4th 888, 895 (8th Cir. 2022) ("A claim survives a Rule 12(b)(6) motion to dismiss only if the complaint's nonconclusory allegations, accepted as true, make it not just 'conceivable' but 'plausible' that the defendant is liable.").

In re Dynamic Random Access Memory (DRAM) Indirect Purchaser Antitrust Litigation, 28 F.4th 42, 46 (9th Cir. 2022) ("In conducting [a] review [of the district court's dismissal of a complaint for failure to state a claim under Rule 12(b)(6)], we accept all nonconclusory facts alleged in the complaint as true and determine whether those allegations 'plausibly give rise to an entitlement to relief.'").

Kaplan v. Lebanese Canadian Bank, SAL, 999 F.3d 842, 854 (2d Cir. 2021) ("In reviewing a Rule 12(b)(6) dismissal, we must accept as true all nonconclusory factual allegations in the complaint.").

Cruz-Arce v. Management Administration Services Corporation, 19 F.4th 538, 543 (1st Cir. 2021) ("[W]e accept all well-pleaded, non-conclusory facts set forth in the complaint as true. * * *").

International Outdoor, Inc. v. City of Troy, Michigan, 974 F.3d 690, 701 (6th Cir. 2020) ("[W]e accept as true all non-conclusory allegations in the complaint and determine whether they state a plausible claim for relief.").

Harper v. Professional Probation Services Inc., 976 F.3d 1236, 1238 n.1 (11th Cir. 2020) ("[W]e accept as true all non-conclusory allegations in the plaintiffs' complaint.").

8 Factual allegations

Erickson v. Pardus, 551 U.S. 89, 94, 127 S. Ct. 2197, 2200, 167 L. Ed. 2d 1081 (2007).

Anza v. Ideal Steel Supply Corp., 547 U.S. 451, 126 S. Ct. 1991, 164 L. Ed. 2d 720 (2006).

Manning v. Boston Medical Center Corp., 725 F.3d 34 (1st Cir. 2013).

But see
Grant v. County of Erie, 542 Fed. Appx. 21 (2d Cir. 2013) ("This Circuit has recognized an exception to the rule that a court must accept all factual assertions as true when attenuated allegations supporting the claim are contradicted by more specific allegations in the Complaint or when a claim is based on wholly conclusory and inconsistent allegations."), citing ATSI Communications, Inc. v. Shaar Fund, Ltd., 493 F.3d 87, 98 (2d Cir. 2007).

"Factual allegations that amount to labels and conclusions or naked assertions are not entitled to the assumption of truth." Smith v. Pallman, 420 Fed. Appx. 208, 212 (3d Cir. 2011) (internal citations and quotation marks omitted).

See also
After Twombly and Iqbal, the court should accept the truth of plausible factual allegations. Adler v. Anchor Funding Services, LLC, 2011 WL 1843226 (W.D. N.C. 2011).

9 Material allegations
Chubb Custom Ins. Co. v. Space Systems/Loral, Inc., 710 F.3d 946, 956 (9th Cir. 2013), citing Moyo v. Gomez, 32 F.3d 1382, 1384 (9th Cir. 1994).

Geraci v. Homestreet Bank, 347 F.3d 749 (9th Cir. 2003).

10 Well-pleaded facts
Miller v. Town of Wenham Massachusetts, 833 F.3d 46, 48 (1st Cir. 2016).

O'Connell v. Marrero-Recio, 724 F.3d 117, 122 (1st Cir. 2013).

11 Well-pleaded factual allegations
Ashcroft v. Iqbal, 556 U.S. 662, 129 S. Ct. 1937, 173 L. Ed. 2d 868 (2009).

Hess v. Cohen & Slamowitz LLP, 637 F.3d 117, 119 (2d Cir. 2011) ("well-pleaded, non-conclusory factual allegations" must be accepted as true).

Cogan v. Phoenix Life Ins. Co., 310 F.3d 238 (1st Cir. 2002) ("well-pleaded factual averments").

Only when the factual allegations in support of a claim are not well-pleaded—for example, when they are functionally illegible or baldly conclusory—should they not be accepted as true and the claim dismissed. Rhee Bros., Inc. v. Han Ah Reum Corp., 178 F. Supp. 2d 525 (D. Md. 2001).

12 Legal conclusions

 © 2025 Thomson Reuters. No claim to original U.S. Government Works.

First Circuit
Haag v. U.S., 736 F.3d 66 (1st Cir. 2013).

Schatz v. Republican State Leadership Committee, 669 F.3d 50, 55 (1st Cir. 2012) (ignore "legal labels and conclusions").

Eastern Food Services, Inc. v. Pontifical Catholic University Services Ass'n, Inc., 357 F.3d 1 (1st Cir. 2004) ("conclusory terms").

Second Circuit
In re Terrorist Attacks on September 11, 2001, 714 F.3d 118, 124 (2d Cir. 2013).

Mayor and City Council of Baltimore, Md. v. Citigroup, Inc., 709 F.3d 129, 135-136 (2d Cir. 2013) ("The ultimate existence of an 'agreement' under antitrust law, however, is a legal conclusion, not a factual allegation. * * * A plaintiff's job at the pleading stage, in order to overcome a motion to dismiss, is to allege enough facts to support the inference that a conspiracy actually existed.").

Vossler v. Phasecom America, Inc., 2004 WL 1628903 (W.D. N.Y. 2004) (legal conclusions and vague factual allegations were not enough to prevent dismissal).

Third Circuit
Morrow v. Balaski, 719 F.3d 160, 165 (3d Cir. 2013), as amended, (June 14, 2013), citing Baraka v. McGreevey, 481 F.3d 187, 195 (3d Cir. 2007).

An allegation that an agreement has been reached in a contract dispute is a legal assertion, not a factual one, and thus should be ignored by the court in the context of a motion to dismiss. Cotter v. Newark Housing Authority, 422 Fed. Appx. 95 (3d Cir. 2011).

Wilson v. City of Philadelphia, 415 Fed. Appx. 434, 436 (3d Cir. 2011) (conclusory allegations not entitled to presumption of truth).

Sunquest Information Systems, Inc. v. Dean Witter Reynolds, Inc., 40 F. Supp. 2d 644 (W.D. Pa. 1999) (court need not credit bald assertions or legal conclusions).

Fourth Circuit
Vitol, S.A. v. Primerose Shipping Co. Ltd., 708 F.3d 527, 548 (4th Cir. 2013).

Burnette v. Fahey, 687 F.3d 171, 180 (4th Cir. 2012) (allegation that parole board no longer exercises discretion is legal, not factual).

Walters v. McMahen, 684 F.3d 435, 439 (4th Cir. 2012) (applying Twombly/Iqbal standard, court does not accord deference to legal conclusions).

Aziz v. Alcolac, Inc., 658 F.3d 388, 391 (4th Cir. 2011) ("bare legal conclusions").

 © 2025 Thomson Reuters. No claim to original U.S. Government Works.

Braun v. Maynard, 652 F.3d 557 (4th Cir. 2011).

Simmons v. United Mortg. and Loan Inv., LLC, 634 F.3d 754, 768 (4th Cir. 2011).

Basnight v. Potter, 2011 WL 1366376, *1 (E.D. N.C. 2011) (court will not consider as true " 'legal conclusions, elements of a cause of action, and bare assertions devoid of further factual enhancement' "), quoting Nemet Chevrolet, Ltd. v. Consumeraffairs.com, Inc., 591 F.3d 250, 255 (4th Cir. 2009).

Fifth Circuit

Tucker v. Parish, 582 Fed. Appx. 363, 365 (5th Cir. 2014).

Randall D. Wolcott, M.D., P.A. v. Sebelius, 635 F.3d 757, 763 (5th Cir. 2011).

Rodriguez v. Lewis, 427 Fed. Appx. 352 (5th Cir. 2011) (legal conclusions purporting to be factual allegations not sufficient to survive motion to dismiss).

Richards v. JRK Property Holdings, 405 Fed. Appx. 829, 831 (5th Cir. 2010) ("[The plaintiff's] assertion of racial discrimination is a legal conclusion that the court is not required to accept and does not suffice to prevent a motion to dismiss.").

Blackburn v. City of Marshall, 42 F.3d 925 (5th Cir. 1995).

"[C]onclusory allegations or legal conclusions masquerading as factual conclusions will not suffice to prevent a motion to dismiss." Fernandez-Montes v. Allied Pilots Ass'n, 987 F.2d 278, 284 (5th Cir. 1993) (Goldberg, J.).

Lowe v. American Eurocopter, LLC, 24 A.D. Cas. (BNA) 40, 2010 WL 5232523, *5 (N.D. Miss. 2010) (" '[L]egal conclusions masquerading as factual conclusions will not prevent a motion to dismiss.' "), quoting Taylor v. Books A Million, Inc., 296 F.3d 376, 378 (5th Cir. 2002).

Sixth Circuit

Binno v. American Bar Association, 826 F.3d 338, 345 (6th Cir. 2016).

Philadelphia Indem. Ins. Co. v. Youth Alive, Inc., 732 F.3d 645, 649 (6th Cir. 2013).

Goss v. ABN AMRO Mortg. Group, 549 Fed. Appx. 466, 469 (6th Cir. 2013).

Republic Bank & Trust Co. v. Bear Stearns & Co., Inc., 683 F.3d 239, 246 (6th Cir. 2012).

Boland v. Holder, 682 F.3d 531, 534 (6th Cir. 2012).

Carrier Corp. v. Outokumpu Oyj, 673 F.3d 430, 444 (6th Cir. 2012) ("To conduct this analysis, a court should first identify factual allegations that are entitled to a presumption of truth-that is, those allegations that are more than just legal conclusions.").

Severe Records, LLC v. Rich, 658 F.3d 571, 578 (6th Cir. 2011).

Rondigo, L.L.C. v. Township of Richmond, 641 F.3d 673, 684 (6th Cir. 2011) (claim that plaintiffs "were treated differently because of gender-based discrimination" was legal conclusion couched as factual allegation and should not have been accepted as true without factual support).

Schellenberg v. Tp. of Bingham, 436 Fed. Appx. 587, 598 (6th Cir. 2011) (legal conclusions presented as factual allegations not entitled to presumption of truth on motion to dismiss).

Although RICO pleadings are to be liberally construed, the applicable standard does not require the district court to accept legal conclusions unsupported by the facts pleaded. Jersevic v. Kuhl, 2002 WL 84624 (E.D. Mich. 2002), citing Wright & Miller (unpublished).

In re Imagepoint Inc., 2010 WL 3037436, *3 (Bankr. E.D. Tenn. 2010) ("Undeniably, a complaint must contain more than bare assertions or legal conclusions.").

Seventh Circuit
Agnew v. National Collegiate Athletic Ass'n, 683 F.3d 328, 334 (7th Cir. 2012).

Virnich v. Vorwald, 664 F.3d 206, 212 (7th Cir. 2011), as amended, (Jan. 3, 2012).

Kolbe & Kolbe Health & Welfare Benefit Plan v. Medical College of Wisconsin, Inc., 657 F.3d 496, 502 (7th Cir. 2011).

Eighth Circuit
Hager v. Arkansas Dept. of Health, 735 F.3d 1009 (8th Cir. 2013).

Outdoor Cent., Inc. v. GreatLodge.com, Inc., 643 F.3d 1115 (8th Cir. 2011), as corrected, (Aug. 4, 2011).

Brown v. Medtronic, Inc., 628 F.3d 451, 459 (8th Cir. 2010).

Ninth Circuit
ESG Capital Partners, LP v. Stratos, 828 F.3d 1023, 1031 (9th Cir. 2016).

Dorrough v. Ruff, 552 Fed. Appx. 728, 729 (9th Cir. 2014).

U.S. v. Corinthian Colleges, 655 F.3d 984, 991 (9th Cir. 2011).

Fayer v. Vaughn, 649 F.3d 1061 (9th Cir. 2011).

Northern Highlands I, II, LLC v. Comerica Bank, 328 Fed. Appx. 358, 359 (9th Cir. 2009) ("need not assume the truth of opinions, factual and legal conclusions, or arguments").

"Legal conclusions need not be taken as true merely because they are cast in the form of factual allegations. Similarly, conclusory allegations of law and unwarranted inferences are not sufficient to defeat a motion to dismiss." Escalante v. Minnesota Life Ins. Co., 2010 WL 4975658, *1 (S.D. Cal. 2010) (internal citations and quotation marks omitted).

Tenth Circuit

Lebahn v. National Farmers Union Uniform Pension Plan, 828 F.3d 1180, 1183 (10th Cir. 2016).

Khalik v. United Air Lines, 671 F.3d 1188, 1193 (10th Cir. 2012) (plaintiff's allegation that she was targeted because of her race conclusory and not entitled to presumption of truth).

Johnson v. Liberty Mut. Fire Ins. Co., 648 F.3d 1162, 1165 (10th Cir. 2011) ("naked legal conclusion").

Bixler v. Foster, 596 F.3d 751, 756 (10th Cir. 2010).

Eleventh Circuit

Arafat v. School Bd. of Broward County, 549 Fed. Appx. 872, 873 (11th Cir. 2013).

Mack v. City of High Springs, 486 Fed. Appx. 3 (11th Cir. 2012) (per curiam).

Kendall v. Thaxton Road LLC, 443 Fed. Appx. 388 (11th Cir. 2011).

Cline v. Tolliver, 434 Fed. Appx. 823 (11th Cir. 2011) (formulaic allegations that were no more than legal conclusions were not sufficient to state claim for relief).

Bell v. HCR Manor Care Facility of Winter Park, 432 Fed. Appx. 908 (11th Cir. 2011).

Duru v. HSBC Card Services, Inc., 411 Fed. Appx. 240, 241 (11th Cir. 2011).

Christman v. Holmes, 448 Fed. Appx. 869 (11th Cir. 2011) (legal conclusions are not allegations that court must accept as true).

Jacobs v. Tempur-Pedic Intern., Inc., 626 F.3d 1327, 1333 (11th Cir. 2010) (legal conclusions not entitled to assumption of truth).

A plaintiff may not merely "label" his or her claims to survive a motion to dismiss. DiGiro v. Pall Corp., 993 F. Supp. 1471 (M.D. Fla. 1998).

D.C. Circuit

Coulibaly v. Kerry, 213 F. Supp. 3d 93 (D.D.C. 2016), subsequent determination, 278 F. Supp. 3d 294 (D.D.C. 2017), quoting Wright & Miller.

Hettinga v. U.S., 677 F.3d 471, 476 (D.C. Cir. 2012).

In re Interbank Funding Corp. Securities Litigation, 629 F.3d 213, 218 (D.C. Cir. 2010).

Legal conclusions are not admitted for purposes of a motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim on which relief could be granted. Donald v. Orfila, 618 F. Supp. 645 (D.D.C. 1985), judgment aff'd, 788 F.2d 36 (D.C. Cir. 1986).

13 Unwarranted inferences

Ortiz v. Holmes, 157 F. Supp. 3d 692, 696 (N.D. Ohio 2016) ("unwarranted factual inferences"), quoting Mixon v. State of Ohio, 193 F.3d 389, 400 (6th Cir. 1999).

Pension Trust Fund for Operating Engineers v. Mortgage Asset Securitization Transactions, Inc., 730 F.3d 263, 268 (3d Cir. 2013).

Morrow v. Balaski, 719 F.3d 160, 165 (3d Cir. 2013).

U.S. ex rel. Nathan v. Takeda Pharmaceuticals North America, Inc., 707 F.3d 451, 455 (4th Cir. 2013).

Severe Records, LLC v. Rich, 658 F.3d 571, 578 (6th Cir. 2011) ("unwarranted factual inferences").

Fayer v. Vaughn, 649 F.3d 1061 (9th Cir. 2011).

Juniper Networks, Inc. v. Shipley, 643 F.3d 1346 (Fed. Cir. 2011).

Katyle v. Penn Nat. Gaming, Inc., 637 F.3d 462, 466 (4th Cir. 2011) (court need not credit unwarranted inferences, unreasonable conclusions, or arguments drawn from facts in complaint).

Simmons v. United Mortg. and Loan Inv., LLC, 634 F.3d 754, 768 (4th Cir. 2011).

Masterson v. Ihara, 442 Fed. Appx. 849 (4th Cir. 2011) (neither unwarranted inferences nor unreasonable conclusions or arguments need be taken as true).

Kundratic v. Thomas, 407 Fed. Appx. 625, 627 (3d Cir. 2011).

Doe I v. Wal-Mart Stores, Inc., 572 F.3d 677 (9th Cir. 2009).

Philips v. Pitt County Memorial Hosp., 572 F.3d 176 (4th Cir. 2009).

Cousins v. Lockyer, 568 F.3d 1063 (9th Cir. 2009).

Zaluski v. United American Healthcare Corp., 527 F.3d 564 (6th Cir. 2008).

J & R Marketing, SEP v. General Motors Corp., 519 F.3d 552 (6th Cir. 2008), amended and superseded on reh'g, 549 F.3d 384 (6th Cir. 2008).

Thomas v. New Mexico Corrections Dept., 272 Fed. Appx. 727 (10th Cir. 2008).

Montgomery v. Huntington Bank, 346 F.3d 693 (6th Cir. 2003) (unwarranted factual inferences).

Farm Credit Services of America v. American State Bank, 339 F.3d 764 (8th Cir. 2003), opinion corrected on reh'g, (Aug. 28, 2003).

Gean v. Hattaway, 330 F.3d 758 (6th Cir. 2003).

In re K-tel Intern., Inc. Securities Litigation, 300 F.3d 881 (8th Cir. 2002).

Thomas v. Publishers Clearing House, Inc., 29 Fed. Appx. 319 (6th Cir. 2002).

Doug Grant, Inc. v. Greate Bay Casino Corp., 232 F.3d 173 (3d Cir. 2000).

National Ass'n for Advancement of Psychoanalysis v. California Bd. of Psychology, 228 F.3d 1043 (9th Cir. 2000).

Maio v. Aetna, Inc., 221 F.3d 472 (3d Cir. 2000).

Eastern Shore Markets, Inc. v. J.D. Associates Ltd. Partnership, 213 F.3d 175 (4th Cir. 2000), citing Wright & Miller.

Claybrook v. Birchwell, 199 F.3d 350 (6th Cir. 2000) (unwarranted factual inferences).

Associated General Contractors of America v. Metropolitan Water Dist. of Southern California, 159 F.3d 1178 (9th Cir. 1998).

City of Pittsburgh v. West Penn Power Co., 147 F.3d 256 (3d Cir. 1998).

Pareto v. F.D.I.C., 139 F.3d 696 (9th Cir. 1998).

Bradley v. Chiron Corp., 136 F.3d 1317 (Fed. Cir. 1998), citing Wright & Miller.

In re VeriFone Securities Litigation, 11 F.3d 865 (9th Cir. 1993).

Hiland Dairy, Inc. v. Kroger Co., 402 F.2d 968 (8th Cir. 1968).

Ryan v. Scoggin, 245 F.2d 54 (10th Cir. 1957).

Ogden River Water Users' Ass'n v. Weber Basin W. Cons., 238 F.2d 936 (10th Cir. 1956).

 © 2025 Thomson Reuters. No claim to original U.S. Government Works.

Conner v. U.S. Dept. of the Army, 6 F. Supp. 3d 717 (W.D. Ky. 2014).

Ashland Hosp. Corp. v. International Broth. of Elec. Workers Local 575, 807 F. Supp. 2d 633, 638 (E.D. Ky. 2011), aff'd, 708 F.3d 737 (6th Cir. 2013) ("unwarranted factual inferences").

Hufford v. Bank United, FSB, 2011 WL 4985920, *2 (D. Md. 2011) ("unwarranted inferences, unreasonable conclusions or arguments"), quoting Nemet Chevrolet, Ltd. v. Consumeraffairs.com, Inc., 591 F.3d 250, 253 (4th Cir. 2009).

Adler v. Anchor Funding Services, LLC, 2011 WL 1843226, *2 (W.D. N.C. 2011) ("'unwarranted inferences, unreasonable conclusions, or arguments'"), quoting Eastern Shore Markets, Inc. v. J.D. Associates Ltd. Partnership, 213 F.3d 175, 180 (4th Cir. 2000).

Baker v. County of Missaukee, 2011 WL 1670953, *2 (W.D. Mich. 2011), report and recommendation adopted, 2011 WL 1670949 (W.D. Mich. 2011) ("unwarranted factual inferences").

Basnight v. Potter, 2011 WL 1366376 (E.D. N.C. 2011).

"This Court also declines to consider 'unwarranted inferences, unreasonable conclusions, or arguments.'" Wheeling Hosp., Inc. v. Ohio Valley Health Services and Educ. Corp., 2010 WL 4977987 (N.D. W. Va. 2010), quoting Wahi v. Charleston Area Medical Center, Inc., 562 F.3d 599, 615 n.26 (4th Cir. 2009).

Zepeda v. Tate, 2010 WL 4977596, *2 (E.D. Cal. 2010), quoting Ove v. Gwinn, 264 F.3d 817, 821 (9th Cir. 2001) ("conclusory allegations of law and unwarranted inferences").

Yarney v. Wells Fargo Bank, N.A., 2010 WL 3075460, *2 (W.D. Va. 2010).

Morris Aviation, LLC v. Diamond Aircraft Industries, Inc., 730 F. Supp. 2d 683 (W.D. Ky. 2010), aff'd, 536 Fed. Appx. 558 (6th Cir. 2013).

Kingsburg Apple Packers, Inc. v. Ballantine Produce Co., Inc., 2010 WL 2817056, *2 (E.D. Cal. 2010).

Logue v. West Penn Multi-List, Inc., 2010 WL 2720787, *2 (W.D. Pa. 2010).

Williams v. Rickard, 2010 WL 2640102, *3 (D. Haw. 2010) ("However, conclusory allegations of law, unwarranted deductions of fact, and unreasonable inferences are insufficient to defeat a motion to dismiss.").

Bilyeu v. Metropolitan Government of Nashville, 2010 WL 2595129, *2 (M.D. Tenn. 2010).

"But, the Court is not required 'to accept as true allegations that are merely conclusory, unwarranted deductions of fact, or unreasonable inferences.'" Young v. City of Visalia, 687 F. Supp. 2d 1141 (E.D. Cal. 2009), quoting In re Gilead Sciences Securities Litigation, 536 F.3d 1049, 1056-1057 (9th Cir. 2008).

Alexander v. Ohio Public Employees Retirement System, 2008 WL 2397300 (S.D. Ohio 2008).

In re Southeastern Milk Antitrust Litigation, 2008 WL 2368212 (E.D. Tenn. 2008).

Martinez v. Warner, 2008 WL 2331957 (E.D. Pa. 2008).

Mosher v. New Jersey, 2007 WL 1101230 (D.N.J. 2007).

"The Court, however, is not obligated to draw an inference that is not supported by the facts presented." Burnett v. Sharma, 2007 WL 1020782, *9 (D.D.C. 2007).

Freedom From Religion Foundation, Inc. v. Nicholson, 448 F. Supp. 2d 1028 (W.D. Wis. 2006).

Flagg v. City of Detroit, 447 F. Supp. 2d 824 (E.D. Mich. 2006).

Whitesell v. Town of Morrisville, 446 F. Supp. 2d 419 (E.D. N.C. 2006).

Freightliner of Knoxville, Inc. v. DaimlerChrysler Vans, LLC, 438 F. Supp. 2d 869 (E.D. Tenn. 2006), aff'd in part, rev'd in part and remanded, 484 F.3d 865 (6th Cir. 2007).

Mansfield v. Billington, 432 F. Supp. 2d 64 (D.D.C. 2006), on reconsideration in part, 669 F. Supp. 2d 11 (D.D.C. 2009) (inferences unwarranted by the facts set out).

Rasul v. Rumsfeld, 414 F. Supp. 2d 26 (D.D.C. 2006), aff'd, 512 F.3d 644 (D.C. Cir. 2008), cert. granted, judgment vacated, 555 U.S. 1083, 129 S. Ct. 763, 172 L. Ed. 2d 753 (2008) and aff'd, 563 F.3d 527 (D.C. Cir. 2009).

Onawola v. Johns Hopkins University, 412 F. Supp. 2d 529 (D. Md. 2006), aff'd, 221 Fed. Appx. 211 (4th Cir. 2007), citing Wright & Miller.

Hilton v. Whitman, 2006 WL 1307900 (D.N.J. 2006).

Wilson v. Board of Trustees of Community College of Baltimore County, 333 F. Supp. 2d 392 (D. Md. 2004), citing Wright & Miller.

Mitchell v. Cellone, 291 F. Supp. 2d 368 (W.D. Pa. 2003), rev'd and remanded, 389 F.3d 86 (3d Cir. 2004).

 © 2025 Thomson Reuters. No claim to original U.S. Government Works.

Keith v. U.S. Railroad Retirement Bd., 284 F. Supp. 2d 31 (D.D.C. 2003) (unsupported inferences).

Aldridge v. U.S., 282 F. Supp. 2d 802 (W.D. Tenn. 2003) ("unwarranted factual inferences").

In re Sagent Technology, Inc., Derivative Litigation, 278 F. Supp. 2d 1079 (N.D. Cal. 2003).

Foley v. Marquez, 2003 WL 22288160 (N.D. Cal. 2003) ("unreasonable inferences").

Farm Credit Services of America v. American State Bank, 212 F. Supp. 2d 1034 (N.D. Iowa 2002), aff'd, 339 F.3d 764 (8th Cir. 2003), opinion corrected on reh'g, (Aug. 28, 2003).

Ileto v. Glock, Inc., 194 F. Supp. 2d 1040 (C.D. Cal. 2002), aff'd in part, rev'd in part and remanded, 349 F.3d 1191 (9th Cir. 2003) ("unreasonable inferences").

Schultzen v. Woodbury Central Community School Dist., 187 F. Supp. 2d 1099 (N.D. Iowa 2002) (rejected by, E.N. v. Susquehanna Tp. School Dist., 2010 WL 4853700 (M.D. Pa. 2010)).

Global Marine Shipping (No. 10) Ltd. v. Finning Intern. Inc., 2002 WL 31246548 (E.D. La. 2002), quoting Wright & Miller.

Phillips Kiln Services, Ltd. v. Intern. Paper Co., 2002 WL 1712870 (N.D. Iowa 2002), citing Wright & Miller.

Iowa Health System v. Trinity Health Corp., 177 F. Supp. 2d 897 (N.D. Iowa 2001), citing Wright & Miller.

Small v. Strain, 2001 WL 1631341 (E.D. La. 2001), citing Wright & Miller (unpublished).

Cortes v. R.I. Enterprises, Inc., 95 F. Supp. 2d 255 (M.D. Pa. 2000), citing Wright & Miller.

In re Cendant Corp. Securities Litigation, 81 F. Supp. 2d 550 (D.N.J. 2000).

Bristol-Myers Squibb Co. v. IVAX Corp., 77 F. Supp. 2d 606 (D.N.J. 2000).

State ex rel. Attorney General v. Federal Emergency Management Agency, 78 F. Supp. 2d 1111 (D. Haw. 1999).

Oh v. AT & T Corp., 76 F. Supp. 2d 551 (D.N.J. 1999).

In re Cendant Corp. Securities Litigation, 76 F. Supp. 2d 539 (D.N.J. 1999) (rejected by, Falkowski v. Imation Corp., 309 F.3d 1123 (9th Cir. 2002)).

Barapind v. Reno, 72 F. Supp. 2d 1132 (E.D. Cal. 1999), aff'd but criticized, 225 F.3d 1100 (9th Cir. 2000) (unreasonable inferences).

F.T.C. v. Commonwealth Marketing Group, Inc., 72 F. Supp. 2d 530 (W.D. Pa. 1999).

In re Cendant Corp. Securities Litigation, 72 F. Supp. 2d 498 (D.N.J. 1999).

American Special Risk Ins. Co. ex rel. South Macomb Disposal Authority v. City of Centerline, 69 F. Supp. 2d 944 (E.D. Mich. 1999).

Akella v. Michigan Dept. of State Police, 67 F. Supp. 2d 716 (E.D. Mich. 1999).

Culberson v. Doan, 65 F. Supp. 2d 701 (S.D. Ohio 1999).

Cauchi v. Brown, 51 F. Supp. 2d 1014 (E.D. Cal. 1999).

Prevard v. Fauver, 47 F. Supp. 2d 539 (D.N.J. 1999), order aff'd, 202 F.3d 254 (3d Cir. 1999).

Federal Exp. Corp. v. U.S. Postal Service, 40 F. Supp. 2d 943 (W.D. Tenn. 1999).

Wheeling-Pittsburgh Steel Corp. v. Mitsui & Co., 35 F. Supp. 2d 597 (S.D. Ohio 1999).

In re Cendant Corp. Securities Litigation, 190 F.R.D. 331 (D.N.J. 1999).

In re Cendant Corp. Derivative Action Litigation, 189 F.R.D. 117 (D.N.J. 1999).

Campos v. I.N.S., 32 F. Supp. 2d 1337 (S.D. Fla. 1998).

Tennessee Protection and Advocacy, Inc. v. Board of Educ. of Putnam County, Tenn., 24 F. Supp. 2d 808 (M.D. Tenn. 1998).

Miceli v. Ansell, Inc., 23 F. Supp. 2d 929 (N.D. Ind. 1998) (court need not strain to find inferences favorable to pleader).

Organic Chemicals Site PRP Group v. Total Petroleum, Inc., 6 F. Supp. 2d 660 (W.D. Mich. 1998).

U.S. v. BCCI Holdings (Luxembourg), S.A., 3 F. Supp. 2d 31 (D.D.C. 1998).

Slaby v. Fairbridge, 3 F. Supp. 2d 22 (D.D.C. 1998).

Spivey v. State of Ohio, 999 F. Supp. 987 (N.D. Ohio 1998).

Ramirez v. U.S., 998 F. Supp. 425 (D.N.J. 1998).

 © 2025 Thomson Reuters. No claim to original U.S. Government Works.

Petrone v. Cleveland State University, 993 F. Supp. 1119 (N.D. Ohio 1998) (disapproved of by, Kovacevich v. Kent State University, 224 F.3d 806 (6th Cir. 2000)).

It is improper to assume that the plaintiff can prove facts that it has not alleged. Mruz v. Caring, Inc., 991 F. Supp. 701 (D.N.J. 1998).

U.S. ex rel. Roby v. Boeing Co., 184 F.R.D. 107 (S.D. Ohio 1998).

Guilbeaux v. 3927 Foundation, Inc., 177 F.R.D. 387 (E.D. Tex. 1998).

Diaz v. Carlson, 5 F. Supp. 2d 809 (C.D. Cal. 1997), aff'd, 142 F.3d 443 (9th Cir. 1998) (unreasonable inferences).

Amway Distributors Benefits Ass'n v. Federal Ins. Co., 990 F. Supp. 936 (W.D. Mich. 1997).

Terra Industries, Inc. v. Commonwealth Ins. Co. of America, 990 F. Supp. 679 (N.D. Iowa 1997).

Pagano v. Bell Atlantic-New Jersey, Inc., 988 F. Supp. 841 (D.N.J. 1997).

Fox v. Van Oosterum, 987 F. Supp. 597 (W.D. Mich. 1997), aff'd, 176 F.3d 342 (6th Cir. 1999).

Leslie v. U.S., 986 F. Supp. 900 (D.N.J. 1997), judgment aff'd, 178 F.3d 1279 (3d Cir. 1999) (facts not alleged).

Spinks v. City of St. Louis Water Div., 176 F.R.D. 572 (E.D. Mo. 1997).

Burks v. City of Philadelphia, 904 F. Supp. 421 (E.D. Pa. 1995).

Steiner v. Hale, 868 F. Supp. 284 (S.D. Cal. 1994).

Violanti v. Emery Worldwide A-CF Co., 847 F. Supp. 1251 (M.D. Pa. 1994) ("Conclusory allegations of law, unsupported conclusions and unwarranted inferences need not be accepted as true.") (McClure, J.).

Waye v. First Citizen's Nat. Bank, 846 F. Supp. 310 (M.D. Pa. 1994), judgment aff'd, 31 F.3d 1175 (3d Cir. 1994).

Gen-Probe Inc. v. Center for Neurologic Study, 853 F. Supp. 1215 (S.D. Cal. 1993).

Mackey v. Cleveland State University, 837 F. Supp. 1396 (N.D. Ohio 1993).

City of Heath, Ohio v. Ashland Oil, Inc., 834 F. Supp. 971 (S.D. Ohio 1993).

Mylan Laboratories, Inc. v. Pharmaceutical Basics, Inc., 808 F. Supp. 446 (D. Md. 1992), judgment rev'd, 7 F.3d 1130 (4th Cir. 1993), citing Wright & Miller.

14 Mere conclusory statements

Dejesus v. HF Management Services, LLC, 726 F.3d 85, 87 (2d Cir. 2013), quoting Ashcroft v. Iqbal, 556 U.S. 662, 663, 129 S. Ct. 1937, 1940, 173 L. Ed. 2d 868 (2009).

See also

"Appellants' pleading of an enterprise in the Fourth Amended Complaint is wholly conclusory and unsupported by facts. Walker asserts that all Appellees shared some connection with him, were similarly critical of his dealings with the BISD, and/or have sought or supported the imposition of criminal and/or civil penalties against him relating to his dealings with the BISD. Nevertheless, assuming all of that to be true, the facts alleged are insufficient to render plausible Walker's attempted characterization of the various unrelated Appellees as an 'ongoing organization, formal or informal, that functions as a continuing unit.'" Walker v. Beaumont Independent School District, 938 F.3d 724 (5th Cir. 2019).

Lyda v. CBS Corporation, 838 F.3d 1331 (Fed. Cir. 2016).

Haddad v. Randall S. Miller Associates, PC, 587 Fed. Appx. 959 (6th Cir. 2014).

IKB Intern. S.A. v. Bank of America Corp., 584 Fed. Appx. 26 (2d Cir. 2014).

Trump v. Vance, 480 F. Supp. 3d 460, 493 (S.D. N.Y. 2020), stay pending appeal denied, 481 F. Supp. 3d 161 (S.D. N.Y. 2020) and aff'd, 977 F.3d 198 (2d Cir. 2020).

Pollard v. District of Columbia, 191 F. Supp. 3d 58, 66 (D.D.C. 2016), judgment aff'd, 698 Fed. Appx. 616 (D.C. Cir. 2017).

Sepulveda v. UMass Correctional Health, Care, 160 F. Supp. 3d 371, 383 (D. Mass. 2016) (court must distinguish factual allegations from conclusory legal allegations).

Ortiz v. Lewis, 2014 WL 6788091, *4 (N.D. Cal. 2014) ("Plaintiff only presented conclusory allegations of retaliation.").

Foreman v. Foodtronix, LLC, 2014 Wage & Hour Cas. 2d (BNA) 157416, 2014 WL 2039055, *1 (N.D. Tex. 2014).

15 Legally cognizable claim

Atchley v. AstraZeneca UK Limited, 22 F.4th 204, 238 (D.C. Cir. 2022) (reversing the district court's dismissal because the plaintiffs' "allegations, together with the reasonable inferences to be drawn from them in plaintiffs' favor, suffice[d] to state a legally cognizable claim," sufficient to prevent dismissal of the claims at the pleading stage).

Parker v. Sea-Mar Community Health Center, 853 Fed. Appx. 197 (9th Cir. 2021) ("Dismissal under Rule 12 (b)(6) may be based on either: (1) lack of a cognizable legal theory, or (2) insufficient facts under a cognizable legal theory.").

Sherrod v. United Way Worldwide, 821 Fed. Appx. 311, 315 (5th Cir. 2020) ("On appeal, we are not concerned with whether the plaintiff was likely to succeed on the claims but only whether the complaint contains any legally cognizable claims that are plausible.").

Body by Cook, Incorporated v. State Farm Mutual Automobile Insurance, 869 F.3d 381, 385 (5th Cir. 2017).

Mills v. Barnard, 869 F.3d 473, 487 (6th Cir. 2017) ("It is important to note that this appeal comes to us at the motion-to-dismiss stage, rather than at summary judgment. * * * [A]t this stage, the complaint has stated legally cognizable claims.").

See also
Walker v. Beaumont Independent School District, 938 F.3d 724 (5th Cir. 2019) (finding dismissal of a RICO claim warranted because "neither defamation, intentional interference, nor online harassment qualifies as a RICO predicate act").

"Upon review of Plaintiff's complaint, the parties' arguments, and the applicable law, the Court will dismiss all of Plaintiff's claims against Defendant Verizon because respondeat superior liability is inapposite in this case and, consequently, Defendant Verizon cannot be held vicariously liable as a matter of law for the conduct committed by Defendant Kostick that has given rise to this suit." Bissett v. Verizon Wireless, 401 F. Supp. 3d 487 (M.D. Pa. 2019).

"Evaluating Plaintiffs' well-articulated complaint applying established Supreme Court and Third Circuit precedent that limits the breadth of the constitutional claims asserted here, this Court is constrained to find that Plaintiffs' factual allegations do not support a claim for violations of the dormant Commerce Clause or the constitutional right to travel. Accordingly, * * * the Court will grant the * * * motions to dismiss." Owner Operator Independent Drivers Association, Inc. v. Pennsylvania Turnpike Commission, 383 F. Supp. 3d 353 (M.D. Pa. 2019), aff'd, 934 F.3d 283 (3d Cir. 2019).

McClean v. Duke University, 376 F. Supp. 3d 585 (M.D. N.C. 2019) ("Because this court finds that any harassment by Broderick was likely driven by personal animus unrelated to Plaintiff's sex, this harassment is not cognizable under Title IX. * * * [T]his fact defeats any plausible inference of sexual bias.").

16

Burden on movant

Marcure v. Lynn, 992 F.3d 625, 631 (7th Cir. 2021) ("[E]very circuit court to address th[e] issue [of who bears the burden on a Rule 12(b)(6) motion]—this Court included—has interpreted Rule 12(b)(6) as requiring the movant to show entitlement to dismissal."), citing Wright & Miller.

Hochendoner v. Genzyme Corp., 823 F.3d 724, 729 (1st Cir. 2016) (plaintiff bears burden of alleging facts to meet plausibility standard).

Cohen v. Board of Trustees of the University of the Dist. of Columbia, 819 F.3d 476, 481 (D.C. Cir. 2016), citing Wright & Miller.

Mediacom Southeast LLC v. BellSouth Telecommunications, Inc., 672 F.3d 396, 399 (6th Cir. 2012) (district court reversed for placing burden of proof improperly on non-moving party).

Spirit Lake Tribe v. Jaeger, 2020 WL 625279, *4 (D.N.D. 2020) ("Dismissal will not be granted unless it appears beyond doubt the plaintiff can prove no set of facts entitling him to relief. * * * The burden is on the moving party to prove that no legally cognizable claim for relief exists."), citing Wright & Miller.

Preston v. Seterus, Inc., 931 F. Supp. 2d 743, 751 (N.D. Tex. 2013) ("Whether Plaintiffs have the ultimate burden of proof at trial on any of their claims is irrelevant here because, for purposes of Defendants' Rule 12(b)(6) motion, Plaintiffs have no burden of proof. Rather, the issue is whether Plaintiffs, based on their pleadings, have stated a claim upon which relief can be granted.").

But see

"The burden is on the plaintiff to frame a complaint with enough factual matter (taken as true) to suggest that he or she is entitled to relief." Hastings v. Barbee, 2011 WL 2610132, *2 (D. Colo. 2011), report and recommendation adopted, 2011 WL 2610194 (D. Colo. 2011) (internal quotation marks omitted).

In an action brought under the Age Discrimination and Employment Act, the plaintiff bears the burden of establishing a prima facie case in order to withstand a motion to dismiss or, alternatively, for summary judgment. Rutland v. Office of Atty. Gen., State of Miss., 851 F. Supp. 793 (S.D. Miss. 1994), judgment aff'd, 54 F.3d 226 (5th Cir. 1995).

See also

"When a defendant invokes qualified immunity, the burden shifts to the plaintiff to demonstrate the inapplicability of the defense." Club Retro, L.L.C. v. Hilton, 568 F.3d 181, 194 (5th Cir. 2009).

Namer v. Scottsdale Insurance Company, 314 F.R.D. 392, 394 n.11 (E.D. La. 2016) (since Rule 12 does not require opposition to be filed in response to motion to dismiss, district courts cannot grant motion based on plaintiff's failure to oppose).

A motion to dismiss should not be granted merely because it was unopposed. The court still must investigate the legal sufficiency of the complaint. Bennerson v. City of New York, 2004 WL 902166 (S.D. N.Y. 2004).

17 Rule 12(d)
See § 1366.

Adams v. Crystal City Marriott Hotel, 2004 WL 744489 (S.D. N.Y. 2004) ("certification" resembling affidavit or declaration submitted by plaintiff in response to motion to dismiss was unusual filing and since it was not attached to or incorporated in complaint, court would not consider it on Rule 12(b)(6) motion).

United States Fire Ins. Co. v. United Limousine Service, Inc., 303 F. Supp. 2d 432 (S.D. N.Y. 2004) (although not relying on materials in affidavit to resolve Rule 12(b)(6) motion, court considered such materials for sole purpose of determining whether to grant leave to amend complaint).

See also
"The Sixth Circuit has held that the failure to convert the motion to a motion for summary judgment is not reversible error if the court's rationale in no way hinged on the additional information provided there. In other words, if the appellate court can justify the dismissal without reference to any extraneous matters, it can treat the error as harmless." Hawk Technology Systems, LLC v. Castle Retail, LLC, 60 F.4th 1349, 1360 (Fed. Cir. 2023) (quoting Bates v. Green Farms Condo. Ass'n, 958 F.3d 470, 484 (6th Cir. 2020)) (internal quotation marks omitted), citing Wright & Miller.

18 Matters considered
Supreme Court
In discussing the standard by which courts should evaluate whether a complaint has stated a "strong inference" of scienter with the requisite particularity, the Court stated: "[C]ourts must consider the complaint in its entirety, as well as other sources courts ordinarily examine when ruling on Rule 12(b)(6) motions to dismiss, in particular, documents incorporated into the complaint by reference, and matters of which a court may take judicial notice." Tellabs, Inc. v. Makor Issues & Rights, Ltd., 551 U.S. 308, 127 S. Ct. 2499, 2509, 168 L. Ed. 2d 179 (2007), citing Wright & Miller.

First Circuit

 © 2025 Thomson Reuters. No claim to original U.S. Government Works.

"[E]ven within the Rule 12(b)(6) framework, a court may consider matters of public record and facts susceptible to judicial notice." United States ex rel. Winkelman v. CVS Caremark Corporation, 827 F.3d 201, 208 (1st Cir. 2016).

Second Circuit

Kaplan v. Lebanese Canadian Bank, SAL, 999 F.3d 842, 854 (2d Cir. 2021) ("[W]e 'must consider the complaint in its entirety, as well as other sources courts ordinarily examine when ruling on Rule 12(b)(6) motions to dismiss, in particular, documents incorporated into the complaint by reference, and matters of which a court may take judicial notice.' The proper question is whether there is a permissible relevant inference from 'all of the facts alleged, taken collectively,' not whether an inference is permissible based on 'any individual allegation, scrutinized in isolation.'" (quoting Tellabs, Inc. v. Makor Issues & Rights, Ltd., 551 U.S. 308, 322, 127 S. Ct. 2499, 168 L. Ed. 2d 179 (2007)), citing Wright & Miller.

Third Circuit

Leisten v. CBS Broadcasting Inc., 2023 WL 6890733, *3 (3d Cir. 2023) ("Exhibit A to Leisten's complaint shows that the news reports naming Leisten were published on May 19, 2020. * * * Leisten does not explain why the District Court should not have relied on his exhibit. Thus, we discern no error in the District Court's finding of the date of publication for adjudicating the CBS Parties' motion to dismiss."), quoting Wright & Miller.

Geness v. Administrative Office of Pennsylvania Courts, 974 F.3d 263, 276 (3d Cir. 2020) ("We will take judicial notice of the Pennsylvania Rules of Judicial Administration, as they are 'matters of public record,' which the District Court considered as well."), quoting Wright & Miller.

Fourth Circuit

Penegar v. Liberty Mutual Insurance Company, 115 F.4th 294, 300 n.6 (4th Cir. 2024) ("The relevant factual allegations are not always confined to the four corners of the complaint. * * * Because the parties here properly rely on exhibits integral to the complaint, we consider those exhibits in this appeal."), quoting Wright & Miller.

The district court should not have considered documents filed with the SEC in ruling on a Rule 12(b)(6) motion to dismiss stockholders' complaint for failure to state claim because the documents were not explicitly referenced in, or an integral part of, the stockholders' securities fraud complaint against corporation and its officers. Zak v. Chelsea Therapeutics Intern., Ltd., 780 F.3d 597, 607 (4th Cir. 2015).

Fifth Circuit

"Because the deeds and the filings from prior lawsuits that BANA attached to its dismissal motion were public record, the district court was permitted to consider them in deciding the motion to dismiss. Accordingly, to the extent the district court considered the documents, that consideration did not convert the dismissal motion into one for summary judgment." Krystal One Acquisitions, L.L.C. v. Bank of America, N.A., 805 Fed. Appx. 283, 287 (5th Cir. 2020) (citing Cinel v. Connick, 15 F.3d 1338, 1343 n.6 (5th Cir. 1994)).

Funk v. Stryker Corp., 631 F.3d 777, 782 (5th Cir. 2011) (incorporation of matters outside complaint by judicial notice did not convert motion to summary judgment when no facts were in dispute and matters were in public record).

Sixth Circuit

"[I]t is black-letter law that * * * a court evaluating a motion for judgment on the pleadings (or a motion to dismiss) must focus only on the allegations in the pleadings. This rule applies just as much when the plaintiff attaches evidence to its opposition as when (as is more common) the defendant attaches evidence to its motion. * * * If plaintiffs believe that they need to supplement their complaint with additional facts to withstand a motion for judgment on the pleadings (or a motion to dismiss), they have a readily available tool: a motion to amend the complaint under Rule 15." Bates v. Green Farms Condominium Association, 958 F.3d 470, 483 (6th Cir. 2020), citing Wright & Miller.

Seventh Circuit

Burke v. 401 N. Wabash Venture, LLC, 714 F.3d 501 (7th Cir. 2013) ("In general, a court may only consider the plaintiff's complaint when ruling on a Rule 12(b)(6) motion. However, Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 10(c) provides that '[a] copy of any written instrument which is an exhibit to a pleading is part thereof for all purposes.' We have concluded that this rule includes a limited class of attachments to motions to dismiss pursuant to Rule 12(b)(6)."), citing Rosenblum v. Travelbyus.com Ltd., 299 F.3d 657, 661 (7th Cir. 2002).

Eighth Circuit

In an action against a hospital alleging violations of the Telephone Consumer Protection Act (TCPA), a hospital questionnaire and consent form signed by the plaintiff in purchasing a medical device were embraced by the patient's complaint. Therefore, the questionnaire and consent form were properly considered by the district court in deciding the hospital's motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim. The plaintiff alleged violation of the TCPA arising out of a contractual relationship, i.e., the purchase of a device from the hospital. The plaintiff alleged in conclusory fashion that he did not give the hospital express consent to make the calls, and documents reflecting a contractual relationship refuted the allegation. Zean v. Fairview Health Services, 858 F.3d 520, 526 (8th Cir. 2017), quoting Wright & Miller.

Ninth Circuit

Sams v. Yahoo! Inc., 713 F.3d 1175, 1179 (9th Cir. 2013) ("However, we are permitted to consider documents that were not physically attached to the complaint where the documents' authenticity is not contested, and the plaintiff's complaint necessarily relies on them."), citing Lee v. City of Los Angeles, 250 F.3d 668, 688-689 (9th Cir. 2001).

Tenth Circuit

In re Overstock Securities Litigation, 119 F.4th 787 (10th Cir. 2024) ("We consider the complaint in its entirety, including documents incorporated into the complaint by reference, and matters of which a court may take judicial notice.") (citation and internal quotation marks omitted) citing Wright & Miller.

Brokers' Choice of America, Inc. v. NBC Universal, Inc., 861 F.3d 1081, 1103-1104 (10th Cir. 2017) (stating that the "district court did not abuse its discretion and properly considered [the defendant's] motion as a Rule 12(b)(6) motion to dismiss" when the district court considered "the pleadings, [a] seminar recording, and [a TV] episode" and the "seminar recording and the episode were (1) attached to or referenced in the amended complaint, (2) central to BCA's claim, and (3) undisputed as to their accuracy and authenticity").

D.C. Circuit

Covad Communications Co. v. Bell Atlantic Corp., 407 F.3d 1220, 366 (D.C. Cir. 2005) (court may take judicial notice of facts on public record).

Federal Circuit

Zulueta v. U.S., 553 Fed. Appx. 983, 986 (Fed. Cir. 2014) (public record), citing Wright & Miller.

Sebastian v. U.S., 185 F.3d 1368 (Fed. Cir. 1999) (superseded military regulations were matter of public record), citing Wright & Miller.

See also §§ 1327, 1364, 1366.

Federal Claims Court

A.Y. by J.Y. v. Secretary of Health & Human Services, 152 Fed. Cl. 588, 599 (2021) ("To the extent that the Gershon Article effectively incorporated other articles by reference to support is analysis, the Court cannot conclude that the Chief Special Master improperly reviewed those cited articles as well."), quoting Wright & Miller.

Compare

Unless a court converts a Rule 12(b)(6) motion into a motion for summary judgment, it cannot consider material outside of the complaint, such as facts presented in briefs, affidavits, or discovery materials. A court may, however, consider exhibits submitted with the complaint and matters subject to judicial notice. RDF Media Ltd. v. Fox Broadcasting Co., 372 F. Supp. 2d 556 (C.D. Cal. 2005).

 © 2025 Thomson Reuters. No claim to original U.S. Government Works.

The court may consider documents attached to the complaint, but the court may not consider other documents outside the pleadings. Lee v. Plummer, 2005 WL 91380 (N.D. Cal. 2005).

Maharishi Hardy Blechman Ltd. v. Abercrombie & Fitch Co., 220 F.R.D. 39 (S.D. N.Y. 2004) (court rejected motion opposing plaintiff's request to amend complaint since points in opposition motion all argued futility of amendment based on extra-pleading materials).

Norm Thompson Outfitters, Inc. v. Starcrest Products of California, Inc., 2004 WL 957774 (D. Or. 2004) (court considered catalog whose authenticity was unquestioned and to which complaint referred multiple times but refused to consider website whose authenticity was unquestioned because it was not central to complaint).

Columbia Hosp. at Medical City Dallas subsidiary, L.P. v. Legend Asset Management Corp., 2004 WL 769253 (N.D. Tex. 2004) (court refused to consider document whose authenticity was in dispute).

McNeal v. Cook County Sheriff's Dept., 282 F. Supp. 2d 865 (N.D. Ill. 2003) (facts or admissions from original complaint not incorporated into amended complaint cannot be considered on motion to dismiss).

But see

The court is not always limited to the four corners of the complaint and "may take judicial notice of matters of public record without converting a Rule 12(b)(6) motion into a Rule 56 motion." Halmos v. Bomardier Aerospace Corp., 404 Fed. Appx. 376, 377 (11th Cir. 2010) (per curiam).

City of Portland v. Homeaway.com, Inc., 191 F. Supp. 3d 1157, 1161 (D. Or. 2016) (two exceptions to the rule that courts may not consider matters beyond the pleadings permit the consideration of matters of public record, and material submitted as part of complaint provided plaintiff's complaint necessarily relies on them).

Union Street Corridor-Community Development Corporation v. Santander Bank, N.A., 191 F. Supp. 3d 147, 149 n.1 (D. Mass. 2016) (court reviewed extra-pleading submissions central to plaintiff's claim whose authenticity was not disputed and that were sufficiently referred to in complaint).

"Typically on a motion to dismiss, the deciding court cannot consider information outside the four corners of the complaint. The First Circuit recognizes narrow exceptions to this rule for documents the authenticity of which are not disputed by the parties; for official public records; for documents central to plaintiff's claim; or for documents sufficiently referred to in the complaint." Alharbi v. Beck, 62 F. Supp. 3d 202, 205 (D. Mass. 2014) (internal citations omitted).

"When ruling on a motion to dismiss a pro se complaint, however, a district court is required to look beyond the plaintiff's formal complaint and to consider as amendments to the complaint those materials subsequently filed." Val-Com Acquisitions Trust v. Wells Fargo Bank, N.A., 2011 WL 1344176, *2 (E.D. Tex. 2011), report and recommendation adopted, 2011 WL 1344168 (E.D. Tex. 2011), aff'd, 428 Fed. Appx. 313 (5th Cir. 2011) (internal quotation marks omitted).

"When ruling on a motion to dismiss a pro se complaint, however, a district court is required to look beyond the plaintiff's formal complaint and to consider as amendments to the complaint those materials subsequently filed." Anderson v. CitiMortgage, Inc., 2011 WL 1113494, *3 (E.D. Tex. 2011) (internal quotation marks omitted).

Cardew v. New York State Dept. of Correctional Services, 2004 WL 943575 (S.D. N.Y. 2004) (since plaintiff was entitled to have all facts assumed in his favor, court rejected defendant's argument that substance of grievance forms mentioned in complaint should be considered because they were incorporated).

But compare
Adams v. Crystal City Marriott Hotel, 2004 WL 744489 (S.D. N.Y. 2004) ("certification" resembling affidavit or declaration submitted by plaintiff in response to motion to dismiss was unusual filing and since it was not attached to or incorporated in complaint, court would not consider it on Rule 12(b)(6) motion).

United States Fire Ins. Co. v. United Limousine Service, Inc., 303 F. Supp. 2d 432 (S.D. N.Y. 2004) (although not relying on materials in affidavit to resolve Rule 12(b)(6) motion, court considered such materials for sole purpose of determining whether to grant leave to amend complaint).

19 Rule 12(h)(2)
See § 1392.

See also
A Rule 60(b) motion is made after trial, and is therefore an inappropriate means by which to assert a failure to state a claim defense. Rule 12(h)(2) only preserves the defense through trial. Eberhardt v. Integrated Design & Const., Inc., 167 F.3d 861 (4th Cir. 1999).

Hayes v. Allstate Ins. Co., 95 F. Supp. 2d 832 (W.D. Tenn. 2000), citing Wright & Miller.

 © 2025 Thomson Reuters. No claim to original U.S. Government Works.

Puckett v. U.S., 82 F. Supp. 2d 660 (S.D. Tex. 1999), aff'd, 213 F.3d 636 (5th Cir. 2000), citing Wright & Miller.

Mullis v. Mechanics & Farmers Bank, 994 F. Supp. 680 (M.D. N.C. 1997), citing Wright & Miller.

20 Untimely Rule 12(b)(6) motion

"Although Rule 12(h)(2) preserves Rule 12(b)(6) in certain instances, this case is not one of those instances. The second Motion to Dismiss is not in response to any pleading allowed or ordered under Rule 7(a); rather, it is in response to the Court's Ruling and Order granting in part and denying in part Dr. Blanche's first motion to dismiss. Additionally, the second Motion to Dismiss is not raised by a Rule 12(c) motion for judgment on the pleadings, and it is not being raised at trial. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(h)(2). Therefore, Dr. Blanche is not permitted to make another Rule 12(b)(6) motion raising his defenses or objections because they were readily available to him, but omitted from his first motion. For this reason, the second motion is denied." Colbert v. City of Baton Rouge/Parish of East Baton Rouge, 2018 WL 3430689 (M.D. La. 2018).

Northstar Battery Company, LLC v. EnXergy, LLC, 2018 WL 5284618 (W.D. Mo. 2018) (granting, based on Rule 12(g)(2), plaintiff's motion to strike the defendant's motion under Rule 12(b)(6) because it was omitted from the defendant's previous motion under Rule 12 seeking dismissal for lack of jurisdiction and improper venue).

21 Some other vehicle

"We note that [defendants] filed answers in the District Court on June 22, 2009, thus generally barring the filing of a motion to dismiss under Rule 12(b)(6)." Balintulo v. Daimler AG, 727 F.3d 174, 188 n.20 (2d Cir. 2013).

Patrick v. Rivera-Lopez, 708 F.3d 15, 18 (1st Cir. 2013) (district court should have treated Rule 12(b)(6) motion as motion for judgment on pleadings under Rule 12(c), although court's reliance on wrong rule was inconsequential).

ClearOne Communications, Inc. v. Biamp Systems, 653 F.3d 1163, 1172 (10th Cir. 2011).

Elvig v. Calvin Presbyterian Church, 375 F.3d 951 (9th Cir. 2004) (district court should not have considered motion to dismiss made after answer under Rule 12(b)(6) but instead should have considered it under Rule 12(c) or Rule 12(h)(2)).

CNSP, Inc. v. City of Santa Fe, 2018 WL 813409 (D.N.M. 2018) ("Rules 12(g)(2) and 12(h)(2) * * * do not preclude the Court from considering Defendant's successive Rule 12(b)(6) assertions raised in Motion to Dismiss Two and Motion to Dismiss Three so long as the Court evaluates those assertions under Rule 12(c).").

A party is not required to assert the defense of failure to state a claim in a motion; such a defense may also be asserted in an answer. Therefore, the defense is not waived if a Rule 12(b)(6) motion is not filed before the answer. Rule 12(b)(6) motions, however, are untimely if filed after an answer. The similarity between Rule 12(b)(6) motions to dismiss for failure to state a claim and Rule 12(c) motions for judgment on the pleadings has led to the "common practice" to treat an untimely Rule 12(b)(6) motion as a Rule 12(c) motion. In re Breedlove, 545 B.R. 359, 365-366 (Bankr. M.D. Ga. 2016).

But see
In re Apple iPhone Antitrust Litigation, 846 F.3d 313, 318-320 (9th Cir. 2017), judgment aff'd, 139 S. Ct. 1514, 203 L. Ed. 2d 802 (2019).

"Under Seventh Circuit law, however, 'it is well established that the amended pleading supersedes the original pleading * * * Once an amended pleading is interposed, the original pleading no longer performs any function in the case * * *.' * * * Defendants filed their Motion to Dismiss in lieu of an answer to the Second Amended Complaint, thus the Rule 12(b)(6) motion is proper." Wellness Community-National v. Wellness House, 70 F.3d 46, 49 (7th Cir. 1995), quoting Panwar v. Access Therapies, Inc., 975 F. Supp. 2d 948 (S.D. Ind. 2013), quoting Wright & Miller.

22 Appellate leniency
Johnson v. Farmers New World Life Insurance Company, 2024 WL 4157896, *2, (10th Cir. 2024) ("Because WNIC had already filed an answer to the complaint when it joined in the motion to dismiss, the district court construed WNIC's joinder as a motion for judgment on the pleadings pursuant to Rule 12(c). However, a motion under Rule 12(c) is treated as a motion to dismiss under Rule 12(b)(6)."), citing Wright & Miller.

In re Apple iPhone Antitrust Litigation, 846 F.3d 313 (9th Cir. 2017), judgment aff'd, 139 S. Ct. 1514, 203 L. Ed. 2d 802 (2019).

Leyse v. Bank of America Nat. Ass'n, 804 F.3d 316 (3d Cir. 2015) ("So long as the district court accepts all of the allegations in the complaint as true, the result is the same as if the defendant had filed an answer admitting these allegations and then filed a Rule 12(c) motion for judgment on the pleadings, which Rule 12(h)(2)(B) expressly permits.").

Albers v. Board of County Com'rs of Jefferson County, Colo., 771 F.3d 697 (10th Cir. 2014) ("[W]hether the district court dismissed the complaint based on a motion under Rule 12(b)(6) or rule 12(c) makes no difference for purposes of our review. Therefore, any procedural error that may have been committed would be harmless and does not prevent us from reaching the merits of the district court's decision.").

23 Courts cannot grant motion to dismiss merely based on lack of response

Marcure v. Lynn, 992 F.3d 625, 633 (7th Cir. 2021) ("Rule 12(b)(6) prevents courts from granting unopposed motions solely because there is no response.").

Giummo v. Olsen, 701 Fed. Appx. 922, 924-925 (11th Cir. 2017) (holding that the district court abused its discretion by "grant[ing] the defendants' motion to dismiss based solely on the plaintiffs' failure to respond in opposition," and explaining that "the district court must address the merits of the defendants' motion to dismiss").

Wiggins v. MacManiman, 698 Fed. Appx. 42, 43 (3d Cir. 2017) ("District Courts may not grant a Rule 12(b)(6) motion as unopposed and dismiss a complaint 'solely on the basis of [a] local rule without any analysis of whether the complaint failed to state a claim upon which relief can be granted, as provided in [Rule] 12(b)(6).'"), quoting Stackhouse v. Mazurkiewicz, 951 F.2d 29, 30 (3d Cir. 1991).

Fournerat v. Wisconsin Law Review, 420 Fed. Appx. 816 (10th Cir. 2011) ("'[A] district court may not grant a motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim merely because a party failed to file a response.' If the plaintiff does not file a response, 'the district court must still examine the allegations in the plaintiff's complaint and determine whether the plaintiff has stated a claim upon which relief can be granted.'"), quoting Issa v. Comp USA, 354 F.3d 1174, 1177-1178 (10th Cir. 2003).

Issa v. Comp USA, 354 F.3d 1174, 1177 (10th Cir. 2003).

McCall v. Pataki, 232 F.3d 321, 322-323 (2d Cir. 2000) ("If a complaint is sufficient to state a claim on which relief can be granted, the plaintiff's failure to respond to a Rule 12(b)(6) motion does not warrant dismissal.").

Carver v. Bunch, 946 F.2d 451, 453-455 (6th Cir. 1991).

Ramsey v. Signal Delivery Service, Inc., 631 F.2d 1210, 1214 (5th Cir. 1980).

Patton v. Turner, 2022 WL 1161434, *2 (E.D. Tenn. 2022) ("[I]n the context of a motion to dismiss under Rule 12(b)(6), a moving party must meet its initial burden under the Federal Rules, even if an adverse party fails to respond."), citing Carver v. Bunch, 946 F.2d 451, 455 (6th Cir. 1991).

Swinson v. City of New York, 2022 WL 142407, *3 (S.D. N.Y. 2022) ("'[T]he plaintiff's failure to respond to a Rule 12(b)(6) motion does not [itself] warrant dismissal,' and the district court must determine whether dismissal of the complaint is appropriate on the merits."), quoting McCall v. Pataki, 232 F.3d 321, 322-323 (2d Cir. 2000).

Chowdury v. Wal-Mart Stores Texas, LLC, 2019 WL 13190677, *2 (S.D. Tex. 2019) ("[W]here a party does not respond to a motion to dismiss, such failure does not warrant a severe measure, such as dismissal with prejudice."), citing Ramsey v. Signal Delivery Service, Inc., 631 F.2d 1210, 1213-1214 (5th Cir. 1980).

See also

Land v. International Business Machines, Inc., 485 Fed. Appx. 830 (7th Cir. 2012) ("Our review of the court's decision dismissing a case under Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 12(b)(6) is, however, de novo, and so we will overlook [plaintiff's] failure properly to raise before the district court any arguments opposing the motion to dismiss.").

Branch Banking and Trust Co. v. Howard, 2013 WL 172903 (S.D. Ala. 2013) (explaining that a non-movant's failure to oppose a Rule 12(b)(6) motion, "does not trigger the kneejerk granting of such Motion on an abandonment theory" (quoting Gailes v. Marengo County Sheriff's Dept., 916 F. Supp. 2d 1238, 1243 (S.D. Ala. 2013) ("If * * * the defendant's presentation is adequate to satisfy its initial burden, the Court will not deny the motion based on arguments the plaintiff could have made but by silence elected not to raise."))).

But see

Cohen v. Board of Trustees of the University of the Dist. of Columbia, 819 F.3d 476, 480-481 (D.C. Cir. 2016) (permitting, "reluctantly," district courts to grant unopposed 12(b)(6) motions to dismiss—but only when done without prejudice—because it is permissible "[u]nder [D.C. Circuit] precedent," but expressing "concerns about that precedent").

Pomerleau v. West Springfield Public Schools, 362 F.3d 143, 145 (1st Cir. 2004) (acknowledging that "the mere fact that a motion to dismiss is unopposed does not relieve the district court of the obligation to examine the complaint itself," but holding that Rule 12(b)(6)'s requirement can nevertheless be overridden by local rules if "the result does not clearly offend equity").

24 Court's own initiative

"Generally, a district court may dismiss a plaintiff's claim for failure to state a claim sua sponte, 'as long as the procedure employed is fair to the parties.' A litigant must have the opportunity to be heard before a claim is dismissed, except where the claim is patently frivolous. Fairness requires both notice of the court's intention and an opportunity to respond." Alexander v. Trump, 753 Fed. Appx. 201 (5th Cir. 2018) (dismissing claims against the defendant before the defendant had been served) (citations and internal quotation marks omitted), quoting Wright & Miller.

Futura Development of Puerto Rico, Inc. v. Estado Libre Asociado de Puerto Rico, 144 F.3d 7 (1st Cir. 1998) (sua sponte dismissal for failure to state claim is erroneous unless party has been afforded notice and opportunity to amend complaint or otherwise respond).

Goodwin v. Castille, 465 Fed. Appx. 157, 163 (3d Cir. 2012) ("This is the rare case where sua sponte dismissal was appropriate. The District Court had sufficient facts to determine that legislative immunity was an absolute bar to Appellants' action.").

"A district court may consider the sufficiency of a complaint on its own initiative, as long as the procedure employed is fair. Fairness in this context requires both notice of the court's intention and an opportunity to respond. Hager was aware of the court's concern about the viability of his claim and that the defendant had asked the court to dismiss the case with prejudice, albeit in a perfunctory filing. Moreover, Hager had the opportunity to make his case for a remedy to the district court. In any event, Hager has forfeited any challenge to the district court's sua sponte dismissal by failing to raise the issue on appeal." Hager v. DBG Partners, Incorporated, 903 F.3d 460 (5th Cir. 2018).

The district court has the power to dismiss the complaint sua sponte for failure to state a claim and there is no reason why the same rule should not apply to dismissal on statute of limitations grounds, at least when the facts supporting the statute of limitations defense are set forth in the papers the plaintiff himself submitted. Leonhard v. U.S., 633 F.2d 599, 609 n.11 (2d Cir. 1980), citing Wright & Miller.

"Generally, res judicata must be pled as an affirmative defense. Two limited exceptions to this rule exist. The first exception permits '[d]ismissal by the court sua sponte on res judicata grounds * * * in the interest of judicial economy where both actions were brought before the same court.' The second exception applies 'where all of the relevant facts are contained in the record * * * and all are uncontroverted.' Both McIntyre's Civil Rights Act and FLSA actions were brought before the same federal district court. The relevant facts are contained in McIntyre's complaint, which is nearly identical to the complaint filed in the earlier action. Thus, the district court did not err in raising the issue of res judicata sua sponte under Rule 12(b)(6)." McIntyre v. Ben E. Keith Company, 754 Fed. Appx. 262 (5th Cir. 2018) (citations omitted).

Robertson v. Anderson Mill Elementary School, 989 F.3d 282, 290-291 (4th Cir. 2021) ("[A]s our sister circuits have recognized, there are instances in which 'sua sponte dismissals of complaints under Rule 12(b)(6) are appropriate.' * * * Importantly, district courts may only exercise their authority to sua sponte dismiss inadequate complaints if 'the procedure employed is fair to the parties.'") (citations omitted), citing Wright & Miller.

 © 2025 Thomson Reuters. No claim to original U.S. Government Works.

It was error for the court to dismiss the plaintiff's complaint sua sponte without affording him notice and an opportunity to respond. Wyatt v. City of Boston, 35 F.3d 13 (1st Cir. 1994), citing Wright & Miller.

See also
Rampersad v. Deutsche Bank Securities, Inc., 2004 WL 616132 (S.D. N.Y. 2004) (although court acknowledged that falsity and sham were grounds for granting motion to strike, it denied motion because falsity had not been sufficiently established).

Compare
Even if the plaintiff does not oppose a Rule 12(b)(6) motion, the court should conduct an independent inquiry to determine whether the motion to dismiss has merit. Such an inquiry is especially important when the parties do not agree on whether any disposition should be made with or without prejudice. Seaweed, Seaweed, Inc. v. DMA Product & Design & Marketing LLC., 219 F. Supp. 2d 551 (S.D. N.Y. 2002).

But see
Lindley v. City of Birmingham, Ala., 452 Fed. Appx. 878, 880-881 (11th Cir. 2011) (sua sponte dismissal of plaintiff's claim as time-barred reversed because court did not give plaintiff notice and opportunity to be heard on question of dismissal for failure to state claim).

"Whether the court had the authority sua sponte to dismiss the complaint for failure to state a claim under Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(b)(6) is unclear." Holbrook v. Castle Key Ins. Co., 405 Fed. Appx. 459, 460 n.1 (11th Cir. 2010) (per curiam).

25 In forma pauperis
"Secondly, plaintiff's lawsuit is subject to dismissal as being frivolous because his claim that he is Jesus Christ is delusional." Falconer v. United States Government, 2019 WL 1651314 (E.D. Mich. 2019) (dismissing complaint of the plaintiff under 28 U.S.C.A. § 1915).

26 Magistrates Act
28 U.S.C.A. § 636(b)(1)(B).

27 Limitations on magistrates
Thomas v. Arn, 474 U.S. 140, 106 S. Ct. 466, 88 L. Ed. 2d 435 (1985) ("[A] district court may refer dispositive motions to a magistrate for a recommendation so long as 'the entire process takes place under the district court's total control and jurisdiction,' and the judge 'exercises the ultimate authority to issue an appropriate order.'" (quoting U.S. v. Raddatz, 447 U.S. 667, 100 S. Ct. 2406, 65 L. Ed. 2d 424 (1980))).

 © 2025 Thomson Reuters. No claim to original U.S. Government Works.

Freeman v. County of Bexar, 142 F.3d 848 (5th Cir. 1998) ("There is no doubt that district courts may, both constitutionally and by statute, assign magistrate judges to work on dispositive motions in a case, but the Article III judge must retain final decisionmaking authority.").

TPO, Inc. v. McMillen, 460 F.2d 348 (7th Cir. 1972) ("We conclude that magistrates have no power to decide motions to dismiss or motions for summary judgment, both of which involve ultimate decision making, and the district courts have no power to delegate such duties to magistrates.").

28 Magistrate recommendation

Rule 72(b) is discussed in §§ 3068 to 3070.2.

See also

"Defendants moved to dismiss under Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(b)(6). The magistrate judge, exercising jurisdiction by consent under 28 U.S.C. § 636(c), granted the motion." Sanders v. Werner, 2022 WL 1052055, *1 (10th Cir. 2022).

"The magistrate judge, exercising jurisdiction over the case by consent of the parties, see 28 U.S.C. § 636(c), granted Winn-Dixie's motion to dismiss under Rule 12(b)(6)." Reed v. Winn Dixie, Inc., 677 Fed. Appx. 607, 611 (11th Cir. 2017).

"This lawsuit is before the court on the United States Magistrate Judge's recommendation to grant SPLC's and the Amazon defendants' motions to dismiss filed pursuant to Rule 12(b)(6) of the Federal Rules on Civil Procedure. After an independent and de novo review of the record, and for reasons that follow, the court overrules Coral Ridge's objections to the recommendation and adopts the recommendation that this case should be dismissed in its entirety, albeit for reasons, in some instances, different from the magistrate judge's." Coral Ridge Ministries Media, Inc. v. Amazon.com, Inc., 406 F. Supp. 3d 1258 (M.D. Ala. 2019), aff'd, 6 F.4th 1247 (11th Cir. 2021), cert. denied, 142 S. Ct. 2453, 213 L. Ed. 2d 1102 (2022).

29 Issue of law

Neitzke v. Williams, 490 U.S. 319, 326, 109 S. Ct. 1827, 1832, 104 L. Ed. 2d 338 (1989) ("Rule 12(b)(6) authorizes a court to dismiss a claim on the basis of a dispositive issue of law.").

Seismic Reservoir 2020, Inc. v. Paulsson, 785 F.3d 330, 335 (9th Cir. 2015) ("'Rule 12(b)(6) authorizes a court to dismiss a claim on the basis of a dispositive issue of law.'"), quoting Neitzke v. Williams, 490 U.S. 319, 326, 109 S. Ct. 1827, 1832, 104 L. Ed. 2d 338 (1989).

Sons of Confederate Veterans, Virginia Div. v. City of Lexington, Va., 722 F.3d 224, 228 (4th Cir. 2013) ("'Rule 12(b)(6) authorizes a court to dismiss a claim on the basis of a dispositive issue of law.'"), quoting Neitzke v. Williams, 490 U.S. 319, 326, 109 S. Ct. 1827, 1832, 104 L. Ed. 2d 338 (1989).

Barefoot Architect, Inc. v. Bunge, 54 V.I. 948, 632 F.3d 822, 835 (3d Cir. 2011) (Rule 12(b)(6) motion presents purely legal question; evidence is irrelevant).

Public Health Equipment & Supply Co., Inc. v. Clarke Mosquito Control Products, Inc., 410 Fed. Appx. 738, 741 (5th Cir. 2010).

Club Retro, L.L.C. v. Hilton, 568 F.3d 181, 194 (5th Cir. 2009) ("Our jurisdiction, however, is severely curtailed: 'we are restricted to determinations of question[s] of law and legal issues, and we do not consider the correctness of the plaintiff's version of the facts.'"), quoting Atteberry v. Nocona General Hosp., 430 F.3d 245, 251-252 (5th Cir. 2005).

See also
Bilbo v. Thigpen, 647 So. 2d 678 (Miss. 1994), citing Wright & Miller.

30 No discretion
Moore v. Carwell, 168 F.3d 234 (5th Cir. 1999) (under Prison Litigation Reform Act).

A motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim allows no discretion in the usual sense, since the complaint is either good or not good. Mitchell v. E-Z Way Towers, Inc., 269 F.2d 126 (5th Cir. 1959).

Yuba Consol. Gold Fields v. Kilkeary, 206 F.2d 884 (9th Cir. 1953).

Frontline Test Equipment, Inc. v. Greenleaf Software, Inc., 10 F. Supp. 2d 583 (W.D. Va. 1998).

Singer v. Bulk Petroleum Corp., 9 F. Supp. 2d 916 (N.D. Ill. 1998).

If it is clear that no relief could be granted under any set of facts that could be proved consistent with the allegations, a claim must be dismissed, without regard to whether it is based on an outlandish legal theory or on a close but ultimately unavailing one. Township of West Orange v. Whitman, 8 F. Supp. 2d 408 (D.N.J. 1998).

A motion to dismiss invokes a form of legal triage, a paring of viable claims from those doomed by law. Lebron v. Ashford Presbyterian Community Hosp., 995 F. Supp. 241 (D.P.R. 1998).

Gray v. Petoseed Co., Inc., 985 F. Supp. 625 (D.S.C. 1996), aff'd, 129 F.3d 1259 (4th Cir. 1997).

Erie City Retirees Ass'n v. City of Erie, 838 F. Supp. 1048 (W.D. Pa. 1993).

 © 2025 Thomson Reuters. No claim to original U.S. Government Works.

Bender v. CenTrust Mortg. Corp., 833 F. Supp. 1525 (S.D. Fla. 1992).

See also
Environmental Ass'n of St. Thomas and St. John v. Department of Planning and Natural Resources, 44 V.I. 218, 2002 WL 655506 (Terr. Ct. 2002), citing Wright & Miller.

31 Considerable discretion
Pro se litigants held to less stringent pleading requirements than lawyers when the court is determining whether the pleading fails to state a cause of action. Jourdan v. Jabe, 951 F.2d 108 (6th Cir. 1991).

In general the court has broad discretion in ruling on a motion to dismiss, but dismissal should be granted with care to avoid improperly denying the plaintiff the opportunity to have his claim adjudicated on the merits. Beenken v. Chicago & N.W.R. Co., 367 F. Supp. 1337 (N.D. Iowa 1973).

Compare
State v. Watson Pharmaceuticals Inc., 2019 UT App 31, 440 P.3d 727 (Utah Ct. App. 2019) (upholding a trial court's dismissal with prejudice in the face of the plaintiff-State's multiple failures to amend its complaint to state a claim), citing Wright & Miller.

32 Review de novo
Animal Legal Defense Fund, Inc. v. Perdue, 872 F.3d 602, 610 (D.C. Cir. 2017) ("We review de novo the District Court's dismissal for failure to state a claim upon which relief may be granted under Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 12(b)(6).").

"This court reviews de novo a district court's order on a 12(b)(6) motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim." Hunter v. Berkshire Hathaway, Incorporated, 829 F.3d 357, 361 (5th Cir. 2016).

Stevens v. Bank of America, N.A., 587 Fed. Appx. 130, 132 (5th Cir. 2014) ("We review de novo the res judicata effect of a prior judgment and a Rule 12(b)(6) dismissal.") (citing Bass v. Stryker Corp., 669 F.3d 501 (5th Cir.2012); Test Masters Educ. Servs., Inc. v. Singh, 428 F.3d 559, 571 (5th Cir.2005)).

"We review de novo the district court's dismissal of a complaint for failure to state a claim based on statute of limitations grounds." Santana-Castro v. Toledo-Davila, 579 F.3d 109, 113 (1st Cir. 2009).

Compare
Solar Somohano v. Coca-Cola Company, 859 Fed. Appx. 581, 582 (Fed. Cir. 2021) (dismissals pursuant to Rule 12(b)(6) by the Trademark Trial and Appeal Board are reviewed de novo by the Federal Circuit) (citing Sunrise Jewelry Mfg. Corp. v. Fred S.A., 175 F.3d 1322, 1324 (Fed. Cir. 1999)).

But compare

Crosby v. Hariel, 673 Fed. Appx. 397, 400 (5th Cir. 2016) (stating that although the court "review[s] de novo a district court's dismissal of a complaint for failure to state a claim," the court reviews the district court's "decision to grant a motion to dismiss with or without prejudice only for abuse of discretion" (citation and internal quotation marks omitted)).

33 More deferential standard

"'We review de novo a district court's dismissal of [a complaint] for failure to state a claim under Rule 12(b)(6).' Prodanova v. H.C. Wainwright & Co., LLC, 993 F.3d 1097, 1105 (9th Cir. 2021). Questions involving the application of legal principles to established facts are also reviewed de novo. Flores v. City of San Gabriel, 824 F.3d 890, 905 (9th Cir. 2016). However, a district court's determination of likelihood of confusion is reviewed for clear error. Pom Wonderful LLC v. Hubbard, 775 F.3d 1118, 1123 (9th Cir. 2014)." Arizona Board of Regents for and on behalf of Arizona State University v. Doe, 2022 WL 1514649, *1 (9th Cir. 2022).

34 Final judgment

"Ordinarily, appellate jurisdiction is lacking to hear an appeal from an order denying a Rule 12(b)(6) motion to dismiss since such an order is interlocutory in nature." Turi v. Main Street Adoption Services, LLP, 633 F.3d 496, 500-501 (6th Cir. 2011) (abrogated by, Henry Schein, Inc. v. Archer and White Sales, Inc., 139 S. Ct. 524, 202 L. Ed. 2d 480 (2019)), quoting Michigan Bell Telephone Co. v. Climax Telephone Co., 202 F.3d 862, 866 (6th Cir. 2000), as amended on denial of reh'g and reh'g en banc, (Feb. 16, 2000).

The denial of a Rule 12(b)(6) motion is not normally an appealable decision, but a district court's rejection of qualified immunity on a motion to dismiss is a final decision and thus, appealable. Higgenbotham v. Connatser, 420 Fed. Appx. 466 (5th Cir. 2011).

35 Superseded complaints and abandoned claims

"Anand mentions the Rule 12(b)(6) dismissal of his federal claims under ERISA, RICO, the Sherman Act, and the Controlled Substances Act. Anand has forfeited appellate review of his ERISA claim because he did not replead it in his second amended complaint after the court dismissed it without prejudice." Anand v. Independence Blue Cross, 2022 WL 2339476, *3 n.3 (3d Cir. 2022).

"Grayson's challenges to the dismissal of his claims of invasion of privacy, cyberstalking, and fraudulent transfer are not properly before us. '[A]n amended pleading supersedes the former pleading; the original pleading is abandoned by the amendment, and is no longer a part of the pleader's averments against his adversary.' Pintando v. Miami-Dade Housing Agency, 501 F.3d 1241, 1243 (11th Cir. 2007) (quoting Dresdner Bank AG, Dresdner Bank AG in Hamburg v. M/V OLYMPIA VOYAGER, 463 F.3d 1210, 1215 (11th Cir. 2006)). Grayson abandoned his claims of cyberstalking and fraudulent transfer by failing to replead them in his amended complaint. And Grayson abandoned his claim of invasion of privacy by omitting it from his second amended complaint." Grayson v. No Labels, Inc., 2022 WL 12144181, *3 (11th Cir. 2022).

36 Accept as true, light most favorable

Supreme Court

Leatherman v. Tarrant County Narcotics Intelligence and Coordination Unit, 507 U.S. 163, 163, 113 S. Ct. 1160, 1161, 122 L. Ed. 2d 517 (1993).

First Circuit

French v. Bank of New York Mellon, 729 F.3d 17 (1st Cir. 2013).

Garcia-Monagas v. De Arellano, 674 F.3d 45, 47 (1st Cir. 2012).

Sutliffe v. Epping School Dist., 584 F.3d 314 (1st Cir. 2009).

Rivera v. Centro Medico de Turabo, Inc., 575 F.3d 10 (1st Cir. 2009).

Citibank Global Markets, Inc. v. Rodriguez Santana, 573 F.3d 17 (1st Cir. 2009).

U.S. ex rel. Karvelas v. Melrose-Wakefield Hosp., 360 F.3d 220 (1st Cir. 2004).

Rossiter v. Potter, 357 F.3d 26 (1st Cir. 2004).

Vega-Encarnacion v. Babilonia, 344 F.3d 37 (1st Cir. 2003) (since court is obligated to accept facts of nonmoving party as true on motion to dismiss, mere fact that motion is unopposed does not relieve district court of obligation to examine complaint itself to see whether it is formally sufficient).

Lebron-Rios v. U.S. Marshal Service, 341 F.3d 7 (1st Cir. 2003).

Cogan v. Phoenix Life Ins. Co., 310 F.3d 238 (1st Cir. 2002).

Arruda v. Sears, Roebuck & Co., 310 F.3d 13 (1st Cir. 2002).

Petricca Development Ltd. Partnership v. Pioneer Development Co., 214 F.3d 216 (1st Cir. 2000).

Tompkins v. United Healthcare of New England, Inc., 203 F.3d 90 (1st Cir. 2000).

Serpa Corp. v. McWane, Inc., 199 F.3d 6 (1st Cir. 1999).

Clarke v. Kentucky Fried Chicken of California, Inc., 57 F.3d 21 (1st Cir. 1995).

Heno v. F.D.I.C., 996 F.2d 429 (1st Cir. 1993), withdrawn and superseded on reh'g, 20 F.3d 1204 (1st Cir. 1994).

Washington Legal Foundation v. Massachusetts Bar Foundation, 993 F.2d 962 (1st Cir. 1993).

Second Circuit

Teichmann v. New York, 769 F.3d 821, 825 (2d Cir. 2014).

Rinehart v. Akers, 722 F.3d 137 (2d Cir. 2013), cert. granted, judgment vacated, 573 U.S. 956, 134 S. Ct. 2900, 189 L. Ed. 2d 853 (2014).

Anderson News, L.L.C. v. American Media, Inc., 680 F.3d 162, 185 (2d Cir. 2012).

Kitchen v. Phipps Houses Group of Companies, 380 Fed. Appx. 99, 100 (2d Cir. 2010).

Vodopia v. Koninklijke Philips Electronics, N.V., 398 Fed. Appx. 659 (2d Cir. 2010) (abrogated by, Nielsen v. AECOM Technology Corp., 762 F.3d 214 (2d Cir. 2014)).

Zavalidroga v. Cote, 395 Fed. Appx. 737 (2d Cir. 2010).

Spagnola v. Chubb Corp., 574 F.3d 64 (2d Cir. 2009).

Rescuecom Corp. v. Google Inc., 562 F.3d 123 (2d Cir. 2009).

West Virginia Inv. Management Bd. v. Doral Financial Corp., 344 Fed. Appx. 717 (2d Cir. 2009).

Peker v. Steglich, 324 Fed. Appx. 38 (2d Cir. 2009).

Roman v. Donelli, 347 Fed. Appx. 662 (2d Cir. 2009).

Panther Partners Inc. v. Ikanos Communications, Inc., 347 Fed. Appx. 617 (2d Cir. 2009).

Oneida Indian Nation of New York v. City of Sherrill, New York, 337 F.3d 139 (2d Cir. 2003), rev'd and remanded, 544 U.S. 197, 125 S. Ct. 1478, 161 L. Ed. 2d 386 (2005).

Cicio v. Does, 321 F.3d 83 (2d Cir. 2003), cert. granted, judgment vacated, 542 U.S. 933, 124 S. Ct. 2902, 159 L. Ed. 2d 808 (2004).

Taylor v. Vermont Dept. of Educ., 313 F.3d 768 (2d Cir. 2002).

Cantor Fitzgerald Inc. v. Lutnick, 313 F.3d 704 (2d Cir. 2002).

Law Offices of Curtis V. Trinko v. Bell Atlantic Corp., 294 F.3d 307 (2d Cir. 2002), opinion amended and superseded, 305 F.3d 89 (2d Cir. 2002), as amended, (Aug. 14, 2002) and as amended, (Aug. 30, 2002) and rev'd and remanded, 540 U.S. 398, 124 S. Ct. 872, 157 L. Ed. 2d 823 (2004).

Chambers v. Time Warner, Inc., 282 F.3d 147 (2d Cir. 2002).

Primetime 24 Joint Venture v. National Broadcasting, Co., Inc., 219 F.3d 92 (2d Cir. 2000).

Charles W. v. Maul, 214 F.3d 350 (2d Cir. 2000).

Tarshis v. Riese Organization, 211 F.3d 30 (2d Cir. 2000) (abrogated by, Swierkiewicz v. Sorema N. A., 534 U.S. 506, 122 S. Ct. 992, 152 L. Ed. 2d 1 (2002)).

Koehler v. Bank of Bermuda (New York) Ltd., 209 F.3d 130 (2d Cir. 2000), opinion amended, 229 F.3d 424 (2d Cir. 2000).

Boyd v. Nationwide Mut. Ins. Co., 208 F.3d 406 (2d Cir. 2000).

E.E.O.C. v. Staten Island Sav. Bank, 207 F.3d 144 (2d Cir. 2000).

Cruz v. Gomez, 202 F.3d 593 (2d Cir. 2000).

Cruz v. Coach Stores, Inc., 202 F.3d 560 (2d Cir. 2000).

Strom v. Goldman, Sachs & Co., 202 F.3d 138 (2d Cir. 1999).

X-Men Sec., Inc. v. Pataki, 196 F.3d 56 (2d Cir. 1999).

Still v. DeBuono, 101 F.3d 888 (2d Cir. 1996).

Powers v. British Vita, P.L.C., 57 F.3d 176 (2d Cir. 1995).

Villager Pond, Inc. v. Town of Darien, 56 F.3d 375 (2d Cir. 1995).

G.K.A. Beverage Corp. v. Honickman, 55 F.3d 762 (2d Cir. 1995).

Acito v. IMCERA Group, Inc., 47 F.3d 47 (2d Cir. 1995).

Hill v. City of New York, 45 F.3d 653 (2d Cir. 1995).

Annis v. County of Westchester, N.Y., 36 F.3d 251 (2d Cir. 1994).

Rent Stabilization Ass'n of City of New York v. Dinkins, 5 F.3d 591 (2d Cir. 1993).

Kopec v. Coughlin, 922 F.2d 152 (2d Cir. 1991).

Third Circuit

 © 2025 Thomson Reuters. No claim to original U.S. Government Works.

Doe v. Princeton University, 30 F.4th 335, 340 (3d Cir. 2022) ("On a motion to dismiss, a court must 'accept all factual allegations in the complaint as true and view them in the light most favorable to the plaintiff.'").

Bruni v. City of Pittsburgh, 824 F.3d 353, 360 (3d Cir. 2016) ("[O]ur standard of review of a district court's dismissal under Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 12(b)(6) is plenary."), quoting Wright & Miller.

Fleisher v. Standard Ins. Co., 679 F.3d 116 (3d Cir. 2012).

DelRio-Mocci v. Connolly Properties Inc., 672 F.3d 241, 245 (3d Cir. 2012).

Mayer v. Belichick, 605 F.3d 223, 229 (3d Cir. 2010) ("We must accept all factual allegations in the complaint as true, construe the complaint in the light favorable to the plaintiff, and ultimately determine whether plaintiff may be entitled to relief under any reasonable reading of the complaint.").

Snyder v. Baxter Healthcare, Inc., 393 Fed. Appx. 905 (3d Cir. 2010).

Institutional Investors Group v. Avaya, Inc., 564 F.3d 242 (3d Cir. 2009).

Gattis v. Phelps, 344 Fed. Appx. 801 (3d Cir. 2009).

Miles v. Township of Barnegat, 343 Fed. Appx. 841 (3d Cir. 2009).

Beightler v. Office of Essex County Prosecutor, 342 Fed. Appx. 829 (3d Cir. 2009).

Banks v. Court of Common Pleas FJD, 342 Fed. Appx. 818 (3d Cir. 2009).

McSpadden v. Wolfe, 325 Fed. Appx. 134 (3d Cir. 2009).

Guirguis v. Movers Specialty Services, Inc., 346 Fed. Appx. 774 (3d Cir. 2009).

Carpenter v. Ashby, 351 Fed. Appx. 684 (3d Cir. 2009).

General Refractories Co. v. Fireman's Fund Ins. Co., 337 F.3d 297 (3d Cir. 2003).

In re Rockefeller Center Properties, Inc. Securities Litigation, 311 F.3d 198 (3d Cir. 2002).

Lake v. Arnold, 232 F.3d 360 (3d Cir. 2000).

In re Warfarin Sodium Antitrust Litigation, 214 F.3d 395 (3d Cir. 2000).

Oshiver v. Levin, Fishbein, Sedran & Berman, 38 F.3d 1380 (3d Cir. 1994).

Jordan v. Fox, Rothschild, O'Brien & Frankel, 20 F.3d 1250 (3d Cir. 1994).

In re Donald J. Trump Casino Securities Litigation-Taj Mahal Litigation, 7 F.3d 357 (3d Cir. 1993).

Kost v. Kozakiewicz, 1 F.3d 176 (3d Cir. 1993).

Blaw Knox Retirement Income Plan v. White Consolidated Industries, Inc., 998 F.2d 1185 (3d Cir. 1993).

University of Maryland at Baltimore v. Peat, Marwick, Main & Co., 996 F.2d 1534 (3d Cir. 1993).

City of Philadelphia v. Lead Industries Ass'n, Inc., 994 F.2d 112 (3d Cir. 1993).

Holder v. City of Allentown, 987 F.2d 188 (3d Cir. 1993).

Hayes v. Gross, 982 F.2d 104 (3d Cir. 1992).

Zilich v. Lucht, 981 F.2d 694 (3d Cir. 1992).

Colantuno v. Aetna Ins. Co., 980 F.2d 908 (3d Cir. 1992).

Fourth Circuit

Wallace v. Maryland, 585 Fed. Appx. 30 (4th Cir. 2014).

Sons of Confederate Veterans, Virginia Div. v. City of Lexington, Va., 722 F.3d 224, 226 n.2 (4th Cir. 2013).

Robertson v. Sea Pines Real Estate Companies, Inc., 679 F.3d 278 (4th Cir. 2012).

Warren v. Sessoms & Rogers, P.A., 676 F.3d 365, 373 (4th Cir. 2012), as amended, (Feb. 1, 2012) and (abrogated by, Campbell-Ewald Co. v. Gomez, 577 U.S. 153, 136 S. Ct. 663, 193 L. Ed. 2d 571 (2016)).

CGM, LLC v. BellSouth Telecommunications, Inc., 664 F.3d 46, 51 (4th Cir. 2011).

Francis v. Giacomelli, 588 F.3d 186, 192 (4th Cir. 2009).

Monroe v. City of Charlotesville, Va., 579 F.3d 380 (4th Cir. 2009).

Matrix Capital Management Fund, LP v. BearingPoint, Inc., 576 F.3d 172 (4th Cir. 2009).

In re Mutual Funds Investment Litigation, 566 F.3d 111 (4th Cir. 2009), rev'd, 564 U.S. 135, 131 S. Ct. 2296, 180 L. Ed. 2d 166 (2011).

Andrew v. Clark, 561 F.3d 261 (4th Cir. 2009).

Pollard v. Pollard, 325 Fed. Appx. 270 (4th Cir. 2009).

Eastern Shore Markets, Inc. v. J.D. Associates Ltd. Partnership, 213 F.3d 175 (4th Cir. 2000).

Anita's New Mexico Style Mexican Food, Inc. v. Anita's Mexican Foods Corp., 201 F.3d 314 (4th Cir. 2000).

Mayes v. Rapoport, 198 F.3d 457 (4th Cir. 1999).

Richmond, Fredericksburg & Potomac R. Co. v. Forst, 4 F.3d 244 (4th Cir. 1993).

Fifth Circuit

Franklin v. United States, 49 F.4th 429, 435 (5th Cir. 2022) ("We review a district court's ruling on a motion to dismiss de novo, 'accepting all well-pleaded facts as true and viewing those facts in the light most favorable to the plaintiffs.'").

Sinclair v. Petco Animal Supplies Stores, Inc., 581 Fed. Appx. 369, 370 (5th Cir. 2014).

Ioppolo v. Rumana, 581 Fed. Appx. 321, 325 (5th Cir. 2014).

Wiley v. Deutsche Bank Nat. Trust Co., 539 Fed. Appx. 533 (5th Cir. 2013) (per curiam), citing Toy v. Holder, 714 F.3d 881, 883 (5th Cir. 2013).

Atchafalaya Basinkeeper v. Chustz, 682 F.3d 356, 357 (5th Cir. 2012).

Brockman v. Texas Dept. of Criminal Justice, 397 Fed. Appx. 18 (5th Cir. 2010).

Gonzalez v. Kay, 577 F.3d 600 (5th Cir. 2009).

True v. Robles, 571 F.3d 412 (5th Cir. 2009).

Club Retro, L.L.C. v. Hilton, 568 F.3d 181 (5th Cir. 2009).

Lexington Ins. Co. v. S.H.R.M. Catering Services, Inc., 567 F.3d 182 (5th Cir. 2009).

Severance v. Patterson, 566 F.3d 490 (5th Cir. 2009), certified question accepted, (May 15, 2009) and certified question answered, 345 S.W.3d 18 (Tex. 2010), republished at, 2010 WL 8366839 (Tex. 2010), opinion withdrawn and superseded, 370 S.W.3d 705 (Tex. 2012) and withdrawn from bound volume and certified question answered, 370 S.W.3d 705 (Tex. 2012).

Achee Holdings, LLC v. Silver Hill Financial, LLC, 342 Fed. Appx. 943 (5th Cir. 2009).

Dunn v. Prince, 327 Fed. Appx. 452 (5th Cir. 2009).

Quinn v. Roach, 326 Fed. Appx. 280 (5th Cir. 2009).

Puente v. Ridge, 324 Fed. Appx. 423 (5th Cir. 2009).

U.S. ex rel. Riley v. St. Luke's Episcopal Hosp., 355 F.3d 370 (5th Cir. 2004).

Rosborough v. Management & Training Corp., 350 F.3d 459 (5th Cir. 2003).

Whitehead v. Zurich American Ins. Co., 348 F.3d 478 (5th Cir. 2003).

Thompson v. Goetzmann, 337 F.3d 489 (5th Cir. 2003).

U.S. ex rel. Willard v. Humana Health Plan of Texas Inc., 336 F.3d 375 (5th Cir. 2003).

Calhoun v. Hargrove, 312 F.3d 730 (5th Cir. 2002).

Hamilton v. United Healthcare of Louisiana, Inc., 310 F.3d 385 (5th Cir. 2002).

Shipp v. McMahon, 199 F.3d 256 (5th Cir. 2000), vacated and superseded on reh'g, 234 F.3d 907 (5th Cir. 2000) (overruled by, McClendon v. City of Columbia, 305 F.3d 314 (5th Cir. 2002)).

Beanal v. Freeport-McMoran, Inc., 197 F.3d 161 (5th Cir. 1999).

Crowe v. Henry, 43 F.3d 198 (5th Cir. 1995) (appellate court applies same standard as district court).

Kansa Reinsurance Co., Ltd. v. Congressional Mortg. Corp. of Texas, 20 F.3d 1362 (5th Cir. 1994).

Shushany v. Allwaste, Inc., 992 F.2d 517 (5th Cir. 1993).

In re Burzynski, 989 F.2d 733 (5th Cir. 1993).

Fernandez-Montes v. Allied Pilots Ass'n, 987 F.2d 278 (5th Cir. 1993).

Giddings v. Chandler, 979 F.2d 1104 (5th Cir. 1992).

Sixth Circuit

Product Solutions International, Inc. v. Aldez Containers, LLC, 46 F.4th 454, 458 (6th Cir. 2022) ("[W]e construe the complaint in the light most favorable to the plaintiff, draw all reasonable inferences in its favor, and accept all well-pleaded allegations in the complaint as true.").

Laborers' Local 265 Pension Fund v. iShares Trust, 769 F.3d 399, 403 (6th Cir. 2014).

Haviland v. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co., 730 F.3d 563, 579 (6th Cir. 2013) ("[P]laintiffs alleged that they were unaware of the true facts and for purposes of Rule 12(b)(6), we must accept that allegation as true.").

Cataldo v. U.S. Steel Corp., 676 F.3d 542, 547 (6th Cir. 2012).

Segal v. Fifth Third Bank, N.A., 581 F.3d 305 (6th Cir. 2009).

Hensley Mfg. v. ProPride, Inc., 579 F.3d 603 (6th Cir. 2009).

In re Cardizem CD Antitrust Litigation, 332 F.3d 896 (6th Cir. 2003).

Wallin v. Norman, 317 F.3d 558 (6th Cir. 2003).

Schlenk v. Ford Motor Credit Co., 308 F.3d 619 (6th Cir. 2002).

Perry v. McGinnis, 209 F.3d 597 (6th Cir. 2000).

Prince v. Hicks, 198 F.3d 607 (6th Cir. 1999).

Pinney Dock & Transport Co. v. Penn Cent. Corp., 196 F.3d 617 (6th Cir. 1999).

Sistrunk v. City of Strongsville, 99 F.3d 194 (6th Cir. 1996).

Miller v. Currie, 50 F.3d 373 (6th Cir. 1995).

Gazette v. City of Pontiac, 41 F.3d 1061 (6th Cir. 1994).

Jones v. City of Carlisle, Ky., 3 F.3d 945 (6th Cir. 1993).

In re DeLorean Motor Co., 991 F.2d 1236 (6th Cir. 1993).

Mayer v. Mylod, 988 F.2d 635 (6th Cir. 1993).

Mertik v. Blalock, 983 F.2d 1353 (6th Cir. 1993).

Anspec Co., Inc. v. Johnson Controls, Inc., 922 F.2d 1240 (6th Cir. 1991).

G.M. Engineers and Associates, Inc. v. West Bloomfield Tp., 922 F.2d 328 (6th Cir. 1990).

Seventh Circuit

Levy v. West Coast Life Insurance Company, 44 F.4th 621, 626 (7th Cir. 2022) ("We review 'a district court's dismissal under Rule 12(b)(6) de novo, construing the complaint in the light most favorable to the plaintiff, accepting as true all well-pleaded facts. * * *'").

Chicago Bldg. Design, P.C. v. Mongolian House, Inc., 770 F.3d 610, 612 (7th Cir. 2014).

Bogie v. Rosenberg, 705 F.3d 603, 608 (7th Cir. 2013).

Geinosky v. City of Chicago, 675 F.3d 743, 746 (7th Cir. 2012).

Booker-El v. Superintendent, Indiana State Prison, 668 F.3d 896, 899 (7th Cir. 2012).

Sharp Electronics Corp. v. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co., 578 F.3d 505 (7th Cir. 2009).

Justice v. Town of Cicero, 577 F.3d 768 (7th Cir. 2009).

Rujawitz v. Martin, 561 F.3d 685 (7th Cir. 2009).

White v. Monohan, 326 Fed. Appx. 385 (7th Cir. 2009) (pro se plaintiff's complaint construed more liberally with all inferences in his favor).

Flannery v. Recording Industry Ass'n of America, 354 F.3d 632 (7th Cir. 2004).

Schlosser v. Fairbanks Capital Corp., 323 F.3d 534 (7th Cir. 2003).

Albany Bank & Trust Co. v. Exxon Mobil Corp., 310 F.3d 969 (7th Cir. 2002).

Looper Maintenance Service Inc. v. City of Indianapolis, 197 F.3d 908 (7th Cir. 1999).

Klug v. Chicago School Reform Bd. of Trustees, 197 F.3d 853 (7th Cir. 1999).

Ledford v. Sullivan, 105 F.3d 354 (7th Cir. 1997).

Chaney v. Suburban Bus Div. of Regional Transp. Authority, 52 F.3d 623 (7th Cir. 1995).

Murphy v. Walker, 51 F.3d 714 (7th Cir. 1995).

Propst v. Bitzer, 39 F.3d 148 (7th Cir. 1994).

Bernard v. United Tp. High School Dist. No. 30, 5 F.3d 1090 (7th Cir. 1993).

Cushing v. City of Chicago, 3 F.3d 1156 (7th Cir. 1993).

Arazie v. Mullane, 2 F.3d 1456 (7th Cir. 1993).

Badger Pharmacal, Inc. v. Colgate-Palmolive Co., 1 F.3d 621 (7th Cir. 1993).

Northwest Tissue Center v. Shalala, 1 F.3d 522 (7th Cir. 1993).

Bowman v. City of Franklin, 980 F.2d 1104 (7th Cir. 1992).

Eighth Circuit

Smithrud v. City of St. Paul, 746 F.3d 391, 397 (8th Cir. 2014).

Freitas v. Wells Fargo Home Mortg., Inc., 703 F.3d 436, 438 (8th Cir. 2013).

E-Shops Corp. v. U.S. Bank Nat. Ass'n, 678 F.3d 659, 662 (8th Cir. 2012).

Shipp v. GfK NOP, LLC, 325 Fed. Appx. 481 (8th Cir. 2009).

Holden Farms, Inc. v. Hog Slat, Inc., 347 F.3d 1055 (8th Cir. 2003).

Coleman v. Watt, 40 F.3d 255 (8th Cir. 1994).

Sharps v. U.S. Forest Service, 28 F.3d 851 (8th Cir. 1994) (disapproved of by, Inland Empire Public Lands Council v. U.S. Forest Service, 88 F.3d 754 (9th Cir. 1996)).

Kohl v. Casson, 5 F.3d 1141 (8th Cir. 1993).

Ninth Circuit

Arizona Students' Association v. Arizona Board of Regents, 824 F.3d 858, 864 (9th Cir. 2016).

Doe I v. Nestle USA, Inc., 766 F.3d 1013, 1018 (9th Cir. 2014).

"To survive a motion to dismiss, a complaint must contain sufficient factual matter, accepted as true, to state a claim to relief that is plausible on its face. A claim has facial plausibility when the plaintiff pleads factual content that allows the court to draw the reasonable inference that the defendant is liable for the misconduct alleged." Sylvia Landfield Trust v. City of Los Angeles, 729 F.3d 1189, 1191 (9th Cir. 2013), quoting Ashcroft v. Iqbal, 556 U.S. 662, 678, 129 S. Ct. 1937, 1949, 173 L. Ed. 2d 868 (2009).

Jewel v. National Sec. Agency, 673 F.3d 902, 907 (9th Cir. 2011).

William O. Gilley Enterprises, Inc. v. Atlantic Richfield Co., 588 F.3d 659 (9th Cir. 2009).

al-Kidd v. Ashcroft, 580 F.3d 949 (9th Cir. 2009), rev'd and remanded, 563 U.S. 731, 131 S. Ct. 2074, 179 L. Ed. 2d 1149 (2011).

Movsesian v. Victoria Versicherung AG, 578 F.3d 1052 (9th Cir. 2009), reh'g granted, withdrawn, 629 F.3d 901 (9th Cir. 2010), on reh'g en banc, 670 F.3d 1067 (9th Cir. 2012).

North County Community Alliance, Inc. v. Salazar, 573 F.3d 738 (9th Cir. 2009).

Doe I v. Wal-Mart Stores, Inc., 572 F.3d 677 (9th Cir. 2009).

Cousins v. Lockyer, 568 F.3d 1063 (9th Cir. 2009).

Northern Highlands I, II, LLC v. Comerica Bank, 328 Fed. Appx. 358 (9th Cir. 2009).

Karam v. City of Burbank, 352 F.3d 1188 (9th Cir. 2003).

Shaver v. Operating Engineers Local 428 Pension Trust Fund, 332 F.3d 1198 (9th Cir. 2003).

Morales v. City of Los Angeles, 214 F.3d 1151 (9th Cir. 2000).

Loyd v. Paine Webber, Inc., 208 F.3d 755 (9th Cir. 2000).

Johnson v. State of Cal., 207 F.3d 650 (9th Cir. 2000).

LSO, Ltd. v. Stroh, 205 F.3d 1146 (9th Cir. 2000).

Estate of Brooks ex rel. Brooks v. U.S., 197 F.3d 1245 (9th Cir. 1999), as amended, (Dec. 9, 1999).

WMX Technologies, Inc. v. Miller, 197 F.3d 367 (9th Cir. 1999).

Hughes Salaried Retirees Action Committee v. Administrator of Hughes Non-Bargaining Retirement Plan, 39 F.3d 1002 (9th Cir. 1994), as amended, (Feb. 13, 1995) and vacated on reh'g, 72 F.3d 686 (9th Cir. 1995).

Keams v. Tempe Technical Institute, Inc., 39 F.3d 222 (9th Cir. 1994).

American Intern. Enterprises, Inc. v. F.D.I.C., 3 F.3d 1263 (9th Cir. 1993).

Pack v. U.S., 992 F.2d 955 (9th Cir. 1993).

Westinghouse Elec. Corp. v. Newman & Holtzinger, P.C., 992 F.2d 932 (9th Cir. 1993).

Tenth Circuit

Davis v. Bear, 537 Fed. Appx. 785 (10th Cir. 2013), citing Commonwealth Property Advocates, LLC v. Mortgage Electronic Registration Systems, Inc., 680 F.3d 1194, 1201 (10th Cir. 2011).

Rosenfield v. HSBC Bank, USA, 681 F.3d 1172, 1178 (10th Cir. 2012).

Bixler v. Foster, 596 F.3d 751, 756 (10th Cir. 2010).

Mecca v. U.S., 389 Fed. Appx. 775, 778 (10th Cir. 2010).

Edge v. Payne, 342 Fed. Appx. 395 (10th Cir. 2009).

Larsen v. Johnston, 327 Fed. Appx. 53 (10th Cir. 2009).

Reed v. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co., 324 Fed. Appx. 717 (10th Cir. 2009).

Pirraglia v. Novell, Inc., 339 F.3d 1182 (10th Cir. 2003).

Clark v. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co., 319 F.3d 1234 (10th Cir. 2003).

County of Santa Fe, N.M. v. Public Service Co. of New Mexico, 311 F.3d 1031 (10th Cir. 2002).

MacArthur v. San Juan County, 309 F.3d 1216 (10th Cir. 2002).

Gonzales v. City of Castle Rock, 307 F.3d 1258 (10th Cir. 2002), on reh'g en banc, 366 F.3d 1093 (10th Cir. 2004), rev'd, 545 U.S. 748, 125 S. Ct. 2796, 162 L. Ed. 2d 658 (2005).

Janke v. Price, 43 F.3d 1390 (10th Cir. 1994).

Housley v. Dodson, 41 F.3d 597 (10th Cir. 1994).

Industrial Constructors Corp. v. U.S. Bureau of Reclamation, 15 F.3d 963 (10th Cir. 1994).

Swoboda v. Dubach, 992 F.2d 286 (10th Cir. 1993), quoting Miller v. Glanz, 948 F.2d 1562, 1565 (10th Cir. 1991).

Lafoy v. HMO Colorado, 988 F.2d 97 (10th Cir. 1993).

Monument Builders of Greater Kansas City, Inc. v. American Cemetery Assn. of Kansas, 891 F.2d 1473 (10th Cir. 1989).

Eleventh Circuit

Holland v. Carnival Corporation, 50 F.4th 1088 (11th Cir. 2022) ("Because the procedural posture of this case involves a Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 12(b)(6) motion, we must accept the allegations of plaintiff's complaint as true and construe them in the light most favorable to the plaintiff.").

Piedmont Office Realty Trust, Inc. v. XL Speciality Ins. Co., 769 F.3d 1291, 1293 (11th Cir. 2014), certified question answered, 297 Ga. 38, 771 S.E.2d 864 (2015).

Dyer v. Wal-Mart Stores, Inc., 535 Fed. Appx. 839 (11th Cir. 2013).

Butler v. Sheriff of Palm Beach County, 685 F.3d 1261, 1265 (11th Cir. 2012).

Virgilio v. Ryland Group, Inc., 680 F.3d 1329, 1334 (11th Cir. 2012).

Lanfear v. Home Depot, Inc., 679 F.3d 1267, 1275 (11th Cir. 2012).

Speaker v. U.S. Dept. of Health and Human Services Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, 623 F.3d 1371, 1379 (11th Cir. 2010).

Azar v. National City Bank, 382 Fed. Appx. 880, 884 (11th Cir. 2010).

Sinaltrainal v. Coca-Cola Co., 578 F.3d 1252 (11th Cir. 2009) (abrogated by, Mohamad v. Palestinian Authority, 566 U.S. 449, 132 S. Ct. 1702, 182 L. Ed. 2d 720 (2012)).

Redland Co., Inc. v. Bank of America Corp., 568 F.3d 1232 (11th Cir. 2009).

Peart v. Shippie, 345 Fed. Appx. 384 (11th Cir. 2009).

Novoneuron Inc. v. Addiction Research Institute, Inc., 326 Fed. Appx. 505 (11th Cir. 2009).

Bell v. Florida Highway Patrol, 325 Fed. Appx. 758 (11th Cir. 2009).

Serpentfoot v. Rome City Com'n, 322 Fed. Appx. 801 (11th Cir. 2009).

O'Halloran v. First Union Nat. Bank of Florida, 350 F.3d 1197 (11th Cir. 2003).

Chappell v. Rich, 340 F.3d 1279 (11th Cir. 2003).

Flint v. ABB, Inc., 337 F.3d 1326 (11th Cir. 2003).

Hoffman-Pugh v. Ramsey, 312 F.3d 1222 (11th Cir. 2002).

Spain v. Brown & Williamson Tobacco Corp., 230 F.3d 1300 (11th Cir. 2000), certified question answered, 872 So. 2d 101 (Ala. 2003).

Grossman v. Nationsbank, N.A., 225 F.3d 1228 (11th Cir. 2000).

Duke v. Cleland, 5 F.3d 1399 (11th Cir. 1993).

Peterson v. Atlanta Housing Authority, 998 F.2d 904 (11th Cir. 1993).

Marshall County Bd. of Educ. v. Marshall County Gas Dist., 992 F.2d 1171 (11th Cir. 1993).

Fortner v. Thomas, 983 F.2d 1024 (11th Cir. 1993).

Gonzalez v. McNary, 980 F.2d 1418 (11th Cir. 1993).

D.C. Circuit

DuBerry v. District of Columbia, 824 F.3d 1046, 1051 (D.C. Cir. 2016).

Howard R.L. Cook & Tommy Shaw Foundation ex rel. Black Employees of Library of Congress, Inc. v. Billington, 737 F.3d 767 (D.C. Cir. 2013).

Kingman Park Civic Ass'n v. Williams, 348 F.3d 1033, 358 (D.C. Cir. 2003).

Holy Land Foundation for Relief and Development v. Ashcroft, 333 F.3d 156, 357 (D.C. Cir. 2003).

Johnson v. Executive Office for U.S. Attorneys, 310 F.3d 771, 354 (D.C. Cir. 2002).

Kowal v. MCI Communications Corp., 16 F.3d 1271, 305 (D.C. Cir. 1994).

Moore v. Agency for Intern. Development, 994 F.2d 874, 301 (D.C. Cir. 1993).

Partovi v. Matuszewski, 647 F. Supp. 2d 13 (D.D.C. 2009), aff'd, 2010 WL 3521597 (D.C. Cir. 2010).

Federal Circuit

K-Tech Telecommunications, Inc. v. Time Warner Cable, Inc., 714 F.3d 1277, 1282 (Fed. Cir. 2013), citing Gompper v. VISX, Inc., 298 F.3d 893, 895 (9th Cir. 2002).

Laguna Hermosa Corp. v. U.S., 671 F.3d 1284, 1287 (Fed. Cir. 2012).

Polymer Industrial Products Co. v. Bridgestone/Firestone, Inc., 347 F.3d 935 (Fed. Cir. 2003) (rehearing en banc denied).

Advanced Cardiovascular Systems, Inc. v. Scimed Life Systems, Inc., 988 F.2d 1157 (Fed. Cir. 1993).

Compare

Lormand v. US Unwired, Inc., 565 F.3d 228, 239 (5th Cir. 2009) ("Usually, under Rule 12(b)(6), we must draw all reasonable inferences in the plaintiff's favor. However, for scienter only, as required by the PSLRA, 'a court must take into account plausible inferences opposing as well as supporting a strong inference of scienter.'"), quoting Indiana Elec. Workers' Pension Trust Fund IBEW v. Shaw Group, Inc., 537 F.3d 527, 533 (5th Cir. 2008).

37 Conjure up

Williams v. Hall, 2022 WL 2966395, *2 (6th Cir. 2022) ("[W]e may not 'conjure up unpleaded facts to support conclusory allegations.'").

Daunt v. Benson, 999 F.3d 299, 309 (6th Cir. 2021) ("At th[e pleading] stage, it is the factual allegations in Plaintiffs' complaint that we must consider—it is not for us to conjure up facts that Plaintiffs declined to plead and then to draw inferences therefrom.").

Kenney v. AG Equipment Co., 462 Fed. Appx. 841, 844 (10th Cir. 2012), citing Wright & Miller.

Modelist v. Miller, 445 Fed. Appx. 737 (5th Cir. 2011).

Gregory v. Dillard's, Inc., 565 F.3d 464 (8th Cir. 2009).

Fleet Credit Corp. v. Sion, 893 F.2d 441 (1st Cir. 1990).

Moody-Williams v. LipoScience, 953 F. Supp. 2d 677, 688 (E.D. N.C. 2013).

Schreiber v. Dunabin, 938 F. Supp. 2d 587, 594 (E.D. Va. 2013).

Aguiar-Serrano v. Puerto Rico Highways and Transp. Authority, 916 F. Supp. 2d 223, 230 (D.P.R. 2013).

38 Not accept arguments

Askins v. Doe No. 1, 727 F.3d 248, 252 (2d Cir. 2013).

O'Connell v. Marrero-Recio, 724 F.3d 117, 126 (1st Cir. 2013).

Estate of Barney v. PNC Bank, Nat. Ass'n, 714 F.3d 920, 925 (6th Cir. 2013) ("In general, we will not review arguments or issues that a party raises for the first time on appeal.").

Raj v. Louisiana State University, 714 F.3d 322, 330 (5th Cir. 2013).

Ecological Rights Foundation v. Pacific Gas and Elec. Co., 713 F.3d 502, 511 (9th Cir. 2013).

Alam v. Miller Brewing Co., 709 F.3d 662, 669 (7th Cir. 2013) ("As [Defendants] point out, however, [Plaintiff] raises this argument for the first time on appeal, which precludes us from considering it.").

Alioto v. Town of Lisbon, 651 F.3d 715 (7th Cir. 2011) (argument waived below may not be raised on appeal).

U.S., ex rel. Pilecki-Simko v. Chubb Institute, 443 Fed. Appx. 754 (3d Cir. 2011) (arguments not raised at district court level are waived for appeal when appellant can provide no explanation for failure to raise them below).

Zurawski v. Southeastern Pennsylvania Transp. Authority, 441 Fed. Appx. 133 (3d Cir. 2011) (absent compelling circumstances, court will not consider arguments raised for first time on appeal).

The Constitution Party Of Pennsylvania v. Cortes, 433 Fed. Appx. 89 (3d Cir. 2011).

Homeless Patrol v. Joseph Volpe Family, 425 Fed. Appx. 60 (2d Cir. 2011) (court will not consider arguments raised for first time on appeal unless necessary to remedy obvious injustice).

Stokes v. Lusker, 425 Fed. Appx. 18 (2d Cir. 2011).

Montoya v. FedEx Ground Package System, Inc., 614 F.3d 145, 148-149 (5th Cir. 2010).

The court followed " 'the general rule * * * that a federal appellate court does not consider an issue not passed on below.'" Mohamed v. Jeppesen Dataplan, Inc., 579 F.3d 943, 962 (9th Cir. 2009), on reh'g en banc, 614 F.3d 1070 (9th Cir.

2010), quoting Singleton v. Wulff, 428 U.S. 106, 120, 96 S. Ct. 2868, 49 L. Ed. 2d 826 (1976).

Movsesian v. Victoria Versicherung AG, 578 F.3d 1052 (9th Cir. 2009), reh'g granted, withdrawn, 629 F.3d 901 (9th Cir. 2010), on reh'g en banc, 670 F.3d 1067 (9th Cir. 2012).

Peart v. Shippie, 345 Fed. Appx. 384 (11th Cir. 2009).

The appellate court can affirm the district court's decision on any grounds that was raised below. Puente v. Ridge, 324 Fed. Appx. 423 (5th Cir. 2009).

Karpel v. Inova Health System Services, 134 F.3d 1222 (4th Cir. 1998) (racial harassment claim).

Dorothy J. v. Little Rock School Dist., 7 F.3d 729 (8th Cir. 1993).

Compare
Brooks v. Ross, 578 F.3d 574 (7th Cir. 2009).

But compare
"This Court may affirm on any basis evident from the record." Collins v. West Hartford Police Dept., 324 Fed. Appx. 137, 138 (2d Cir. 2009).

39 Seventh Circuit
Wilson v. Career Educ. Corp., 729 F.3d 665, 679 n.1 (7th Cir. 2013), citing Wigod v. Wells Fargo Bank, N.A., 673 F.3d 547, 555 (7th Cir. 2012).

Geinosky v. City of Chicago, 675 F.3d 743, 745 n.1 (7th Cir. 2012) ("A party appealing a Rule 12(b)(6) dismissal may elaborate on his factual allegations so long as the new elaborations are consistent with the pleadings.").

Wigod v. Wells Fargo Bank, N.A., 673 F.3d 547, 555 (7th Cir. 2012) ("A party who appeals from a Rule 12(b)(6) dismissal may elaborate on her allegations so long as the elaborations are consistent with the pleading.").

Veazey v. Communications & Cable of Chicago, Inc., 194 F.3d 850 (7th Cir. 1999) (court will consider new factual allegations raised for first time on appeal provided they are consistent with complaint).

A plaintiff is not held to the factual allegations of his complaint when he is faced with a motion to dismiss. Smith v. Boyle, 144 F.3d 1060 (7th Cir. 1998).

An appellate court will allow a plaintiff to make additional factual allegations for the first time on appeal, but it will not entertain new issues. Kyle v. Morton High School, 144 F.3d 448 (7th Cir. 1998).

 © 2025 Thomson Reuters. No claim to original U.S. Government Works.

Sanjuan v. American Bd. of Psychiatry and Neurology, Inc., 40 F.3d 247 (7th Cir. 1994), as amended on denial of reh'g, (Jan. 11, 1995).

When reviewing a Rule 12(b)(6) motion, an appellate court will consider factual allegations raised on appeal for the first time as long as they are consistent with the complaint. Highsmith v. Chrysler Credit Corp., 18 F.3d 434 (7th Cir. 1994).

American Inter-Fidelity Exchange v. American Re-Insurance Co., 17 F.3d 1018 (7th Cir. 1994).

Harrell v. U.S., 13 F.3d 232 (7th Cir. 1993).

Hrubec v. National R.R. Passenger Corp., 981 F.2d 962 (7th Cir. 1992) (plaintiff can add essential facts in brief on appeal).

In order to give a plaintiff the benefit of a broad standard for surviving a Rule 12(b)(6) challenge, the Seventh Circuit will permit a plaintiff to present an unsubstantiated version of the events for the first time on appeal as long as it is consistent with the complaint. Dawson v. General Motors Corp., 977 F.2d 369 (7th Cir. 1992).

Early v. Bankers Life and Cas. Co., 959 F.2d 75 (7th Cir. 1992).

Orthmann v. Apple River Campground, Inc., 757 F.2d 909 (7th Cir. 1985).

Newman v. Gagan LLC, 939 F. Supp. 2d 883, 892 (N.D. Ind. 2013), citing Travel All Over the World, Inc. v. Kingdom of Saudi Arabia, 73 F.3d 1423, 1428 (7th Cir. 1996).

The plaintiff can raise an unsubstantiated version of facts that was not included in the complaint in defending against a Rule 12(b)(6) motion. Travis v. Boulevard Bank N.A., 880 F. Supp. 1226 (N.D. Ill. 1995).

E.E.O.C. v. Park Ridge Public Library, 856 F. Supp. 477 (N.D. Ill. 1994).

See also
Hensley Mfg. v. ProPride, Inc., 579 F.3d 603 (6th Cir. 2009) (appellate court can affirm on any grounds, even those not raised by district court).

But see
Alam v. Miller Brewing Co., 709 F.3d 662, 669 (7th Cir. 2013) ("As [Defendants] point out, however, [Plaintiff] raises this argument for the first time on appeal, which precludes us from considering it.").

40 Rule 8 standard
See § 1216.

41 Heightened pleading requirements

In re Financial Oversight and Management Board for Puerto Rico, 54 F.4th 42 (1st Cir. 2022) (applying particularity requirements of Rule 9(b) to consideration of whether complaint could withstand motion to discuss under Rule 12(b)(6)).

United States ex rel. Nicholson v. MedCom Carolinas, Inc., 42 F.4th 185, 194 (4th Cir. 2022) ("Normally when considering Rule 12(b)(6) motions to dismiss, we look to our familiar plausibility standard, but because False Claims Act claims are fraud claims, a higher standard applies: Fraud-based claims must be pleaded with particularity.") (citations omitted).

See §§ 1296 to 1301 for a discussion of the pleading standards under Rule 9(b).

42 Twombly Case
550 U.S. 544 (2007).

43 Quotation
550 U.S. 544, 570 (2007) ("[Rule 8(a)] do[es] not require heightened fact pleading of specifics, but only enough facts to state a claim to relief that is plausible on its face.").

See also
Ashcroft v. Iqbal, 556 U.S. 662, 678, 129 S. Ct. 1937, 1949, 173 L. Ed. 2d 868 (2009) ("[T]he pleading standard Rule 8 announces does not require 'detailed factual allegations,' but it demands more than an unadorned, the-defendant-unlawfully-harmed-me accusation. * * *. To survive a motion to dismiss, a complaint must contain sufficient factual matter, accepted as true, to 'state a claim to relief that is plausible on its face.'").

44 Universal application
"Our decision in Twombly expounded the pleading standard for 'all civil actions.'" Ashcroft v. Iqbal, 556 U.S. 662, 129 S. Ct. 1937, 1953, 173 L. Ed. 2d 868 (2009).

Center for Bio-Ethical Reform, Inc. v. Napolitano, 648 F.3d 365, 369 (6th Cir. 2011).

Henderson v. JP Morgan Chase Bank, N.A., 436 Fed. Appx. 935 (11th Cir. 2011).

Kivisto v. Miller, Canfield, Paddock and Stone, PLC, 413 Fed. Appx. 136, 138 (11th Cir. 2011).

45 Conley case
355 U.S. 41, 78 S. Ct. 99, 2 L. Ed. 2d 80 (1957). The Conley case is discussed in greater detail in § 1216.

46 Quotation
355 U.S. at 45-46 (Black, J.).

 © 2025 Thomson Reuters. No claim to original U.S. Government Works.

47 Viewed with disfavor

A motion to dismiss under Rule 12(b)(6) is disfavored and rarely granted. Nuchols v. Berrong, 141 Fed. Appx. 451 (6th Cir. 2005).

"Dismissal of a claim on the basis of barebone pleadings is a precarious disposition with a high mortality rate." International Erectors, Inc. v. Wilhoit Steel Erectors and Rental Service, 400 F.2d 465, 471 (5th Cir. 1968).

"This is another case proving that final disposition of a civil action on the basis of bare bones pleadings is a tortuous thing. How a standard so simply expressed, so often repeated, is apparently so often overlooked without ever so much as a deferential mention of it is hard to understand." Arthur H. Richland Co. v. Harper, 302 F.2d 324, 325 (5th Cir. 1962).

Peacock v. AARP, Inc., 181 F. Supp. 3d 430, 433 (S.D. Tex. 2016) ("A motion to dismiss under Rule 12(b)(6) of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure is viewed with disfavor and is rarely granted.").

Coleman v. Bank of New York Mellon, 969 F. Supp. 2d 736 (N.D. Tex. 2013) ("Motions to dismiss under Rule 12(b)(6) are disfavored and rarely granted."), citing Sosa v. Coleman, 646 F.2d 991, 993 (5th Cir. 1981).

Desperado Motor Racing & Motorcycles, Inc. v. Robinson, 2010 WL 2757523, *1 (S.D. Tex. 2010) ("Traditionally, courts hold that a motion to dismiss under Rule 12(b)(6) of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure for failure to state a claim is viewed with disfavor and is rarely granted.").

"As a result, '[a] motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim is viewed with disfavor and is rarely granted.'" City of Clinton, Ark. v. Pilgrim's Pride Corp., 653 F. Supp. 2d 669, 671 (N.D. Tex. 2009), aff'd, 632 F.3d 148 (5th Cir. 2010).

"Granting a motion to dismiss is a harsh remedy which must be exercised with caution to protect the liberal rules of pleading and the interests of justice. Thus, the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure erect a powerful presumption against rejecting pleadings for failure to state a claim." Effkay Enterprises v. J.H. Cleaners, Inc., 2008 WL 2357698 (D. Colo. 2008) (internal citations omitted) (Babcock, J.), citing Cayman Exploration Corp. v. United Gas Pipe Line Co., 873 F.2d 1357, 1359 (10th Cir. 1989).

Syncsort Inc. v. Innovative Routines Intern., Inc., 2005 WL 1076043 (D.N.J. 2005) (Rule 12(b)(6) motions should be granted sparingly in antitrust cases), citing Wright & Miller.

Belen Consol. Schools v. Otten, 259 F. Supp. 2d 1203 (D.N.M. 2003) (motion to dismiss is "harsh remedy which must be cautiously studied, not only to effectuate the spirit of the liberal rules of pleading but also to protect the interests of justice"), quoting Cayman Exploration Corp. v. United Gas Pipe Line Co., 873 F.2d 1357 (10th Cir. 1989).

A Rule 12(b)(6) motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim is disfavored, and may be granted only in extraordinary circumstances. Gallardo v. DiCarlo, 203 F. Supp. 2d 1160 (C.D. Cal. 2002).

City of Merced v. Fields, 997 F. Supp. 1326 (E.D. Cal. 1998) (granted only in extraordinary cases).

When a motion to dismiss is made prior to any discovery or the filing of an answer, the court is loath to dismiss the complaint. Proctor v. Vadlamudi, 992 F. Supp. 156 (N.D. N.Y. 1998).

Casaburro v. Giuliani, 986 F. Supp. 176 (S.D. N.Y. 1997) (civil rights violations).

Spurlock v. NYNEX, 949 F. Supp. 1022 (W.D. N.Y. 1996) (proper only in extraordinary cases).

Branch v. F.D.I.C., 825 F. Supp. 384 (D. Mass. 1993) ("[C]ourts should generally be reluctant to grant a motion to dismiss when the claim in question asserts a novel theory of recovery.").

Motions to dismiss generally are viewed with disfavor and rarely granted; they may be granted only in the clearest of cases and must be denied when additional facts obviously are required before an ultimate judgment may be formed. Wrenn v. State of Kan., 561 F. Supp. 1216 (D. Kan. 1983).

See also

Judge Shedd noted that the leading commentators have recognized that a federal court may not use a stricter pleading standard on a motion to dismiss a disfavored action. Hatfill v. New York Times Co., 416 F.3d 320 (4th Cir. 2005), quoting Wright & Miller.

" 'Sua sponte dismissals are strong medicine, and should be dispensed sparingly. * * * If it is crystal clear that the plaintiff cannot prevail and that amending the complaint would be futile, then a sua sponte dismissal may stand.' " Sua sponte dismissals are erroneous unless the parties have been afforded notice and an opportunity to amend the complaint or otherwise respond. Chute v. Walker, 281 F.3d 314, 319 (1st Cir. 2002) (Lynch, J.) (quoting Gonzalez-Gonzalez v. U.S., 257 F.3d 31, 33-37 (1st Cir. 2001)).

Rule 12(b)(6) dismissals are particularly disfavored in fact-intensive antitrust cases. Covad Communications Co. v. BellSouth Corp., 299 F.3d 1272 (11th Cir. 2002), cert. granted, judgment vacated, 540 U.S. 1147, 124 S. Ct. 1143, 157 L. Ed. 2d 1040 (2004).

Pena v. U.S., 157 F.3d 984 (5th Cir. 1998) (dismissals of pro se complaints for failure to state claim are disfavored and court should grant pro se party every reasonable opportunity to amend).

Shetiwy v. Midland Credit Management, 980 F. Supp. 2d 461 (S.D. N.Y. 2013) (dismissal of pro-se complaints disfavored).

In the securities context, Rule 12(b)(6) dismissals are difficult to obtain because the cause of action deals primarily with fact-specific inquiries such as materiality. Schwartz v. Celestial Seasonings, Inc., 178 F.R.D. 545 (D. Colo. 1998).

The plaintiff's burden in resisting a motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim is a relatively light one. Williams v. Wheeling Steel Corp., 266 F. Supp. 651 (N.D. W. Va. 1967).

Compare

Brownmark Films, LLC v. Comedy Partners, 682 F.3d 687, 690 (7th Cir. 2012) ("[C]ourts should usually refrain from granting Rule 12(b)(6) motions on affirmative defenses.").

Knight v. American Guard & Alert, Inc., 714 P.2d 788, 791 (Alaska 1986), quoting Wright & Miller.

Fogarty v. State, 5 Haw. App. 616, 705 P.2d 72, 77 (1985), citing Wright & Miller.

Giuliani v. Chuck, 1 Haw. App. 379, 620 P.2d 733, 737 (1980), citing Wright & Miller.

Dobbs v. Guenther, 846 S.W.2d 270 (Tenn. Ct. App. 1992), citing Wright & Miller.

Association of Haystack Property Owners, Inc. v. Sprague, 145 Vt. 443, 494 A.2d 122, 125 (1985), citing Wright & Miller.

But see

A motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim can serve a useful purpose by disposing of the legal issues with a minimum of time and expense to the interested parties. Hiland Dairy, Inc. v. Kroger Co., 402 F.2d 968 (8th Cir. 1968).

This principle is contrary to the very purpose of Rule 12(b)(6), conserving public and private resources. "[I]f the standard for a Rule 12(b)(6) motion is met, 'a claim must be dismissed, without regard to whether it is based on an outlandish theory or on a close but ultimately unavailing one.' " Gray v. Petoseed Co., Inc., 985 F. Supp. 625 (D.S.C. 1996), aff'd, 129 F.3d 1259 (4th Cir. 1997), quoting Neitzke v. Williams, 490 U.S. 319, 327, 109 S. Ct. 1827, 1832, 104 L. Ed. 2d 338 (1989).

48 Quotation
Bell Atlantic Corp. v. Twombly, 550 U.S. 544, 563, 127 S. Ct. 1955, 167 L. Ed. 2d 929 (2007).

49 Quotation
550 U.S. 544, 563 (2007).

50 Twombly standard
550 U.S. 544, 555 (2007), citing Wright & Miller.

"* * * Twombly and Iqbal make clear that a claim is not plausible when the 'complaint pleads facts that are "merely consistent with" a defendant's liability.'" Manning v. Boston Medical Center Corp., 725 F.3d 34 (1st Cir. 2013) (Stahl, J., concurring in part and dissenting in part) (quoting Ashcroft v. Iqbal, 556 U.S. 662, 678, 129 S. Ct. 1937, 1949, 173 L. Ed. 2d 868 (2009)).

Walters v. McMahen, 684 F.3d 435, 439 (4th Cir. 2012) ("As this Court has noted, those decisions [Twombly and Iqbal] require that complaints in civil actions be alleged with greater specificity than previously was required.") (citing Robertson v. Sea Pines Real Estate Companies, Inc., 679 F.3d 278, 288 (4th Cir. 2012)).

51 Conclusory statements
Ashcroft v. Iqbal, 556 U.S. 662, 686, 129 S. Ct. 1937, 173 L. Ed. 2d 868 (2009) ("[T]he Federal Rules do not require courts to credit a complaint's conclusory statements without reference to its factual context.").

Giammatteo v. Newton, 452 Fed. Appx. 24, 29 (2d Cir. 2011) ("Notwithstanding conclusory labels and naked assertions that defendants violated her constitutional rights, Giammatteo does not allege facts that, taken as true, would permit the court to draw the reasonable inference that defendants deprived her of any federally-protected right.").

52 Common sense and judicial experience
Ashcroft v. Iqbal, 556 U.S. 662, 679, 129 S. Ct. 1937, 173 L. Ed. 2d 868 (2009) ("[D]etermining whether a complaint states a plausible claim is context-specific, requiring the reviewing court to draw on its experience and common sense.")

Fabian v. Fulmer Helmets, Inc., 628 F.3d 278, 281 (6th Cir. 2010) (common sense helps determine which inferences reasonably may be drawn).

" 'Determining whether a complaint states a plausible claim for relief will * * * be a context-specific task that requires the reviewing court to draw on its judicial experience and common sense.'", South Cherry Street, LLC v. Hennessee Group LLC, 573 F.3d 98, 110 (2d Cir. 2009).

"Determining whether a complaint states a plausible claim for relief will, as the Court of Appeals observed, be a context-specific task that requires the reviewing court to draw on its judicial experience and common sense." Howard v. City of Girard, Ohio, 346 Fed. Appx. 49 (6th Cir. 2009).

 © 2025 Thomson Reuters. No claim to original U.S. Government Works.

See generally
Miller, From Conley to Twombly to Iqbal: A Double Play on the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, 60 Duke L.J. 1 (2010).

Spencer, Understanding Pleading Doctrine, 108 Mich. L. Rev. 1 (2009).

53 Iqbal reiterated
Ashcroft v. Iqbal, 556 U.S. 662, 678, 129 S. Ct. 1937, 173 L. Ed. 2d 868 (2009) (quoting Bell Atlantic Corp. v. Twombly, 550 U.S. 544, 557, 127 S. Ct. 1955, 167 L. Ed. 2d 929 (2007)).

See also
Lavalais v. Village of Melrose Park, 734 F.3d 629, 632-633 (7th Cir. 2013), citing Alam v. Miller Brewing Co., 709 F.3d 662, 666 (7th Cir. 2013).

"To render their explanation plausible, plaintiffs must do more than allege facts that are merely consistent with both their explanation and defendants' competing explanation." In re Century Aluminum Co. Securities Litigation, 729 F.3d 1104, 1105 (9th Cir. 2013).

Somers v. Apple, Inc., 729 F.3d 953, 960 (9th Cir. 2013).

"While '[t]he plausibility standard is not akin to a "probability requirement,"' it demands 'more than a sheer possibility that a defendant has acted unlawfully.' * * * Unless the alleged facts push a claim 'across the line from conceivable to plausible,' the complaint must be dismissed." Massachusetts Retirement Systems v. CVS Caremark Corp., 716 F.3d 229, 237 (1st Cir. 2013), quoting Ashcroft v. Iqbal, 556 U.S. 662, 678, 680, 129 S. Ct. 1937, 1949-1951, 173 L. Ed. 2d 868 (2009), quoting Bell Atlantic Corp. v. Twombly, 550 U.S. 544, 570, 127 S. Ct. 1955, 1973-1974, 167 L. Ed. 2d 929 (2007).

Kampuries v. American Honda Motor Co., Inc., 204 F. Supp. 3d 484 (E.D. N.Y. 2016).

Guggenberger v. Minnesota, 198 F. Supp. 3d 973 (D. Minn. 2016), quoting Wright & Miller.

Moseley v. King, 197 F. Supp. 3d 210 (D.D.C. 2016).

Budik v. Howard University Hospital, 986 F. Supp. 2d 1 (D.D.C. 2013) ("[R]aising a 'sheer possibility that a defendant has acted unlawfully' fails to satisfy the facial plausibility requirement."), quoting Ashcroft v. Iqbal, 556 U.S. 662, 678, 129 S. Ct. 1937, 1949, 173 L. Ed. 2d 868 (2009).

54 Sixth Circuit opinion

16630 Southfield Ltd. Partnership v. Flagstar Bank, F.S.B., 727 F.3d 502, 505 (6th Cir. 2013).

55 Seventh Circuit opinion

Swanson v. Citibank, N.A., 614 F.3d 400, 404 (7th Cir. 2010).

See also

"Finding the Twombly/Iqbal urge irresistible, many lawyers fail to appreciate the distinction between determining whether a claim for relief is 'plausibly stated,' the inquiry required by Twombly/Iqbal, and divining whether actual proof of that claim is 'improbable,' a feat impossible for a mere mortal, even a federal judge." Barker ex rel. U.S. v. Columbus Regional Healthcare System, Inc., 977 F. Supp. 2d 1341 (M.D. Ga. 2013).

56 More plausible

Anderson News, L.L.C. v. American Media, Inc., 680 F.3d 162, 185 (2d Cir. 2012).

57 Code pleading

Clark, The Complaint in Code Pleading, 35 Yale L.J. 259, 259-60 (1926) ("The codifiers [of the New York Code of Pleading and Practice of 1848] concluded that for the blended system they proposed, the evidential facts should be omitted, the ultimate facts, rather than the legal conclusions, should be stated * * *.").

58 Federal Rules supplanted code pleading

Spencer, Plausibility Pleading, 49 B.C. L. Rev. 431, 434 (2008) ("Supplanting the cumbersome and inelegant code pleading system that required the pleading of 'ultimate facts' rather than mere 'evidentiary facts' or 'conclusions,' the Federal Rules ushered in a simplified pleading system * * *.") (citations omitted).

59 Bald statement

"[W]hen considering the viability of a claim in the face of a Rule 12(b)(6) challenge, we may reject sheer speculation, bald assertions, and unsupported conclusory statements." Taha v. International Brotherhood of Teamsters, Local 781, 947 F.3d 464, 469 (7th Cir. 2020).

While the plaintiff need not state a prima facie case in his or her complaint, "no plaintiff is exempt from her obligation to 'allege facts sufficient to state all the elements of her claim.'" Puente v. Ridge, 324 Fed. Appx. 423, 428 (5th Cir. 2009), quoting Mitchell v. Crescent River Port Pilots Ass'n, 265 Fed. Appx. 363, 370 (5th Cir. 2008).

U.S. ex rel. Karvelas v. Melrose-Wakefield Hosp., 360 F.3d 220 (1st Cir. 2004).

 © 2025 Thomson Reuters. No claim to original U.S. Government Works.

In re Colonial Mortgage Bankers Corp., 324 F.3d 12 (1st Cir. 2003) (bald assertions, unsupportable conclusions, and opprobrious epithets woven into fabric of complaint).

In re Rockefeller Center Properties, Inc. Securities Litigation, 311 F.3d 198 (3d Cir. 2002) (bald assertions).

Arruda v. Sears, Roebuck & Co., 310 F.3d 13 (1st Cir. 2002) (no weight given to bald assertions, unsupportable conclusions, and opprobrious epithets).

Krantz v. Prudential Investments Fund Management LLC, 305 F.3d 140 (3d Cir. 2002).

Virtual Countries, Inc. v. Republic of South Africa, 300 F.3d 230 (2d Cir. 2002) (rejected by, Orient Mineral Co. v. Bank of China, 506 F.3d 980 (10th Cir. 2007)) ("bald assertions" of harm not enough to defeat Rule 12(b)(6) motion).

Tarshis v. Riese Organization, 211 F.3d 30 (2d Cir. 2000) (abrogated by, Swierkiewicz v. Sorema N. A., 534 U.S. 506, 122 S. Ct. 992, 152 L. Ed. 2d 1 (2002)).

Abbott v. U.S., 144 F.3d 1 (1st Cir. 1998).

LaChapelle v. Berkshire Life Ins. Co., 142 F.3d 507 (1st Cir. 1998).

A reviewing court need not swallow the plaintiff's invective hook, line, and sinker; bald assertions, unsupportable conclusions, periphrastic circumlocutions, and the like need not be credited. Massachusetts School of Law at Andover, Inc. v. American Bar Ass'n, 142 F.3d 26 (1st Cir. 1998).

Cooper v. Parsky, 140 F.3d 433 (2d Cir. 1998) (bald assertions).

Beddall v. State Street Bank and Trust Co., 137 F.3d 12 (1st Cir. 1998) (bald assertions).

Morse v. Lower Merion School Dist., 132 F.3d 902 (3d Cir. 1997), citing Wright & Miller.

Doyle v. Hasbro, Inc., 103 F.3d 186 (1st Cir. 1996).

Resolution Trust Corp. v. Driscoll, 985 F.2d 44, 48 (1st Cir. 1993) (dismissing action since, after two years of litigation, complaint still lacks "a single, coherent, specific description" of wrongdoing by defendant).

Colle v. Brazos County, Tex., 981 F.2d 237 (5th Cir. 1993).

The lower court properly dismissed a civil rights complaint for failure to state a claim for relief when the complaint contained a series of broad conclusory statements and contained no reference to individual defendants other than in the title to the action. Jackson v. Nelson, 405 F.2d 872 (9th Cir. 1968).

 © 2025 Thomson Reuters. No claim to original U.S. Government Works.

"No claim for relief is stated if the complaint pleads facts insufficient to show that a legal wrong has been committed, or omits an averment necessary to establish the wrong or fails so to link the parties with the wrong as to entitle the plaintiff to redress." Sutton v. Eastern Viavi Co., 138 F.2d 959, 960 (C.C.A. 7th Cir. 1943) (Lindley, J.).

"The admonishment to construe the plaintiff's claim liberally when evaluating a motion to dismiss does not relieve a plaintiff of his obligation to satisfy federal notice pleading requirements and allege more than bare assertions of legal conclusions." Waldon v. Cincinnati Public Schools, 941 F. Supp. 2d 884, 887 (S.D. Ohio 2013), citing Wright & Miller.

Copeland v. Home and Community Health Services, Inc., 285 F. Supp. 2d 144 (D. Conn. 2003) (bald assertions and conclusions of law will not suffice).

DeRay v. Larson, 283 F. Supp. 2d 706 (D. Conn. 2003) (bald assertions and conclusions of law will not suffice to state claim).

Bowens v. Aftermath Entertainment, 254 F. Supp. 2d 629 (E.D. Mich. 2003) (although pleading standard is liberal, bald assertions and conclusions of law will not enable complaint to survive).

When the allegations are so baldly conclusory that they fail to give notice of the basic events and circumstances of which the plaintiff complains, they are meaningless as a practical matter and legally insufficient to state a claim. Parisi v. Coca-Cola Bottling Co. of New York, 995 F. Supp. 298 (E.D. N.Y. 1998), aff'd, 172 F.3d 38 (2d Cir. 1999).

A court need not accept a plaintiff's bald assertions, unsupportable conclusions, periphrastic circumlocutions, and the like. Lebron v. Ashford Presbyterian Community Hosp., 995 F. Supp. 241 (D.P.R. 1998).

Individual allegations that are so baldly conclusory that they fail to give notice of the basic events and circumstances of which the plaintiff complains are meaningless as a practical matter and, as a matter of law, insufficient to state a claim. Stordeur v. Computer Associates Intern., Inc., 995 F. Supp. 94 (E.D. N.Y. 1998).

The court cannot assume that the plaintiff can prove facts that it has not alleged or that the defendants have violated the laws in ways that have not been alleged. Whayne v. State of Kan., 980 F. Supp. 387 (D. Kan. 1997).

 © 2025 Thomson Reuters. No claim to original U.S. Government Works.

"To survive a motion to dismiss, a plaintiff may not merely 'label' his or her claims." Dr. Fred Hatfield's Sportstrength Training Equipment Co. v. Balik, 174 F.R.D. 496, 497 (M.D. Fla. 1997).

Kmart Corp. v. Rivera-Alejandro Architects and Engineers, 174 F.R.D. 242 (D.P.R. 1997).

DeLaurentis v. Job Shop Technical Services, Inc., 912 F. Supp. 57 (E.D. N.Y. 1996) ("baldly conclusory statements").

Heideman v. Wirsing, 840 F. Supp. 1285 (W.D. Wis. 1992), judgment aff'd, 7 F.3d 659 (7th Cir. 1993) (dismissing claim because it made only bare allegations of conspiracy).

McCrum v. Elkhart County Dept. of Public Welfare, 806 F. Supp. 203 (N.D. Ind. 1992) ("bare legal conclusions attached to narrated facts will not suffice").

Johnson v. KSIR Principal Adm'r and Staff, 804 F. Supp. 173 (D. Kan. 1992) (inmate's broad assertion of racial discrimination failed to specify what acts or omissions give rise to the claim).

A general allegation of conspiracy without a statement of the facts constituting that conspiracy is only an allegation of a legal conclusion and is insufficient to constitute a claim for relief. Stewart v. Hevelone, 283 F. Supp. 842 (D. Neb. 1968).

In holding that the complaint failed to state a civil rights claim under Section 1985(3), Judge Will stated that "although pleadings are given a liberal construction in the federal courts, the Rules contemplate some factual statement in support of the claim. General allegations of this kind unsupported by any factual statements have usually been rejected as insufficient." Huey v. Barloga, 277 F. Supp. 864 (N.D. Ill. 1967).

L. S. Good & Co. v. H. Daroff & Sons, Inc., 263 F. Supp. 635 (N.D. W. Va. 1967).

Sinchak v. Parente, 262 F. Supp. 79 (W.D. Pa. 1966).

See also

In order to avoid dismissal for failure to state a claim a plaintiff must plead specific facts, not mere conclusory allegations. Global Marine Shipping (No. 10) Ltd. v. Finning Intern. Inc., 2002 WL 31246548 (E.D. La. 2002).

Sticklen v. Kittle, 168 W. Va. 147, 287 S.E.2d 148, 158 n.12 (1981), quoting Wright & Miller.

Willging, The Use of Rule 12(b)(6) in Two Federal District Courts (Federal Judicial Center, 1989).

60 Allegations contradicted

Waste Management, Incorporated v. AIG Specialty Insurance Company, 974 F.3d 528, 534 (5th Cir. 2020) ("We need not resolve this dispute because, even assuming that an adjuster can be held liable under [the Texas Insurance Code] Waste did not allege facts that, taken as true, demonstrate a violation of [the Texas Insurance Code]. * * * The[] threadbare factual allegations, along with Waste's conclusory recitation of the elements under the Texas Insurance Code, are insufficient to state a plausible claim for relief.") (citations omitted), citing Wright & Miller.

Hegab v. Long, 716 F.3d 790, 799 (4th Cir. 2013), citing Wright & Miller.

Bogie v. Rosenberg, 705 F.3d 603, 609 (7th Cir. 2013) ("When an exhibit incontrovertibly contradicts the allegations in the complaint, the exhibit ordinarily controls, even when considering a motion to dismiss. * * * When an exhibit contradicts the allegations in the complaint, ruling against the non-moving party on a motion to dismiss is consistent with our obligation to review all facts in the light most favorable to the non-moving party.").

New Albany Tractor, Inc. v. Louisville Tractor, Inc., 650 F.3d 1046 (6th Cir. 2011) (conclusory legal allegations should not be credited without specific supporting facts).

Seidl v. American Century Companies, Inc., 427 Fed. Appx. 35 (2d Cir. 2011) (pleadings that are conclusions are not entitled to presumption of truth).

Steckman v. Hart Brewing, Inc., 143 F.3d 1293 (9th Cir. 1998) (conclusory allegations contradicted by documents referred to in complaint).

The court need not accept plaintiff's allegation as to the intent of the parties to a contract when the meaning of the contract is unambiguous. Hoosier Energy Rural Elec. Co-op., Inc. v. Amoco Tax Leasing IV Corp., 34 F.3d 1310, 1318 n.4 (7th Cir. 1994).

Salahuddin v. Jones, 992 F.2d 447 (2d Cir. 1993) ("wholly conclusory and inconsistent allegations" are insufficient).

The district court could withdraw sua sponte an earlier order denying the defendants' motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim and grant said motion, without allowing the plaintiff ten days notice and opportunity to respond since there was no indication that the district court considered matters outside the pleadings and the plaintiffs had notice and an opportunity to respond when the defendants initially filed the motion. Fernandez-Montes v. Allied Pilots Ass'n, 987 F.2d 278 (5th Cir. 1993).

 © 2025 Thomson Reuters. No claim to original U.S. Government Works.

In re Lane, 937 F.2d 694, 698 (1st Cir. 1991), judgment aff'd, 171 B.R. 1 (D. Mass. 1994), judgment aff'd, 50 F.3d 1 (1st Cir. 1995), quoting Wright & Miller.

The court must accept as true the factual allegations in the complaint and any inferences reasonably deductible therefrom, but it need not accept mere legal conclusions or factual claims at variance with the express terms of an instrument attached to the complaint as an exhibit. Olpin v. Ideal Nat. Ins. Co., 419 F.2d 1250 (10th Cir. 1969).

Cambron v. Starwood Vacation Ownership, Inc., 945 F. Supp. 2d 1133, 1139 (D. Haw. 2013) ("The Court need not accept as true allegations that contradict matters properly subject to judicial notice or allegations contradicting the exhibits attached to the complaint."), citing Sprewell v. Golden State Warriors, 266 F.3d 979, 988 (9th Cir. 2001), opinion amended on denial of reh'g, 275 F.3d 1187 (9th Cir. 2001).

Reginella Const. Co., Ltd. v. Travelers Cas and Sur. Co. of America, 971 F. Supp. 2d 470 (W.D. Pa. 2013), judgment aff'd, 568 Fed. Appx. 174 (3d Cir. 2014) ("If the Court were required to accept contradictory inferences and conclusory allegations as well-pleaded facts, then Rule 12(b)(6) review would be nothing more than the Court alchemizing legally insufficient statements into a plausible cause of action. Such a standard of review is akin to no review at all, and most importantly, is not the law.").

Williams v. Rickard, 2010 WL 2640102, *3 (D. Haw. 2010) ("Additionally, the court need not accept as true allegations that contradict matters properly subject to judicial notice or allegations contradicting the exhibits attached to the complaint.").

Richard v. Wal-Mart Stores, Inc., 2007 WL 855357 (W.D. La. 2007), citing Wright & Miller.

Doron Precision Systems, Inc. v. FAAC, Inc., 423 F. Supp. 2d 173 (S.D. N.Y. 2006).

When the plaintiff's conclusory allegations were contradicted by exhibits attached to the complaint, dismissal under Rule 12(b)(6) was appropriate. Kennedy v. Victoria's Secret Stores, Inc., 2004 WL 414808 (E.D. La. 2004).

The court may disregard allegations in the complaint if they are contradicted by facts established by reference to any documents attached as exhibits, or upon which it necessarily relies; the court also need not accept as true allegations that contradict facts judicially noticed by the court. Ileto v. Glock, Inc., 194 F. Supp. 2d 1040 (C.D. Cal. 2002), aff'd in part, rev'd in part and remanded, 349 F.3d 1191 (9th Cir. 2003).

International Broth. of Teamsters Local 734 Health and Welfare Trust Fund v. Phillip Morris, Inc., 34 F. Supp. 2d 656 (N.D. Ill. 1998), aff'd, 196 F.3d 818 (7th Cir. 1999) (court not bound by facts in complaint contradicting plaintiff's claim).

Dames & Moore v. Baxter & Woodman, Inc., 21 F. Supp. 2d 817 (N.D. Ill. 1998) (if certain allegations are inconsistent with terms of written document that is attached to or otherwise considered part of complaint, those inconsistent allegations are not accepted as true and terms of written document, fairly construed, prevail).

The court need not ignore facts set out in the complaint that undermine the plaintiff's claims. Coats v. Kraft Foods, Inc., 12 F. Supp. 2d 862 (N.D. Ind. 1998).

Waters v. Brown, 5 F. Supp. 2d 654 (N.D. Ind. 1998), judgment aff'd, 175 F.3d 1022 (7th Cir. 1999).

Zimmerman v. Hoard, 5 F. Supp. 2d 633 (N.D. Ind. 1998).

If the allegations in a complaint are contradicted by documents made a part thereof, the document controls and the court need not accept as true the allegations of the complaint. Honess 52 Corp. v. Town of Fishkill, 1 F. Supp. 2d 294 (S.D. N.Y. 1998).

Balcerzak v. City of Milwaukee, 980 F. Supp. 983 (E.D. Wis. 1997).

Jackson Nat. Life Ins. Co. v. Gofen & Glossberg, Inc., 882 F. Supp. 713 (N.D. Ill. 1995) (court need not accept allegations as true if they conflict with the written terms of contract).

In re Century 21-RE/MAX Real Estate Advertising Claims Litigation, 882 F. Supp. 915 (C.D. Cal. 1994).

Maywalt v. Parker & Parsley Petroleum Co., 808 F. Supp. 1037 (S.D. N.Y. 1992) (when allegations in complaint are contradicted by documents that have been made part of that complaint, documents control).

On a motion to dismiss, facts well pleaded must be taken as true, but unsupported conclusions of the pleader may be disregarded, especially when they are negated by the substance of the facts pleaded. Van Daele v. Vinci, 294 F. Supp. 71 (N.D. Ill. 1968).

See also

Thompson v. Illinois Dept. of Professional Regulation, 300 F.3d 750 (7th Cir. 2002).

 © 2025 Thomson Reuters. No claim to original U.S. Government Works.

In re Metricom Securities Litigation, 2004 WL 966291 (N.D. Cal. 2004), aff'd, 182 Fed. Appx. 714 (9th Cir. 2006) (court may disregard factual allegations contradicted by exhibits attached to complaint).

Hunt-Golliday v. Metropolitan Water Reclamation District of Greater Chicago, 27 Nat'l Disability Law Rep. P 285, 2004 WL 407012 (N.D. Ill. 2004), aff'd, 390 F.3d 1032 (7th Cir. 2004), citing Wright & Miller (court refused to accept allegations contradicted by matters in public record).

Herbage v. Meese, 747 F. Supp. 60 (D.D.C. 1990), aff'd, 946 F.2d 1564 (D.C. Cir. 1991) (conclusory allegations of unconstitutional motive are insufficient).

Compare

It is not proper for the court to assume that the plaintiff "can prove facts which [he or she] has not alleged, or that the defendants have violated the * * * laws in ways that have not been alleged." Anderson v. Continental Casualty Co., 258 F. Supp. 2d 1127 (E.D. Cal. 2003), quoting Associated General Contractors of California, Inc. v. California State Council of Carpenters, 459 U.S. 519, 103 S. Ct. 897, 74 L. Ed. 2d 723 (1983).

61 Conclusory allegation

Painter's Mill Grille, LLC v. Brown, 716 F.3d 342, 350 (4th Cir. 2013) ("It is now well established that mere conclusory and speculative allegations are not sufficient to withstand a motion to dismiss.").

Heller v. Roberts, 386 F.2d 832 (2d Cir. 1967).

Phillips v. World Pub. Co., 822 F. Supp. 2d 1114 (W.D. Wash. 2011) ("conclusory legal allegation").

Manestar v. JP Morgan Chase Bank, N.A., 2011 WL 686252, *1 (C.D. Cal. 2011) ("[A] court need not accept as true unreasonable inferences or conclusory legal allegations cast in the form of factual allegations.").

62 Illustrative case

Stewart v. Hevelone, 283 F. Supp. 842 (D. Neb. 1968).

63 Courts vary

Krainski v. Nevada ex rel. Bd. of Regents of Nevada System of Higher Educ., 616 F.3d 963, 969 (9th Cir. 2010) (allegation that police officers "knew, or should have known, that the allegations [which warranted probable cause] * * * were false" was deemed conclusory).

Great Western Mining & Mineral Co. v. Fox Rothschild LLP, 615 F.3d 159, 178 (3d Cir. 2010) (rejecting assertions of "corrupt conspiracy," "an agreement," or "an understanding in place between the Defendants and the Philadelphia judicial system" as conclusory).

"The difference between a conclusory statement and a pure factual allegation is not entirely clear, but Craig's narrative of the alleged incident at her home [individuals forced their way in without identifying themselves as police officers and damaged home] does not in any way resemble a legal conclusion undeserving of an assumption of truth." Craig v. Hawkins, 2010 WL 2350582, *2 (N.D. Ill. 2010).

Darrow v. WKRP Management, LLC, 2010 WL 1416799, *2 (D. Colo. 2010) (allegation that defendants failed to pay for cost of purchase, maintenance, and cleaning of uniforms was deemed conclusory without additional facts that uniforms required "special treatment, i.e., dry-cleaning" as required for FLSA claim).

Delgado-O'Neil v. City of Minneapolis, 2010 WL 330322, *6 (D. Minn. 2010) (allegations that plaintiff was subjected to excessive discipline, frequent investigations, and poor performance evaluations after she complained about discriminatory actions and that she was passed over for promotion because she filed charges of discrimination did not warrant assumption of truth), aff'd, 435 Fed. Appx. 582 (8th Cir. 2011).

64 Iqbal and Twombly divide over conclusory characterization

Ashcroft v. Iqbal, 556 U.S. 662, 699, 129 S. Ct. 1937, 173 L. Ed. 2d 868 (2009) (Souter, J., dissenting) ("[T]he majority's holding that the statements it selects are conclusory cannot be squared with its treatment of certain other allegations in the complaint as nonconclusory.").

Spencer, Pleading and Access to Civil Justice: A Response to Twiqbal Apologists, 60 U.C.L.A. L. Rev. 1710 (1736 (2013) ("Justice Kennedy [in Iqbal] saw conclusions (the allegation of policy design and approval) where Justice Souter saw facts; Justice Souter [in Twombly] saw conclusions (the allegation of an agreement) where Justice Stevens saw facts. Who is right? What will the judge in your next case see?") (citations omitted).

65 Any legal theory

Bowers v. Hardwick, 478 U.S. 186, 202, 106 S. Ct. 2841, 2849, 92 L. Ed. 2d 140 (1986) (overruled by, Lawrence v. Texas, 539 U.S. 558, 123 S. Ct. 2472, 156 L. Ed. 2d 508 (2003)), citing Wright & Miller.

U.S. ex rel. Bias v. Tangipahoa Parish School Bd., 816 F.3d 315, 321 (5th Cir. 2016) ("Dismissal [under Rule 12(b)(6)] is improper if the allegations support relief on any possible theory.").

Topchian v. JPMorgan Chase Bank, N.A., 760 F.3d 843, 848-849 (8th Cir. 2014) ("[A] complaint should not be dismissed merely because a plaintiff's allegations do not support the particular legal theory he advances, for the court is under a duty to examine the complaint to determine if the allegations provide for relief on any possible theory.").

Mack v. City of High Springs, 486 Fed. Appx. 3 (11th Cir. 2012) (per curiam) ("To survive a motion to dismiss under Rule 12(b)(6), the plaintiff must plead 'either direct or inferential allegations respecting all the material elements necessary to sustain a recovery under some viable legal theory.'"), quoting Financial Sec. Assur., Inc. v. Stephens, Inc., 500 F.3d 1276, 1282-1283 (11th Cir. 2007)

"To state a valid claim, a complaint must contain direct or inferential allegations respecting all the material elements under some viable legal theory." Crawford v. JP Morgan Chase Bank, NA, 425 Fed. Appx. 445, 447 (6th Cir. 2011), quoting Commercial Money Center, Inc. v. Illinois Union Ins. Co., 508 F.3d 327, 336-337 (6th Cir. 2007).

"A complaint need not identify legal theories, and specifying an incorrect theory is not a fatal error." Rabe v. United Air Lines, Inc., 636 F.3d 866, 872 (7th Cir. 2011).

Barrett v. Tallon, 30 F.3d 1296 (10th Cir. 1994) (district court erred in dismissing complaint without considering whether it gave rise to other claims for relief), citing Wright & Miller.

Bartholet v. Reishauer A.G. (Zurich), 953 F.2d 1073 (7th Cir. 1992) (complaint does not have to state legal theory and specification of incorrect theory is not fatal).

The plaintiff did not waive the right to assert two unargued theories when the argued theory was dismissed, because the complaint clearly supported the others. Edmond v. U.S. Postal Service General Counsel, 949 F.2d 415, 431 (D.C. Cir. 1991), citing Wright & Miller.

Pratt v. KSE Sportsman Media, Inc., 586 F. Supp. 3d 666, 670 (E.D. Mich. 2022) ("Under Rule 12(b)(6), a pleading fails to state a claim if it does not contain allegations that support recovery under any recognizable theory.").

Schwartz v. Anthem Insurance Companies, Inc., 526 F. Supp. 3d 365, 373 (S.D. Ind. 2021) ("At the motion to dismiss stage, the court's duty 'is to consider whether a plaintiff's allegations could provide relief under any available legal theory.' * * * '[T]he complaint need not identify a legal theory, and specifying an incorrect legal theory is not fatal.'").

Zurbriggen v. Twin Hill Acquisition Company, Inc., 338 F. Supp. 3d 875 (N.D. Ill. 2018) ("[A] complaint * * * asserting [a] single claim * * * survives [a motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim] if it is supported by any single recognized legal theory. That includes theories that are not expressly identified in the complaint.").

Bryant v. Silverman, 284 F. Supp. 3d 458, 468 (S.D. N.Y. 2018) ("any facially plausible claims"), citing Virgil v. Town of Gates, 455 Fed. Appx. 36, 37 (2d Cir. 2012).

The fact that the plaintiffs captioned their claim for violation of their ballot access rights under the Due Process Clause of the Fourteenth Amendment rather than under the First Amendment was not grounds for dismissal because both the First and Fourteenth Amendments protect ballot access rights, and, regardless, plaintiffs need not accurately state the proper legal theory as long as they make allegations sufficient to state a claim for relief. Better Broadview Party v. Walters, 159 F. Supp. 3d 885, 892-893 (N.D. Ill. 2016).

Szubielski v. Pierce, 152 F. Supp. 3d 227, 231 (D. Del. 2016) (complaint may not be dismissed for imperfect statements of legal theory supporting claim asserted).

Granting a Rule 12(b)(6) motion is proper only if there is no viable theory under which a plaintiff can recover. MacFarlane v. Smith, 947 F. Supp. 572 (D.N.H. 1996), aff'd, 129 F.3d 1252 (1st Cir. 1997).

See also

When the plaintiff fails to rely on the proper section of the Civil Rights Act, the court should examine the complaint in light of the proper section. Robertson v. Johnston, 376 F.2d 43 (5th Cir. 1967).

McLaughlin v. Chicago Transit Authority, 243 F. Supp. 2d 778 (N.D. Ill. 2003) (plaintiff need not cite case law at Rule 12(b)(6) stage).

But see

Stubblefield v. C.I.R., 2002-1 U.S. Tax Cas. (CCH) P 50382, 89 A.F.T.R.2d 2002-2084, 2002 WL 850196 (S.D. Tex. 2002).

To survive a motion to dismiss, the complaint must state sufficient allegations to establish the necessary elements for recovery under whatever legal theory the plaintiff has chosen. Thomas v. L'Eggs Products, Inc., 13 F. Supp. 2d 806 (C.D. Ill. 1998).

But compare

Adams v. American Family Mut. Ins. Co., 813 F.3d 1151, 1155 (8th Cir. 2016) (motion to dismiss was properly granted because plaintiff did not raise breach of contract claim until opposition to motion to dismiss).

"A complaint containing a statement of facts that merely creates a suspicion of a legally cognizable right of action is insufficient." Bishop v. Lucent Technologies, Inc., 520 F.3d 516 (6th Cir. 2008) (McKeague, J.), citing Bell Atlantic Corp. v. Twombly, 550 U.S. 544, 127 S. Ct. 1955, 550, 167 L. Ed. 2d 929 (2007). For further discussion of the Twombly case, see the Pocket Part for § 1216.

Johnson v. Riverside Healthcare System, LP, 516 F.3d 759 (9th Cir. 2008), withdrawn and superseded on reh'g, 534 F.3d 1116 (9th Cir. 2008).

In re American Funds Securities Litigation, 556 F. Supp. 2d 1100 (C.D. Cal. 2008), vacated and remanded, 395 Fed. Appx. 485 (9th Cir. 2010).

"Dismissal can be based on the lack of a cognizable legal theory or the absence of sufficient facts alleged under a cognizable legal theory." Hawkins v. San Mateo County Law Library, 2007 WL 1795749, *3 (N.D. Cal. 2007), citing Balistreri v. Pacifica Police Dept., 901 F.2d 696, 699 (9th Cir. 1988).

"When opposing a Rule 12(b)(6) motion, 'a plaintiff cannot expect a trial court to do his homework for him.' Plaintiff is responsible for putting his best foot forward in an effort to present a legal theory that will support his claim." The plaintiff must set forth factual allegations with respect to each material element of some actionable theory. Viera-Marcano v. Ramirez-Sanchez, 224 F. Supp. 2d 397 (D.P.R. 2002) (Garcia-Gregory, J.), quoting McCoy v. Massachusetts Institute of Technology, 950 F.2d 13, 22 (1st Cir. 1991).

66 Johnson case
574 U.S. 10, 135 S. Ct. 346, 347, 190 L. Ed. 2d 309 (2014).

67 Factual plausibility only
Johnson v. City of Shelby, Miss., 574 U.S. 10, 135 S. Ct. 346, 347, 190 L. Ed. 2d 309 (2014) (failure to invoke § 1983 while pleading sufficient facts for plausibility is not grounds for dismissal), citing Wright & Miller.

68 Relief may be granted
Neitzke v. Williams, 490 U.S. 319, 109 S. Ct. 1827, 104 L. Ed. 2d 338 (1989).

" 'Rule 12(b)(6) does not countenance * * * dismissals based on a judge's disbelief of a complaint's factual allegations. * * * A court ruling on * * * a [Rule 12(b)(6)] motion may not properly dismiss a complaint that states a plausible version of the events merely because the court finds a different version more plausible.' In fact, 'a well-pleaded complaint may proceed if it strikes a savvy judge that actual proof of the facts alleged is improbable, and that a recovery is very remote and unlikely.'" Evergreen Partnering Group, Inc. v. Pactiv Corp., 720 F.3d 33, 45 (1st Cir. 2013), quoting Bell Atlantic Corp. v. Twombly, 550 U.S. 544, 556, 127 S. Ct. 1955, 1965, 167 L. Ed. 2d 929 (2007); Anderson News, L.L.C. v. American Media, Inc., 680 F.3d 162, 185 (2d Cir. 2012).

Boyle v. U.S., 200 F.3d 1369 (Fed. Cir. 2000).

Indest v. Freeman Decorating, Inc., 164 F.3d 258 (5th Cir. 1999) (dismissal appropriate because plaintiff failed to set forth any facts upon which relief could be granted).

Webb v. Lawrence County, 144 F.3d 1131 (8th Cir. 1998).

Pack v. U.S., 992 F.2d 955 (9th Cir. 1993).

Edmond v. U.S. Postal Service General Counsel, 949 F.2d 415, 292 (D.C. Cir. 1991).

Doe v. U.S. Dept. of Justice, 753 F.2d 1092, 1104 (D.C. Cir. 1985), quoting Wright & Miller.

Norwalk CORE v. Norwalk Redevelopment Agency, 395 F.2d 920 (2d Cir. 1968).

U.S. v. Howell, 318 F.2d 162 (9th Cir. 1963).

Although part of the relief demanded by the plaintiffs could not possibly be granted, the complaint should not have been dismissed, since the question was not whether all of the relief asked for could be granted, but whether the plaintiffs could be accorded any relief. Lada v. Wilkie, 250 F.2d 211 (8th Cir. 1957).

A Rule 12(b)(6) motion is not the proper vehicle to challenge a particular prayer for relief. A Rule 12(b)(6) motion challenges the sufficiency of the claim under Rule 8(a)(2), not the prayer for relief under Rule 8(a)(3). AG Spectrum Company v. Elder, 181 F. Supp. 3d 615, 617 (S.D. Iowa 2016).

Charles v. Front Royal Volunteer Fire and Rescue Dept., Inc., 21 F. Supp. 3d 620 (W.D. Va. 2014) ("[T]he nature of the relief included in the demand for judgment is immaterial to the question of whether a complaint adequately states a claim upon which relief can be granted.").

Celebrity Chefs Tour, LLC v. Macy's, Inc., 16 F. Supp. 3d 1159 (S.D. Cal. 2014) (claims for punitive damages under Lanham Act are inappropriate but not grounds for Rule 12(b)(6) dismissal).

Kerr v. Wanderer & Wanderer, 211 F.R.D. 625 (D. Nev. 2002).

Even if the punitive, consequential, and mental suffering damages prayed for by an insured suing an insurer for breach of contract were impermissible forms of recovery, a motion to dismiss the complaint would have to be denied because some form of relief, such as compensatory damages, certainly would be available to remedy a breach of contract. Asher v. Reliance Ins. Co., 308 F. Supp. 847 (N.D. Cal. 1970).

Asphaltic Enterprises, Inc. v. Baldwin-Lima-Hamilton Corp., 39 F.R.D. 574 (E.D. Pa. 1966).

A court will not dismiss the entire action because the plaintiff has asked for more than that to which he may be entitled. McHugh v. Reserve Min. Co., 27 F.R.D. 505 (N.D. Ohio 1961).

69 Discussion elsewhere
See § 1216.

See also
Laguna Hermosa Corp. v. U.S., 671 F.3d 1284, 1287 (Fed. Cir. 2012) ("A complaint must be dismissed under Rule 12(b)(6) when the facts asserted do not give rise to a legal remedy * * *.").

Bazan v. White, 275 Fed. Appx. 312 (5th Cir. 2008) (dismissal is proper if complaint fails to allege required element of offense).

Wittstock v. Mark A. Van Sile, Inc., 330 F.3d 899 (6th Cir. 2003).

Tahfs v. Proctor, 316 F.3d 584 (6th Cir. 2003).

Arruda v. Sears, Roebuck & Co., 310 F.3d 13 (1st Cir. 2002) (court cannot uphold complaint that fails to establish essential nexus between underlying events and theory of relief).

General Star Indem. Co. v. Vesta Fire Ins. Corp., 173 F.3d 946 (5th Cir. 1999).

Lepelletier v. F.D.I.C., 164 F.3d 37, 334 (D.C. Cir. 1999) (dismissal appropriate because plaintiff failed to set forth any facts upon which relief could be granted).

To survive a motion to dismiss, the plaintiff must allege facts that if proved would result in the requested relief. The complaint must contain either direct or inferential allegations respecting all the material elements to sustain a recovery under some viable legal theory. Jersevic v. Kuhl, 2002 WL 84624 (E.D. Mich. 2002) (unpublished).

"In practice, a complaint must contain either direct or inferential allegations respecting all the material elements to sustain a recovery under some viable legal theory." Edwards v. Physician's Credit Bureau, 2001 WL 1678783, *2 (S.D. Ohio 2001) (unpublished) (Smith, J.).

70 Doubtful case
Supreme Court

Bell Atlantic Corp. v. Twombly, 550 U.S. 544, 127 S. Ct. 1955, 1965, 167 L. Ed. 2d 929 (2007) ("Of course, a well-pleaded complaint may proceed even if it strikes a savvy judge that actual proof of those facts is improbable").

Rule 8(a) establishes a pleading standard without regard to whether a claim will succeed on the merits. Swierkiewicz v. Sorema N. A., 534 U.S. 506, 122 S. Ct. 992, 152 L. Ed. 2d 1 (2002).

Neitzke v. Williams, 490 U.S. 319, 109 S. Ct. 1827, 104 L. Ed. 2d 338 (1989).

First Circuit

Ocasio-Hernandez v. Fortuno-Burset, 640 F.3d 1, 12-13 (1st Cir. 2011) (reasonableness of inference of liability should be focus of court, not likelihood of claim's ultimate success).

Tri-State Rubbish, Inc. v. Waste Management, Inc., 998 F.2d 1073 (1st Cir. 1993).

Developmental Disabilities Advocacy Center, Inc. v. Melton, 689 F.2d 281 (1st Cir. 1982), quoting Wright & Miller.

Miranda v. Deloitte LLP, 922 F. Supp. 2d 210, 217 (D.P.R. 2013) (non-conclusory factual allegations must be taken as true even if "seemingly incredible"), quoting R.G. Financial Corp. v. Vergara-Nunez, 446 F.3d 178, 182 (1st Cir. 2006).

Rios DaSilva v. One, Inc., 980 F. Supp. 2d 148 (D.P.R. 2013).

Second Circuit

Phelps v. Kapnolas, 308 F.3d 180 (2d Cir. 2002).

Chance v. Armstrong, 143 F.3d 698 (2d Cir. 1998).

Alzheimer's Disease Resource Center, Inc. v. Alzheimer's Disease and Related Disorders Ass'n, Inc., 981 F. Supp. 2d 153 (E.D. N.Y. 2013) ("The issue on a motion to dismiss is 'not whether a plaintiff will ultimately prevail but whether the claimant is entitled to offer evidence to support the claims.'"), quoting Todd v. Exxon Corp., 275 F.3d 191, 198 (2d Cir. 2001).

Third Circuit

Baldwin v. University of Pittsburgh Medical Center, 636 F.3d 69, 74 (3d Cir. 2011).

Renfro v. Unisys Corp., 671 F.3d 314 (3d Cir. 2011) (determination is not whether plaintiff ultimately will prevail but whether complaint is sufficient to pass court's threshold).

Nami v. Fauver, 82 F.3d 63 (3d Cir. 1996).

No matter how likely it may seem that the pleader will be unable to prove his case, he is entitled, upon averring a claim, to an opportunity to attempt to prove it. Melo-Sonics Corp. v. Cropp, 342 F.2d 856 (3d Cir. 1965).

Continental Collieries v. Shober, 130 F.2d 631 (C.C.A. 3d Cir. 1942).

Raul v. Rynd, 929 F. Supp. 2d 333, 341 (D. Del. 2013), quoting In re Burlington Coat Factory Securities Litigation, 114 F.3d 1410, 1420 (3d Cir. 1997).

Logue v. West Penn Multi-List, Inc., 2010 WL 2720787, *1 (W.D. Pa. 2010).

Tatsch-Corbin v. Feathers, 561 F. Supp. 2d 538 (W.D. Pa. 2008).

Fourth Circuit
McLean v. U.S., 566 F.3d 391 (4th Cir. 2009) (abrogated by, Lomax v. Ortiz-Marquez, 140 S. Ct. 1721, 207 L. Ed. 2d 132 (2020)).

Moore v. Life Ins. Co. of North America, 278 Fed. Appx. 238 (4th Cir. 2008) (dismissal motion does not resolve contests surrounding facts or merits of claim).

Jordan by Jordan v. Jackson, 15 F.3d 333 (4th Cir. 1994) (court expressed skepticism that plaintiff ultimately could prevail on claim but reversed lower court's grant of Rule 12(b)(6) motion).

Revene v. Charles County Com'rs, 882 F.2d 870 (4th Cir. 1989) (dismissal improper even if factual assertions are equally consistent with conclusion contrary to plaintiff's).

Adams v. Bain, 697 F.2d 1213, 1216 (4th Cir. 1982), citing Wright & Miller.

Alston v. North Carolina A & T State University, 304 F. Supp. 2d 774 (M.D. N.C. 2004).

Rhee Bros., Inc. v. Han Ah Reum Corp., 178 F. Supp. 2d 525 (D. Md. 2001), quoting Wright & Miller.

Bryant v. Clevelands, Inc., 193 F.R.D. 486 (E.D. Va. 2000).

Brandsasse v. City of Suffolk, Va., 72 F. Supp. 2d 608 (E.D. Va. 1999).

Fifth Circuit
Sherrod v. United Way Worldwide, 821 Fed. Appx. 311, 315 (5th Cir. 2020) ("On appeal, we are not concerned with whether the plaintiff was likely to succeed on the claims but only whether the complaint contains any legally cognizable claims that are plausible.").

The court must accept all the factual allegations as true even if they are doubtful in fact. Lexington Ins. Co. v. S.H.R.M. Catering Services, Inc., 567 F.3d 182 (5th Cir. 2009).

Even when it appears almost a certainty to the court that the facts alleged cannot be proved to support a legal claim, the motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim must be overruled. Boudeloche v. Grow Chemical Coatings Corp., 728 F.2d 759 (5th Cir. 1984).

Sixth Circuit

Mediacom Southeast LLC v. BellSouth Telecommunications, Inc., 672 F.3d 396, 399 (6th Cir. 2012) ("This very well may be the proper question of law on a motion for summary judgment-assuming there are no genuine issues of material fact-but it is not the proper inquiry for a motion to dismiss. At this stage, the single question is whether plaintiff's complaint includes 'enough facts to state a claim to relief that is plausible on its face.'"), quoting Bell Atlantic Corp. v. Twombly, 550 U.S. 544, 570, 127 S. Ct. 1955, 1973, 167 L. Ed. 2d 929 (2007).

Montesi v. Nationwide Mut. Ins. Co., 970 F. Supp. 2d 784 (W.D. Tenn. 2013) ("While plausibility requires relief to be more than speculative, it need not be probable; rather, " 'a well-pleaded complaint may proceed even if it strikes a savvy judge that actual proof of those facts is improbable, and that recovery is very remote and unlikely.'"), quoting Erie County, Ohio v. Morton Salt, Inc., 702 F.3d 860, 867 (6th Cir. 2012).

Compare

Jones v. City of Cincinnati, 521 F.3d 555 (6th Cir. 2008).

Seventh Circuit

Arnett v. Webster, 658 F.3d 742, 752 (7th Cir. 2011).

Walker v. National Recovery, Inc., 200 F.3d 500 (7th Cir. 1999).

"Pressure from the flux of cases makes early disposition of weak claims attractive, freeing judicial time for others that appear to have superior prospects. Matters that formerly were tried now are resolved by summary judgment. But the next time-saving step—resolving under Rule 12(b)(6) matters that formerly were handled by summary judgment—is incompatible with the Rules of Civil Procedure." Bennett v. Schmidt, 153 F.3d 516, 518 (7th Cir. 1998) (Easterbrook, J.).

"Although it appears highly unlikely that plaintiff will be able prove his claim against defendants * * *, that is not the standard for determining a motion to dismiss." Williams v. Doyle, 494 F. Supp. 2d 1019, 1029 (W.D. Wis. 2007), citing Scheuer v. Rhodes, 416 U.S. 232, 236, 94 S. Ct. 1683, 40 L. Ed. 2d 90 (1974)

(abrogated by, Harlow v. Fitzgerald, 457 U.S. 800, 102 S. Ct. 2727, 73 L. Ed. 2d 396 (1982)).

Deloughery v. City of Chicago, 2002 WL 31654942 (N.D. Ill. 2002) (although court was skeptical of plaintiffs' ability to prove delegation they claimed, amended complaint entitled them to opportunity to try).

"Ultimately plaintiffs may not be able to prove the Complaint's allegations. Ultimately the Class may not be entitled to exactly the type of relief the Complaint seeks. But such ultimate possibilities are not the stuff of which a Rule 12(b)(6) motion is fashioned." Quinones v. Coler, 651 F. Supp. 1028 (N.D. Ill. 1987) (Shadur, J.).

Eighth Circuit
Ring v. First Interstate Mortg., Inc., 984 F.2d 924 (8th Cir. 1993).

Bramlet v. Wilson, 495 F.2d 714 (8th Cir. 1974).

Thomason v. Hospital T. V. Rentals, Inc., 272 F.2d 263 (8th Cir. 1959).

Grover-Tsimi v. Minnesota, 2010 WL 2732508, *4 (D. Minn. 2010), report and recommendation adopted, 2010 WL 2732227 (D. Minn. 2010), aff'd, 449 Fed. Appx. 529 (8th Cir. 2011).

Ninth Circuit
Starr v. Baca, 652 F.3d 1202, 1215 (9th Cir. 2011).

A Rule 12(b)(6) motion does not inquire into whether or not the plaintiff will ultimately prevail on the merits. Mohamed v. Jeppesen Dataplan, Inc., 579 F.3d 943 (9th Cir. 2009), on reh'g en banc, 614 F.3d 1070 (9th Cir. 2010).

Williams v. Gerber Products Co., 523 F.3d 934 (9th Cir. 2008), amended and superseded on denial of reh'g, 552 F.3d 934 (9th Cir. 2008).

Although the court was highly incredulous, the plaintiff's complaint sufficiently stated a claim for relief under the Civil Rights Act. Allison v. California Adult Authority, 419 F.2d 822 (9th Cir. 1969).

Although allegations in the complaint "could be said to tax a reader's credulity," the court reversed a dismissal for failure to state a claim under the Civil Rights Act. Brown v. Brown, 368 F.2d 992, 993 (9th Cir. 1966).

Walker Distributing Co. v. Lucky Lager Brewing Co., 323 F.2d 1 (9th Cir. 1963).

Baca ex rel. Nominal Defendant Insight Enterprises, Inc. v. Crown, 2010 WL 2812712, *3 (D. Ariz. 2010), aff'd, 458 Fed. Appx. 694 (9th Cir. 2011).

Buick v. World Savings Bank, 637 F. Supp. 2d 765 (E.D. Cal. 2008), citing Bell Atlantic Corp. v. Twombly, 550 U.S. 544, 127 S. Ct. 1955, 1965, 167 L. Ed. 2d 929 (2007).

Tenth Circuit
Tyler v. Tsurumi (America), Inc., 425 Fed. Appx. 702 (10th Cir. 2011).

MacArthur v. San Juan County, 309 F.3d 1216 (10th Cir. 2002).

Lymon v. Aramark Corp., 728 F. Supp. 2d 1207, 1215 (D.N.M. 2010), aff'd, 499 Fed. Appx. 771 (10th Cir. 2012) ("A motion to dismiss is a request to dismiss a case before discovery has taken place and thus permits only an assessment whether a complaint is sufficient on its face. In adjudicating a motion to dismiss, a court may neither grant the motion because it believes it is unlikely the plaintiff can prove the allegations, nor may it 'weigh potential evidence that the parties might present at trial' in assessing the motion's merit.") (internal citations omitted), quoting Duran v. Carris, 238 F.3d 1268, 1270 (10th Cir. 2001).

Eleventh Circuit
Jackam v. Hospital Corp. of America Mideast, Ltd., 800 F.2d 1577, 1579-1580 (11th Cir. 1986).

BTG Patent Holdings, LLC v. Bag2Go, GmbH, 193 F. Supp. 3d 1310 (S.D. Fla. 2016).

Carley Capital Group v. Deloitte & Touche, L.L.P., 27 F. Supp. 2d 1324 (N.D. Ga. 1998).

The prospect of recovery is irrelevant. Miccosukee Tribe of Indians of Florida v. U.S., 6 F. Supp. 2d 1346 (S.D. Fla. 1998).

D.C. Circuit
ACLU Foundation of Southern California v. Barr, 952 F.2d 457, 472 (D.C. Cir. 1991), citing Wright & Miller.

Marshall v. Honeywell Technology Solutions, Inc., 536 F. Supp. 2d 59 (D.D.C. 2008).

U.S. ex rel. Harris v. Bernad, 275 F. Supp. 2d 1 (D.D.C. 2003).

See also
Olvera v. Blitt & Gaines, P.C., 2004 WL 887372 (N.D. Ill. 2004).

Martin v. Mears, 602 P.2d 421, 429 n.21 (Alaska 1979), citing Wright & Miller.

Senay v. Meehan, 5 Mass. App. Ct. 854, 364 N.E.2d 1085 (1977), citing Wright & Miller.

 © 2025 Thomson Reuters. No claim to original U.S. Government Works.

71 Case determined on proof

Saeger v. Pacific Life Ins. Co., 94 Fed. Appx. 544 (9th Cir. 2004).

Burstein v. Retirement Account Plan For Employees of Allegheny Health Educ. and Research Foundation, 334 F.3d 365 (3d Cir. 2003), as amended, (Aug. 1, 2003).

Desiano v. Warner-Lambert Co., 326 F.3d 339 (2d Cir. 2003).

Garbini v. Protection One, Inc., 49 Fed. Appx. 169 (9th Cir. 2002).

Bonham v. District of Columbia Library Admin., 989 F.2d 1242, 300 (D.C. Cir. 1993).

Rule 12(b)(6) is not a tool for testing the truth of allegations or for determining whether a plaintiff has evidence to back up those allegations. ACLU Foundation of Southern California v. Barr, 952 F.2d 457, 293 (D.C. Cir. 1991).

Miller v. Glanz, 948 F.2d 1562 (10th Cir. 1991) (court's role is not to examine evidence, but rather to determine whether complaint alone is legally sufficient to state claim for relief).

The office of a motion to dismiss is merely to assess the legal feasibility of the complaint, and not to assay the weight of the evidence that might be offered in support. Geisler v. Petrocelli, 616 F.2d 636 (2d Cir. 1980).

Van Praagh v. Gratton, 993 F. Supp. 2d 293 (E.D. N.Y. 2014) (declining to consider on Rule 12(b)(6) motion matters requiring resolution of facts more appropriate for jury).

Preston v. Seterus, Inc., 931 F. Supp. 2d 743, 749 (N.D. Tex. 2013) ("[D]enial of a 12(b)(6) motion has no bearing on whether a plaintiff ultimately establishes the necessary proof to prevail on a claim that withstands a 12(b)(6) challenge.").

"The strength of plaintiffs' claims is not at issue in a motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim and [the court] therefore will not address those matters." Sanderson v. Nipe, 2007 WL 675488, *2 (D.S.D. 2007).

See also

McBryde v. Amoco Oil Co., 404 A.2d 200, 203 (D.C. 1979), citing Wright & Miller.

Compare

Cochran v. Quest Software, Inc., 328 F.3d 1 (1st Cir. 2003) (standards applicable at summary judgment stage are far more demanding than standards at Rule 12(b)(6) stage).

But see

Dismissal of the action is appropriate when the allegations contained in the plaintiff's complaint are beyond credulity. Dickinson v. French, 416 F. Supp. 429 (S.D. Ala. 1976).

72 Presumptions

Dorce v. City of New York, 2022 WL 2286381, *14 n.9 (S.D. N.Y. 2022) (declining to consider the presumption of regularity at the motion to dismiss stage "since presumptions are evidentiary standards that are inappropriate for evaluation at the pleadings stage").

In re Humira (Adalimumab) Antitrust Litigation, 465 F. Supp. 3d 811, 832 n.15 (N.D. Ill. 2020) (declining to apply presumption of patentees' good-faith patent enforcement because "that presumption is evidentiary, and evidentiary presumptions do not overcome plausible allegations at the pleading stage"), aff'd, 42 F.4th 709 (7th Cir. 2022).

Silvas v. County of Riverside, 2020 WL 4919733, *9 (C.D. Cal. 2020) (declining to apply presumption that a prosecutor exercises independent judgment).

Davis v. Primero Services, Inc., 2020 WL 474864, *3 (E.D. La. 2020) (declining to apply the "presumption that government notices are mailed on the date stated in the notice and received within seven days" becuase it "is an evidentiary presumption" that "is inapposite for a motion to dismiss under 12(b)(6)").

Morris v. Bank of America, 2010 WL 761318, *4 (N.D. Cal. 2010) (declining to apply 15 U.S.C.A. § 1635(c)'s presumption of delivery on a motion to dismiss because it requires the consideration of evidence), citing Wright & Miller.

Glucksman v. First Franklin Financial Corp., 601 F. Supp. 2d 511, 514 (E.D. N.Y. 2009) (same).

In re Xcel Energy, Inc., Securities, Derivative & "ERISA" Litigation, 312 F. Supp. 2d 1165 (D. Minn. 2004).

73 Novel or "extreme" theory

"Mr. Moore alleges a violation of his constitutional rights based on a theory that appears to be an issue of first impression in our circuit. * * * Significantly, there is emerging disagreement among district and circuit courts about what impact, if any, Graham has on the rights of life-sentenced juvenile offenders with respect to parole. * * * That some courts agree with Mr. Moore, while others do not, renders his claim at this stage-at the very least-plausible." Moore v. Georgia Board of Pardons & Paroles, 2024 WL 1765706, *4 (11th Cir. 2024), quoting Wright & Miller.

Berndsen v. North Dakota University System, 7 F.4th 782, 790 n.7 (8th Cir. 2021) ("Four circuits have cautioned against Rule 12(b)(6) dismissals when, as here, complaints include novel legal theories.") (citations omitted), quoting Wright & Miller.

Metts v. Murphy, 363 F.3d 8 (1st Cir. 2004) (in case dealing with major variant from precedent, plaintiff should have chance to develop evidence before merits are resolved and motion to dismiss is inappropriate).

Baker v. Cuomo, 58 F.3d 814 (2d Cir. 1995), vacated in part on reh'g en banc, 85 F.3d 919 (2d Cir. 1996), citing Wright & Miller.

Electrical Const. & Maintenance Co., Inc. v. Maeda Pacific Corp., 764 F.2d 619, 623 (9th Cir. 1985), quoting Wright & Miller.

"It is perhaps ironic that the more extreme or even far-fetched is the asserted theory of liability, the more important it is that the conceptual legal theories be explored and assayed in the light of actual facts, not a pleader's supposition." Shull v. Pilot Life Ins. Co., 313 F.2d 445, 447 (5th Cir. 1963) (Brown, J.).

Soriano v. Sealy Mattress Manufacturing Co. LLC., 471 F. Supp. 3d 1155, 1170 (D. Colo. 2020) ("Given the apparently novel nature of this theory of liability and the absence of any contrary authority, the Court is not inclined to dismiss the claim at this stage of the proceedings. As numerous courts have recognized, courts should generally be reluctant to grant a motion to dismiss when the claim in question asserts a novel theory of recovery, because novel theories of recovery are best tested for legal sufficiency in light of actual, rather than alleged facts.") (citations and internal quotation marks omitted), quoting Wright & Miller, report and recommendation adopted, 2020 WL 5505884 (D. Colo. 2020).

Doe v. Piper, 165 F. Supp. 3d 789, 808 (D. Minn. 2016) (court declined motion to dismiss because briefing was insufficient on novel constitutional claims, but it invited motion for judgment on pleadings or for summary judgment).

In light of the commercial importance of this case, the district court concluded that resolution of the novel legal questions presented should await the development of a full factual record. Google Inc. v. American Blind & Wallpaper Factory, Inc., 2005 WL 832398 (N.D. Cal. 2005).

Reed v. Monahan's Landscape Co., Inc., 2004 WL 422686 (N.D. Ill. 2004) (since issue in case has not been subject of any holding, motion to dismiss denied so that court of appeals can address issue on fully developed factual record).

Compare

"[W]e do not think that it is legally appropriate (or for that matter wise) for a district court to issue a Lone Pine order requiring factual support for the plaintiffs' claims before it has determined that those claims survive a motion to dismiss under Twombly. It is one thing to demand that plaintiffs come forward with some evidence supporting certain basic elements of their claims as a way of organizing (and maybe bifurcating) the discovery process once a case is at issue, and dealing with discrete issues or claims by way of partial summary judgment motions. It is quite another to begin compiling, analyzing, and addressing evidence (pro and con) concerning the plaintiffs' allegations without reciprocal discovery before those allegations have been determined to be legally sufficient under Rule 12(b)(6)." Adinolfe v. United Technologies Corp., 768 F.3d 1161, 1168 (11th Cir. 2014) district court reversed).

But see
Lieberman v. A&W Restaurants, Inc., 2003 WL 21252008 (D. Minn. 2003) (although recognizing importance of allowing new legal theories to be explored, court dismissed claim, stating "however, even creative and inventive legal theories must comport with Rule 12 standards"), citing Wright & Miller.

Ileto v. Glock, Inc., 194 F. Supp. 2d 1040 (C.D. Cal. 2002), aff'd in part, rev'd in part and remanded, 349 F.3d 1191 (9th Cir. 2003) (court in diversity jurisdiction applying forum state substantive law).

But compare
In one case, although applying the same standard as for a Rule 12(b)(6) motion, the district court granted judgment on the pleadings despite the fact that the claim was a matter of first impression. Mueller v. Gallina, 311 F. Supp. 2d 606 (E.D. Mich. 2004), aff'd, 137 Fed. Appx. 847 (6th Cir. 2005).

74 Pro se plaintiffs
Supreme Court
Erickson v. Pardus, 551 U.S. 89, 127 S. Ct. 2197, 167 L. Ed. 2d 1081 (2007) (overturning dismissal of pro se complaint).

First Circuit
Rockwell v. Cape Cod Hosp., 26 F.3d 254 (1st Cir. 1994).

Complaints drafted by pro se plaintiffs will be held to less stringent standards than those made by lawyers, but "[e]ven pro se litigants must do more than make mere conclusory statements regarding constitutional claims." Norton v. Cross Border Initiative, 2007 WL 1657387, *3 (D.N.H. 2007) (not for publication), quoting Brown v. Zavaras, 63 F.3d 967, 972 (10th Cir. 1995).

Travers-Sheik v. Habit Management, Inc., 2006 WL 3775957 (D. Mass. 2006).

Rivera Borrero v. Rivera Correa, 93 F. Supp. 2d 122 (D.P.R. 2000).

Second Circuit
Ackerman v. Ackerman, 549 Fed. Appx. 45, 46 (2d Cir. 2014) ("[W]hile pro se complaints contain sufficient factual allegations to meet the [Twombly] plausibility standard, we interpret them "to raise the strongest arguments that they suggest.").

Hogan v. Fischer, 738 F.3d 509, 515 (2d Cir. 2013).

McGarry v. Pallito, 687 F.3d 505 (2d Cir. 2012).

Zuckman v. Department of Treasury, 448 Fed. Appx. 160 (2d Cir. 2012) (per curiam).

Lopez v. Jet Blue Airways, 662 F.3d 593, 596 (2d Cir. 2011) ("[A] pro se complaint is entitled to a particularly liberal reading.").

Okoh v. Sullivan, 441 Fed. Appx. 813, 814 (2d Cir. 2011).

Baptista v. Hartford Bd. of Educ., 427 Fed. Appx. 39 (2d Cir. 2011).

Bennett v. City of New York, 425 Fed. Appx. 79 (2d Cir. 2011) (liberal construction given to pro se complaints especially appropriate when plaintiff uses boilerplate complaint provided by court).

Mohammad v. New York State Higher Educ. Services Corp., 422 Fed. Appx. 61 (2d Cir. 2011).

Kevilly v. New York, 410 Fed. Appx. 371, 374 (2d Cir. 2010).

Kitchen v. Phipps Houses Group of Companies, 380 Fed. Appx. 99, 100 (2d Cir. 2010).

"While pro se complaints must contain sufficient factual allegations to meet the plausibility standard, we read them with 'special solicitude' and interpret them 'to raise the strongest arguments that they suggest.'" Roman v. Donelli, 347 Fed. Appx. 662 (2d Cir. 2009).

Flaherty v. Lang, 199 F.3d 607 (2d Cir. 1999) (reluctance to dismiss applies with greater force when complaint is submitted pro se).

Hahn v. Star Bank, 190 F.3d 708 (6th Cir. 1999) (pro se complaint held to less stringent standard).

Gomez v. USAA Federal Sav. Bank, 171 F.3d 794 (2d Cir. 1999) (pro se party should be given leave to replead at least one time when it appears from complaint that there may be valid claim).

Courts must construe a pro se plaintiff's complaints liberally and interpret them to raise the strongest possible arguments they suggest. Moreover, the court may consider materials outside the pro se litigant's complaint (for instance, in the plaintiff's papers opposing the motion to dismiss) to the extent they are consistent with the complaint. Martinez v. Aycock-West, 164 F. Supp. 3d 502, 508 (S.D. N.Y. 2016).

Hernandez v. Coughlin, 18 F.3d 133 (2d Cir. 1994) (greater deference for pro se and civil rights plaintiffs).

Greater caution is needed for pro se and civil rights plaintiffs. Sykes v. James, 13 F.3d 515 (2d Cir. 1993).

Ferran v. Town of Nassau, 11 F.3d 21 (2d Cir. 1993).

Moran v. Pallito, 2010 WL 5648722 (D. Vt. 2010), report and recommendation adopted, 2011 WL 282398 (D. Vt. 2011).

Fowlkes v. Parker, 2010 WL 5490739 (N.D. N.Y. 2010), report and recommendation adopted, 2011 WL 13726 (N.D. N.Y. 2011).

Derisme v. Hunt Leibert Jacobson, PC, 2010 WL 4683916, *1 (D. Conn. 2010) ("Even after Twombly, however, the Court must construe the pleadings of pro se litigants liberally, because '[i]mplicit in the right to self-representation is an obligation on the part of the court to make reasonable allowances to protect pro se litigants from inadvertent forfeiture of important rights because of their lack of legal training.'"), quoting Abbas v. Dixon, 480 F.3d 636, 639 (2d Cir. 2007) (quotation marks omitted).

Hudson Valley Black Press v. I.R.S., 307 F. Supp. 2d 543 (S.D. N.Y. 2004), aff'd, 409 F.3d 106 (2d Cir. 2005) (Rule 12(b)(6) motion granted despite liberal construction for pro se plaintiff).

Third Circuit

Huertas v. Galaxy Asset Management, 641 F.3d 28, 32 (3d Cir. 2011).

Zurawski v. Southeastern Pennsylvania Transp. Authority, 441 Fed. Appx. 133 (3d Cir. 2011).

Winslow v. Prison Health Services, 406 Fed. Appx. 671, 674 (3d Cir. 2011).

Brookhart v. Rohr, 385 Fed. Appx. 67 (3d Cir. 2010).

Washam v. Stesis, 321 Fed. Appx. 104 (3d Cir. 2009) (prosecutorial and judicial immunity).

Schneller ex rel. Schneller v. Fox Subacute at Clara Burke, 317 Fed. Appx. 135 (3d Cir. 2008).

Paylor v. Allegheny County Family Division/Domestic Relations, 2017 WL 4235944, *3-6 (W.D. Pa. 2017) (construing the pro se plaintiff's pleadings liberally but still finding the plaintiff's "claims in his amended complaint * * * meritless or otherwise not subject to review by this court for a variety of reasons," including the Younger abstention doctrine, the fact that "federal suits against the state are barred by the Eleventh Amendment," and the possible individual defendants having judicial or quasi-judicial immunity" (footnote and citation omitted)).

A court reluctant to dismiss pro se complaints for pleading deficiencies may alternatively grant a motion for a more definite statement so that the complaint sets forth facts with sufficient particularity. Parson v. Phelps, 193 F. Supp. 3d 353 (D. Del. 2016).

Mack v. Yost, 979 F. Supp. 2d 639 (W.D. Pa. 2013), aff'd in part, vacated in part, remanded, 839 F.3d 286 (3d Cir. 2016) (prisoner pro se complaint), citing U.S. ex rel. Walker v. Fayette County, Pa., 599 F.2d 573, 575 (3d Cir. 1979).

King v. Doe, 2011 WL 2669221 (D. Del. 2011), subsequent determination, 2011 WL 4351797 (D. Del. 2011).

Pumphrey v. Smith, 2010 WL 4983675 (W.D. Pa. 2010).

Chambers v. Hathaway, 2010 WL 2804516, *2 (W.D. Pa. 2010), aff'd, 406 Fed. Appx. 571 (3d Cir. 2011) ("If the court can reasonably read pleadings to state a valid claim on which the litigant could prevail, it should do so despite failure to cite proper legal authority, confusion of legal theories, poor syntax and sentence construction, or litigant's unfamiliarity with pleading requirements.").

Boggi v. Medical Review and Accrediting Council, 39 Nat'l Disability Law Rep. P 256, 2009 WL 2951022 (E.D. Pa. 2009), aff'd on other grounds, 415 Fed. Appx. 411 (3d Cir. 2011).

Jones v. Williams, 2007 WL 1723674 (D. Del. 2007) (pro se plaintiff's amended complaint bringing § 1983 claim dismissed by judge applying Rule 12(b)(6) standards).

Brown v. Peoples Sec. Ins., 158 F.R.D. 350 (E.D. Pa. 1994) (before dismissing pro se complaint, court must inform plaintiff with notice of deficiencies so he can amend effectively).

Fourth Circuit

King v. Rubenstein, 825 F.3d 206 (4th Cir. 2016) (court construed pro se inmate's complaint liberally and found one defendant liable under 42 U.S.C.A. § 1983, but stopped short of doing so for complaint's less robust allegations against other defendants).

Miller v. Carolinas Healthcare System, 561 Fed. Appx. 239 (4th Cir. 2014).

Spencer v. Earley, 278 Fed. Appx. 254 (4th Cir. 2008).

Foster v. Howard Community College, 2014 WL 758027, *2 (D. Md. 2014).

Adler v. Anchor Funding Services, LLC, 2011 WL 1843226 (W.D. N.C. 2011) (court will construe pro se pleadings liberally, but plaintiff still must allege facts sufficient to state all elements of claim).

Taylor v. Ozmint, 2011 WL 286133, *2 (D.S.C. 2011), report and recommendation adopted, 2011 WL 285876 (D.S.C. 2011), order vacated, (Feb. 1, 2011) ("[I]f the court can reasonably read the pleadings to state a valid claim on which the plaintiff could prevail, it should do so; however, a district court may not rewrite a complaint to include claims that were never presented.").

Burnley v. Norwood, 2010 WL 3063779, *5 (E.D. Va. 2010) ("Though incorporating the Twombly and Iqbal pleading standards, the Court is mindful that a pro se plaintiff's complaint is to be construed liberally and held to a less stringent standard than a pleading drafted by an attorney.").

Gardner v. Hawks, 2010 WL 2990108, *2 (W.D. Va. 2010) ("Although the court liberally construes pro se complaints, the court does not act as the inmate's advocate, sua sponte developing statutory and constitutional claims the inmate failed to clearly raise on the face of his complaint.") (internal citations omitted).

Wood v. Wood, 2010 WL 2813760, *3 (S.D. W. Va. 2010), aff'd, 426 Fed. Appx. 197 (4th Cir. 2011).

Adams v. Montgomery College, 2010 WL 2813346 (D. Md. 2010).

Young Bok Song v. Welch, 2010 WL 2813305 (E.D. N.C. 2010), aff'd, 410 Fed. Appx. 648 (4th Cir. 2011).

Smith v. Commonwealth of Virginia, 2009 WL 2175759, *2 (E.D. Va. 2009), aff'd, 353 Fed. Appx. 790 (4th Cir. 2009) ("The Iqbal/Twombly standard applies to pro se litigants as well as represented parties, with the caveat that, as always, pro se pleadings are to be liberally construed.").

Robinson v. Federal Bureau of Prisons, 2007 WL 692048 (N.D. W. Va. 2007) (court dismissed complaint even though it liberally construes pro se civil rights complaints).

Taylor v. Barnett, 105 F. Supp. 2d 483 (E.D. Va. 2000).

Peck v. Merletti, 64 F. Supp. 2d 599 (E.D. Va. 1999).

Ragins v. Gilmore, 48 F. Supp. 2d 566 (E.D. Va. 1999) (dismissal of pro se civil rights complaint because overbroad is improper).

Fifth Circuit

Rogers v. Boatright, 709 F.3d 403, 407 (5th Cir. 2013).

Adams v. Bank of America, 475 Fed. Appx. 526 (5th Cir. 2012) (per curiam).

Muhammed v. Lone Star College System, 460 Fed. Appx. 341, 342 (5th Cir. 2012) (per curiam).

Hale v. King, 642 F.3d 492, 499 (5th Cir. 2011).

Lowery v. Capital One Mortg., 429 Fed. Appx. 377 (5th Cir. 2011).

Amanduron v. American Airlines, 416 Fed. Appx. 421, 423 (5th Cir. 2011).

Pena v. U.S., 157 F.3d 984 (5th Cir. 1998) (dismissals of pro se complaints for failure to state claim are disfavored and court should grant pro se party every reasonable opportunity to amend).

"Because she appears pro se, Edmond's pleadings are entitled to more lenient scrutiny than pleadings drafted by lawyers. But no amount of liberal construction could manufacture a coherent statement from within Edmond's Complaint, much less a viable legal claim. The rambling Complaint lacks an arguable basis in law because the facts alleged are 'clearly baseless, a category encompassing allegations that are fanciful, fantastic, and delusional.' As such, Edmond's claims are frivolous. Accordingly, Judge Pittman should dismiss this case sua sponte for failure to state a claim on which relief can be granted." Edmond v. Brap, LLC, 2021 WL 5969294, *2 (N.D. Tex. 2021) (citations omitted) (Ray, Magistrate Judge), report and recommendation adopted, 2021 WL 5967561 (N.D. Tex. 2021).

Shaunfield v. Experian Information Solutions, Inc., 991 F. Supp. 2d 786 (N.D. Tex. 2014).

Peppers v. Graves, 2011 WL 1775736 (M.D. La. 2011).

Even when accounting for a plaintiff's pro se status, not even the most liberal construction of a complaint that consists of conclusory statements without supporting facts can survive a motion to dismiss. Myers v. Kaufman County, 2010 WL 5480651 (N.D. Tex. 2010), report and recommendation adopted, 2011 WL 9055 (N.D. Tex. 2011).

Lowe v. American Eurocopter, LLC, 24 A.D. Cas. (BNA) 40, 2010 WL 5232523 (N.D. Miss. 2010).

Jones v. First Bank and Trust, 2010 WL 2836150, *3 (E.D. La. 2010) ("Complaints drafted by pro se litigants are not held to the standard of complaints drafted by a professional attorney, but legal conclusions are not sufficient to prevent a motion to dismiss."), vacated, 2010 WL 11494062 (E.D. La. 2010).

Ivy v. U.S. Dept. of Agriculture (FSA), 2010 WL 2559885, *4 (N.D. Miss. 2010) ("Despite the liberality with which the Court construes a pro se plaintiff's pleadings, conclusory allegations or legal conclusions dressed as factual conclusions will not circumvent a motion to dismiss.").

Sixth Circuit

Bridge v. Ocwen Federal Bank, FSB, 681 F.3d 355, 358 (6th Cir. 2012).

Davis v. Prison Health Services, 679 F.3d 433, 437 (6th Cir. 2012).

Frengler v. General Motors, 482 Fed. Appx. 975, 977 (6th Cir. 2012) ("[Plaintiff's] amended complaint consists of eighty-one pages of medical bills, medical records, and workers' compensation proceeding records, without any suggestion of a cause of action. Even a pro se pleading must provide the opposing party with notice of the relief sought, and it is not within the purview of the district court to conjure up claims never presented.").

Agramonte v. Shartle, 491 Fed. Appx. 557 (6th Cir. 2012) (Moore, J., dissenting) ("Given the more lenient pleading standard afforded pro se litigants, however, I believe that a few of the plaintiffs' claims should have been permitted to move forward.").

Brown v. Matauszak, 415 Fed. Appx. 608, 613 (6th Cir. 2011) ("The court will consider documents filed after the complaint as part of the pleadings.") (internal quotation marks omitted).

Montgomery v. Huntington Bank, 346 F.3d 693 (6th Cir. 2003).

Herron v. Harrison, 203 F.3d 410 (6th Cir. 2000).

Jourdan v. Jabe, 951 F.2d 108 (6th Cir. 1991).

Berry v. Main Street Bank, 977 F. Supp. 2d 766 (E.D. Mich. 2013) ("The leniency with which courts construe pro se plaintiffs' complaints, however, does not abrogate the basic pleading requirements designed to ensure that courts do "not have to guess at the nature of the claim asserted. * * * Pro se plaintiffs still must provide more than bare assertions of legal conclusions to survive a motion to dismiss."), citing Grinter v. Knight, 532 F.3d 567, 577 (6th Cir. 2008); Wells v. Brown, 891 F.2d 591, 594 (6th Cir. 1989).

Although the pleading standard for a pro se plaintiff is less stringent than for plaintiffs whose pleadings are drafted by lawyers, that lenience has a limit: "'[T]o survive a motion to dismiss, the complaint must contain either direct or inferential allegations respecting all the material elements to sustain recovery under some viable legal theory.'" Baker v. County of Missaukee, 2011 WL 1670953, *2 (W.D. Mich. 2011), report and recommendation adopted, 2011 WL 1670949

(W.D. Mich. 2011), quoting Bishop v. Lucent Technologies, Inc., 520 F.3d 516, 519 (6th Cir. 2008).

Henton v. Wells Fargo Bank, N.A., 2011 WL 111362 (E.D. Tenn. 2011) (pro se pleading will be construed more liberally than pleading drafted by lawyers but still must be comprehensible and adhere to basic pleading essentials).

Shoucair v. Williams, 2010 WL 5015348, *3 (E.D. Mich. 2010), report and recommendation adopted, 2010 WL 5014378 (E.D. Mich. 2010) ("[T]he Court must still read plaintiff's pro se complaint indulgently and accept plaintiff's allegations as true, unless they are clearly irrational or wholly incredible.").

Nelson v. Shelton, 2010 WL 2803956, *2 (M.D. Tenn. 2010), report and recommendation adopted, 2010 WL 3211122 (M.D. Tenn. 2010) ("A motion to dismiss under Rule 12(b)(6) of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure is reviewed under the standard that the Court must accept as true all of the allegations contained in the complaint, resolve all doubts in the plaintiff's favor, and construe the complaint liberally in favor of the pro se plaintiff.").

El v. I.R.S., 2008-1 U.S. Tax Cas. (CCH) P 50379, 101 A.F.T.R.2d 2008-2503, 2008 WL 2338621 (E.D. Mich. 2008).

Aaron v. Bob Evans Restaurant, 477 F. Supp. 2d 853 (N.D. Ohio 2007) (discrimination claim fails because plaintiff did not identify protected class within Title VII and claim does not provide basis affording relief).

Zolman v. I.R.S., 87 F. Supp. 2d 763 (W.D. Mich. 1999).

Ashiegbu v. Purviance, 76 F. Supp. 2d 824 (S.D. Ohio 1998), judgment aff'd, 194 F.3d 1311 (6th Cir. 1999).

Anderson v. Office of Atty. Gen., Dept. of Justice, 890 F. Supp. 648 (E.D. Mich. 1995) (dismissing pro se complaint).

Seventh Circuit

Arnett v. Webster, 658 F.3d 742, 751 (7th Cir. 2011).

Swanson v. Citibank, N.A., 614 F.3d 400 (7th Cir. 2010).

White v. Monohan, 326 Fed. Appx. 385 (7th Cir. 2009) (pro se plaintiff's complaint construed more liberally with all inferences in his favor).

Henderson v. Sheahan, 196 F.3d 839 (7th Cir. 1999) (court can dismiss pro se complaint for failure to state claim only if it appears that plaintiff can prove no set of facts in support of claim that would entitle him to relief).

"A document filed pro se is to be liberally construed, and a pro se complaint, however inartfully pleaded, must be held to less stringent standards than formal pleadings drafted by lawyers." Bey v. Finch, 2022 WL 394699, *1 (N.D. Ind. 2022) (quoting Erickson v. Pardus, 551 U.S. 89, 94, 127 S. Ct. 2197, 167 L. Ed. 2d 1081 (2007)).

Hart v. Amazon.com, Inc., 191 F. Supp. 3d 809 (N.D. Ill. 2016), aff'd, 845 F.3d 802 (7th Cir. 2017).

Quarles v. Merrillville Community School Corp., 2010 WL 4904466, *2 (N.D. Ind. 2010).

Shepard v. Mikulich, 2010 WL 2719107 (N.D. Ind. 2010) ("The Court will review the pro se Plaintiff's Complaint more liberally than it would one that was drafted by a trained attorney.").

James v. Illinois Sexually Dangerous Persons Act, 2009 WL 2567910 (S.D. Ill. 2009), aff'd, 373 Fed. Appx. 619 (7th Cir. 2010).

Perry v. Scaible, 2008 WL 2324641 (E.D. Wis. 2008).

Elizzar v. Meyers, 2004 WL 539986 (N.D. Ill. 2004).

Morgan v. Centers for New Horizons, Inc., 2004 WL 524441 (N.D. Ill. 2004).

Reed v. McBride, 96 F. Supp. 2d 845 (N.D. Ind. 2000).

Craig v. Cohn, 80 F. Supp. 2d 944 (N.D. Ind. 2000).

Moore v. Speybroeck, 74 F. Supp. 2d 850 (N.D. Ind. 1999).

Cleaves v. City of Chicago, 68 F. Supp. 2d 963 (N.D. Ill. 1999).

Johnson v. Collins, 58 F. Supp. 2d 890 (N.D. Ill. 1999), judgment vacated, 5 Fed. Appx. 479 (7th Cir. 2001) (pro se complaint not required to identify correct legal theory).

Lewis v. Cook County Dept. of Corrections, 28 F. Supp. 2d 1073 (N.D. Ill. 1998) (courts must insure pro se complaint given fair and meaningful consideration).

Jones v. Detella, 12 F. Supp. 2d 824 (N.D. Ill. 1998).

Waters v. Brown, 5 F. Supp. 2d 654 (N.D. Ind. 1998), judgment aff'd, 175 F.3d 1022 (7th Cir. 1999).

Zimmerman v. Hoard, 5 F. Supp. 2d 633 (N.D. Ind. 1998).

Jackson v. DeTella, 998 F. Supp. 901 (N.D. Ill. 1998).

Freeman v. Godinez, 996 F. Supp. 822 (N.D. Ill. 1998) (considering allegations outside of pro se plaintiff's complaint).

McLaughlin v. Cook County Dept. of Corrections, 993 F. Supp. 661 (N.D. Ill. 1998).

Naguib v. Illinois Dept. of Professional Regulation, 986 F. Supp. 1082 (N.D. Ill. 1997) (pro se litigants should be given every opportunity to state cognizable claim, but courts need not permit unlimited amendments).

Copeland v. Northwestern Memorial Hosp., 984 F. Supp. 1182 (N.D. Ill. 1997).

Evans v. Allen, 981 F. Supp. 1102 (N.D. Ill. 1997).

Thomas v. Chicago Housing Authority, 981 F. Supp. 558 (N.D. Ill. 1997).

Oswalt v. Godinez, 894 F. Supp. 1181 (N.D. Ill. 1995).

Robinson v. Illinois State Correctional Center (Stateville) Warden, 890 F. Supp. 715 (N.D. Ill. 1995).

Simmons v. Honrath, 883 F. Supp. 371 (E.D. Wis. 1995).

Wilson v. Cook County Bd. of Commissioners, 878 F. Supp. 1163 (N.D. Ill. 1995).

Landfair v. Sheahan, 878 F. Supp. 1106 (N.D. Ill. 1995).

Taylor v. Anderson, 868 F. Supp. 1024 (N.D. Ill. 1994).

Marozsan v. U.S., 849 F. Supp. 617 (N.D. Ind. 1994), judgment aff'd, 90 F.3d 1284 (7th Cir. 1996).

Eighth Circuit

Smith v. St. Bernards Regional Medical Center, 19 F.3d 1254 (8th Cir. 1994).

Kramer v. America's Wholesale Lenders, 2011 WL 577390 (E.D. Mo. 2011).

Callaghan v. Department of Veterans Affairs, 2010 WL 4973731 (E.D. Ark. 2010).

Hollowell v. Hosto, 2010 WL 1416519, *2 (E.D. Ark. 2010), order aff'd as modified, 389 Fed. Appx. 583 (8th Cir. 2010) ("Although pro se complaints are to be liberally construed, 'they still must allege sufficient facts to support the claims advanced.'"), quoting Stone v. Harry, 364 F.3d 912, 914 (8th Cir. 2004).

DePugh v. Clemens, 966 F. Supp. 898 (W.D. Mo. 1997), aff'd, 129 F.3d 121 (8th Cir. 1997).

The complaint was dismissed for violation of Rule 8(a)(2). It was incomprehensible and plaintiff who had completed two years of law school had capacity to plead correctly. Thomson v. Olson, 866 F. Supp. 1267 (D.N.D. 1994), aff'd, 56 F.3d 69 (8th Cir. 1995).

Ninth Circuit

Litmon v. Harris, 768 F.3d 1237, 1241 (9th Cir. 2014).

Engebretson v. Mahoney, 724 F.3d 1034, 1037 (9th Cir. 2013).

Wilhelm v. Rotman, 680 F.3d 1113, 1121 (9th Cir. 2012).

Watison v. Carter, 668 F.3d 1108, 1112 (9th Cir. 2012).

Johnson v. Lucent Technologies Inc., 653 F.3d 1000 (9th Cir. 2011), as amended, (Aug. 19, 2011).

Hebbe v. Pliler, 611 F.3d 1202, 1205 (9th Cir. 2010), opinion amended and superseded, 627 F.3d 338 (9th Cir. 2010) ("Because Iqbal incorporated the Twombly pleading standard and Twombly did not alter courts' treatment of pro se filings, we continue to construe pro se filings liberally. This is particularly important where, as in the instant case, a petitioner is a pro se prisoner litigant in a civil rights matter.").

Bird v. Real Time Resolutions, Inc., 183 F. Supp. 3d 1058, 1061 (N.D. Cal. 2016) (court should not dismiss pro se complaint unless court is sure beyond doubt that plaintiff cannot prove claim).

Spreadbury v. Bitterroot Public Library, 2011 WL 4499043 (D. Mont. 2011), report and recommendation adopted, 2011 WL 4499030 (D. Mont. 2011).

Wendt v. Director of Dept. of Revenue and Taxation, 2011 WL 1559830 (D. Guam 2011).

Ellis v. GMAC Mortg., Inc., 2011 WL 1086530 (D. Or. 2011).

Zepeda v. Tate, 2010 WL 4977596 (E.D. Cal. 2010).

Cotton v. Cate, 2010 WL 2867099 (N.D. Cal. 2010), aff'd, 578 Fed. Appx. 712 (9th Cir. 2014) (First and Fourteenth Amendments).

Balthazor v. Union Pacific R.R. Co., 2010 WL 2836956 (D. Ariz. 2010).

Clark v. Sypolt, 2010 WL 2803084 (E.D. Wash. 2010).

Dauven v. U.S. Bank Nat. Ass'n, 2010 WL 2640119, *3 (D. Or. 2010), report and recommendation adopted, 2010 WL 2640115 (D. Or. 2010) ("In cases involving a plaintiff proceeding pro se, courts construe the pleadings liberally and afford the plaintiff the benefit of any doubt. Thus, a pro se litigant is entitled to notice of the deficiencies in the complaint and an opportunity to amend, unless the complaint's deficiencies cannot be cured by amendment.") (internal citations omitted).

Carter v. Paynter, 2010 WL 430706, *1 (W.D. Wash. 2010) ("On a Rule 12(b)(6) motion to dismiss, the Court must accept all of the material allegations in plaintiff's complaint as true and liberally construe those facts in the light most favorable to plaintiff, as a pro se litigant.").

Anderson v. Fishback, 2009 WL 2423327 (E.D. Cal. 2009).

Hawkins v. San Mateo County Law Library, 2007 WL 1795749 (N.D. Cal. 2007), citing Erickson v. Pardus, 551 U.S. 89, 127 S. Ct. 2197, 2200, 167 L. Ed. 2d 1081 (2007).

Beusgens v. Galloway, 2007 WL 1674097 (D. Or. 2007) (court dismissed pro se complaint despite liberal review without leave to amend).

Swenson v. Bush, 2007 WL 1662363 (D. Idaho 2007) (pro se plaintiff's incoherent complaint was construed liberally but nevertheless was found inadequate; therefore, plaintiff was allowed time to file written response on why complaint should not be dismissed).

Consiglio v. Woodford, 2007 WL 1655496 (E.D. Cal. 2007), report and recommendation adopted, 2007 WL 2326082 (E.D. Cal. 2007).

Moore v. U.S., 193 F.R.D. 647 (N.D. Cal. 2000) (before district court can dismiss complaint of pro se litigant, it must provide notice of deficiencies and opportunity to amend complaint effectively).

Pesci v. I.R.S., 67 F. Supp. 2d 1189 (D. Nev. 1999), aff'd, 225 F.3d 663 (9th Cir. 2000).

Simson v. U.S., 56 F. Supp. 2d 1193 (D. Or. 1999).

Bailey v. I.R.S., 188 F.R.D. 346 (D. Ariz. 1999), aff'd, 232 F.3d 893 (9th Cir. 2000).

Ricotta v. State of Cal., 4 F. Supp. 2d 961 (S.D. Cal. 1998), aff'd, 173 F.3d 861 (9th Cir. 1999) (court must construe pleadings liberally but may not supply essential elements of claim that were not initially pled; vague and conclusory allegations of civil rights violations are not sufficient).

Diaz v. Carlson, 5 F. Supp. 2d 809 (C.D. Cal. 1997), aff'd, 142 F.3d 443 (9th Cir. 1998).

Brian v. Gugin, 853 F. Supp. 358 (D. Idaho 1994), decision aff'd, 46 F.3d 1138 (9th Cir. 1995).

Collins v. Palczewski, 841 F. Supp. 333 (D. Nev. 1993).

Tenth Circuit

Mayfield v. Bethards, 826 F.3d 1252 (10th Cir. 2016).

Childs v. Miller, 713 F.3d 1262, 1264 (10th Cir. 2013).

Kenney v. AG Equipment Co., 462 Fed. Appx. 841, 841 n.1 (10th Cir. 2012).

Watkins v. Craft, 455 Fed. Appx. 853, 854 (10th Cir. 2012) ("Because Mr. Watkins is proceeding pro se, this court reviews the record and construes his pleadings liberally.").

Harrison v. Morton, 490 Fed. Appx. 988 (10th Cir. 2012).

Jallali v. Secretary, U.S. Dept. of Educ., 437 Fed. Appx. 862 (11th Cir. 2011).

Mendia v. City of Wellington, 432 Fed. Appx. 796 (10th Cir. 2011).

McGinnis v. Freudenthal, 426 Fed. Appx. 625 (10th Cir. 2011).

Marshall v. Morton, 421 Fed. Appx. 832 (10th Cir. 2011).

Fournerat v. Wisconsin Law Review, 420 Fed. Appx. 816 (10th Cir. 2011).

Kenney v. Swift Trans. Inc., 410 Fed. Appx. 143, 144 (10th Cir. 2011).

Rocha v. CCCF Admin., 408 Fed. Appx. 141, 143 (10th Cir. 2011) (pro se plaintiff's materials entitled to solicitous construction).

Matthews v. LaBarge, Inc., 407 Fed. Appx. 277, 280 (10th Cir. 2011) (pro se pleadings construed liberally).

Hill v. City of Oklahoma City, 448 Fed. Appx. 814 (10th Cir. 2011).

Wideman v. Garcia, 382 Fed. Appx. 741, 742 (10th Cir. 2010).

Edge v. Payne, 342 Fed. Appx. 395 (10th Cir. 2009).

Castaldo v. Denver Public Schools, 276 Fed. Appx. 839 (10th Cir. 2008).

Beck v. City of Muskogee Police Dept., 195 F.3d 553 (10th Cir. 1999).

Malekzadeh v. Heideman Law Group PC, 185 F.3d 874 (10th Cir. 1999).

Smith v. Kitchen, 156 F.3d 1025 (10th Cir. 1997).

Brown v. Zavaras, 63 F.3d 967 (10th Cir. 1995) (pro se plaintiffs must do more than assert mere conclusions).

Janke v. Price, 43 F.3d 1390 (10th Cir. 1994).

"As to Defendants' first argument, they claim the proposed amendment 'contains only conclusory allegations which do not raise a right to relief above a speculative level.' But, the Court must afford Plaintiffs some leniency as pro se parties, and holds their pleadings to a 'less stringent standard than formal pleadings drafted by lawyers.'" Hirt v. Unified School District No. 287, 308 F. Supp. 3d 1157 (D. Kan. 2018) (citation omitted).

A pro se complaint will be construed more liberally than pleadings drafted by lawyers, but there are limits to that lenience: "A court may not assume that a plaintiff can prove facts that have not been alleged, or that a defendant has violated laws in ways that a plaintiff has not alleged." Hastings v. Barbee, 2011 WL 2610132, *2 (D. Colo. 2011), report and recommendation adopted, 2011 WL 2610194 (D. Colo. 2011).

Brown v. Wal-Mart Stores, Inc., 2011 WL 1457950 (D. Kan. 2011), aff'd, 436 Fed. Appx. 835 (10th Cir. 2011).

Campbell v. Milyard, 2010 WL 3023360, *3 (D. Colo. 2010), judgment aff'd, 496 Fed. Appx. 774 (10th Cir. 2012) ("Where the Court 'can reasonably read the pleadings to state a valid claim on which the plaintiff could prevail, it should do so,' regardless of the [pro se] plaintiff's confusion of legal theories or unfamiliarity with pleading requirements."), quoting Hall v. Bellmon, 935 F.2d 1106, 1110 (10th Cir. 1991).

White v. Ockey, 241 Fed. Appx. 462 (10th Cir. 2007) (dismissing pro se complaint).

Frank v. Bush, 2010 WL 1408405, *3 (D. Kan. 2010), aff'd, 391 Fed. Appx. 745 (10th Cir. 2010).

Lindsey v. Bowlin, 557 F. Supp. 2d 1225 (D. Kan. 2008).

Ledbetter v. City of Topeka, Kan., 112 F. Supp. 2d 1239 (D. Kan. 2000), aff'd, 61 Fed. Appx. 574 (10th Cir. 2003).

Overton v. U.S., 74 F. Supp. 2d 1034 (D.N.M. 1999), judgment aff'd, 202 F.3d 282 (10th Cir. 2000).

Banks v. Rubin, 72 F. Supp. 2d 1198 (D. Colo. 1999), also published at, 84 A.F.T.R.2d 99-5529, 1999 WL 674575 (D. Colo. 1999).

Marrie v. Nickels, 70 F. Supp. 2d 1252 (D. Kan. 1999).

Smith v. Plati, 56 F. Supp. 2d 1195 (D. Colo. 1999), aff'd, 258 F.3d 1167 (10th Cir. 2001) (if court reasonably can construe pro se complaint as stating claim, it should do so).

Van Deelen v. City of Eudora, Kan., 53 F. Supp. 2d 1223 (D. Kan. 1999) (court should allow pro se plaintiff reasonable opportunity to amend complaint but should not assume role of advocate).

Walton v. Shanelec, 19 F. Supp. 2d 1209 (D. Kan. 1998) (dismissing complaint).

Wesley v. Don Stein Buick, Inc., 996 F. Supp. 1299 (D. Kan. 1998) (if pro se plaintiff's complaint reasonably can be read to state claim upon which plaintiff could prevail, court should deny motion to dismiss despite plaintiff's failure to cite proper authority, confusion of various legal theories, or unfamiliarity with pleading requirements).

Dickerson v. Leavitt Rentals, 995 F. Supp. 1242 (D. Kan. 1998), aff'd, 153 F.3d 726 (10th Cir. 1998).

Moll v. Carter, 179 F.R.D. 609 (D. Kan. 1998) (court should dismiss pro se claims that are supported only by vague and conclusory allegations).

Roemer v. Security Bancshares, Inc., 978 F. Supp. 988 (D. Kan. 1997).

De Young v. State of Kan., 890 F. Supp. 949 (D. Kan. 1995), judgment aff'd, 69 F.3d 547 (10th Cir. 1995).

Dees v. Vendel, 856 F. Supp. 1531 (D. Kan. 1994).

George v. HEK America, Inc., 157 F.R.D. 489 (D. Colo. 1994).

Goss v. Sullivan, 839 F. Supp. 1532 (D. Wyo. 1993).

Eleventh Circuit

Lane v. Guaranty Bank, 552 Fed. Appx. 934, 936 (11th Cir. 2014).

Spaulding v. Woodall, 551 Fed. Appx. 984, 986 (11th Cir. 2014).

Tennyson v. ASCAP, 477 Fed. Appx. 608 (11th Cir. 2012) (per curiam).

McCauley v. Georgia, 466 Fed. Appx. 832, 835 (11th Cir. 2012).

Kendall v. Thaxton Road LLC, 443 Fed. Appx. 388 (11th Cir. 2011).

Serpentfoot v. Rome City Com'n, 426 Fed. Appx. 884 (11th Cir. 2011).

Martinez v. Ashtin Leasing, Inc., 417 Fed. Appx. 883, 884 (11th Cir. 2011).

Ausar-El ex rel. Small, Jr. v. BAC (Bank of America) Home Loans Servicing LP, 448 Fed. Appx. 1 (11th Cir. 2011).

Porter v. Duval County School Bd., 406 Fed. Appx. 460, 462 (11th Cir. 2010) (pleadings for pro se plaintiffs should be construed liberally but court should not rewrite otherwise deficient pleading to sustain action).

Carvel v. Godley, 404 Fed. Appx. 359, 361 (11th Cir. 2010).

Jemison v. Mitchell, 380 Fed. Appx. 904 (11th Cir. 2010) (allowing pro se plaintiff leave to amend his complaint).

Peart v. Shippie, 345 Fed. Appx. 384 (11th Cir. 2009).

Sarver v. Jackson, 344 Fed. Appx. 526 (11th Cir. 2009).

Bell v. Florida Highway Patrol, 325 Fed. Appx. 758 (11th Cir. 2009).

Hindman v. Healy, 278 Fed. Appx. 893 (11th Cir. 2008).

GJR Investments, Inc. v. County of Escambia, Fla., 132 F.3d 1359 (11th Cir. 1998) (courts should show leniency to pro se litigants but should not serve as de facto counsel or rewrite otherwise deficient pleadings).

"Courts afford a liberal construction to a pro se litigant's pleadings, holding them to a more lenient standard than those drafted by an attorney. Erickson v. Pardus, 551 U.S. 89, 94 (2007); Haines v. Kerner, 404 U.S. 519, 520 (1972). However, this liberal construction does not mean that courts have a duty to re-write the complaint. Snow v. DirecTV, Inc., 450 F.3d 1314, 1320 (11th Cir. 2006)." Denson v. Riley, 2023 WL 3856714, *1 (S.D. Ga. 2023), report and recommendation adopted, 2023 WL 3852808 (S.D. Ga. 2023).

Goodykoontz v. Diamond's Gentleman's Club, 187 F. Supp. 3d 1332 (S.D. Ala. 2016) (since plaintiff would be allowed to replead to include correct definition of employer under ADEA, court construed complaint liberally and found factual allegations qualified defendant as employer).

Ford v. Central Loan Admin., 2011 WL 4702912 (S.D. Ala. 2011) (pro se pleadings are entitled to deferential review).

Hennington v. Bank of America, 2010 WL 5860296 (N.D. Ga. 2010), report and recommendation adopted, 2011 WL 705173 (N.D. Ga. 2011).

Crim v. Manalich, 2010 WL 2757223, *1 (M.D. Fla. 2010) ("The Court may consider documents which are central to plaintiff's claim whose authenticity is not challenged, whether the document is physically attached to the complaint or not, without converting the motion into one for summary judgment.").

Holland v. Pilot Travel Centers, LLC, 2010 WL 2732047, *3 (M.D. Ga. 2010) ("The Court affords a pro se plaintiff wide latitude when construing his pleadings and papers. Even so, a pro se litigant is not exempt from complying with relevant rules of procedural and substantive law.") (internal citations omitted).

Muhammad v. Option One Mortg. Corp., 2010 WL 2712250, *3 (S.D. Ala. 2010).

Washington v. Department of Children and Families, 2007 WL 1625799 (M.D. Fla. 2007), aff'd in part, vacated in part, 256 Fed. Appx. 326 (11th Cir. 2007).

Gibbs v. Republic Tobacco, L.P., 119 F. Supp. 2d 1288 (M.D. Fla. 2000).

Harris v. Bush, 106 F. Supp. 2d 1272 (N.D. Fla. 2000).

Although the pleadings of a pro se litigant should be construed liberally, the pro se litigant still must meet the minimal pleading standards. Mayoral-Amy v. BHI Corp., 180 F.R.D. 456 (S.D. Fla. 1998).

D.C. Circuit

Although a pro se complaint is read less stringently than a complaint prepared by lawyers, it still must plead factual matter that leads to an inference of misconduct above the merely possible. Jones v. Horne, 634 F.3d 588, 596 (D.C. Cir. 2011).

Razzoli v. Federal Bureau of Prisons, 230 F.3d 371, 343 (D.C. Cir. 2000) (overruled by, Davis v. U.S. Sentencing Com'n, 716 F.3d 660 (D.C. Cir. 2013)).

Henthorn v. Department of Navy, 29 F.3d 682, 308 (D.C. Cir. 1994).

Stewart v. Federal Communications Commission, 177 F. Supp. 3d 158 (D.D.C. 2016), order modified on reconsideration, 189 F. Supp. 3d 170 (D.D.C. 2016).

Hillware v. Snyder, 151 F. Supp. 3d 154, 158 (D.D.C. 2015) (court considered plaintiff's amended complaint as operative complaint on Rule 12(b)(6) motion, since plaintiff submitted amendment "to clarify" allegations in original complaint and "pleadings must be construed as to do justice").

Mizell v. SunTrust Bank, 26 F. Supp. 3d 80 (D.D.C. 2014).

Budik v. Howard University Hospital, 986 F. Supp. 2d 1 (D.D.C. 2013).

Morrow v. U.S., 723 F. Supp. 2d 71 (D.D.C. 2010).

Stoyanov v. Winter, 643 F. Supp. 2d 4 (D.D.C. 2009), aff'd, 2010 WL 605083 (D.C. Cir. 2010).

Keith v. U.S. Railroad Retirement Bd., 284 F. Supp. 2d 31 (D.D.C. 2003).

Croskey v. U.S. Office of Special Counsel, 9 F. Supp. 2d 8 (D.D.C. 1998), aff'd, 1999 WL 58614 (D.C. Cir. 1999).

Pro se complaints are held to a less exacting scrutiny than pleadings drafted by attorneys, but they must present claims upon which relief may be granted. Slaby v. Fairbridge, 3 F. Supp. 2d 22 (D.D.C. 1998).

Nicastro v. Clinton, 882 F. Supp. 1128 (D.D.C. 1995), aff'd, 84 F.3d 1446 (D.C. Cir. 1996).

Federal Circuit

Pieczenik v. Bayer Corp., 474 Fed. Appx. 766, 770 (Fed. Cir. 2012) ("In general, pro se litigants are held to a lesser standard than pleadings drafted by lawyers when determining whether a complaint should be dismissed for failure to state a claim.").

See also

Pro se complaints are treated more leniently by the courts on a Rule 12(b)(6) motion to dismiss. The standard in the Seventh Circuit for relatively straightforward, pro se pleadings is that they "can be dismissed for failure to state a claim only if it appears beyond doubt that the plaintiff can prove no set of facts in support of his claim which would entitle him to relief." Nikolic v. St. Catherine Hosp., 2011 WL 4537911, *3 (N.D. Ind. 2011) (internal quotation marks omitted), quoting Henderson v. Sheahan, 196 F.3d 839, 845-846 (7th Cir. 1999).

Massey v. Fischer, 2004 WL 1908220 (S.D. N.Y. 2004) (court should consider all of pro se plaintiff's papers and construe them liberally).

See §§ 1215 n.11 and 1217 n.12 (for further description of pro se pleading standards).

Compare

"Lastly, while the Court liberally construes pro se complaints * * * it does not act as the inmate's advocate, sua sponte developing statutory and constitutional claims the inmate failed to clearly raise on the face of his complaint." Starks v. Abbasi, 2009 WL 2959747, *1 (E.D. Va. 2009).

75 Civil rights claims

Tarshis v. Riese Organization, 211 F.3d 30 (2d Cir. 2000) (abrogated by, Swierkiewicz v. Sorema N. A., 534 U.S. 506, 122 S. Ct. 992, 152 L. Ed. 2d 1 (2002)).

Perry v. McGinnis, 209 F.3d 597 (6th Cir. 2000) (court of appeals will scrutinize with special care any dismissal of complaint filed under civil rights statute).

Cruz v. Gomez, 202 F.3d 593 (2d Cir. 2000).

Flaherty v. Lang, 199 F.3d 607 (2d Cir. 1999) (reluctance to dismiss applies with greater force when plaintiff alleges civil rights violations).

Vital v. Interfaith Medical Center, 168 F.3d 615 (2d Cir. 1999).

Chance v. Armstrong, 143 F.3d 698 (2d Cir. 1998).

Irish Lesbian and Gay Organization v. Giuliani, 143 F.3d 638 (2d Cir. 1998).

Odermatt v. Way, 188 F. Supp. 3d 198, 214 (E.D. N.Y. 2016), aff'd, 694 Fed. Appx. 842 (2d Cir. 2017) (to survive motion to dismiss First Amendment retaliation complaint, plaintiff must include alleged facts demonstrating (1) speech or conduct was protected, (2) defendant took adverse action against plaintiff, (3) there was causal connection between protected speech and adverse action).

Rauen v. City of Miami, 2007 WL 686609 (S.D. Fla. 2007).

Lilienthal v. City of Suffolk, 275 F. Supp. 2d 684 (E.D. Va. 2003) (when motion to dismiss tests sufficiency of civil rights complaint, court must be especially solicitous of wrongs alleged).

Mansoor v. County of Albemarle, 124 F. Supp. 2d 367 (W.D. Va. 2000).

Lugo v. Senkowski, 114 F. Supp. 2d 111 (N.D. N.Y. 2000).

Ericson v. City of Meriden, 113 F. Supp. 2d 276 (D. Conn. 2000), decision aff'd, 55 Fed. Appx. 11 (2d Cir. 2002).

Bendel v. Westchester County Health Care Corp., 112 F. Supp. 2d 324 (S.D. N.Y. 2000).

People United for Children, Inc. v. City of New York, 108 F. Supp. 2d 275 (S.D. N.Y. 2000).

Taylor v. Barnett, 105 F. Supp. 2d 483 (E.D. Va. 2000).

Niagra Mohawk Power Corp. v. Consolidated Rail Corp., 97 F. Supp. 2d 454 (N.D. N.Y. 2000).

Rivera Borrero v. Rivera Correa, 93 F. Supp. 2d 122 (D.P.R. 2000).

Schaefer v. Erie County Dept. of Social Services, 82 F. Supp. 2d 114 (W.D. N.Y. 2000).

Webb v. Goord, 197 F.R.D. 98 (S.D. N.Y. 2000).

McGrath v. Johnson, 67 F. Supp. 2d 499 (E.D. Pa. 1999), judgment aff'd, 35 Fed. Appx. 357 (3d Cir. 2002).

 © 2025 Thomson Reuters. No claim to original U.S. Government Works.

Fernandez v. City of Poughkeepsie, 67 F. Supp. 2d 222 (S.D. N.Y. 1999).

Brown v. Stone, 66 F. Supp. 2d 412 (E.D. N.Y. 1999).

Bailey v. I.R.S., 188 F.R.D. 346 (D. Ariz. 1999), aff'd, 232 F.3d 893 (9th Cir. 2000).

Dockery v. Tucker, 73 F. Supp. 2d 224 (E.D. N.Y. 1998).

Ricotta v. State of Cal., 4 F. Supp. 2d 961 (S.D. Cal. 1998), aff'd, 173 F.3d 861 (9th Cir. 1999) (court must construe pleadings liberally but may not supply essential elements of claim that were not initially pled; vague and conclusory allegations of civil rights violations are not sufficient).

Alba v. Ansonia Bd. of Educ., 999 F. Supp. 687 (D. Conn. 1998).

Bender v. Suburban Hosp., 998 F. Supp. 631 (D. Md. 1998), aff'd, 159 F.3d 186 (4th Cir. 1998).

Alston v. Virginia High School League, Inc., 176 F.R.D. 220 (W.D. Va. 1997).

But see

Adams v. Franklin, 111 F. Supp. 2d 1255 (M.D. Ala. 2000) (Eleventh Circuit tightens pleading requirements in civil rights cases that implicate qualified immunity).

Taylor v. Alabama, 95 F. Supp. 2d 1297 (M.D. Ala. 2000) (Eleventh Circuit imposes tightened pleading requirements for fraud, and court should be guided by these requirements when ruling on Rule 12(b)(6) motion).

Pollack v. Nash, 58 F. Supp. 2d 294 (S.D. N.Y. 1999) (§ 1983 claims held to heightened pleading standard).

See generally

Section 1230 contains an extended discussion of the protections that civil rights claims receive under Rule 12(b)(6) as well as the attempts made by some courts to impose heightened scrutiny on such claims and their reaction to the Supreme Court's rejection of these practices in the Swierkiewicz case.

Spencer, Pleading Civil Rights Claims in the Post-Conley Era, 52 Howard L.J. 99 (2008) (discussing the pleading of civil rights claims in the wake of the Twombly decision).

See also

Metts v. Murphy, 363 F.3d 8 (1st Cir. 2004) (most cases brought under Section 2 of Voting Rights Act resolved by summary judgment or trial, not by motion to dismiss).

76 Summary judgment

Swierkiewicz v. Sorema N. A., 534 U.S. 506, 122 S. Ct. 992, 152 L. Ed. 2d 1 (2002).

The district court should give the plaintiff the full protection a federal court claim should receive at least until it can see what the real facts are; if, after the full development of the facts, the plaintiff obviously is not entitled to relief, the claim may be washed out on summary judgment, by motion for directed verdict, or by j.n.o.v. Reeves v. City of Jackson, Mississippi, 532 F.2d 491 (5th Cir. 1976).

In reversing a dismissal for failure to state a claim, Judge Brown stated that "the Trial Court failed to require the parties to exploit the marvelous tools now available by summary judgment or otherwise to demonstrate whether the facts, as distinguished from what the lawyers said the facts would be, would bear out a claim and if so to what extent." Barber v. Motor Vessel "Blue Cat", 372 F.2d 626, 629 (5th Cir. 1967).

Shull v. Pilot Life Ins. Co., 313 F.2d 445 (5th Cir. 1963).

Citizens for Honesty and Integrity in Regional Planning v. County of San Diego, 258 F. Supp. 2d 1132 (S.D. Cal. 2003), appeal dismissed and remanded, 399 F.3d 1067 (9th Cir. 2005) (question of whether federal spending law preempted local wetlands regulations was better handled in context of summary judgment rather than motion to dismiss).

Navarro v. F.D.I.C., 254 F. Supp. 2d 1013 (N.D. Ill. 2003), rev'd and remanded, 371 F.3d 979 (7th Cir. 2004) (notice pleading relies on liberal discovery rules and summary judgment motions to define disputes and to dispose of unmeritorious claims).

See §§ 2711 to 2742 for further discussion of summary judgment.

See also

Prier v. Steed, 85 Empl. Prac. Dec. (CCH) P 41665, 2004 WL 624971 (D. Kan. 2004).

McKenna v. City of Homewood, 295 Ala. 128, 324 So. 2d 770, 772 (1975), quoting Wright & Miller.

Trabits v. First Nat. Bank of Mobile, 295 Ala. 85, 323 So. 2d 353, 358 (1975), quoting Wright & Miller.

But see

Gray v. Petoseed Co., Inc., 985 F. Supp. 625 (D.S.C. 1996), aff'd, 129 F.3d 1259 (4th Cir. 1997).

77 Insuperable bar to relief

B & H Medical, L.L.C. v. ABP Admin., Inc., 526 F.3d 257 (6th Cir. 2008), subsequent determination, 534 F.3d 801 (6th Cir. 2008).

Benzman v. Whitman, 523 F.3d 119 (2d Cir. 2008) (CERCLA citizen-suit provision did not authorize judicial review of agency action).

Amadasu v. The Christ Hosp., 514 F.3d 504 (6th Cir. 2008) (Section 1985 claims barred by "intracorporate conspiracy" doctrine, which states that if two defendants are from same collective entity, no conspiracy is possible).

Windsor v. Whitman-Walker Clinic, Inc., 279 Fed. Appx. 9 (D.C. Cir. 2008) (firefighters cannot sue for injuries sustained in line of duty).

Public Utility Dist. No. 1 of Grays Harbor County Wash. v. IDACORP Inc., 379 F.3d 641 (9th Cir. 2004) (claims preempted).

Ontario Public Service Employees Union Pension Trust Fund v. Nortel Networks Corp., 369 F.3d 27 (2d Cir. 2004) (plaintiffs lacked standing).

Denny's, Inc. v. Cake, 364 F.3d 521 (4th Cir. 2004) (Anti-Injunction Act bars suit).

Spain v. Brown & Williamson Tobacco Corp., 363 F.3d 1183 (11th Cir. 2004) (state claims preempted by federal statute).

Thompson v. Illinois Dept. of Professional Regulation, 300 F.3d 750 (7th Cir. 2002).

Thomas v. Publishers Clearing House, Inc., 29 Fed. Appx. 319 (6th Cir. 2002), quoting Wright & Miller.

Schmedding v. Tnemec Co., Inc., 187 F.3d 862 (8th Cir. 1999).

Howell v. Father Maloney's Boys' Haven, Inc., 424 F. Supp. 3d 511, 515 (W.D. Ky. 2020), aff'd, 976 F.3d 750 (6th Cir. 2020).

78 Clearly show no claim

Kellogg Brown & Root Services, Inc. v. U.S., 728 F.3d 1348, 1365 (Fed. Cir. 2013), opinion corrected on denial of reh'g, 563 Fed. Appx. 769 (Fed. Cir. 2014).

The plaintiff "can unwittingly plead himself out of court by asserting facts that preclude relief." White v. Monohan, 326 Fed. Appx. 385, 386 (7th Cir. 2009).

Tamayo v. Blagojevich, 526 F.3d 1074 (7th Cir. 2008) (plaintiff pled herself out of court by including facts in her complaint that undermined her claims).

Canyon County v. Syngenta Seeds, Inc., 519 F.3d 969 (9th Cir. 2008).

C.R. ex rel. Reilly v. Boy Scouts of America, Troop 223, 280 Fed. Appx. 669 (9th Cir. 2008).

Insomnia Inc. v. City of Memphis, Tennessee, 278 Fed. Appx. 609 (6th Cir. 2008).

MM&S Financial, Inc. v. National Ass'n of Securities Dealers, Inc., 364 F.3d 908 (8th Cir. 2004) (no private right of action exists against self-regulatory organization).

79 Massey case
464 F.3d 642 (7th Cir. 2006).

80 Negligence action
Smith v. Vincent, 109 F. Supp. 451 (S.D. Fla. 1952), judgment aff'd, 204 F.2d 945 (5th Cir. 1953).

Compare
Erie Insurance Company v. W.M. Barr & Company, Inc., 523 F. Supp. 3d 1 (D.D.C. 2021) ("[A]t the motion to dismiss stage, where 'it is not absolutely clear that the defendant's negligence could not have been a proximate cause of the harm asserted by the plaintiff * * * the court must deny [the plaintiff's] motion to dismiss.").

81 Affirmative defense
Jones v. Bock, 549 U.S. 199, 127 S. Ct. 910, 166 L. Ed. 2d 798 (2007), citing Wright & Miller.

Puri v. Khalsa, 844 F.3d 1152, 1158 (9th Cir. 2017) (stating that, "[a]s an affirmative defense, the ministerial exception can serve as the basis for dismissing a complaint at the pleadings stage under Rule 12(b)(6) only when the elements of the defense appear on the face of the complaint" but then finding that it was "not apparent on the face of the complaint that the disputed board positions [were] 'ministerial'" because "the pleadings [did] not allege the board members [had] any ecclesiastical duties or privileges," "the pleadings [did] not allege the board members [were] held out a religious leaders, either by their respective employers or by the board members themselves," and "the pleadings [did] not show the board positions [were] religious in substance, whether by requiring 'significant religious training,' by signifying ecclesiastical merit, or otherwise"), citing Wright & Miller, for additional opinion, see, 674 Fed. Appx. 679 (9th Cir. 2017).

Bohus v. Restaurant.com, Inc., 784 F.3d 918, 923 n.2 (3d Cir. 2015) (circuit court will affirm district court's dismissal of complaint under Rule 12(b)(6) on basis of affirmative defense only because defense was apparent on face of complaint).

 © 2025 Thomson Reuters. No claim to original U.S. Government Works.

In cases in which the judicial estoppel defense appears on the face of the pleadings and in judicially noticeable facts, it may be considered on a motion to dismiss. U.S. ex rel. Long v. GSDMIdea City, L.L.C., 798 F.3d 265, 275 (5th Cir. 2015).

"The ministerial exception is an affirmative defense that plaintiffs should first assert in a motion to dismiss under Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 12(b)(6)." Conlon v. InterVarsity Christian Fellowship, 777 F.3d 829, 833 (6th Cir. 2015).

Moran v. Ocwen Loan Servicing, L.L.C., 560 Fed. Appx. 277, 280 n.1 (5th Cir. 2014), citing Wright & Miller.

Rivera v. Peri & Sons Farms, Inc., 735 F.3d 892, 901 (9th Cir. 2013), citing Wright & Miller.

Simmons v. Sabine River Authority Louisiana, 732 F.3d 469, 473 (5th Cir. 2013) (federal preemption).

Miller v. BAC Home Loans Servicing, L.P., 726 F.3d 717, 726 (5th Cir. 2013) (claim may be subject to Rule 12(b)(6) motion properly where complaint itself establishes applicability of affirmative defense), citing Fisher v. Halliburton, 667 F.3d 602, 608-609 (5th Cir. 2012).

Indiana State Dist. Council of Laborers and HOD Carriers Pension and Welfare Fund v. Omnicare, Inc., 719 F.3d 498, 509 (6th Cir. 2013), vacated and remanded, 575 U.S. 175, 135 S. Ct. 1318, 191 L. Ed. 2d 253 (2015) ("loss causation," which refers to causal connection between defendant's material misrepresentation or omission and plaintiff's loss, is affirmative defense to claims under § 11 of Securities Act of 1933).

Lutz v. Chesapeake Appalachia, L.L.C., 717 F.3d 459 (6th Cir. 2013) (statute of limitations is affirmative defense).

Independent Trust Corp. v. Stewart Information Services Corp., 665 F.3d 930, 935 (7th Cir. 2012) ("[W]hen a plaintiff's complaint nonetheless sets out all of the elements of an affirmative defense, dismissal under Rule 12(b)(6) is appropriate.").

Cole v. Secretary Dept. of Corrections, 451 Fed. Appx. 827, 828 (11th Cir. 2011) ("Rule 12(b)(6) allows for dismissal when an affirmative defense appears on the face of the complaint * * *.").

Yarnell v. Transamerica Life Ins. Co., 447 Fed. Appx. 664 (6th Cir. 2011).

Surgenex, LLC v. Predictive Therapeutics, LLC, 462 F. Supp. 3d 1160, 1173 (D. Utah 2020), on reconsideration in part, 2020 WL 8514831 (D. Utah 2020), quoting Wright & Miller.

The notice requirement of the D.C. Whistleblower Act granted the defendant an affirmative defense that resulted with a dismissal under Rule 12(b)(6). Winder v. Erste, 566 F.3d 209 (D.C. Cir. 2009).

Martin v. Snyder, 329 F.3d 919 (7th Cir. 2003) (qualified immunity of state correctional officials).

Bullington v. United Air Lines, Inc., 186 F.3d 1301 (10th Cir. 1999) (rejected by, Raad v. Alaska State Com'n for Human Rights, 86 P.3d 899 (Alaska 2004)), citing Wright & Miller.

Pani v. Empire Blue Cross Blue Shield, 152 F.3d 67 (2d Cir. 1998).

ALA, Inc. v. CCAIR, Inc., 29 F.3d 855 (3d Cir. 1994), citing Wright & Miller.

Kansa Reinsurance Co., Ltd. v. Congressional Mortg. Corp. of Texas, 20 F.3d 1362 (5th Cir. 1994).

Fortner v. Thomas, 983 F.2d 1024 (11th Cir. 1993).

Brown v. Crawford County, Ga., 960 F.2d 1002 (11th Cir. 1992) (absolute immunity of government officials engaged in legislative activity).

Trevino v. Union Pacific R. Co., 916 F.2d 1230, 1234 (7th Cir. 1990), citing Wright & Miller.

Tele-Communications of Key West, Inc. v. U.S., 757 F.2d 1330, 244 (D.C. Cir. 1985).

Miller v. Shell Oil Co., 345 F.2d 891 (10th Cir. 1965).

Williams v. Murdoch, 330 F.2d 745 (3d Cir. 1964).

A defense of privilege raised on the face of the complaint required its dismissal. Wallingford v. Zenith Radio Corp., 310 F.2d 693 (7th Cir. 1962).

Although Rule 8(c) requires affirmative defenses to be pleaded, there is general agreement that the defense of limitations or laches may be asserted by a motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim provided that the complaint shows affirmatively that the claim is barred. Herron v. Herron, 255 F.2d 589 (5th Cir. 1958).

The defense of res judicata usually should be pleaded, but when all the relevant facts are shown by the court's own records, an answer is not required and the defense may be raised by a motion to dismiss. W.E. Hedger Transp. Corp. v. Ira S. Bushey & Sons, 186 F.2d 236 (2d Cir. 1951).

Butcher v. United Elec. Coal Co., 174 F.2d 1003 (7th Cir. 1949).

 © 2025 Thomson Reuters. No claim to original U.S. Government Works.

e-ventures Worldwide, LLC v. Google, Inc., 188 F. Supp. 3d 1265, 1272 (M.D. Fla. 2016).

In re: Whole Foods Market, Inc., 163 F. Supp. 3d 385 (W.D. Tex. 2016) (federal preemption).

The plaintiff's RICO claims were dismissed because enforcement would intrude on "comprehensive regulatory schemes put into place by the states" to regulate the insurance industry, as prohibited by the McCarran-Ferguson Act. Ludwick v. Harbinger Group, Inc., 161 F. Supp. 3d 769, 775 (W.D. Mo. 2016), aff'd, 854 F.3d 400 (8th Cir. 2017).

Poirier v. Massachusetts Department of Corrections, 160 F. Supp. 3d 399, 404 (D. Mass. 2016), on reconsideration, 186 F. Supp. 3d 66 (D. Mass. 2016), aff'd, 2018 WL 11337451 (1st Cir. 2018).

Federal National Mortgage Association v. Quicksilver LLC, 155 F. Supp. 3d 535, 545 (M.D. N.C. 2015) (statute of limitations defense at pleading stage must demonstrate all facts necessary on face of complaint).

Taylor v. City of New York, 207 F. Supp. 3d 293 (S.D. N.Y. 2016).

Conklin v. Jefferson County Board of Education, 205 F. Supp. 3d 797 (N.D. W. Va. 2016).

Terry v. Chicago Police Department, 200 F. Supp. 3d 719 (N.D. Ill. 2016).

"Although affirmative defenses must generally be pled in the defendant's answer, not argued on a motion to dismiss, there are exceptions where: (i) the defendant asserts an immunity defense—the courts handle these cases differently than other motions to dismiss; and (ii) where the facts establishing the affirmative defense are apparent on the face of the complaint." Saenz v. Lovington Mun. School Dist., 105 F. Supp. 3d 1271, 1289 (D.N.M. 2015) (internal citations omitted), citing Wright & Miller.

"Unless the complaint sets forth conclusively that the elements of the affirmative defense exist, dismissal under 12(b)(6) is not appropriate." Rivas v. Levy, 2015 WL 718271, *9 (N.D. Ill. 2015).

"[W]hen it appears from the face of the complaint itself that the limitation period has run, a limitations defense may properly be asserted through a Rule 12(b)(6) motion to dismiss." Rollins v. City of Albert Lea, 79 F. Supp. 3d 946, 963 (D. Minn. 2014).

International Aerobatics Club Chapter 1 v. City of Morris, 76 F. Supp. 3d 767, 780-783 (N.D. Ill. 2014) (federal preemption).

"Complaints need not anticipate affirmative defenses, but a court may dismiss a suit on the basis of a valid affirmative defense that is obvious from the face of the complaint." Toney v. Quality Resources, Inc., 75 F. Supp. 3d 727, 734 (N.D. Ill. 2014) (internal citations omitted).

"A court may dismiss a claim under Rule 12(b)(6) on the basis of an affirmative defense only if the affirmative defense is apparent on the face of the complaint." Christenson v. Freeman Health System, 71 F. Supp. 3d 964, 967 (W.D. Mo. 2014) (official immunity is considered affirmative defense under Missouri law) (internal quotations omitted).

TIB—The Independent BankersBank v. Canyon Community Bank, 13 F. Supp. 3d 661 (N.D. Tex. 2014).

Franklin v. City of Slidell, 936 F. Supp. 2d 691, 716-718 (E.D. La. 2013) (declined to dismiss complaint under Americans with Disabilities Act on account of business-necessity exception).

Image Masters, Inc. v. Chase Home Finance, 489 B.R. 375, 391 (E.D. Pa. 2013) ("[A] complaint 'may be subject to dismissal under Rule 12(b)(6) when an affirmative defense * * * appears on its face.' * * * When facts or matters outside of the complaint are necessary to establish the affirmative defense, however, raising it under Rule 12(b)(6) is usually not permitted."), quoting Leveto v. Lapina, 258 F.3d 156, 161 (3d Cir. 2001); citing Worldcom, Inc. v. Graphnet, Inc., 343 F.3d 651, 657 (3d Cir. 2003).

Mills-Craddock v. Gates, 2012 WL 3594634, *2 (E.D. N.C. 2012), citing Wright & Miller.

Frees v. Duby, 2010 WL 4923535, *1 n.1 (W.D. Mich. 2010), citing Wright & Miller.

Ambulatory Infusion Therapy Specialists, Inc. v. Aetna Life Ins. Co., 2006 WL 2521411 (S.D. Tex. 2006), citing Wright & Miller.

Adams v. Crystal City Marriott Hotel, 2004 WL 744489 (S.D. N.Y. 2004), quoting Wright & Miller.

In re Merrill Lynch & Co., Inc. Research Reports Securities Litigation, 289 F. Supp. 2d 429 (S.D. N.Y. 2003).

In re Estate of Molina-Velez v. R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Co., 286 F. Supp. 2d 185 (D.P.R. 2003).

In re Merrill Lynch & Co., Inc. Research Reports Securities Litigation, 2003 WL 21036085 (S.D. N.Y. 2003) (preemption by Securities Litigation Uniform Standards Act).

 © 2025 Thomson Reuters. No claim to original U.S. Government Works.

Ingram v. Rencor Controls, Inc., 217 F. Supp. 2d 141 (D. Me. 2002).

Hutchison v. Brookshire Bros., Ltd., 205 F. Supp. 2d 629 (E.D. Tex. 2002).

Gray v. Metts, 203 F. Supp. 2d 426 (D. Md. 2002), citing Wright & Miller.

Swedish Civil Aviation Admin. v. Project Management Enterprises, Inc., 190 F. Supp. 2d 785 (D. Md. 2002), citing Wright & Miller.

The individual defendants' affirmative defenses of absolute and qualified immunity were raised on, and thus reviewable on, a Rule 12(b)(6) motion. T.S. Haulers, Inc. v. Town of Riverhead, 190 F. Supp. 2d 455 (E.D. N.Y. 2002), citing Wright & Miller.

"Although a motion pursuant to Rule 12(b)(6) invites an inquiry into the legal sufficiency of the complaint, not an analysis of potential defenses to the claims set forth therein, dismissal nevertheless is appropriate when the face of the complaint clearly reveals the existence of a meritorious affirmative defense." Eniola v. Leasecomm Corp., 214 F. Supp. 2d 520 (D. Md. 2002), citing Wright & Miller (Chasanow, J.).

U.S. ex rel. Coppock v. Northrop Grumman Corp., 2002 WL 1796979 (N.D. Tex. 2002).

Although a Rule 12(b)(6) dismissal ordinarily is determined by whether the facts alleged in the complaint give rise to a cause of action, a claim also may be dismissed if a successful affirmative defense appears clearly on the face of the pleadings. Taylor v. Maple Ave. Economic Development Corp., 2002 WL 1758189 (N.D. Tex. 2002).

CSR Ltd. v. Federal Ins. Co., 40 F. Supp. 2d 559 (D.N.J. 1998).

Myers v. Guardian Life Ins. Co. of America, Inc., 5 F. Supp. 2d 423 (N.D. Miss. 1998).

Hoopla Sports and Entertainment, Inc. v. Nike, Inc., 947 F. Supp. 347 (N.D. Ill. 1996).

Torrie By and Through Torrie v. Cwayna, 841 F. Supp. 1434 (W.D. Mich. 1994).

Three Crown Ltd. Partnership v. Caxton Corp., 817 F. Supp. 1033 (S.D. N.Y. 1993).

Kentucky Cent. Life Ins. Co. v. LeDuc, 814 F. Supp. 832 (N.D. Cal. 1992), citing Wright & Miller.

Coplin and Associates, Inc. v. U.S., 814 F. Supp. 643 (W.D. Mich. 1992), judgment aff'd, 27 F.3d 566 (6th Cir. 1994).

Morton v. City of Little Rock, 728 F. Supp. 543 (E.D. Ark. 1989), judgment aff'd, 934 F.2d 180 (8th Cir. 1991).

See also

Brownmark Films, LLC v. Comedy Partners, 682 F.3d 687, 690 n.1 (7th Cir. 2012) ("Though district courts have granted Rule 12(b)(6) motions on the basis of affirmative defenses and this court has affirmed those dismissals, we have repeatedly cautioned that the proper heading for such motions is Rule 12(c), since an affirmative defense is external to the complaint.").

Lecrenski Bros. Inc. v. Johnson, 312 F. Supp. 2d 117 (D. Mass. 2004) (motion to dismiss granted because plaintiff lacked standing).

The procedures for raising affirmative defenses by motion are discussed in § 1277.

But see

The defense of laches must be made affirmatively under Rule 8(c), and Rule 12(b) requires that such an affirmative defense be made by a responsive pleading. Apex Liquors, Inc. v. District of Columbia, 303 F.2d 206, 112 (D.C. Cir. 1962).

82 Clear indication necessary

"Whether a particular ground for opposing a claim may be the basis for dismissal for failure to state a claim depends on whether the allegations in the complaint suffice to establish that ground, not on the nature of the ground in the abstract." Jones v. Bock, 549 U.S. 199, 127 S. Ct. 910, 921, 166 L. Ed. 2d 798 (2007), citing Leveto v. Lapina, 258 F.3d 156, 161 (3d Cir. 2001).

"[F]ailure to exhaust is an affirmative defense that a defendant must raise. And while affirmative defenses, including non-exhaustion, can be appropriately asserted on a 12(b)(6) motion, dismissal on such a basis is appropriate only if the defense is evident on the face of the complaint." Luebano v. Office Depot, L.L.C., 2023 WL 4249268, *3 (5th Cir. 2023).

Rule 12(b)(6) dismissal may also "'be appropriate based on a successful affirmative defense,' provided that the affirmative defense 'appear[s] on the face of the complaint.'" Basic Cap. Mgmt. v. Dynex Cap., Inc., 976 F.3d 585, 588 (5th Cir. 2020) (quoting EPCO Carbon Dioxide Prods., Inc. v. JP Morgan Chase Bank, NA, 467 F.3d 466, 470 (5th Cir. 2006)).

Burton v. Ghosh, 961 F.3d 960, 964-965 (7th Cir. 2020), citing Wright & Miller.

"[A]lthough a plaintiff need not anticipate or overcome affirmative defenses such as those based on the statute of limitations, if a plaintiff alleges facts sufficient to establish a statute of limitations defense, the district court may dismiss the complaint on that ground." O'Gorman v. City of Chicago, 777 F.3d 885, 889 (7th Cir. 2015).

"Dismissal under Rule 12(b)(6) on res judicata grounds is appropriate when the elements of res judicata are apparent on the face of the pleadings." Murry v. Gen. Servs. Admin., 553 Fed. Appx. 362, 364 (5th Cir. 2014) (citing Kansa Reinsurance Co. v. Cong. Mortg. Corp. of Tex., 20 F.3d 1362, 1366 (5th Cir. 1994)).

Waugh Chapel South, LLC v. United Food and Commercial Workers Union Local 27, 728 F.3d 354, 359-360 (4th Cir. 2013) ("The district court, however, purported to adjudicate the merits of the unions' Noerr-Pennington defense under Rule 12(b)(6), which is a procedure that tests only the sufficiency of a complaint and 'cannot reach the merits of an affirmative defense * * * [unless] all facts necessary to the affirmative defense clearly appear on the face of the complaint.'"), quoting Goodman v. Praxair, Inc., 494 F.3d 458, 464 (4th Cir. 2007) (en banc).

Miller v. BAC Home Loans Servicing, L.P., 726 F.3d 717, 726-727 (5th Cir. 2013) (defendant was permitted to raise statute of frauds as defense on Rule 12(b)(6) motion), citing Kansa Reinsurance Co., Ltd. v. Congressional Mortg. Corp. of Texas, 20 F.3d 1362, 1366 (5th Cir. 1994).

Harris v. Amgen, Inc., 717 F.3d 1042, 1060 (9th Cir. 2013) ("Because the existence of an exemption under § 1108(e) is an affirmative defense, we can dismiss Count VI based on the § 1108(e) exemption only if the defense is "clearly indicated" and "appear[s] on the face of the pleading."), quoting Wright & Miller, withdrawn and superseded on denial of reh'g en banc, 738 F.3d 1026 (9th Cir. 2013), cert. granted, judgment vacated, 573 U.S. 942, 134 S. Ct. 2870 (2014).

Ruiz-Sanchez v. Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co., 717 F.3d 249, 252 (1st Cir. 2013) ("Dismissal 'on the basis of an affirmative defense requires that (i) the facts establishing the defense are definitively ascertainable from the complaint and the other allowable sources of information, and (ii) those facts suffice to establish the affirmative defense with certitude.'"), quoting Nisselson v. Lernout, 469 F.3d 143, 150 (1st Cir. 2006).

Warren v. Sessoms & Rogers, P.A., 676 F.3d 365, 375 (4th Cir. 2012) (bona fide error was affirmative defense that must be proved by defendant, and district court erred in dismissing plaintiff's claim for failing to plead lack of bona fide error) (abrogated by, Campbell-Ewald Co. v. Gomez, 577 U.S. 153, 136 S. Ct. 663, 193 L. Ed. 2d 571 (2016)).

Fisher v. Halliburton, 667 F.3d 602, 609 (5th Cir. 2012) (complaint that establishes applicability of federal-preemption defense may be challenged under Rule 12(b)(6)).

Thomas v. Care Plus of New Jersey, Inc., 484 Fed. Appx. 692 (3d Cir. 2012) (per curiam) (court may dismiss on basis of statute of limitations under Rule 12(b)(6) only when defect is apparent from face of complaint).

Belrose v. Hartford Life & Acc. Ins. Co., 478 Fed. Appx. 21 (4th Cir. 2012).

King v. Barton, 455 Fed. Appx. 709, 710 (8th Cir. 2012) ("When presented in a Rule 12(b)(6) motion, a qualified immunity defense must appear on the complaint's face."), citing Mathers v. Wright, 636 F.3d 396, 399 (8th Cir. 2011).

Illig v. Union Elec. Co., 652 F.3d 971 (8th Cir. 2011).

Walker v. Barrett, 650 F.3d 1198, 1203 (8th Cir. 2011) (complaint itself must establish affirmative defense for that to be grounds for dismissal based on Rule 12(b)(6)).

Brockington v. Boykins, 637 F.3d 503, 506 (4th Cir. 2011).

Mathers v. Wright, 636 F.3d 396, 399 (8th Cir. 2011).

Colonial Medical Group, Inc. v. Catholic Health Care West, 444 Fed. Appx. 937 (9th Cir. 2011) (antitrust complaint may be dismissed if product market definition is unsustainable on its face).

Walburn v. Lockheed Martin Utility Services, Inc., 443 Fed. Appx. 43 (6th Cir. 2011).

Leak v. CIGNA Healthcare, 423 Fed. Appx. 53 (2d Cir. 2011).

Amorosa v. AOL Time Warner Inc., 409 Fed. Appx. 412, 417 (2d Cir. 2011).

Public Health Equipment & Supply Co., Inc. v. Clarke Mosquito Control Products, Inc., 410 Fed. Appx. 738, 741 (5th Cir. 2010).

CSX Transp., Inc. v. Gilkison, 406 Fed. Appx. 723, 728 (4th Cir. 2010).

Hunter v. Miller, 278 Fed. Appx. 887 (11th Cir. 2008).

Singleton v. Department of Corrections, 277 Fed. Appx. 921 (11th Cir. 2008).

Victaulic Co. v. Tieman, 499 F.3d 227 (3d Cir. 2007), as amended, (Nov. 20, 2007).

Xechem, Inc. v. Bristol-Myers Squibb Co., 372 F.3d 899 (7th Cir. 2004) (Rule 12(b)(6) dismissal is only appropriate based on affirmative defense if plaintiff's complaint admits all elements to impenetrable defense).

La Grasta v. First Union Securities, Inc., 358 F.3d 840 (11th Cir. 2004).

U.S. Gypsum Co. v. Indiana Gas Co., Inc., 350 F.3d 623 (7th Cir. 2003) (although litigant may plead itself out of court by alleging ingredients of defense, complaint need not anticipate or attempt to defuse potential defenses and failure to do so is not grounds for dismissal).

Doe v. GTE Corp., 347 F.3d 655 (7th Cir. 2003) (although litigant may plead itself out of court by alleging ingredients of defense, it need not try to plead around defenses).

Worldcom, Inc. v. Graphnet, Inc., 343 F.3d 651 (3d Cir. 2003) (since facts necessary to establish affirmative defenses had to come from matters outside complaint and thus did not appear on face of complaint, neither affirmative defense could be adjudicated on Rule 12(b)(6) motion).

Cottone v. Jenne, 326 F.3d 1352 (11th Cir. 2003).

In re Colonial Mortgage Bankers Corp., 324 F.3d 12 (1st Cir. 2003) (res judicata defense does not have to be considered under summary judgment proceedings when affirmative defense appears clearly on face of complaint and other documents that can be considered under Rule 12(b)(6)).

Official Committee of Unsecured Creditors of Color Tile, Inc. v. Coopers & Lybrand, LLP, 322 F.3d 147 (2d Cir. 2003), citing Wright & Miller.

Clark v. City of Braidwood, 318 F.3d 764 (7th Cir. 2003) (dismissal based on statute of limitations premature when plaintiff might have been able to prove that reasonable person would not have discovered injury earlier).

Robinson v. Johnson, 313 F.3d 128 (3d Cir. 2002).

Cervantes v. City of San Diego, 5 F.3d 1273 (9th Cir. 1993) (reversing dismissal based on statute of limitations because complaint alleges facts supporting equitable tolling of limitations period).

Richmond, Fredericksburg & Potomac R. Co. v. Forst, 4 F.3d 244 (4th Cir. 1993), quoting Wright & Miller.

Fortner v. Thomas, 983 F.2d 1024 (11th Cir. 1993).

McCalden v. California Library Ass'n, 919 F.2d 538, 543 (9th Cir. 1990), amended and superseded on denial of reh'g, 955 F.2d 1214 (9th Cir. 1990).

 © 2025 Thomson Reuters. No claim to original U.S. Government Works.

Clark v. Amoco Production Co., 794 F.2d 967 (5th Cir. 1986).

Pennisi v. Alexander, 611 F.2d 566, 567 (5th Cir. 1980), citing Wright & Miller.

A dismissal with prejudice on the basis of collateral estoppel was improper when it was unclear whether the doctrine of res judicata was necessarily applicable to the facts of the case. Nickerson v. Kutschera, 390 F.2d 812 (3d Cir. 1968).

McNally v. American States Ins. Co., 382 F.2d 748 (6th Cir. 1967).

Miller v. Shell Oil Co., 345 F.2d 891 (10th Cir. 1965).

A wrongful death action against the District of Columbia should not have been dismissed for failure to state a claim on the ground that the defendant was immune from suit, since governmental immunity is an area of confusion and the issue was impossible to determine solely on the pleadings. Sass v. District of Columbia, 316 F.2d 366, 114 (D.C. Cir. 1963).

Continental Collieries v. Shober, 130 F.2d 631 (C.C.A. 3d Cir. 1942).

Leimer v. State Mut. Life Assur. Co. of Worcester, Mass., 108 F.2d 302 (C.C.A. 8th Cir. 1940).

Surgenex, LLC v. Predictive Therapeutics, LLC, 462 F. Supp. 3d 1160, 1173 (D. Utah 2020), on reconsideration in part, 2020 WL 8514831 (D. Utah 2020) ("Predictive's statute of limitations argument is an affirmative defense. To serve as a basis for a 12(b)(6) motion, the applicability of an affirmative defense must be clear from the face of the complaint. Applied to a statute of limitations defense, when the dates given in the complaint make clear that the right sued upon has been extinguished, the plaintiff has the burden of establishing a factual basis for tolling the statute. Here, however, the dates in the Complaint do not make clear that Surgenex's right to sue has been extinguished.") (citations and internal quotation marks omitted), quoting Wright & Miller.

In re Chiquita Brands International, Inc. Alien Tort Statute and Shareholder Derivative Litigation, 190 F. Supp. 3d 1100, 1115 (S.D. Fla. 2016) (plaintiffs' complaints did not contain allegations clearly triggering application of exhaustion-of-local-remedies defense).

Collette v. Archdiocese of Chicago, 200 F. Supp. 3d 730 (N.D. Ill. 2016).

Macharia v. City of Revere, 848 F. Supp. 2d 74, 77 (D. Mass. 2012).

Reyes-Orta v. Highway and Transp. Authority, 843 F. Supp. 2d 216, 222 (D.P.R. 2012) ("Thus, even though a complaint need not plead facts to avoid potential affirmative defenses, plaintiffs could plead themselves 'out of court by alleging facts that are sufficient to establish the defense.'"), quoting Hollander v. Brown, 457 F.3d 688, 691 n.1 (7th Cir. 2006).

Scott v. Bender, 893 F. Supp. 2d 963 (N.D. Ill. 2012) ("[W]hen the complaint 'sets out all of the elements of an affirmative defense' and plainly reveals that an action is untimely, dismissal under Rule 12(b)(6) is the appropriate remedy."), quoting Independent Trust Corp. v. Stewart Information Services Corp., 665 F.3d 930, 935 (7th Cir. 2012).

The motion to dismiss is not usually the appropriate stage at which to raise an affirmative defense. However, if that defense is based on facts alleged in the plaintiff's complaint, it is proper to raise it with a Rule 12(b)(6) motion. Graham Hanson Design LLC v. 511 9th LLC, 2011 WL 744801 (S.D. N.Y. 2011), citing Wright & Miller.

Flava Works, Inc. v. City of Miami, Fla., 559 F. Supp. 2d 1318 (S.D. Fla. 2008).

Doe v. Todd County School Dist., 2006 WL 3025855 (D.S.D. 2006).

Tao of Systems Integration, Inc. v. Analytical Services & Materials, Inc., 299 F. Supp. 2d 565 (E.D. Va. 2004).

Carlton v. City of Philadelphia, 2004 WL 633279 (E.D. Pa. 2004).

Digigan, Inc. v. Ivalidate, Inc., 2004 WL 203010 (S.D. N.Y. 2004).

Gulf Petro Trading Co., Inc. v. Nigerian Nat. Petroleum Corp., 288 F. Supp. 2d 783 (N.D. Tex. 2003), aff'd, 115 Fed. Appx. 201 (5th Cir. 2004).

Stephenson v. Deutsche Bank AG, 282 F. Supp. 2d 1032 (D. Minn. 2003), quoting Wright & Miller.

McNeal v. Cook County Sheriff's Dept., 282 F. Supp. 2d 865 (N.D. Ill. 2003) (although plaintiff is not required to negate affirmative defenses in complaint, he can plead himself out of court if he pleads facts demonstrating clear existence of affirmative defense).

Sensormatic Sec. Corp. v. Sensormatic Electronics Corp., 249 F. Supp. 2d 703 (D. Md. 2003), citing Wright & Miller.

Cloud v. Amquip Corp., 2003 WL 21037653 (D. Del. 2003), citing Oshiver v. Levin, Fishbein, Sedran & Berman, 38 F.3d 1380 (3d Cir. 1994).

For a Rule 12(b)(6) dismissal to be allowed on the basis of an affirmative defense, the facts establishing the defense must be clear on the face of the plaintiff's pleadings. Furthermore, review of the complaint, together with any other documents appropriately considered under Rule 12(b)(6), must leave no doubt that the plaintiff's action is barred by the asserted defense. Ingram v. Rencor Controls, Inc., 217 F. Supp. 2d 141 (D. Me. 2002).

 © 2025 Thomson Reuters. No claim to original U.S. Government Works.

Gray v. Metts, 203 F. Supp. 2d 426 (D. Md. 2002), citing Wright & Miller.

Swedish Civil Aviation Admin. v. Project Management Enterprises, Inc., 190 F. Supp. 2d 785 (D. Md. 2002), citing Wright & Miller.

Sullivan v. Equifax, Inc., 2002 WL 799856 (E.D. Pa. 2002), citing Wright & Miller (statute of limitations defense).

Deck v. American Hawaii Cruises, Inc., 121 F. Supp. 2d 1292 (D. Haw. 2000).

Allison v. Brooktree Corp., 999 F. Supp. 1342 (S.D. Cal. 1998).

Compton v. National League of Professional Baseball Clubs, 995 F. Supp. 554 (E.D. Pa. 1998), order aff'd, 172 F.3d 40 (3d Cir. 1998).

A Rule 12(b)(6) motion should not be granted on limitations grounds unless the complaint facially shows noncompliance with the limitations period. Giusto v. Ashland Chemical Co., 994 F. Supp. 587 (E.D. Pa. 1998).

Adamczyk v. Lever Bros. Co., Div. of Conopco, 991 F. Supp. 931 (N.D. Ill. 1997), citing Wright & Miller.

Papesh v. American Nat. Can Co., 177 F.R.D. 344 (D. Md. 1997), aff'd, 129 F.3d 117 (4th Cir. 1997).

Sloan v. West, 8 F. Supp. 2d 1207 (D. Haw. 1996).

Hoopla Sports and Entertainment, Inc. v. Nike, Inc., 947 F. Supp. 347 (N.D. Ill. 1996).

Turner and Boisseau, Inc. v. Nationwide Mut. Ins. Co., 944 F. Supp. 842 (D. Kan. 1996).

Forsyth v. Eli Lilly and Co., 904 F. Supp. 1153 (D. Haw. 1995).

Johnson v. Resources for Human Development, Inc., 860 F. Supp. 218 (E.D. Pa. 1994).

Cofield v. Randolph County Com'n, 844 F. Supp. 1499 (M.D. Ala. 1994).

Plessinger v. Castleman and Haskell, 838 F. Supp. 448 (N.D. Cal. 1993).

Oshiver v. Levin, Fishbein, Sedran and Berman, 818 F. Supp. 104 (E.D. Pa. 1993), judgment aff'd in part, rev'd in part, 38 F.3d 1380 (3d Cir. 1994).

 © 2025 Thomson Reuters. No claim to original U.S. Government Works.

Clark v. Sears Roebuck & Co., 816 F. Supp. 1064 (E.D. Pa. 1993), citing Wright & Miller.

Kentucky Cent. Life Ins. Co. v. LeDuc, 814 F. Supp. 832 (N.D. Cal. 1992), citing Wright & Miller.

Airline Car Rental, Inc. v. Shreveport Airport Authority, 667 F. Supp. 293 (W.D. La. 1986), quoting Wright & Miller.

Cincinnati Gas & Elec. Co. v. General Elec. Co., 656 F. Supp. 49 (S.D. Ohio 1986), citing Wright & Miller.

Morgan v. Kobrin Securities, Inc., 649 F. Supp. 1023 (N.D. Ill. 1986), on reconsideration, 1987 WL 8992 (N.D. Ill. 1987).

The defendant's Rule 12(b)(6) motion based on the plaintiffs' supposed failure to exhaust their administrative remedies was denied since the plaintiffs' complaint alleged their compliance with the exhaustion requirements. Pueblo de Cochiti v. U.S., 647 F. Supp. 538 (D.N.M. 1986).

U.S. v. Gray, 582 F. Supp. 1559 (N.D. Ga. 1982).

Basile v. Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner & Smith, Inc., 551 F. Supp. 580 (S.D. Ohio 1982), citing Wright & Miller.

Jacobs v. Pabst Brewing Co., 549 F. Supp. 1050 (D. Del. 1982), citing Wright & Miller.

Stratton Group, Ltd. v. Sprayregen, 458 F. Supp. 1216 (S.D. N.Y. 1978).

McDowell v. Union Mut. Life Ins. Co., 404 F. Supp. 136 (C.D. Cal. 1975).

Western Pennsylvania Nat. Bank v. U.S., 354 F. Supp. 373 (W.D. Pa. 1973).

A motion to dismiss based on res judicata and collateral estoppel would be denied since a reasonable doubt existed as to what was decided by the prior judgment. Travelers Indem. Co. v. Arbogast, 45 F.R.D. 87 (W.D. Pa. 1968).

Falsetti v. Local Union No. 2026, United Mine Workers of America, 34 F.R.D. 461 (W.D. Pa. 1964).

Day v. Walker, 206 F. Supp. 32 (W.D. N.C. 1962).

See also

On a motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim, when the district court considered matters outside of the pleadings because an affirmative defense did not appear on the face of the complaint, it converted the motion into one for summary judgment. Doing so without notifying the pro se plaintiff was error.

Youssef v. Department of Health and Senior Services, 423 Fed. Appx. 221 (3d Cir. 2011).

Compare
Jackson v. Borough of Haines, 441 P.3d 925 (Alaska 2019) (dismissal based on affirmative defense possible when the defense appears clearly on the face of the pleading), citing Wright & Miller.

But see
The ordinary requirement that a res judicata defense must appear on the face of the complaint is unnecessary when the plaintiff is bringing the same case before a court that was previously deemed a final decision for failure to amend within the time period provided by the court. Hoffman v. Nordic Naturals, Inc., 837 F.3d 272, 280 (3d Cir. 2016).

83 Built-in defense
See § 1226 for further discussion of built-in defenses.

See also
Estate of Barney v. PNC Bank, Nat. Ass'n, 714 F.3d 920, 926 (6th Cir. 2013), citing Wright & Miller.

Lockhart v. Holiday Inn Exp. Southwind, 531 Fed. Appx. 544 (6th Cir. 2013), citing Wright & Miller.

Garrett v. Commonwealth Mortg. Corp. of America, 938 F.2d 591, 594 (5th Cir. 1991), quoting Wright & Miller.

Miles v. Simmons University, 514 F. Supp. 3d 1070, 1075 (D. Minn. 2021) ("[D]eclining to hold a plaintiff to the plausibility standard with respect to the scope of employment would effectively treat that issue more like an affirmative defense, which can only support a dismissal when the complaint is 'self-defeating.'"), citing Wright & Miller.

City of Painesville, Ohio v. First Montauk Financial Corp., 178 F.R.D. 180 (N.D. Ohio 1998), quoting Wright & Miller.

Hirras v. National R.R. Passenger Corp., 826 F. Supp. 1062 (W.D. Tex. 1992), judgment aff'd, 10 F.3d 1142 (5th Cir. 1994), cert. granted, judgment vacated, 512 U.S. 1231, 114 S. Ct. 2732, 129 L. Ed. 2d 855 (1994).

Galvin v. Lloyd, 663 F. Supp. 1572 (D. Conn. 1987), quoting Wright & Miller.

84 More appropriate device
In re EpiPen Direct Purchaser Litigation, 2021 WL 147166, *6 (D. Minn. 2021) ("[T]he timelines of Plaintiffs' RICO claims cannot be resolved at the pleading stage. * * * [I]t would stretch both the standards governing Rule 12(b)(6) motions and the Complaint's allegations too far to conclude that these sources triggered a duty of reasonable diligence as a matter of law here. * * * All of this is not to say that discovery won't reveal Plaintiffs' RICO claims are untimely. It may. It's just that dismissing Plaintiffs' RICO claims as untimely at this point would be premature.") (citations omitted), quoting Wright & Miller.

See §§ 2711 to 2742 for a discussion of summary judgment under Rule 56.

85 Statute of limitations

Supreme Court

"If the allegations, for example, show that relief is barred by the applicable statute of limitations, the complaint is subject to dismissal for failure to state a claim * * *." Jones v. Bock, 549 U.S. 199, 127 S. Ct. 910, 920-921, 166 L. Ed. 2d 798 (2007).

First Circuit

Martinez-Rivera v. Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, 812 F.3d 69, 74-77 (1st Cir. 2016).

Abdallah v. Bain Capital LLC, 752 F.3d 114, 119 (1st Cir. 2014).

Warren Freedenfeld Associates, Inc. v. McTigue, 531 F.3d 38 (1st Cir. 2008).

Trans-Spec Truck Service, Inc. v. Caterpillar Inc., 524 F.3d 315 (1st Cir. 2008).

Young v. Lepone, 305 F.3d 1 (1st Cir. 2002).

LaChapelle v. Berkshire Life Ins. Co., 142 F.3d 507 (1st Cir. 1998) (motion to dismiss based on limitations defense is entirely appropriate when pleader's allegations leave no doubt that asserted claim is time-barred).

Abdallah v. Bain Capital LLC, 880 F. Supp. 2d 190 (D. Mass. 2012).

Reyes-Orta v. Highway and Transp. Authority, 843 F. Supp. 2d 216, 222 (D.P.R. 2012).

Hoff v. Popular, Inc., 727 F. Supp. 2d 77 (D.P.R. 2010).

In re Tyco Intern., Ltd. Multidistrict Litigation, 2004 WL 532193 (D.N.H. 2004).

In re Estate of Molina-Velez v. R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Co., 286 F. Supp. 2d 185 (D.P.R. 2003).

Estate of Alicano Ayala v. Philip Morris, Inc., 263 F. Supp. 2d 311 (D.P.R. 2003).

Greenier v. Pace, Local No. 1188, 201 F. Supp. 2d 172 (D. Me. 2002).

Reyes v. Municipality of Guaynabo, 59 F. Supp. 2d 305 (D.P.R. 1999), citing Wright & Miller.

Heinrich ex rel. Heinrich v. Sweet, 49 F. Supp. 2d 27 (D. Mass. 1999).

Deisenroth v. Numonics Corp., 997 F. Supp. 153 (D. Mass. 1998).

U.S. v. Rockland Trust Co., 860 F. Supp. 895 (D. Mass. 1994).

Gaudreault v. U.S., 835 F. Supp. 684 (D. Mass. 1993), aff'd, 7 F.3d 218 (1st Cir. 1993).

American Glue & Resin, Inc. v. Air Products & Chemicals, Inc., 835 F. Supp. 36 (D. Mass. 1993).

Delman v. Federal Products Corp., 136 F. Supp. 241 (D.R.I. 1955), judgment aff'd, 251 F.2d 123 (1st Cir. 1958).

Second Circuit
Muto v. CBS Corp., 668 F.3d 53, 56 (2d Cir. 2012).

Gonzalez v. Hasty, 651 F.3d 318 (2d Cir. 2011).

Lomako v. New York Institute of Technology, 440 Fed. Appx. 1 (2d Cir. 2011).

Harper v. City of New York, 424 Fed. Appx. 36 (2d Cir. 2011).

Corona Realty Holding, LLC v. Town of North Hempstead, 382 Fed. Appx. 70 (2d Cir. 2010).

LC Capital Partners, LP v. Frontier Ins. Group, Inc., 318 F.3d 148 (2d Cir. 2003) (although question of whether plaintiff had sufficient facts to place it on inquiry notice that started statute of limitations running is often fact-intensive and thus inappropriate for Rule 12(b)(6) adjudication, when facts are clear on face of complaint and other integral papers, Rule 12(b)(6) resolution is permissible).

Pani v. Empire Blue Cross Blue Shield, 152 F.3d 67 (2d Cir. 1998).

Jackson Nat. Life Ins. Co. v. Merrill Lynch & Co., Inc., 32 F.3d 697 (2d Cir. 1994).

"Defendant's pre-answer motion to dismiss consists of a Memorandum of Law and a supporting declaration. Neither document identifies the precise rule or statute that governs the requested dismissal, and Defendant's motion papers do not comply with the local rule requiring a notice of motion setting forth the basis for the requested relief. Nevertheless, consistent with well-recognized practice, this Court will treat Defendant's motion as one made pursuant to Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(b)(6), because the statute of limitations in a social security action is an affirmative defense rather than a jurisdictional issue." Jeremy C. G. v.

Commissioner of Social Security, 2023 WL 4467125, *1 (N.D. N.Y. 2023) (citations omitted).

Taylor v. City of New York, 207 F. Supp. 3d 293 (S.D. N.Y. 2016).

"At the Rule 12(b)(6) stage, a plaintiff need only plead fraudulent concealment, as opposed to affirmatively proving it." Schenker AG v. Societe Air France, 102 F. Supp. 3d 418, 424 (E.D. N.Y. 2015) (plaintiff pled fraudulent concealment with enough particularity to withstand motion to dismiss) (internal quotations omitted).

Rosario v. Local 1106 Transport Works of America, 29 F. Supp. 3d 153 (E.D. N.Y. 2014).

Hemmerdinger Corp. v. Ruocco, 976 F. Supp. 2d 401 (E.D. N.Y. 2013).

Weisshaus v. Fagan, 2010 WL 2813490 (S.D. N.Y. 2010), judgment aff'd, 456 Fed. Appx. 32 (2d Cir. 2012).

Bacon v. Suffolk Legislature, 2007 WL 2288044 (E.D. N.Y. 2007).

Francis v. Blaikie Group, 372 F. Supp. 2d 741 (S.D. N.Y. 2005) (defenses based on statutes of limitations are brought properly as Rule 12(b)(6) motions), aff'd, 177 Fed. Appx. 121 (2d Cir. 2006).

Hason v. Office of Professional Medical Conduct, 314 F. Supp. 2d 241 (S.D. N.Y. 2004).

One district court has concluded that dismissal based on the statute of limitations normally is a more appropriate under a Rule 12(b)(6) standard than under a Rule 12(b)(1) standard. The court concluded that assertion that the claim is barred by the statute of limitations is an affirmative defense and that the procedures and standards of Rule 12(b)(6) are better than those of Rule 12(b)(1) for addressing affirmative defenses. Adams v. Crystal City Marriott Hotel, 2004 WL 744489 (S.D. N.Y. 2004).

TEG NY LLC v. Ardenwood Estates, Inc., 2004 WL 626802 (E.D. N.Y. 2004).

Rampersad v. Deutsche Bank Securities, Inc., 2004 WL 616132 (S.D. N.Y. 2004).

Haghpassand v. Reuters Consulting Group, 2004 WL 594576 (S.D. N.Y. 2004), aff'd, 120 Fed. Appx. 859 (2d Cir. 2005).

Oechsner v. Connell Ltd. Partnership, 283 F. Supp. 2d 926 (S.D. N.Y. 2003), judgment aff'd, 101 Fed. Appx. 849 (2d Cir. 2004).

In re Merrill Lynch & Co., Inc., 273 F. Supp. 2d 351 (S.D. N.Y. 2003), judgment aff'd, 396 F.3d 161 (2d Cir. 2005) (even at Rule 12(b)(6) stage, plaintiff should be on inquiry notice in shareholder class action suit based on publicly available, widely disseminated newspaper article), citing LC Capital Partners, LP v. Frontier Ins. Group, Inc., 318 F.3d 148 (2d Cir. 2003).

American Medical Ass'n v. United Healthcare Corp., 2002 WL 31413668 (S.D. N.Y. 2002), opinion adhered to on reconsideration, 2003 WL 348963 (S.D. N.Y. 2003).

Bolanos v. Norwegian Cruise Lines Ltd., 7 Wage & Hour Cas. 2d (BNA) 1703, 2002 WL 1465907 (S.D. N.Y. 2002), order aff'd, 2004 WL 769766 (S.D. N.Y. 2004) (magistrate judge).

Cetenich v. Alden, 11 F. Supp. 2d 238 (N.D. N.Y. 1998) (allegations in complaint).

Marbi Corp. of New York v. Puhekker, 9 F. Supp. 2d 425 (S.D. N.Y. 1998).

In re Merrill Lynch Ltd. Partnerships Litigation, 7 F. Supp. 2d 256 (S.D. N.Y. 1997), opinion aff'd, 154 F.3d 56 (2d Cir. 1998).

Sealy Connecticut, Inc. v. Litton Industries, Inc., 989 F. Supp. 120 (D. Conn. 1997).

Daniel v. American Bd. of Emergency Medicine, 988 F. Supp. 112 (W.D. N.Y. 1997).

Third Circuit

Pension Trust Fund for Operating Engineers v. Mortgage Asset Securitization Transactions, Inc., 730 F.3d 263 (3d Cir. 2013).

Brown v. Montgomery County, 470 Fed. Appx. 87, 90 (3d Cir. 2012) ("[U]nder the law of this Circuit (the so-called 'Third-Circuit Rule'), such a [statute of limitations] defense may be asserted by motion to dismiss if 'the time alleged in the statement of a claim shows that the cause of action has not been brought within the statute of limitations.'"), quoting Hanna v. U.S. Veterans' Administration Hospital, 514 F.2d 1092, 1094 (3d Cir. 1975).

Barefoot Architect, Inc. v. Bunge, 54 V.I. 948, 632 F.3d 822, 835 (3d Cir. 2011) (when pleading does not reveal when limitations period began, statute of limitations is not valid grounds for dismissal for failure to state claim).

Wiggins v. String, 428 Fed. Appx. 117 (3d Cir. 2011).

Emel v. Singleton, 427 Fed. Appx. 225 (3d Cir. 2011).

 © 2025 Thomson Reuters. No claim to original U.S. Government Works.

Davis v. County of Allegheny, 411 Fed. Appx. 447, 449 (3d Cir. 2011).

Robinson v. County of Allegheny, 404 Fed. Appx. 670, 672 (3d Cir. 2010).

Fullman v. Pennsylvania Dept. of Corrections, 265 Fed. Appx. 44 (3d Cir. 2008).

Davis v. Grusemeyer, 996 F.2d 617 (3d Cir. 1993).

Bethel v. Jendoco Const. Corp., 570 F.2d 1168 (3d Cir. 1978).

In view of the provision in Rule 9(f) that averments of time and place are material, a Rule 12(b) motion can be utilized when the time alleged in the statement of a claim shows that the cause of action has not been brought within a statute of limitations. Hanna v. U.S. Veterans' Administration Hospital, 514 F.2d 1092 (3d Cir. 1975).

"Defendants' statute of limitations argument improperly shifts the burden of disproving the affirmative defense of the statute of limitations to Plaintiffs. This argument is not proper in a motion to dismiss under Rule 12(b)(6) where the statute of limitations cannot be determined from the face of the pleading. This argument by Defendants is therefore rejected." Price v. County of Salem, 2023 WL 4373217, *3 (D. N.J. 2023).

"In this Circuit, a limitations defense may be raised in a 12(b)(6) motion to dismiss, 'but only if the time alleged in the statement of a claim shows that the cause of action has not been brought within the statute of limitations. If the bar is not apparent on the face of the complaint, then it may not afford the basis for a dismissal of the complaint under Rule 12(b)(6).'" Weiss v. Bank of America Corporation, 153 F. Supp. 3d 831, 837-838 (W.D. Pa. 2015).

Wilson v. Board of Control of City of Harrisburg School Dist., 2010 WL 4977056 (M.D. Pa. 2010).

Dupree v. Doe, 2010 WL 2719977 (D. Del. 2010), on reconsideration, 773 F. Supp. 2d 477 (D. Del. 2011).

Kreimer v. Philadelphia Inquirer, Inc., 2004 WL 1196258 (E.D. Pa. 2004) (motion to dismiss appropriate if apparent from face of complaint that action not filed within required time period).

Nellom v. Luber, 2004 WL 816922 (E.D. Pa. 2004).

Soppick v. Borough of West Conshohocken, 2004 WL 739945 (E.D. Pa. 2004), judgment aff'd, 118 Fed. Appx. 631 (3d Cir. 2004).

Kelly v. Eckerd Corp., 2004 WL 614822 (E.D. Pa. 2004).

 © 2025 Thomson Reuters. No claim to original U.S. Government Works.

Rogan v. Giant Eagle, Inc., 113 F. Supp. 2d 777 (W.D. Pa. 2000), aff'd, 276 F.3d 579 (3d Cir. 2001), citing Wright & Miller.

Compton v. National League of Professional Baseball Clubs, 995 F. Supp. 554 (E.D. Pa. 1998), order aff'd, 172 F.3d 40 (3d Cir. 1998).

A Rule 12(b)(6) motion should not be granted on limitations grounds unless the complaint facially shows noncompliance with the limitations period. Giusto v. Ashland Chemical Co., 994 F. Supp. 587 (E.D. Pa. 1998).

Saylor v. Ridge, 989 F. Supp. 680 (E.D. Pa. 1998).

Fourth Circuit
Cruz v. Maypa, 773 F.3d 138, 148 (4th Cir. 2014).

Gemaehlich v. Johnson, 599 Fed. Appx. 473, 476 (4th Cir. 2014).

Agolli v. Office Depot, Inc., 548 Fed. Appx. 871, 875 (4th Cir. 2013).

Belrose v. Hartford Life & Acc. Ins. Co., 478 Fed. Appx. 21 (4th Cir. 2012).

McLeod v. PB Inv. Corp., 492 Fed. Appx. 379 (4th Cir. 2012).

Bonham v. Weinraub, 413 Fed. Appx. 615, 616 (4th Cir. 2011).

Brooks v. City of Winston-Salem, N.C., 85 F.3d 178 (4th Cir. 1996), citing Wright & Miller.

"Defendants may raise a statute of limitations issue as an affirmative defense in response to a plaintiff's cause of action pursuant to Rule 12(b)(6). Dean v. Pilgrim's Pride Corp., 395 F.3d 471, 475 (4th Cir. 2005). Dismissing a claim based on statute of limitations grounds pursuant to Rule 12(b)(6) is appropriate "only if the time bar is apparent on the face of the complaint." Manion v. North Carolina Medical Board, 693 Fed. Appx. 178, 180 (4th Cir. 2017)." Nomani v. Qarni, 2023 WL 4203438, *2 (E.D. Va. 2023).

Stack v. Abbott Laboratories, Inc., 979 F. Supp. 2d 658 (M.D. N.C. 2013), citing Goodman v. Praxair, Inc., 494 F.3d 458, 464 (4th Cir. 2007).

Topshelf Management, Inc. v. Campbell-Ewald Company, 203 F. Supp. 3d 608 (M.D. N.C. 2016).

Young Bok Song v. Welch, 2010 WL 2813305 (E.D. N.C. 2010), aff'd, 410 Fed. Appx. 648 (4th Cir. 2011).

Saunders v. Union Carbide Corp., 2010 WL 2720750 (S.D. W. Va. 2010), aff'd, 397 Fed. Appx. 908 (4th Cir. 2010).

U.S. v. Rawlings, 2010 WL 2292508, *2 (D. Md. 2010), citing Wright & Miller.

Leggat v. Equifax Information Services, Inc., 2009 WL 2432371 (E.D. Va. 2009).

Tao of Systems Integration, Inc. v. Analytical Services & Materials, Inc., 299 F. Supp. 2d 565 (E.D. Va. 2004), quoting Wright & Miller.

Thompson v. Potter, 2004 WL 725629 (M.D. N.C. 2004).

Spencer v. Town of Chapel Hill, 290 F. Supp. 2d 655 (M.D. N.C. 2003).

Verizon Maryland Inc. v. RCN Telecom Services, Inc., 232 F. Supp. 2d 539 (D. Md. 2002), aff'd in part, dismissed in part, 377 F.3d 355 (4th Cir. 2004), citing Wright & Miller.

When it appears on the face of the complaint that the limitation period has run, a defendant may properly assert a limitations defense through a Rule 12(b)(6) motion to dismiss. Miller v. Pacific Shore Funding, 224 F. Supp. 2d 977 (D. Md. 2002), aff'd, 92 Fed. Appx. 933 (4th Cir. 2004).

Eniola v. Leasecomm Corp., 214 F. Supp. 2d 520 (D. Md. 2002).

Gray v. Metts, 203 F. Supp. 2d 426 (D. Md. 2002).

Swedish Civil Aviation Admin. v. Project Management Enterprises, Inc., 190 F. Supp. 2d 785 (D. Md. 2002), quoting Wright & Miller.

Frye v. City of Kannapolis, 109 F. Supp. 2d 436 (M.D. N.C. 1999), quoting Wright & Miller.

Jones v. Saxon Mortg., Inc., 980 F. Supp. 842 (E.D. Va. 1997), order aff'd, 161 F.3d 2 (4th Cir. 1998), redesignated as opinion, 537 F.3d 320 (4th Cir. 1998) and publication ordered, (Oct. 8, 1998) and order aff'd, 537 F.3d 320 (4th Cir. 1998).

Papesh v. American Nat. Can Co., 177 F.R.D. 344 (D. Md. 1997), aff'd, 129 F.3d 117 (4th Cir. 1997).

Wamco, III, Ltd. v. First Piedmont Mortg. Corp., 856 F. Supp. 1076 (E.D. Va. 1994) (rejected by, Global Financial Services, Inc. v. Duttenhefner, 1998 ND 53, 575 N.W.2d 667 (N.D. 1998)).

Fifth Circuit

King-White v. Humble Independent School Dist., 803 F.3d 754, 762 (5th Cir. 2015).

Hoover v. SOS Staffing Services, Inc., 584 Fed. Appx. 190 (5th Cir. 2014).

Humphreys v. City of Ganado, Tex., 467 Fed. Appx. 252, 255 (5th Cir. 2012) (per curiam).

Newman v. Coffin, 464 Fed. Appx. 359, 362 (5th Cir. 2012) (per curiam).

Jaso v. The Coca Cola Co., 435 Fed. Appx. 346, 351-352 (5th Cir. 2011) (defendant has burden to establish statute of limitations defense and to sustain motion to dismiss, it must appear on face of complaint; plaintiff not required to plead facts that negate it), citing Wright & Miller.

Lowery v. Capital One Mortg., 429 Fed. Appx. 377 (5th Cir. 2011).

Miller v. Nationwide Life Ins. Co., 391 F.3d 698 (5th Cir. 2004).

Jones v. Alcoa, Inc., 339 F.3d 359 (5th Cir. 2003).

Taylor v. Books A Million, Inc., 296 F.3d 376 (5th Cir. 2002).

Gonzales v. Wyatt, 157 F.3d 1016 (5th Cir. 1998).

Kansa Reinsurance Co., Ltd. v. Congressional Mortg. Corp. of Texas, 20 F.3d 1362 (5th Cir. 1994).

Cross v. Lucius, 713 F.2d 153 (5th Cir. 1983).

Mann v. Adams Realty Co., Inc., 556 F.2d 288, 293 n.6 (5th Cir. 1977), quoting Wright & Miller.

Hepperle v. Johnston, 544 F.2d 201 (5th Cir. 1976).

White v. Padgett, 475 F.2d 79, 82 n.7 (5th Cir. 1973).

Joe E. Freund, Inc. v. Insurance Co. of North America, 370 F.2d 924 (5th Cir. 1967).

Peacock v. AARP, Inc., 181 F. Supp. 3d 430, 434 (S.D. Tex. 2016) (dismissal is proper when complaint demonstrates that claims are time-barred and also "fail to set forth or raise some basis for tolling the statute").

Janvey v. Suarez, 978 F. Supp. 2d 685 (N.D. Tex. 2013) ("Within the Fifth Circuit, it is well-settled that '[a] statute of limitations may support dismissal under Rule 12(b)(6) where it is evident from the plaintiff's pleadings that the action is barred and the pleadings fail to raise some basis for tolling or the like.'"), quoting Jones v. Alcoa, Inc., 339 F.3d 359, 366 (5th Cir. 2003).

Dorest v. Piney Point Surgical Center, 2011 WL 2633575 (S.D. Tex. 2011).

Wilson v. Barcella, 2007 WL 963977 (S.D. Tex. 2007), aff'd, 284 Fed. Appx. 210 (5th Cir. 2008).

In re Enron Corp. Securities, Derivative & "ERISA" Litigation, 310 F. Supp. 2d 819 (S.D. Tex. 2004).

Anderson v. City of New Orleans, 2004 WL 1396325 (E.D. La. 2004).

Palma v. City of New Orleans, 2004 WL 612963 (E.D. La. 2004), order aff'd, 115 Fed. Appx. 191 (5th Cir. 2004).

Fields v. Stalder, 2002 WL 1611597 (E.D. La. 2002) (prescriptive period under Louisiana Civil Code).

Nickerson v. Texas, 35 F. Supp. 2d 512 (E.D. Tex. 1998), aff'd, 209 F.3d 718 (5th Cir. 2000) (dismissal pursuant to Rule 12(b)(6) is appropriate remedy when statute of limitations has run).

Askanase v. Fatjo, 828 F. Supp. 465 (S.D. Tex. 1993).

Sixth Circuit

Lutz v. Chesapeake Appalachia, L.L.C., 717 F.3d 459 (6th Cir. 2013) ("Generally, a motion under Rule 12(b)(6), which considers only the allegations in the complaint, is an 'inappropriate vehicle' for dismissing a claim based upon a statute of limitations. However, dismissal is warranted if 'the allegations in the complaint affirmatively show that the claim is time-barred.'"), quoting Cataldo v. U.S. Steel Corp., 676 F.3d 542, 547 (6th Cir. 2012).

Cataldo v. U.S. Steel Corp., 676 F.3d 542, 547 (6th Cir. 2012) (dismissal under Rule 12(b)(6) based upon statute of limitations appropriate only when allegations in complaint affirmatively show claim is time-barred).

Duff v. Kentucky Bd. of Medical Licensure, 472 Fed. Appx. 400 (6th Cir. 2012) (per curiam).

Walburn v. Lockheed Martin Utility Services, Inc., 443 Fed. Appx. 43 (6th Cir. 2011).

Bishop v. Lucent Technologies, Inc., 520 F.3d 516 (6th Cir. 2008).

New England Health Care Employees Pension Fund v. Ernst & Young, LLP, 336 F.3d 495 (6th Cir. 2003) (holding modified by, Merck & Co., Inc. v. Reynolds, 559 U.S. 633, 130 S. Ct. 1784, 176 L. Ed. 2d 582 (2010)).

Rauch v. Day & Night Mfg. Corp., 576 F.2d 697, 702 (6th Cir. 1978), quoting Wright & Miller.

Ott v. Midland-Ross Corp., 523 F.2d 1367 (6th Cir. 1975).

"The Sixth Circuit has clarified that the Court may grant a Rule 12(b)(6) motion on statute of limitations grounds where 'the allegations in the complaint affirmatively show that the claim is time-barred.' Lutz v. Chesapeake Appalachia, LLC, 717 F.3d 459, 464 (6th Cir. 2013). 'Because the statute of limitations is an affirmative defense, the burden is on the defendant to show that the statute of limitations has run.' Campbell v. Grand Trunk W.R.R. Co., 238 F.3d 772, 775 (6th Cir. 2001). 'If the defendant meets this requirement, then the burden shifts to the plaintiff to establish an exception to the statute of limitations.' Campbell, 238 F.3d at 775." Williams v. Covington Police Department, 2023 WL 4468401, *2 (E.D. Ky. 2023).

 © 2025 Thomson Reuters. No claim to original U.S. Government Works.

Navarro-Teran v. Embraer Aircraft Maintenance Services, Inc., 184 F. Supp. 3d 612, 625 (M.D. Tenn. 2016) (allegations in complaint did not affirmatively show claim is time-barred because allegations were general and failure to identify specific incidents within statute of limitations span does not constitute dismissal for statutory bar defense).

Hanson Cold Storage Co. v. Chizek Elevator & Transport, Inc., 205 F. Supp. 3d 920 (W.D. Mich. 2016).

Conner v. U.S. Dept. of the Army, 6 F. Supp. 3d 717 (W.D. Ky. 2014).

Sanders v. Williams Equipment & Supply Co., Inc., 2010 WL 5575483 (W.D. Tenn. 2010), report and recommendation adopted, 2011 WL 111713 (W.D. Tenn. 2011).

Crawford v. U.S. Foodservice, Inc., 2010 WL 2901740 (M.D. Tenn. 2010).

Gibson v. American Bankers Ins. Co., 91 F. Supp. 2d 1037 (E.D. Ky. 2000), aff'd, 289 F.3d 943 (6th Cir. 2002).

Lawson v. Shelby County, Tenn., 7 F. Supp. 2d 985 (W.D. Tenn. 1998), rev'd, 211 F.3d 331 (6th Cir. 2000).

City of Painesville, Ohio v. First Montauk Financial Corp., 178 F.R.D. 180 (N.D. Ohio 1998).

Seventh Circuit

Ennenga v. Starns, 677 F.3d 766, 773 (7th Cir. 2012) (motion to dismiss on statute-of-limitations ground brought properly under Rule 12(b)(6) and therefore is not waived by failure to raise in answer).

Independent Trust Corp. v. Stewart Information Services Corp., 665 F.3d 930, 935 (7th Cir. 2012).

Estate of Davis v. Wells Fargo Bank, 633 F.3d 529, 535-536 (7th Cir. 2011) (when plaintiff did not allege claim not barred by statute of limitations, dismissal by district court was proper).

Grzanecki v. Bravo Cucina Italiana, 408 Fed. Appx. 993, 996 (7th Cir. 2011) (action properly dismissed as untimely if plaintiff includes allegations that plead her out of court by establishing untimeliness).

Brooks v. Ross, 578 F.3d 574 (7th Cir. 2009).

When facts alleged in the complaint lead to no other conclusion than that a complaint is untimely, a Rule 12(b)(6) dismissal may be appropriate, but when the record does not make it clear when the statute of limitations began to run, dismissal is premature. Del Korth v. Supervalu, Inc., 46 Fed. Appx. 846 (7th Cir. 2002) (unpublished).

If a plaintiff pleads facts that show its suit is barred by a statute of limitations, it may plead itself out of court. Kauthar SDN BHD v. Sternberg, 149 F.3d 659 (7th Cir. 1998) (abrogated by, Morrison v. National Australia Bank Ltd., 561 U.S. 247, 130 S. Ct. 2869, 177 L. Ed. 2d 535 (2010)).

Eison v. McCoy, 146 F.3d 468 (7th Cir. 1998).

Ashafa v. City of Chicago, 146 F.3d 459 (7th Cir. 1998).

Cook v. Winfrey, 141 F.3d 322 (7th Cir. 1998).

Hi-Lite Products Co. v. American Home Products Corp., 11 F.3d 1402 (7th Cir. 1993).

"A complaint can be dismissed as untimely at the pleadings stage only when the plaintiff pleads himself out of court by alleging facts sufficient to establish the complaint's tardiness." Wies v. Cavalry SPV I, L.L.C., 2015 WL 569897, *2 (N.D. Ind. 2015).

James v. Illinois Sexually Dangerous Persons Act, 2009 WL 2567910 (S.D. Ill. 2009), aff'd, 373 Fed. Appx. 619 (7th Cir. 2010).

Pettiford v. Sheahan, 2004 WL 626151 (N.D. Ill. 2004).

Lawrence E. Jaffe Pension Plan v. Household Intern., Inc., 2004 WL 574665 (N.D. Ill. 2004).

766347 Ontario Ltd. v. Zurich Capital Markets, Inc., 249 F. Supp. 2d 974 (N.D. Ill. 2003) (when statute of limitations begins running when potential plaintiff is on inquiry notice, Rule 12(b)(6) is inappropriate for adjudicating affirmative defense since question of inquiry notice is usually fact-based inquiry that cannot be resolved on based of complaint alone).

White v. Cooper, 55 F. Supp. 2d 848 (N.D. Ill. 1999).

Coats v. Kraft Foods, Inc., 12 F. Supp. 2d 862 (N.D. Ind. 1998).

Tabor v. City of Chicago, 10 F. Supp. 2d 988 (N.D. Ill. 1998).

McLaughlin v. Cook County Dept. of Corrections, 993 F. Supp. 661 (N.D. Ill. 1998).

Eighth Circuit
Smithrud v. City of St. Paul, 746 F.3d 391, 396 (8th Cir. 2014).

Illig v. Union Elec. Co., 652 F.3d 971 (8th Cir. 2011).

Joyce v. Armstrong Teasdale, LLP, 635 F.3d 364, 367 (8th Cir. 2011) (statute of limitations not proper ground for Rule 12(b)(6) dismissal unless defense appears on face of complaint).

Jessie v. Potter, 516 F.3d 709, 713 n.2 (8th Cir. 2008).

Guy v. Swift and Co., 612 F.2d 383 (8th Cir. 1980).

Horn v. Burns and Roe, 536 F.2d 251 (8th Cir. 1976).

Wilburn v. Pepsi-Cola Bottling Co. of St. Louis, 492 F.2d 1288, 1289 (8th Cir. 1974), citing Wright & Miller.

Kramer v. America's Wholesale Lenders, 2011 WL 577390 (E.D. Mo. 2011).

Morgan v. Craig, 2010 WL 2867828 (N.D. Iowa 2010).

Parler v. Hood Packaging, Inc., 2008 WL 2357052 (D. Minn. 2008), vacated, 329 Fed. Appx. 41 (8th Cir. 2009).

Russell v. City of Overland Police Dept., 838 F. Supp. 1350 (E.D. Mo. 1993).

F.D.I.C. v. Deloitte & Touche, 834 F. Supp. 1129 (E.D. Ark. 1992).

Teel v. American Steel Foundries, 529 F. Supp. 337 (E.D. Mo. 1981), citing Wright & Miller.

Bergstreser v. Mitchell, 448 F. Supp. 10 (E.D. Mo. 1977), judgment aff'd, 577 F.2d 22 (8th Cir. 1978).

Adams v. Greer, 114 F. Supp. 770 (W.D. Ark. 1953).

Ninth Circuit
Zamorano v. City of San Jacinto, 585 Fed. Appx. 397 (9th Cir. 2014).

Seven Arts Filmed Entertainment Ltd. v. Content Media Corp. PLC, 733 F.3d 1251, 1254 (9th Cir. 2013) ("A statute-of-limitations defense, if 'apparent from the face of the complaint,' may properly be raised in a motion to dismiss."), quoting Conerly v. Westinghouse Elec. Corp., 623 F.2d 117, 119 (9th Cir. 1980).

McOmie-Gray v. Bank of America Home Loans, 667 F.3d 1325 (9th Cir. 2012) (Truth in Lending Act).

Bone v. City of Los Angeles, 471 Fed. Appx. 620 (9th Cir. 2012).

Royal Crown Ins. Corp. v. Northern Mariana Islands, 447 Fed. Appx. 760 (9th Cir. 2011).

North County Community Alliance, Inc. v. Salazar, 573 F.3d 738 (9th Cir. 2009).

Northern Highlands I, II, LLC v. Comerica Bank, 328 Fed. Appx. 358 (9th Cir. 2009).

Platt Elec. Supply, Inc. v. EOFF Elec., Inc., 522 F.3d 1049 (9th Cir. 2008) (allowing amendment of complaint futile because statute of limitations had run).

TwoRivers v. Lewis, 174 F.3d 987 (9th Cir. 1999).

Lehman v. U.S., 154 F.3d 1010 (9th Cir. 1998).

Hernandez v. City of El Monte, 138 F.3d 393 (9th Cir. 1998).

Supermail Cargo, Inc. v. U.S., 68 F.3d 1204 (9th Cir. 1995).

Flynn v. Marriott Ownership Resorts, Inc., 165 F. Supp. 3d 955, 965 (D. Haw. 2016).

Amir v. Five Unnamed U.S.A. Immigration Enforcement and Custom Officials in Vancouver Intern. Airport, 2010 WL 2402910, *2 (W.D. Wash. 2010), report and recommendation adopted, 2010 WL 2402915 (W.D. Wash. 2010).

O'Dell v. Inyo County Sheriff's Dep., 2006 WL 3834397 (E.D. Cal. 2006).

Pooshs v. Altria Group, Inc., 331 F. Supp. 2d 1089 (N.D. Cal. 2004).

Moore v. Navarro, 2004 WL 783104 (N.D. Cal. 2004).

Gallardo v. DiCarlo, 203 F. Supp. 2d 1160 (C.D. Cal. 2002).

Coulter v. Bronster, 57 F. Supp. 2d 1028 (D. Haw. 1999), aff'd, 13 Fed. Appx. 661 (9th Cir. 2001).

Chavez v. I.N.S., 17 F. Supp. 2d 1141 (S.D. Cal. 1998).

Larramendy v. Newton, 994 F. Supp. 1211 (E.D. Cal. 1998).

Tenth Circuit

Schrock v. Wyeth, Inc., 727 F.3d 1273, 1280 (10th Cir. 2013).

National Credit Union Admin. Bd. v. Nomura Home Equity Loan, Inc., 727 F.3d 1246 (10th Cir. 2013), cert. granted, judgment vacated, 573 U.S. 914, 134 S. Ct. 2818, 189 L. Ed. 2d 783 (2014).

Bynum v. Municipality, City and County of Denver, 550 Fed. Appx. 560, 562 (10th Cir. 2013).

Young v. United Parcel Services, Inc. Employees' Short Term Disability Plan, 416 Fed. Appx. 734, 737 (10th Cir. 2011).

Wood v. Milyard, 414 Fed. Appx. 103, 105 (10th Cir. 2011).

Stone v. Whitman, 324 Fed. Appx. 726 (10th Cir. 2009) (for citations rules see Tenth Circuit Rule 32.1).

Ballen v. Prudential Bache Securities, Inc., 23 F.3d 335 (10th Cir. 1994).

Industrial Constructors Corp. v. U.S. Bureau of Reclamation, 15 F.3d 963 (10th Cir. 1994).

Aldrich v. McCulloch Properties, Inc., 627 F.2d 1036, 1041 (10th Cir. 1980), citing Wright & Miller.

American Mechanical Solutions, L.L.C. v. Northland Process Piping, Inc., 184 F. Supp. 3d 1030, 1048 (D.N.M. 2016) (plaintiff could counter statute of limitations defense on Rule 12(b)(6) motion to dismiss by asserting different statute of limitations or that equitable tolling doctrine applies; Tenth Circuit has not clarified if this assertion must include supporting facts from complaint).

Cabrera v. Perceptive Software, LLC, 147 F. Supp. 3d 1247, 1249 (D. Kan. 2015) (court resolved defendant's affirmative defense of statute of limitations bar on motion to dismiss since dates given in complaint demonstrated whether plaintiff had right to sue).

Konigsberg v. Mullikin, Larson & Swift LLC, 2011 WL 4929109 (D. Wyo. 2011).

Lymon v. Aramark Corp., 728 F. Supp. 2d 1207, 1215 (D.N.M. 2010), aff'd, 499 Fed. Appx. 771 (10th Cir. 2012) ("When a party has asserted a statute of limitations issue in a rule 12(b)(6) motion, the Court accepts all well-pleaded factual allegations in the complaint as true and views them in the light most favorable to the plaintiff to determine whether the statute of limitations has run.").

Savard v. JP Morgan Chase Bank, N.A., 2010 WL 2802543 (D. Colo. 2010).

Lewis ex rel. Lewis v. BHS College Meadows, 2004 WL 870818 (D. Kan. 2004), aff'd, 123 Fed. Appx. 885 (10th Cir. 2005).

 © 2025 Thomson Reuters. No claim to original U.S. Government Works.

Ware v. Union Pacific R. Co. Omaha, 278 F. Supp. 2d 1263 (D. Kan. 2003), citing Wright & Miller.

Full Faith Church of Love West, Inc. v. Hoover Treated Wood Products, Inc., 224 F. Supp. 2d 1285 (D. Kan. 2002).

Ankers v. Rodman, 995 F. Supp. 1329 (D. Utah 1997).

Freeman v. Burlington Northern and Santa Fe Ry. Co., 176 F.R.D. 581 (D. Kan. 1997).

Eleventh Circuit

Beach Community Bank v. CBG Real Estate LLC, 674 Fed. Appx. 932, 934-935 (11th Cir. 2017) (stating that "at the Rule 12(b)(6) stage the district court may dismiss a claim on statute of limitations grounds 'only if it is apparent from the face of the complaint that the claim is time-barred'" and holding that the "district court * * * erred in dismissing [plaintiff's] fraud claims as time-barred" and then remanding the case back to the district court because "a more developed factual record" was needed "to determine whether and when [plaintiff] should have discovered [defendant's] fraud" (citation omitted)).

Perez v. Fedex Ground Package Systems, Inc., 587 Fed. Appx. 603 (11th Cir. 2014).

HealthPrime, Inc. v. Smith/Packett/Med-Com, LLC, 428 Fed. Appx. 937 (11th Cir. 2011).

Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers and Trainmen General Committee of Adjustment CSX Transp. Northern Lines v. CSX Transp., Inc., 522 F.3d 1190 (11th Cir. 2008).

Tello v. Dean Witter Reynolds, Inc., 410 F.3d 1275 (11th Cir. 2005).

Spain v. Brown & Williamson Tobacco Corp., 363 F.3d 1183 (11th Cir. 2004).

Beck v. Deloitte & Touche, Deloitte, Haskins & Sells, Ernest & Young, L.L.P., 144 F.3d 732 (11th Cir. 1998).

Arthur v. Thomas, 974 F. Supp. 2d 1340 (M.D. Ala. 2013) ("Pursuant to Rule 12(b)(6) of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, a defendant may raise a statute of limitations defense when the complaint shows on its face that the limitations period has run."), citing AVCO Corp. v. Precision Air Parts, Inc., 676 F.2d 494, 495 (11th Cir. 1982).

Luke v. Residential Elevators, Inc., 2011 WL 311370 (N.D. Fla. 2011).

 © 2025 Thomson Reuters. No claim to original U.S. Government Works.

Omar ex rel. Cannon v. Lindsey, 243 F. Supp. 2d 1339 (M.D. Fla. 2003), aff'd, 334 F.3d 1246 (11th Cir. 2003).

Rowe v. City of Fort Lauderdale, 8 F. Supp. 2d 1369 (S.D. Fla. 1998) (heavy burden).

Florida Keys Citizens Coalition Inc. v. West, 996 F. Supp. 1254 (S.D. Fla. 1998).

City of Fort Lauderdale v. Ross, Saarinen, Bolton & Wilder, Inc., 815 F. Supp. 444 (S.D. Fla. 1992).

Stern v. Espirito Santo Bank of Florida, 791 F. Supp. 865 (S.D. Fla. 1992).

D.C. Circuit

Baird v. Gotbaum, 662 F.3d 1246, 1251 (D.C. Cir. 2011).

Kursar v. Transportation Sec. Admin., 442 Fed. Appx. 565, 567 (D.C. Cir. 2011).

Smith-Haynie v. District of Columbia, 155 F.3d 575, 332 (D.C. Cir. 1998).

Gordon v. National Youth Work Alliance, 675 F.2d 356, 366 n.38 (D.C. Cir. 1982), citing Wright & Miller (concurring opinion).

Jones v. Rogers Memorial Hospital, 442 F.2d 773, 143 (D.C. Cir. 1971).

Although tort claims are generally subject to a three-year statute of limitations, the basis for the plaintiff's tort claims were so intertwined with the basis for his defamation claim that they were subject to the one-year statute of limitations associated with defamation claims. Nyambal v. Alliedbarton Security Services, LLC, 153 F. Supp. 3d 309, 314-315 (D.D.C. 2016), on reconsideration, 344 F. Supp. 3d 183 (D.D.C. 2018).

Hammel v. Marsh USA Inc., 79 F. Supp. 3d 234, 238 (D.D.C. 2015).

Mizell v. SunTrust Bank, 26 F. Supp. 3d 80 (D.D.C. 2014).

Floyd v. Lee, 968 F. Supp. 2d 308 (D.D.C. 2013) (statute of limitations defense denied when facts on face of complaint did not give rise to defense).

Coleman v. Potomac Elec. Power Co., 310 F. Supp. 2d 154 (D.D.C. 2004), aff'd, 2004 WL 2348144 (D.C. Cir. 2004).

U.S. ex rel. Purcell v. MWI Corp., 254 F. Supp. 2d 69 (D.D.C. 2003) (court can dismiss based on statute of limitations defense if complaint is time-barred on its face; if no person reasonably could disagree on date of claim's accrual, dismissal is warranted).

Artis v. Greenspan, 223 F. Supp. 2d 149 (D.D.C. 2002).

Campbell v. National R.R. Passenger Corp., 222 F. Supp. 2d 8 (D.D.C. 2002).

See also

Ennenga v. Starns, 677 F.3d 766, 773 (7th Cir. 2012) ("[A] statute-of-limitations defense is not waived if raised for the first time in a successive motion to dismiss.").

Although a statute of limitations defense normally may not be raised on a Rule 12(b)(6) motion, an exception is made when the defense appears on the face of the complaint. Mackin Engineering Co. v. American Exp. Co., 437 Fed. Appx. 100 (3d Cir. 2011).

Ritchie v. U.S., 210 F. Supp. 2d 1120 (N.D. Cal. 2002) (converted to summary judgment motion).

But see

"We will vacate the District Court's judgment and remand for further proceedings. A limitations defense raised in a Rule 12(b)(6) motion may be successful only if the time alleged in the statement of a claim shows that the cause of action has not been brought within the statute of limitations. Additionally, it is not incumbent upon the plaintiff to anticipate the defense and plead all facts necessary to beat it. Here, Buttolph's pleading on its face was sufficient to withstand dismissal on statute-of-limitations grounds at the Rule 12(b)(6) stage. Buttolph alleged that, before bringing his claims to federal court, he spent time attempting to exhaust available institutional remedies. That allegation is dispositive of this appeal, and the narrow issue it presents." Buttolph v. PrimeCare Medical Inc., 750 Fed. Appx. 168 (3d Cir. 2018) (citations and internal quotation marks omitted).

"[Rule 12(b)(6)], however, 'is generally an inappropriate vehicle for dismissing a claim based upon a statute of limitations.'" Engleson v. Unum Life Ins. Co. of America, 723 F.3d 611, 616 (6th Cir. 2013) (finding that district court decision was "functional equivalent" of summary judgment), quoting Cataldo v. U.S. Steel Corp., 676 F.3d 542, 547 (6th Cir. 2012).

Richards v. Mitcheff, 696 F.3d 635, 637 (7th Cir. 2012) (Easterbrook, C.J.) (because "complaints need not anticipate defenses," affirmative defense of statute of limitations must be challenged and dismissed under Rule 12(c), not Rule 12(b)(6)).

Xechem, Inc. v. Bristol-Myers Squibb Co., 372 F.3d 899 (7th Cir. 2004) (court held that only defect in claim, not presence of affirmative defense, was proper basis for Rule 12(b)(6) dismissal and Rule 12(b)(6) dismissal only appropriate if plaintiff's complaint admitted all elements of impenetrable defense).

U.S. v. Northern Trust Co., 372 F.3d 886 (7th Cir. 2004) (court held that statute of limitations defense was not appropriate basis for Rule 12(b)(6) dismissal because complaint stated claim for relief regardless of affirmative defense).

Scholl v. Rogers Ready Mix, 2004 WL 793552 (N.D. Ill. 2004) (statute of limitations defense cannot be resolved by Rule 12(b)(6) motion).

But compare
"A complaint will be dismissed under Rule 12(b)(6) as conclusively time-barred if a trial court determines that the allegation of other facts consistent with the challenged pleading could not possibly cure the deficiency. Yet courts should hesitate to dismiss a complaint on statute of limitations grounds based solely on the face of the complaint because statute of limitations issues often depend on contested questions of fact." Momenian v. Davidson, 878 F.3d 381 (D.C. Cir. 2017).

Wiley v. City of Chicago, 361 F.3d 994 (7th Cir. 2004) (Rule 12(b)(6) dismissal inappropriate because unclear when statute of limitations began to run, and at this stage, plaintiff's allegations must be taken as true).

Akkerman v. Mecta Corp., 72 Fed. Appx. 652 (9th Cir. 2003) (when plaintiff sued based on permanent loss of memory caused by shock treatment, statute of limitations issue was not appropriately resolved at Rule 12(b)(6) stage since question of fact existed as to when plaintiff should have realized that memory loss was going to be permanent and thus as to when rule of discovery would have stopped tolling statute).

Although the court ruled on the defendant's motion to dismiss based on the defense of statute of limitations, it said in dictum that the defense is more appropriately raised in the responsive pleading than in a motion to dismiss. Patrick Media Group, Inc. v. City of Clearwater, 836 F. Supp. 833 (M.D. Fla. 1993).

86 Allegations of time
See §§ 1308 to 1309 for a discussion of Rule 9(f).

But see
Engleson v. Unum Life Ins. Co. of America, 723 F.3d 611, 616 (6th Cir. 2013), citing Cataldo v. U.S. Steel Corp., 676 F.3d 542, 547 (6th Cir. 2012).

See generally
Wilburn v. Pepsi-Cola Bottling Co. of St. Louis, 492 F.2d 1288, 1289 (8th Cir. 1974), citing Wright & Miller.

87 Right extinguished
"Where legislative enactment creates a new cause of action which did not exist under prior law and fixes the time within which the action may be commenced, the commencing of the action within the time specified is an indispensable condition of the liability and the action created, and, upon the expiration of the time established, both the right and the remedy are destroyed." Chambliss v. Coca-Cola Bottling Corp., 274 F. Supp. 401 (E.D. Tenn. 1967), judgment aff'd, 414 F.2d 256 (6th Cir. 1969) (Wilson, J.).

When the claim is one that does not exist at common law but is created by a statute that makes the bringing of a suit within a specified time a condition precedent to the existence of a claim itself, the defense of limitations need not be affirmatively pleaded and can be raised by a motion to dismiss. Sikes v. U.S., 8 F.R.D. 34 (E.D. Pa. 1948).

88 Guidotti case
716 F.3d 764 (3d Cir. 2013).

89 Motion-to-dismiss standard
716 F.3d at 773–774.

See also
"Specifically, where the issue of whether the residual clause of § 1 of the FAA applies arises in a motion to compel arbitration, the motion to dismiss standard applies if the complaint and incorporated documents provide a sufficient factual basis for deciding the issue. But where those documents do not, or the plaintiff responds to the motion with additional facts that place the issue in dispute, the parties should be entitled to discovery on the question of arbitrability before a court entertains further briefing, with an application of the summary judgment standard to follow." Singh v. Uber Technologies Inc., 939 F.3d 210 (3d Cir. 2019) (internal quotation marks and citation omitted).

Valentin v. ADECCO, 777 Fed. Appx. 50 (3d Cir. 2019) (affirming grant of motion to dismiss under Rule 12(b)(6) based on arbitration agreement).

Wilson v. 5 Choices, LLC, 776 Fed. Appx. 320 (6th Cir. 2019) ("This Court has held that a motion to dismiss under Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 12(b)(6) is a permissible way to enforce forum-selection and arbitration clauses.").

"The Court will consider Defendant's motion as a motion to dismiss under Rule 12(b)(6), rather than under Rule 12(b)(1). The arbitration agreement, if valid, would not deprive the Court of subject matter jurisdiction. Rather, the existence of an agreement to arbitrate is an equitable defense to litigation. A motion to dismiss may be based on a defense if the plaintiff's own allegations show that a defense exists that legally defeats the claim for relief. The existence of the arbitration agreement is alleged in Plaintiff's Verified Complaint; the ESA containing the arbitration agreement is attached as well; and the AAA Rules Defendant attaches to its motion are referred to in and integral to both documents. Because Plaintiff's Verified Complaint and the documents integral to it show the existence of Defendant's arbitration defense, Rule 12(b)(6) is an appropriate procedural vehicle for assessing Defendant's motion." Jacobs Field Services North America, Inc. v. Wacker Polysilicon North America, LLC, 375 F. Supp. 3d 898 (E.D. Tenn. 2019).

90 Summary-judgment standard
Guidotti, 716 F.3d at 773–774.

See also
"Specifically, where the issue of whether the residual clause of § 1 of the FAA applies arises in a motion to compel arbitration, the motion to dismiss standard applies if the complaint and incorporated documents provide a sufficient factual basis for deciding the issue. But where those documents do not, or the plaintiff responds to the motion with additional facts that place the issue in dispute, the parties should be entitled to discovery on the question of arbitrability before a court entertains further briefing, with an application of the summary judgment standard to follow." Singh v. Uber Technologies Inc., 939 F.3d 210 (3d Cir. 2019) (internal quotation marks and citation omitted).

91 Split of authority
"Did the district court correctly dismiss the case under Civil Rule 12(b)(1) (for lack of jurisdiction) as opposed to Civil Rule 12(b)(6) (for failure to state a claim)? The union's motion to dismiss invoked both rules. Because an arbitration agreement presents a reason to dismiss under 12(b)(6), not under 12(b)(1), the court should have dismissed the case for failure to state a claim. See Teamsters Local Union 480 v. United Parcel Serv., Inc., 748 F.3d 281, 286 (6th Cir. 2014). We nonetheless may correct the label on our own and affirm all the same. Teamsters, 748 F.3d at 286." Baker v. Iron Workers Local 25 Vacation Pay Fund, 999 F.3d 394, 400 (6th Cir. 2021).

"[T]his circuit has consistently held that the existence of a valid arbitration agreement does not strip the court of jurisdiction. Regardless, there is a split in authority as to whether claims such as appellees' must be brought pursuant to Rule 12's section (b)(1) or section (b)(6), that is, for failure to state a claim on which relief may be granted; or perhaps considered with an analysis entirely separate from the Rule 12(b) rubric." Álvarez-Mauras v. Banco Popular of Puerto Rico, 919 F.3d 617 (1st Cir. 2019) (citations and internal quotation marks omitted).

"As an initial matter, the parties dispute whether the district court properly exercised subject-matter jurisdiction over the Union's suit. * * * Because a failure to pursue arbitration means that the Union has failed to state a claim under the CBA and the Settlement Agreement, UPS's motion is more properly construed as a motion to dismiss under Rule 12(b)(6)." Teamsters Local Union 480 v. United Parcel Service, Inc., 748 F.3d 281, 285–286 (6th Cir. 2014).

Ruiz v. Millennium Square Residential Association, 466 F. Supp. 3d 162, 175-177 (D.D.C. 2020) (cataloguing the split of authority and staying proceedings in accordance with the Third, Seventh, and Tenth Circuits).

See § 1250, which discusses the relationship between Rule 12(b)(1) and the assertion of arbitration rights.

See also
Palcko v. Airborne Express, Inc., 372 F.3d 588, 597–598 (3d Cir. 2004) (rejecting plaintiff's effort to recharacterize defendant's motion to compel arbitration as a motion to dismiss under Rule 12(b)(2) or Rule 12(b)(3)).

92 Waiver of right to arbitrate
"One Tech was fully aware of its right to compel arbitration when it filed its 12(b)(6) motion to dismiss. After all, it presented the right to arbitration as the reason it sought to transfer the case from Illinois to Texas. However, once in Texas, One Tech did not move to compel arbitration even in the alternative to its motion to dismiss. Rather, it pursued and partially obtained a dismissal with prejudice of Forby's claims. One Tech's action of moving to dismiss Forby's claims with no mention of compelling arbitration demonstrated a desire to resolve the dispute in litigation rather than arbitration." Forby v. One Technologies, L.P., 909 F.3d 780 (5th Cir. 2018).

See also
Morgan v. Sundance, Inc., 142 S. Ct. 1708, 212 L. Ed. 2d 753 (2022) (holding that courts cannot condition a waiver of the right to arbitrate on a showing of prejudice to the nonmoving party).

St. Mary's Medical Center of Evansville, Inc. v. Disco Aluminum Products Co., Inc., 969 F.2d 585, 590 (7th Cir. 1992) ("[W]aiver [right to arbitration depends] depends on all the circumstances in a particular case rather than on any rigid rules").

National Foundation for Cancer Research v. A.G. Edwards & Sons, Inc., 821 F.2d 772, 774 (D.C. Cir. 1987) ("[T]he question of whether there has been waiver in the arbitration agreement context should be analyzed in much the same way as in any other contractual context. The essential question is whether, under the totality of the circumstances, the defaulting party has acted inconsistently with the arbitration right.").

93 Assumption of risk
De Sole v. U.S., 947 F.2d 1169 (4th Cir. 1991).

Buchanan v. Santek Environmental of Virginia, LLC, 2021 WL 1866945, *1-3 (W.D. Va. 2021).

Sa v. Red Frog Events, LLC, 979 F. Supp. 2d 767 (E.D. Mich. 2013).

Baham v. Eagle Indem. Co., 78 F. Supp. 665 (W.D. La. 1948).

94 Contributory negligence

Biegas v. Quickway Carriers, Inc., 573 F.3d 365 (6th Cir. 2009).

Konig v. Ames, 2021 WL 1561518, *3-5 (D. Md. 2021).

Federal Ins. Co. v. J.K. Mfg. Co., 933 F. Supp. 2d 1065, 1075 (N.D. Ill. 2013).

Smith v. Vincent, 109 F. Supp. 451 (S.D. Fla. 1952), judgment aff'd, 204 F.2d 945 (5th Cir. 1953).

But see

Comparative negligence is an inappropriate issue on a Rule 12(b)(6) motion. F.D.I.C. v. Deloitte & Touche, 834 F. Supp. 1129 (E.D. Ark. 1992).

95 Preemption

Irizarry v. Abbott Laboratories, 833 Fed. Appx. 947, 950 (3d Cir. 2020) (affirming district court's dismissal under Rule 12(b)(6) because "express preemption under 21 U.S.C. § 360k(a) and implied preemption under 21 U.S.C. § 337(a) left only a 'narrow gap' for state law claims," and the plaintiffs did not state a claim within that gap).

Simmons v. Sabine River Authority Louisiana, 732 F.3d 469, 473 (5th Cir. 2013) (federal preemption is affirmative defense that defendants must plead and prove), citing Fisher v. Halliburton, 667 F.3d 602, 609 (5th Cir. 2012).

Public Utility Dist. No. 1 of Grays Harbor County Wash. v. IDACORP Inc., 379 F.3d 641 (9th Cir. 2004).

Spain v. Brown & Williamson Tobacco Corp., 363 F.3d 1183 (11th Cir. 2004).

Garrity v. Sun Life and Health Insurance Company (U.S.), 596 F. Supp. 3d 1111 (N.D. Ill. 2022) (granting 12(b)(6) motion because ERISA wholly preempted state-law claims).

Harris v. Topco Associates, LLC, 538 F. Supp. 3d 826, 830-833 (N.D. Ill. 2021) (granting Rule 12(b)(6) motion on FDCA preemption grounds).

Fast Access Specialty Therapeutics, LLC v. UnitedHealth Group, Inc., 532 F. Supp. 3d 956, 962-976 (S.D. Cal. 2021) (granting Rule 12(b)(6) motion on ERISA preemption grounds).

96 Estoppel

Slater v. U.S. Steel Corp., 820 F.3d 1193 (11th Cir. 2016), reh'g en banc granted, vacated, (Aug. 30, 2016) and on reh'g en banc, 871 F.3d 1174 (11th Cir. 2017) (judicial estoppel).

Pack v. Mt. Morris Consol. Schools, 487 Fed. Appx. 267 (6th Cir. 2012) (claim preclusion).

Gage v. Warren Tp. Committee & Planning Bd. Members, 463 Fed. Appx. 68, 72 (3d Cir. 2012) (per curiam) (claim preclusion).

Hausler v. Felton, 457 Fed. Appx. 727, 730 (10th Cir. 2012) (claim preclusion).

Lord v. International Marine Ins. Services, 420 Fed. Appx. 40 (2d Cir. 2011) (collateral estoppel proper to consider on Rule 12(b)(6) motion).

City of Clinton, Ark. v. Pilgrim's Pride Corp., 632 F.3d 148, 155 (5th Cir. 2010).

Colliton v. Donnelly, 399 Fed. Appx. 619 (2d Cir. 2010) (appellant "who neither appealed his state court conviction nor sought to withdraw his plea, is collaterally estopped from challenging the facts supporting his conviction").

Champagne v. Equitable Life Assur. Co., 849 F.2d 608 (6th Cir. 1988).

Parkinson v. California Co., 233 F.2d 432 (10th Cir. 1956).

Sidebotham v. Robison, 216 F.2d 816 (9th Cir. 1954).

Leimer v. State Mut. Life Assur. Co. of Worcester, Mass., 108 F.2d 302 (C.C.A. 8th Cir. 1940).

Deniece Design, LLC v. Braun, 953 F. Supp. 2d 765, 775 (S.D. Tex. 2013) ("Laches, estoppel and/or waiver can serve as an affirmative defense to patent infringement * * *.").

Robinson v. Deutsche Bank Nat. Trust Co., 932 F. Supp. 2d 95, 113 (D.D.C. 2013).

Thomas v. Venditto, 925 F. Supp. 2d 352, 360 (E.D. N.Y. 2013) (collateral estoppel).

Desmond v. Chicago Boxed Beef Distributors, Inc., 921 F. Supp. 2d 872, 876 (N.D. Ill. 2013).

Amr v. Moore, 2010 WL 3154575 (E.D. Va. 2010), report and recommendation adopted, 2010 WL 3154567 (E.D. Va. 2010), aff'd, 411 Fed. Appx. 584 (4th Cir. 2011).

Lipin v. National Union Fire Ins. Co. of Pittsburgh, Pa., 202 F. Supp. 2d 126 (S.D. N.Y. 2002) (collateral estoppel).

Dawson v. W. & H. Voortman, Ltd., 853 F. Supp. 1038 (N.D. Ill. 1994).

Westlands Water Dist. v. U.S. Dept. of Interior, Bureau of Reclamation, 850 F. Supp. 1388 (E.D. Cal. 1994).

But see
McGlasson v. Long Term Disability Coverage for All Active Full-Time and Part-Time Employees, 161 F. Supp. 3d 836 (D. Ariz. 2016) (factual disputes remained before issue of judicial estoppel could be resolved).

97 Illegality
Sensoria, LLC v. Kaweske, 581 F. Supp. 3d 1243, 1257-1260 (D. Colo. 2022).

Original Investments, LLC v. State, 542 F. Supp. 3d 1230, 1232-1237 (W.D. Okla. 2021), citing Wight & Miller.

Bradley v. American Radiator & Standard Sanitary Corp., 6 F.R.D. 37 (S.D. N.Y. 1946), judgment aff'd, 159 F.2d 39 (C.C.A. 2d Cir. 1947).

98 Immunity
Jones v. Bock, 549 U.S. 199, 127 S. Ct. 910, 166 L. Ed. 2d 798 (2007), citing Wright & Miller.

Goins v. Saint Elizabeth Medical Center, Inc., 2024 WL 229568, *6 (6th Cir. 2024) (rejecting motion to dismiss because providers' immunity under the PREP Act was not readily apparent from the face of the complaint), quoting Wright & Miller.

Loupe v. O'Bannon, 824 F.3d 534, 539 (5th Cir. 2016) (district attorney was absolutely immune from alleged malicious prosecution of plaintiff claim, but he was not immune on face of complaint for alleged warrantless arrest, since her conduct was not part of district attorney's prosecutorial function).

O'Brien v. Welty, 818 F.3d 920, 933 (9th Cir. 2016) (district court erred in dismissing plaintiff's First Amendment claims based on defendant's immunity, because court should have stopped analysis when it decided defendant did not violate plaintiff's constitutional right).

Hutto v. South Carolina Retirement System, 773 F.3d 536, 545 (4th Cir. 2014) (“we have often affirmed Rule 12(b)(6) motions to dismiss on the basis of Eleventh Amendment immunity”).

Castaneda v. Burton-Cahill, 586 Fed. Appx. 373, 374 (9th Cir. 2014).

Durham v. Jones, 737 F.3d 291, 297-298 (4th Cir. 2013).

Hager v. Arkansas Dept. of Health, 735 F.3d 1009 (8th Cir. 2013) (qualified immunity).

Ball v. Famiglio, 726 F.3d 448, 461 (3d Cir. 2013) (immunity for correction officers).

Hoffman v. Thaler, 539 Fed. Appx. 507 (5th Cir. 2013) (sovereign immunity, prosecutorial immunity, judicial immunity, and absolute immunity for parole officials).

Lacey v. Maricopa County, 693 F.3d 896 (9th Cir. 2012) (absolute and qualified immunity).

Backe v. LeBlanc, 691 F.3d 645, 649 (5th Cir. 2012) ("The district court doubly abused its discretion by (apparently) refusing to rule on LeBlanc's and Wiley's motions to dismiss and by failing to limit discovery to facts necessary to rule on their qualified immunity defense.").

Leech v. DeWeese, 689 F.3d 538 (6th Cir. 2012) (absolute judicial immunity).

Taylor v. Reilly, 685 F.3d 1110 (D.C. Cir. 2012) (qualified immunity).

Buckwalter v. Nevada Bd. of Medical Examiners, 678 F.3d 737, 740 (9th Cir. 2012) (absolute immunity).

Savoie v. Martin, 673 F.3d 488, 492 (6th Cir. 2012) (judicial immunity).

Muscogee (Creek) Nation v. Pruitt, 669 F.3d 1159, 1169 (10th Cir. 2012).

Di Ruzzo v. Tabaracci, 480 Fed. Appx. 796 (5th Cir. 2012) (per curiam).

Chiles v. Oklahoma Dept. of Corrections, 467 Fed. Appx. 801 (10th Cir. 2012) (qualified immunity).

Humphreys v. City of Ganado, Tex., 467 Fed. Appx. 252, 256 (5th Cir. 2012) (per curiam).

Fisher Sand & Gravel, Co. v. Giron, 465 Fed. Appx. 774, 779 (10th Cir. 2012) (qualified immunity).

Goodwin v. Castille, 465 Fed. Appx. 157, 163 (3d Cir. 2012) (legislative immunity).

Humphrey v. Sapp, 462 Fed. Appx. 528, 530 (6th Cir. 2012) (social worker acting as witness was not entitled to absolute prosecutorial immunity).

Addlespurger v. Corbett, 461 Fed. Appx. 82, 85-86 (3d Cir. 2012) (judicial immunity).

King v. Barton, 455 Fed. Appx. 709 (8th Cir. 2012) (qualified immunity).

Morgan v. Swanson, 659 F.3d 359, 401 (5th Cir. 2011).

"The qualified immunity doctrine protects government officials 'from liability for civil damages insofar as their conduct does not violate clearly established statutory or constitutional rights of which a reasonable person would have known.'" Vance v. Rumsfeld, 653 F.3d 591, 605-606 (7th Cir. 2011), reh'g en banc granted, vacated, (Oct. 28, 2011) and on reh'g en banc, 701 F.3d 193 (7th Cir. 2012), quoting Harlow v. Fitzgerald, 457 U.S. 800, 818, 102 S. Ct. 2727, 73 L. Ed. 2d 396 (1982).

Braun v. Maynard, 652 F.3d 557 (4th Cir. 2011).

Doe ex rel. Magee v. Covington County School Dist. ex rel. Bd. of Educ., 649 F.3d 335 (5th Cir. 2011), on reh'g en banc, 675 F.3d 849 (5th Cir. 2012).

Kay Elec. Co-op. v. City of Newkirk, Okla., 647 F.3d 1039 (10th Cir. 2011) (municipal immunity).

J.W. v. Utah, 647 F.3d 1006 (10th Cir. 2011).

Rondigo, L.L.C. v. Township of Richmond, 641 F.3d 673 (6th Cir. 2011).

Lampton v. Diaz, 639 F.3d 223 (5th Cir. 2011).

"Officials will receive immunity unless the § 1983 claim satisfies a two-prong test: (1) the allegations, if true, substantiate a violation of a federal statutory or constitutional right and (2) the right was 'clearly established' such that a reasonable person would have known his acts or omissions violated that right." Brockington v. Boykins, 637 F.3d 503, 506 (4th Cir. 2011).

A self-regulatory organization "and its officers are entitled to absolute immunity from private damages suits in connection with the discharge of their regulatory responsibilities." Standard Inv. Chartered, Inc. v. National Ass'n of Securities Dealers, Inc., 637 F.3d 112, 115 (2d Cir. 2011).

Decotiis v. Whittemore, 635 F.3d 22, 36 (1st Cir. 2011).

Jones v. Horne, 634 F.3d 588 (D.C. Cir. 2011).

Heyde v. Pittenger, 633 F.3d 512, 517-519 (7th Cir. 2011).

Giammatteo v. Newton, 452 Fed. Appx. 24, 28 (2d Cir. 2011) (absolute immunity).

 © 2025 Thomson Reuters. No claim to original U.S. Government Works.

Dollonne v. Ventura Unified School Dist. ex rel. its officials, 440 Fed. Appx. 533 (9th Cir. 2011).

"A prosecutor is absolutely immune from suit for all actions that he takes while performing his function as an advocate for the government. The prosecutorial function includes initiation of criminal prosecution, appearance in judicial proceedings, prosecutorial conduct before grand juries, statements made during trial, examination of witnesses, and presentation of evidence in support of a search warrant at a probable-cause hearing. * * * A prosecutor is not entitled to absolute immunity for fabricating evidence, as investigating and gathering evidence falls outside the prosecutorial function, though he may be entitled to qualified immunity for such conduct." Barr v. Gee, 437 Fed. Appx. 865, 876 (11th Cir. 2011) (internal citations omitted).

Charlotte v. Hansen, 433 Fed. Appx. 660 (10th Cir. 2011).

Allen v. Zavaras, 430 Fed. Appx. 709 (10th Cir. 2011).

Kaetz v. Mark, 429 Fed. Appx. 112 (3d Cir. 2011).

Alexander v. Brookhaven School Dist., 428 Fed. Appx. 303 (5th Cir. 2011) (burden on plaintiff to demonstrate inapplicability of immunity once invoked by defendant).

Rodriguez v. Lewis, 427 Fed. Appx. 352 (5th Cir. 2011).

Island City Lofts, L.L.C. v. U.S., 426 Fed. Appx. 777 (11th Cir. 2011).

Keisling v. Renn, 425 Fed. Appx. 106 (3d Cir. 2011).

"In moving to dismiss under Rule 12(b)(6) based on a claim of absolute immunity, the official seeking absolute immunity bears the burden of showing that such immunity is justified for the function in question." Borde v. Board of County Com'rs of Luna County, N.M., 423 Fed. Appx. 798 (10th Cir. 2011) (internal quotation marks omitted).

Ansell v. Ross Twp, Penn., 419 Fed. Appx. 209 (3d Cir. 2011).

Nails v. Pennsylvania Dept. of Transp., 414 Fed. Appx. 452, 455 (3d Cir. 2011).

Wood v. Milyard, 414 Fed. Appx. 103, 104 (10th Cir. 2011) (complaint that failed to show why sovereign immunity would not apply properly was dismissed).

Coleman v. Governor of Michigan, 413 Fed. Appx. 866, 872-873 (6th Cir. 2011) (absolute judicial immunity and quasi-judicial immunity may be raised in Rule 12(b)(6) motions).

Cleary v. County of Macomb, 409 Fed. Appx. 890, 899 (6th Cir. 2011).

 © 2025 Thomson Reuters. No claim to original U.S. Government Works.

Kent v. Cardone, 404 Fed. Appx. 540 (2d Cir. 2011) (prosecutor can use absolute immunity as defense when alleged conduct is done as part of prosecutorial role as advocate).

Rivera v. Kalafut, 456 Fed. Appx. 325 (5th Cir. 2011).

Thurmond v. County of Wayne, 447 Fed. Appx. 643 (6th Cir. 2011).

Coleman v. Maryland Court of Appeals, 626 F.3d 187 (4th Cir. 2010), aff'd, 566 U.S. 30, 132 S. Ct. 1327, 182 L. Ed. 2d 296 (2012) (FMLA claim barred by sovereign immunity).

al-Kidd v. Ashcroft, 580 F.3d 949 (9th Cir. 2009), rev'd and remanded, 563 U.S. 731, 131 S. Ct. 2074, 179 L. Ed. 2d 1149 (2011).

Club Retro, L.L.C. v. Hilton, 568 F.3d 181 (5th Cir. 2009) (qualified immunity).

Sarver v. Jackson, 344 Fed. Appx. 526 (11th Cir. 2009).

Edge v. Payne, 342 Fed. Appx. 395 (10th Cir. 2009).

Quinn v. Roach, 326 Fed. Appx. 280 (5th Cir. 2009) (prosecutorial and qualified immunity).

McSpadden v. Wolfe, 325 Fed. Appx. 134 (3d Cir. 2009) (qualified immunity).

Peker v. Steglich, 324 Fed. Appx. 38 (2d Cir. 2009) (sovereign immunity).

Washam v. Stesis, 321 Fed. Appx. 104 (3d Cir. 2009).

Carpenter v. Ashby, 351 Fed. Appx. 684 (3d Cir. 2009).

Benzman v. Whitman, 523 F.3d 119 (2d Cir. 2008) (qualified immunity available to federal officials in action against EPA).

Chrzanowski v. Assad, 275 Fed. Appx. 661 (9th Cir. 2008) (judicial immunity).

Anderson v. Suiters, 499 F.3d 1228 (10th Cir. 2007) (affirming denial of defendant's motion to dismiss on qualified immunity grounds).

Lawson v. Curry, 244 Fed. Appx. 986 (11th Cir. 2007).

Rouse v. Colorado State Bd. of Parole, 242 Fed. Appx. 498 (10th Cir. 2007) (Eleventh Amendment immunity).

Ellibee v. Fox, 244 Fed. Appx. 839 (10th Cir. 2007).

White v. Ockey, 241 Fed. Appx. 462 (10th Cir. 2007).

Atteberry v. Nocona General Hosp., 430 F.3d 245 (5th Cir. 2005) (plaintiff's allegations were sufficient to overcome defendant's qualified immunity defense in § 1983 action).

Jackson v. Schultz, 429 F.3d 586 (6th Cir. 2005).

Shmueli v. City of New York, 424 F.3d 231 (2d Cir. 2005).

Brookings v. Clunk, 389 F.3d 614 (6th Cir. 2004) (judicial immunity).

Gonzales v. City of Castle Rock, 366 F.3d 1093 (10th Cir. 2004), rev'd, 545 U.S. 748, 125 S. Ct. 2796, 162 L. Ed. 2d 658 (2005) (qualified immunity).

Montgomery v. City of Ardmore, 365 F.3d 926 (10th Cir. 2004) (district attorney entitled to tort immunity for acts within scope of prosecutorial duties).

Temple v. Celebrezze, 93 Fed. Appx. 802 (6th Cir. 2004).

Gean v. Hattaway, 330 F.3d 758 (6th Cir. 2003).

Cottone v. Jenne, 326 F.3d 1352 (11th Cir. 2003).

Gonzalez v. Reno, 325 F.3d 1228 (11th Cir. 2003) (courts generally accord official conduct presumption of legitimacy), citing U.S. Dept. of State v. Ray, 502 U.S. 164, 112 S. Ct. 541, 116 L. Ed. 2d 526 (1991).

In re Stock Exchanges Options Trading Antitrust Litigation, 317 F.3d 134 (2d Cir. 2003) (defense based on implied repeal doctrine is type of immunity that must be pleaded affirmatively rather than lack of subject matter jurisdiction that can be raised at any time).

Goad v. Mitchell, 297 F.3d 497 (6th Cir. 2002).

Kamplain v. Curry County Bd. of Com'rs, 159 F.3d 1248 (10th Cir. 1998).

Harbert Intern., Inc. v. James, 157 F.3d 1271 (11th Cir. 1998).

Turker v. Ohio Dept. of Rehabilitation and Corrections, 157 F.3d 453 (6th Cir. 1998).

Wilson v. Strong, 156 F.3d 1131 (11th Cir. 1998).

Dill v. City of Edmond, Okl., 155 F.3d 1193 (10th Cir. 1998).

Connell v. Signoracci, 153 F.3d 74 (2d Cir. 1998).

Pani v. Empire Blue Cross Blue Shield, 152 F.3d 67 (2d Cir. 1998).

Graham v. Federal Emergency Management Agency, 149 F.3d 997 (9th Cir. 1998).

 © 2025 Thomson Reuters. No claim to original U.S. Government Works.

Martinez v. Hooper, 148 F.3d 856 (7th Cir. 1998).

Santamorena v. Georgia Military College, 147 F.3d 1337 (11th Cir. 1998).

Breton v. Travelers Ins. Co., 147 F.3d 58 (1st Cir. 1998).

Jensen v. City of Oxnard, 145 F.3d 1078 (9th Cir. 1998).

Metro Display Advertising, Inc. v. City of Victorville, 143 F.3d 1191 (9th Cir. 1998).

Scotto v. Almenas, 143 F.3d 105 (2d Cir. 1998).

Autio v. AFSCME, Local 3139, 140 F.3d 802 (8th Cir. 1998), reh'g en banc granted, vacated, (July 7, 1998) and on reh'g en banc, 157 F.3d 1141 (8th Cir. 1998).

Flores v. Satz, 137 F.3d 1275 (11th Cir. 1998) (state and county attorneys).

GJR Investments, Inc. v. County of Escambia, Fla., 132 F.3d 1359 (11th Cir. 1998).

A defendant has the right to plead immunity at the dismissal stage; this helps shield litigants claiming immunity from the hardships of discovery. Barrett v. Harrington, 130 F.3d 246 (6th Cir. 1997).

Levin v. Childers, 101 F.3d 44 (6th Cir. 1996).

Government officials are entitled to assert claims of qualified immunity prior to discovery in a Rule 12(b)(6) motion. Vaughn v. U.S. Small Business Admin., 65 F.3d 1322 (6th Cir. 1995).

Weaver v. Clarke, 45 F.3d 1253 (8th Cir. 1995).

Gagan v. Norton, 35 F.3d 1473 (10th Cir. 1994).

Randall v. U.S., 30 F.3d 518 (4th Cir. 1994).

Hertz Corp. v. City of New York, 1 F.3d 121 (2d Cir. 1993).

Hinnen v. Kelly, 992 F.2d 140 (7th Cir. 1993), as amended on denial of reh'g, (June 18, 1993).

Sveeggen v. U.S., 988 F.2d 829 (8th Cir. 1993) (per curiam).

Gallegos v. City and County of Denver, 984 F.2d 358, 360-361 n.2 (10th Cir. 1993).

Fortner v. Thomas, 983 F.2d 1024 (11th Cir. 1993).

Carter by Carter v. Cornwell, 983 F.2d 52 (6th Cir. 1993) (immunity from liability justifies dismissal for failure to state claim).

Easton v. Sundram, 947 F.2d 1011 (2d Cir. 1991).

Green v. Maraio, 722 F.2d 1013 (2d Cir. 1983).

The plaintiff's claims of conspiracy by state officials properly were dismissed as to the district attorney on the ground of prosecutorial immunity. Kauffman v. Moss, 420 F.2d 1270 (3d Cir. 1970).

A complaint by a civilian golf pro alleging improper termination of employment at a military base was properly dismissed when it was clear that the military officers named as defendants acted within the scope of their duties and authority. Ward v. Hudnell, 366 F.2d 247 (5th Cir. 1966).

Carmack v. Gibson, 363 F.2d 862 (5th Cir. 1966).

O'Bryan v. Chandler, 352 F.2d 987 (10th Cir. 1965).

Hughes v. Johnson, 305 F.2d 67 (9th Cir. 1962).

Skinner v. Nehrt, 242 F.2d 573 (7th Cir. 1957).

Allstate Vehicle and Property Insurance Company v. Philadelphia Housing Authority, 394 F. Supp. 3d 535 (E.D. Pa. 2019) ("Immunity will be upheld on a 12(b)(6) motion only when the immunity is established on the face of the complaint. Thus, we may not consider facts beyond those alleged in the complaint."), citing Wright & Miller.

"In sum, the crucial element missing from Plaintiffs' narrative is a constitutionally protected interest—or, more to the point, a protected interest that was clearly established when these events transpired. * * * This * * * entitles the individual Defendants to qualified immunity." Castanon v. Cathey, 402 F. Supp. 3d 1240 (W.D. Okla. 2019), aff'd, 969 F.3d 1125 (10th Cir. 2020), withdrawn and superseded on denial of reh'g en banc, 976 F.3d 1136 (10th Cir. 2020) and aff'd, 976 F.3d 1136 (10th Cir. 2020) (dismissing the plaintiff's § 1983 claim under Rule 12(b)(6)).

"[T]he Defendant prosecutors' failure to provide the results of all forensic testing to the defense was done in violation of a court order. The court order left no room for the Defendant prosecutors to exercise prosecutorial judgment or evaluation. Instead, the allegations of the Complaint suggest that they had a non-discretionary duty to abide by the court's order and to truthfully answer the court's inquiry relating to that order. At this point, their duties became administrative, rather than advocative. Taking all of Plaintiff's allegations as true, as it must at this stage of the proceedings, the Court finds at the pleading stage that these Defendant prosecutors are not protected by absolute immunity regarding their alleged violation of a court order to turn over all results relating to forensic testing in the case." Siehl v. City of Johnstown, 365 F. Supp. 3d 587 (W.D. Pa. 2019).

Birch v. City of New York, 184 F. Supp. 3d 21, 28 (E.D. N.Y. 2016), aff'd, 675 Fed. Appx. 43 (2d Cir. 2017).

Unlike other affirmative defenses, an immunity defense may be raised in a Rule 12(b)(6) motion to dismiss, regardless of whether the facts establishing the affirmative defense appear on the face of the complaint. Gerhardt v. Mares, 179 F. Supp. 3d 1006, 1026 (D.N.M. 2016).

Jiang v. Porter, 156 F. Supp. 3d 996, 1006 (E.D. Mo. 2015) (court found complaint alleged sufficient facts to demonstrate defendants acted with malice, in bad faith, and with intent to harm plaintiff, therefore disqualifying them for official immunity and eliminating dismissal on that ground).

"[I]n opposition to a motion to dismiss, the plaintiff is entitled to all reasonable inferences from the facts alleged, not only those that support his claim, but also those that defeat the immunity defense". Doe v. Hagenbeck, 98 F. Supp. 3d 672, 683-684 (S.D. N.Y. 2015) (motion denied) (internal quotations omitted), rev'd in part and remanded, 870 F.3d 36 (2d Cir. 2017).

Kirby v. Health Care Service Corp., 88 F. Supp. 3d 717 (W.D. Tex. 2015) (sovereign immunity).

"Claims of absolute and qualified immunity may be raised in a Rule 12(b)(6) motion to dismiss." Nguyen v. Louisiana State Bd. of Cosmetology, 2015 WL 590006, *4 (M.D. La. 2015).

Hinton v. Amazon.com.dedc, LLC, 72 F. Supp. 3d 685, 692 (S.D. Miss. 2014) (immunity provision of Communications Decency Act).

Skokomish Indian Tribe v. Goldmark, 994 F. Supp. 2d 1168 (W.D. Wash. 2014) (sovereign immunity).

Deats v. Monroe County, 2014 WL 6769756, *3 (W.D. N.Y. 2014) (defendants exercising their duties as prosecutors were entitled to absolute immunity).

Perez v. School Bd. of Miami-Dade County, Fla., 917 F. Supp. 2d 1261, 1264 (S.D. Fla. 2013) ("[W]hen qualified immunity is raised on a motion to dismiss, as it is here, the facts of the complaint must set forth the violation of clearly-established constitutional right. If the complaint fails in this regard, the motion to dismiss will be granted."), citing Williams v. Alabama State University, 102 F.3d 1179, 1182 (11th Cir. 1997).

Marcavage v. National Park Service, 777 F. Supp. 2d 858, 867 (E.D. Pa. 2011), aff'd, 666 F.3d 856 (3d Cir. 2012).

Savoie v. Martin, 2010 WL 4982543 (M.D. Tenn. 2010), judgment aff'd, 673 F.3d 488 (6th Cir. 2012) (judicial immunity).

Burgess v. Clinton, 2010 WL 2802348 (D.S.C. 2010), report and recommendation adopted, 2010 WL 2812825 (D.S.C. 2010), aff'd, 403 Fed. Appx. 853 (4th Cir. 2010) (claims against defendant barred by doctrine of sovereign immunity).

Shepard v. Mikulich, 2010 WL 2719107, *2 (N.D. Ind. 2010) ("Thus, judges are not liable in civil actions for their judicial acts unless they have acted in the clear absence of jurisdiction. Moreover, a judge will not be deprived of immunity even if the action was in error, was done maliciously, was in excess of his authority, and even if his exercise of authority is flawed by the commission of grave procedural errors.") (internal citations omitted).

Chinn v. The City of Spokane, 2010 WL 2028084 (E.D. Wash. 2010), aff'd, 429 Fed. Appx. 673 (9th Cir. 2011).

Hasty v. Nebraska Dept. of Educ., 2010 WL 1552855 (D. Neb. 2010).

Smith v. Commonwealth of Virginia, 2009 WL 2175759, *2 (E.D. Va. 2009), aff'd, 353 Fed. Appx. 790 (4th Cir. 2009).

Gamble v. Department of Army, 557 F. Supp. 2d 151 (D.D.C. 2008), vacated on reconsideration, 567 F. Supp. 2d 150 (D.D.C. 2008) (sovereign immunity).

Anderson v. Blake, 2008 WL 2404040 (W.D. Okla. 2008) (qualified immunity).

Arguijo v. Owens, 2008 WL 2388903 (N.D. Tex. 2008) (sovereign immunity).

Hammond v. Plattsmier, 2008 WL 2358881 (W.D. La. 2008) (qualified and absolute immunity).

"A motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim under Rule 12(b)(6) is a valid means to raise a defense or bar to relief if the defense or bar clearly appears on the face of the complaint. A motion to dismiss is a proper vehicle to assert a claim of absolute immunity." Evans v. Suter, 2007 WL 1888308 (S.D. Tex. 2007), judgment aff'd, 260 Fed. Appx. 726 (5th Cir. 2007) (internal citation omitted).

Fisher v. Caruso, 2007 WL 1827395 (E.D. Mich. 2007).

Pienaar v. Young, 2007 WL 1797632 (S.D. Ind. 2007).

Smith v. Bell, 2007 WL 1702616 (S.D. Fla. 2007).

Merryman Excavation, Inc., v. International Union of Operating Engineers, 2007 WL 1232198 (N.D. Ill. 2007) (arbitral immunity).

Mosher v. New Jersey, 2007 WL 1101230 (D.N.J. 2007) (sovereign and judicial immunity).

"A motion to dismiss is also a proper vehicle to assert a claim of absolute immunity." Wilson v. Barcella, 2007 WL 963977, *9 (S.D. Tex. 2007), aff'd, 284 Fed. Appx. 210 (5th Cir. 2008) (lengthy discussion of prosecutorial immunity in Bivens action).

Wang v. County of Santa Clara, 2007 WL 518841 (N.D. Cal. 2007) (prosecutorial immunity).

Jones v. Wildgen, 320 F. Supp. 2d 1116 (D. Kan. 2004), on reconsideration in part, 349 F. Supp. 2d 1358 (D. Kan. 2004).

GE Capital Mortg. Services, Inc. v. Estate of Lugo, 319 F. Supp. 2d 127 (D. Mass. 2004) (sovereign immunity).

Donhauser v. Goord, 314 F. Supp. 2d 119 (N.D. N.Y. 2004) (qualified immunity shields state employees against claims for compensatory and punitive damages, although not against claims for declaratory or injunctive relief).

Joyner v. School Dist. of Philadelphia, 313 F. Supp. 2d 495 (E.D. Pa. 2004) (sovereign immunity not waived).

Algarin v. Town of Wallkill, 313 F. Supp. 2d 257 (S.D. N.Y. 2004), aff'd, 421 F.3d 137 (2d Cir. 2005) (absolute immunity).

Schroeder v. Kochanowski, 311 F. Supp. 2d 1241 (D. Kan. 2004) (qualified immunity, prosecutorial immunity, and judicial immunity).

Sawyer v. Michigan State Police, 310 F. Supp. 2d 876 (E.D. Mich. 2004) (witnesses have absolute immunity against claims based on their testimony).

Doe ex rel. Doe v. Detroit Bd. of Educ., 310 F. Supp. 2d 871 (E.D. Mich. 2004) (qualified immunity).

Burkhart v. Knepper, 310 F. Supp. 2d 734 (W.D. Pa. 2004).

Novak v. Overture Services, Inc., 309 F. Supp. 2d 446 (E.D. N.Y. 2004).

Kalodner v. Abraham, 309 F. Supp. 2d 100 (D.D.C. 2004) (sovereign immunity).

VanHorn v. Nebraska State Racing Com'n, 304 F. Supp. 2d 1151 (D. Neb. 2004).

Jones v. Pennsylvania Dept. of Public Welfare, 2004 WL 1175808 (E.D. Pa. 2004).

Hamrick v. Farmers Alliance Mut. Ins. Co., 2004 WL 955273 (D. Kan. 2004), aff'd, 129 Fed. Appx. 430 (10th Cir. 2005) (qualified immunity).

Vanderwall v. Peck, 2004 WL 944518 (E.D. La. 2004), aff'd, 129 Fed. Appx. 89 (5th Cir. 2005) (qualified immunity).

Dotson v. Velure, 2004 WL 793208 (D. Or. 2004), report and recommendation adopted, 2004 WL 816852 (D. Or. 2004) (judicial immunity).

Foley v. Marquez, 2004 WL 603566 (N.D. Cal. 2004) (judicial immunity).

McGee v. Hunter, 2004 WL 414807 (E.D. La. 2004).

Schultz v. Braga, 290 F. Supp. 2d 637 (D. Md. 2003), aff'd, 455 F.3d 470 (4th Cir. 2006).

Torres Ocasio v. Melendez, 283 F. Supp. 2d 505 (D.P.R. 2003).

Carlson v. Trans Union, LLC, 261 F. Supp. 2d 663 (N.D. Tex. 2003) (under § 1681h(e) of Fair Credit Reporting Act, credit reporting agencies have qualified immunity from state tort actions).

Mason v. Arizona, 260 F. Supp. 2d 807 (D. Ariz. 2003).

Negron v. Miller, 2003 WL 21251874 (E.D. La. 2003) (§ 1983 claim against defendants in their official capacities).

McGee v. Hunter, 2003 WL 21251869 (E.D. La. 2003) (§ 1983 claim against defendants in their official capacities).

Slade v. Gates, 2003 WL 21149789 (C.D. Cal. 2003) (prosecutor in official capacity has Eleventh Amendment immunity).

Gilmore v. Stone, 2003 WL 1923734 (N.D. N.Y. 2003) (court may dismiss claim based upon qualified immunity without first deciding substantive claims), subsequently aff'd, 115 Fed. Appx. 108 (2d Cir. 2004).

Abrahams v. DiBlasi, 2003 WL 1846305 (S.D. N.Y. 2003) (absolute judicial immunity).

Puccio v. Town of Oyster Bay, 229 F. Supp. 2d 173 (E.D. N.Y. 2002) (qualified immunity).

Dasrath v. Continental Airlines, Inc., 228 F. Supp. 2d 531 (D.N.J. 2002).

Viera-Marcano v. Ramirez-Sanchez, 224 F. Supp. 2d 397 (D.P.R. 2002).

Garlanger v. Verbeke, 223 F. Supp. 2d 596 (D.N.J. 2002).

Hutchison v. Brookshire Bros., Ltd., 205 F. Supp. 2d 629 (E.D. Tex. 2002).

Gallardo v. DiCarlo, 203 F. Supp. 2d 1160 (C.D. Cal. 2002) (qualified immunity of corrections officer).

T.S. Haulers, Inc. v. Town of Riverhead, 190 F. Supp. 2d 455 (E.D. N.Y. 2002) (absolute and qualified immunity).

Schultzen v. Woodbury Central Community School Dist., 187 F. Supp. 2d 1099 (N.D. Iowa 2002) (rejected by, E.N. v. Susquehanna Tp. School Dist., 2010 WL 4853700 (M.D. Pa. 2010)).

Stubblefield v. C.I.R., 2002-1 U.S. Tax Cas. (CCH) P 50382, 89 A.F.T.R.2d 2002-2084, 2002 WL 850196 (S.D. Tex. 2002).

Helton v. Hawkins, 12 F. Supp. 2d 1276 (M.D. Ala. 1998).

Cetenich v. Alden, 11 F. Supp. 2d 238 (N.D. N.Y. 1998).

Johnson v. City of Chester, 10 F. Supp. 2d 482 (E.D. Pa. 1998).

McCain v. Scott, 9 F. Supp. 2d 1365 (N.D. Ga. 1998).

Harris v. District Bd. of Trustees of Polk Community College, 9 F. Supp. 2d 1319 (M.D. Fla. 1998).

Rowe v. City of Fort Lauderdale, 8 F. Supp. 2d 1369 (S.D. Fla. 1998).

U.S. ex rel. Graber v. City of New York, 8 F. Supp. 2d 343 (S.D. N.Y. 1998).

African American Legal Defense Fund, Inc. v. New York State Dept. of Educ., 8 F. Supp. 2d 330 (S.D. N.Y. 1998).

Ortega v. Nguyen, 7 F. Supp. 2d 1178 (D. Kan. 1998).

Lawson v. Shelby County, Tenn., 7 F. Supp. 2d 985 (W.D. Tenn. 1998), rev'd, 211 F.3d 331 (6th Cir. 2000).

Prager v. LaFaver, 5 F. Supp. 2d 906 (D. Kan. 1998), aff'd, 180 F.3d 1185 (10th Cir. 1999).

Carter v. City of Philadelphia, 4 F. Supp. 2d 386 (E.D. Pa. 1998), rev'd, 181 F.3d 339 (3d Cir. 1999).

Cordova v. Vaughn Mun. School Dist. Bd. of Educ., 3 F. Supp. 2d 1216 (D.N.M. 1998).

 © 2025 Thomson Reuters. No claim to original U.S. Government Works.

Ostrzenski v. Seigel, 3 F. Supp. 2d 648 (D. Md. 1998), aff'd, 177 F.3d 245 (4th Cir. 1999).

Bryant v. New Jersey Dept. of Transp., 1 F. Supp. 2d 426 (D.N.J. 1998).

Lopez v. U.S., 998 F. Supp. 1239 (D.N.M. 1998).

American Charities for Reasonable Fundraising Regulation, Inc. v. Pinellas County, 997 F. Supp. 1481 (M.D. Fla. 1998).

Smith v. State of Alabama, 996 F. Supp. 1203 (M.D. Ala. 1998).

Gralike v. Cook, 996 F. Supp. 889 (W.D. Mo. 1998).

Stanley v. Cooper, 996 F. Supp. 316 (S.D. N.Y. 1998).

Eastridge v. Rhode Island College, 996 F. Supp. 161 (D.R.I. 1998).

Stein v. Kent State University Bd. of Trustees, 994 F. Supp. 898 (N.D. Ohio 1998), judgment aff'd, 181 F.3d 103 (6th Cir. 1999).

Young v. Pennsylvania House of Representatives, Republican Caucus, 994 F. Supp. 282 (M.D. Pa. 1998), judgment rev'd, 208 F.3d 207 (3d Cir. 2000).

Roemer v. Crow, 993 F. Supp. 834 (D. Kan. 1998), judgment aff'd, 162 F.3d 1174 (10th Cir. 1998).

Proctor v. Vadlamudi, 992 F. Supp. 156 (N.D. N.Y. 1998).

Bessman v. Powell, 991 F. Supp. 830 (S.D. Tex. 1998), aff'd in part, 189 F.3d 469 (5th Cir. 1999).

Meek v. Springfield Police Dept., 990 F. Supp. 598 (C.D. Ill. 1998).

Kinnison v. Mississippi Dept. of Wildlife, Fisheries, and Parks, 990 F. Supp. 481 (S.D. Miss. 1998).

Cetenich v. Alden, 177 F.R.D. 94 (N.D. N.Y. 1998) (judicial immunity).

Diaz v. Carlson, 5 F. Supp. 2d 809 (C.D. Cal. 1997), aff'd, 142 F.3d 443 (9th Cir. 1998).

Bernstein v. U.S., 990 F. Supp. 428 (D.S.C. 1997).

A government official's entitlement to qualified immunity is a question of law that appropriately is determined before trial in one of three ways: on a motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim, on a request for judgment on the pleadings, or on a motion for summary judgment. Goodman v. Town of Golden Beach, 988 F. Supp. 1450 (S.D. Fla. 1997).

See also

Wallin v. Norman, 317 F.3d 558 (6th Cir. 2003) (denial of motion to dismiss based on qualified immunity is immediately appealable since purpose of immunity is not just to protect from suit, but also to protect from litigation).

Bryce v. Episcopal Church in the Diocese of Colorado, 289 F.3d 648 (10th Cir. 2002) (church autonomy doctrine; converted to summary judgment).

Compare

Hall v. New England Business Service, Inc., 2003 WL 2004375 (D.N.H. 2003) (employers are immune from negligence claims by their employees to extent that claims are covered by worker's compensation statute).

But see

The entitlement of officials of the state insurance department to rely on the defense of judicial or governmental immunity in a civil rights action was not determinable on a motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim. Safeguard Mut. Ins. Co. v. Miller, 472 F.2d 732 (3d Cir. 1973).

Mary's House, Inc. v. North Carolina, 976 F. Supp. 2d 691 (M.D. N.C. 2013) ("The Fourth Circuit has not conclusively established whether a dismissal based on Eleventh Amendment immunity is a dismissal for lack of subject matter jurisdiction under Rule 12(b)(1) or for failure to state a claim under Rule 12(b)(6) of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure. * * * However, Defendants characterize their Eleventh Amendment argument as jurisdictional, so the court will treat it as such."), citing Andrews v. Daw, 201 F.3d 521, 524-525 n.2 (4th Cir. 2000).

Doe v. Franklin County, Mo., 2013 WL 2467926, *2-5 (E.D. Mo. 2013) (defendant commissioner who opened commission meeting with prayer was not subject to legislative immunity because prayer was not legislative act).

Russell v. Lazar, 300 F. Supp. 2d 716 (E.D. Wis. 2004) (Rule 12(b)(6) is almost always bad ground for adjudicating qualified immunity because it is essential to consider facts in addition to those in complaint).

Duncan v. Secretary of Defense, 2004 WL 1118300 (E.D. La. 2004) (in Fifth Circuit, sovereign immunity defense is appropriately asserted on Rule 12(b)(1) motion rather than Rule 12(b)(6) motion).

Yeomans v. Wallace, 291 F. Supp. 2d 70 (D. Conn. 2003) (court could not rule for defendant on qualified immunity issue without drawing inferences in his favor and thus Rule 12(b)(6) motion was improper).

Robbins v. Bureau of Land Management, 252 F. Supp. 2d 1286 (D. Wyo. 2003) (court said motion to dismiss based on qualified immunity is treated as motion to dismiss for lack of subject matter jurisdiction; however, unpublished case cited to by court referred to Eleventh Amendment sovereign immunity but instant case dealt with qualified immunity from Bivens action and so court is almost certainly wrong since great weight of authority adjudicates qualified immunity from constitutional torts under Rule 12(b)(6)).

A Rule 12(b)(6) motion is not the preferred vehicle for resolving a qualified immunity defense; rather, immunity should be raised as an affirmative defense and be addressed on a motion for summary judgment or for judgment on the pleadings. Whiting v. Tunica County, 222 F. Supp. 2d 809 (N.D. Miss. 2002).

Deloughery v. City of Chicago, 2002 WL 31654942 (N.D. Ill. 2002) (qualified immunity is "almost always bad ground for dismissal" under Rule 12(b)(6) since plaintiffs are not required to plead around anticipated immunity defense under federal rules), citing Jacobs v. City of Chicago, 215 F.3d 758 (7th Cir. 2000).

Individual officers of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania who were alleged knowingly to have denied a handicapped child a free appropriate education could not assert the doctrine of qualified immunity to bar the suit as the question of their good faith was an affirmative defense that could not be determined on a motion to dismiss. Stubbs v. Kline, 463 F. Supp. 110 (W.D. Pa. 1978).

99 Statutory exceptions to liability

Monsarrat v. Newman, 28 F.4th 314, 325 (1st Cir. 2022) (affirming 12(b)(6) dismissal based on the applicability of § 230 of the Communications Decency Act and the fair use exception, codified at § 107 of the Copyright Act).

Bell v. Eagle Mountain Saginaw Independent School District, 27 F.4th 313, 320-326 (5th Cir. 2022) (affirming 12(b)(6) dismissal based on the applicability the fair use exception, codified at § 107 of the Copyright Act), citing Wright & Miller.

Sams v. Yahoo! Inc., 713 F.3d 1175, 1183 (9th Cir. 2013) (affirming 12(b)(6) dismissal based on the applicability of § 2707(e) of the Stored Communications Act).

Marano v. Metropolitan Museum of Art, 472 F. Supp. 3d 76, 82 (S.D. N.Y. 2020) (dismissing based on the applicability of the fair use exception, codified at § 107 of the Copyright Act), aff'd, 844 Fed. Appx. 436 (2d Cir. 2021).

G.G. v. Salesforce.com, Inc., 603 F. Supp. 3d 626, 2022 WL 1541408, *4-11 (N.D. Ill. 2022) (dismissing based on the applicability of § 230 of the Communications Decency Act), rev'd and remanded, 76 F.4th 544 (7th Cir. 2023).

FirstEnergy Corp. v. Pircio, 524 F. Supp. 3d 732, 741-743 (N.D. Ohio 2021) (dismissing based on the applicability of § 1833(b) of the Defend Trade Secrets Act).

100 Laches

Leimer v. State Mut. Life Assur. Co. of Worcester, Mass., 108 F.2d 302 (C.C.A. 8th Cir. 1940).

Butt v. Zimmerman, 2021 WL 5822260, *6 (M.D. Ga. 2021) ("Although the issue of whether laches bars a claim generally should not be resolved on a motion to dismiss, there is at least one instance in which it is acceptable to resolve such a question. 'The defense of laches may be asserted by motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim—provided that the complaint shows affirmatively that the claim is barred.' And upon review, Plaintiff's claim * * * is barred, so the Court cannot provide the relief he seeks."), aff'd, 2022 WL 5237916 (11th Cir. 2022).

Acosta v. Jardon & Howard Technologies, Inc., 2018 WL 5779506 (E.D. N.C. 2018) ("Although courts can consider laches in the context of a motion to dismiss under Rule 12(b)(6), laches requires a fact-intensive analysis that is usually inappropriate to resolve on the face of the complaint.").

Deniece Design, LLC v. Braun, 953 F. Supp. 2d 765, 775 (S.D. Tex. 2013) ("Laches, estoppel and/or waiver can serve as an affirmative defense to patent infringement * * *.").

Lennon v. Seaman, 63 F. Supp. 2d 428 (S.D. N.Y. 1999), citing Wright & Miller (when defense of laches is clear on face of complaint and when it is clear that plaintiff can prove no set of facts to avoid insuperable bar, court may consider defense on motion to dismiss).

U.S. v. Kusche, 56 F. Supp. 201 (S.D. Cal. 1944).

But compare

Although a court may consider the defense of laches on a Rule 12(b)(6) motion, courts generally are not inclined to do so because application of the laches defense involves consideration of fact issues outside the pleadings. Bolanos v. Norwegian Cruise Lines Ltd., 7 Wage & Hour Cas. 2d (BNA) 1703, 2002 WL 1465907 (S.D. N.Y. 2002), order aff'd, 2004 WL 769766 (S.D. N.Y. 2004) (magistrate judge).

But see

Because laches requires a "fact intensive inquiry," the court held that resolution of the defense was premature at the motion to dismiss stage. Moreover, the court suggested that, in Lanham Act claims, dismissals based on laches are generally improper before a factual record has been developed. Champion Laboratories, Champion Laboratories, Inc. v. Central Illinois Manufacturing Co., 157 F. Supp. 3d 759, 766-765 (N.D. Ill. 2016).

101 Privilege

Ogbin v. Fein, Such, Kahn and Shepard, P.C., 414 Fed. Appx. 456 (3d Cir. 2011) (litigation privilege).

Schiavone Const. Co. v. Time, Inc., 847 F.2d 1069 (3d Cir. 1988).

In an action for slander, the defense of absolute privilege, based upon the defendant's status as a judge, could be raised by motion to dismiss. Owen v. Kronheim, 304 F.2d 957, 113 (D.C. Cir. 1962).

Ginsburg v. Black, 192 F.2d 823 (7th Cir. 1951).

Foltz v. Moore McCormack Lines, Inc., 189 F.2d 537 (2d Cir. 1951).

Fredin v. Kreil, 2020 WL 7427048 (D. Minn. 2020) (absolute litigation privilege).

Routh v. University of Rochester, 981 F. Supp. 2d 184 (W.D. N.Y. 2013) (common-interest privilege).

Deel v. Home Depot USA, Inc., 2010 WL 2179576 (D.S.C. 2010), report and recommendation adopted, 2010 WL 2196272 (D.S.C. 2010), aff'd, 399 Fed. Appx. 786 (4th Cir. 2010).

McFarland v. McFarland, 2010 WL 746878 (N.D. Iowa 2010) ("The court must also still 'construe the complaint liberally in the light most favorable to the plaintiff.'"), quoting Eckert v. Titan Tire Corp., 514 F.3d 801, 806 (8th Cir. 2008) (decided post-Twombly).

Grochocinski v. Mayer Brown Rowe & Maw LLP, 251 F.R.D. 316 (N.D. Ill. 2008) (attorney-client privilege).

Burnett v. Sharma, 2007 WL 1020782 (D.D.C. 2007).

Joyner v. School Dist. of Philadelphia, 313 F. Supp. 2d 495 (E.D. Pa. 2004) (since statements made during disciplinary hearing were privileged, defamation claim was dismissed).

Moore v. New York City Dept. of Educ., 2004 WL 691523 (S.D. N.Y. 2004) (defendant's limited internal dissemination of report on corporal punishment by plaintiff entitled to common law privilege).

Jones v. Hinton, 847 F. Supp. 41 (E.D. Pa. 1994).

Pure, Ltd. v. Shasta Beverages, Inc., 691 F. Supp. 1274 (D. Haw. 1988).

102 Release

Ruiz-Sanchez v. Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co., 717 F.3d 249, 252 (1st Cir. 2013).

Russell v. Harman Intern. Industries, Inc., 945 F. Supp. 2d 68, 73 (D.D.C. 2013), aff'd, 773 F.3d 253 (D.C. Cir. 2014).

Tim-Minn, Inc. v. Tim Hortons USA, Inc., 2020 WL 13413692, *4-6 (D. Minn. 2020).

Mechoopda Indian Tribe of Chico Rancheria, Cal. v. Schwarzenegger, 2004 WL 1103021 (E.D. Cal. 2004).

Wilson v. Western Oceanic, Inc., 540 F. Supp. 228 (S.D. Tex. 1982), citing Wright & Miller.

Cordaro v. Lusardi, 354 F. Supp. 1147 (S.D. N.Y. 1973).

Hoover v. Lacey, 80 F. Supp. 691 (D. D.C. 1943).

But see
Because release is an affirmative defense, the existence of a defense does not undercut the adequacy of the claim, and thus it is improperly raised on a Rule 12(b)(6) motion. Deckard v. General Motors Corp., 307 F.3d 556 (7th Cir. 2002).

103 Res judicata
Healy v. Fox, 46 F.4th 739 (8th Cir. 2022) (affirming district court's grant of a motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim on res judicata grounds).

"Generally, res judicata must be pled as an affirmative defense. Two limited exceptions to this rule exist. The first exception permits 'dismissal by the court sua sponte on res judicata grounds * * * in the interest of judicial economy where both actions were brought before the same court.' The second exception applies 'where all of the relevant facts are contained in the record * * * and all are uncontroverted.' Both McIntyre's Civil Rights Act and FLSA actions were brought before the same federal district court. The relevant facts are contained in McIntyre's complaint, which is nearly identical to the complaint filed in the earlier action. Thus, the district court did not err in raising the issue of res judicata sua sponte under Rule 12(b)(6)." McIntyre v. Ben E. Keith Company, 754 Fed. Appx. 262 (5th Cir. 2018) (citations omitted).

Duckett v. Fuller, 819 F.3d 740, 747 (4th Cir. 2016) (since district court erred in dismissing state defendants' claims under Rule 12(b)(6), defendant was not barred by judgment for pursuing similar claims).

"Although res judicata is not a defense under Rule 12(b), and generally should be raised as an affirmative defense under Rule 8(c), Fed.R.Civ.P., it may be raised in a Rule 12(b)(6) motion where the existence of the defense can be determined from the face of the complaint." Solis v. Global Acceptance Credit Co., L.P., 601 Fed. Appx. 767, 771 (11th Cir. 2015).

Davis v. Davis, 551 Fed. Appx. 991, 994 (11th Cir. 2014).

Stone v. Louisiana Dept. of Revenue, 590 Fed. Appx. 332 (5th Cir. 2014).

Arthur v. Thomas, 674 F.3d 1257, 1261 (11th Cir. 2012) ("For several reasons, we conclude that Arthur's Eighth Amendment allegations are not so similar to those presented in our previous cases that his complaint can be dismissed on a Rule 12(b)(6) motion.").

Garcia-Monagas v. De Arellano, 674 F.3d 45, 50 (1st Cir. 2012).

Keymarket of Ohio, LLC v. Keller, 483 Fed. Appx. 967 (6th Cir. 2012).

Associated Financial Corp. v. Kleckner, 480 Fed. Appx. 89 (2d Cir. 2012).

Dean v. Teeuwissen, 479 Fed. Appx. 629 (5th Cir. 2012) (per curiam).

Whitaker v. Nash-Rocky Mount Bd. of Educ., 474 Fed. Appx. 912 (4th Cir. 2012) (per curiam).

Manu v. National City Bank of Indiana, 471 Fed. Appx. 101 (3d Cir. 2012) (per curiam).

Handley v. Chase Bank USA, NA, 463 Fed. Appx. 65, 66 (3d Cir. 2012) (per curiam).

Czarniecki v. City of Chicago, 633 F.3d 545 (7th Cir. 2011).

Arlin-Golf, LLC v. Village of Arlington Heights, 631 F.3d 818 (7th Cir. 2011).

LaCroix v. Marshall County, Mississippi, 409 Fed. Appx. 794, 798-799 (5th Cir. 2011) (with two exceptions, res judicata must be pleaded, not raised by court).

Wainscott v. Dallas County, Tex., 408 Fed. Appx. 813, 815 (5th Cir. 2011).

Royal Crown Ins. Corp. v. Northern Mariana Islands, 447 Fed. Appx. 760 (9th Cir. 2011).

Amadasu v. The Christ Hosp., 514 F.3d 504 (6th Cir. 2008).

Austin v. Downs, Rachlin & Martin Burlington St. Johnsbury, 270 Fed. Appx. 52 (2d Cir. 2008) (res judicata and collateral estoppel).

Providence Health Plan v. McDowell, 385 F.3d 1168 (9th Cir. 2004) (claim preclusion).

Salguero v. City Of Clovis, 366 F.3d 1168 (10th Cir. 2004) (collateral estoppel).

Dryvit Systems, Inc. v. Great Lakes Exteriors, Inc., 96 Fed. Appx. 310 (6th Cir. 2004).

Ratcliff v. Rainwater, 93 Fed. Appx. 623 (5th Cir. 2004).

Berwind Corp. v. Commissioner of Social Security, 307 F.3d 222 (3d Cir. 2002).

Howard Carr Companies, Inc. v. Cumberland Farms, Inc., 456 F. Supp. 3d 462, 468 (N.D. N.Y. 2020), aff'd, 833 Fed. Appx. 922 (2d Cir. 2021).

Johnson v. Kaemingk, 381 F. Supp. 3d 1104 (D.S.D. 2019) (denying a motion to dismiss based on issue preclusion because the prior adjudication of the issue—the plaintiff's disability under the Americans with Disabilities Act—did not resolve the issue of whether the plaintiff is disabled five years hence).

Res judicata may be raised in a Rule 12(b)(6) motion for failure to state a claim if "the defense is premised on public records and no further information or discovery is required." Lechnir v. Wells, 157 F. Supp. 3d 804, 808 (E.D. Wis. 2016).

Vargas-Colon v. Fundacion Damas, Inc., 157 F. Supp. 3d 106, 120-124 (D.P.R. 2016), aff'd, 864 F.3d 14 (1st Cir. 2017).

Suggs v. Wichard, 2016 WL 6648168, *2-3 (D. Ariz. 2016) (issue precluded by prior arbitration proceedings).

Brewer v. District of Columbia, 105 F. Supp. 3d 74, 87 (D.D.C. 2015) ("Court concludes that each of the prerequisites for issue preclusion under D.C. law are clearly present in the instant case * * *.").

The doctrine of res judicata did not bar the defendants' proposed antitrust counterclaims in a patent infringement suit because the counterclaimants offered new factual allegations that the defendants could not have made in an earlier lawsuit in another district. Intellectual Ventures I LLC v. Capital One Financial Corp., 99 F. Supp. 3d 610, 619-620 (D. Md. 2015).

McFadden v. Fuller, 2015 WL 2412326, *11 (D.S.C. 2015).

Arrington v. Federal Public Defender for District of Columbia, 75 F. Supp. 3d 340, 345-347 (D.D.C. 2014) (four elements of res judicata met).

Communication Management Services, LLC v. Qwest Corp., 67 F. Supp. 3d 1159, 1169 (D. Or. 2014), aff'd in part, rev'd in part, 726 Fed. Appx. 538 (9th Cir. 2018).

Benisek v. Mack, 11 F. Supp. 3d 516 (D. Md. 2014), aff'd, 584 Fed. Appx. 140 (4th Cir. 2014), rev'd and remanded, 577 U.S. 39, 136 S. Ct. 450, 193 L. Ed. 2d 279 (2015).

"A motion to dismiss under Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 12(b)(6) may be entertained on the ground of res judicata, and in considering such a motion, the court may take judicial notice of facts from a prior judicial opinion when the plaintiff does not dispute the factual accuracy of the record of the previous suit." Mills v. Duke University, 2014 WL 7150684, *3 n.2 (M.D. N.C. 2014).

Sczygelski v. U.S. Customs and Border Patrol Agency, 48 F. Supp. 3d 80 (D.D.C. 2014), judgment aff'd, 624 Fed. Appx. 1 (D.C. Cir. 2015).

Allstate Ins. Co. v. Elzanaty, 916 F. Supp. 2d 273, 299 (E.D. N.Y. 2013), subsequent determination, (2nd Circ. 13-4714)929 F. Supp. 2d 199 (E.D. N.Y. 2013).

Cottrell v. Vilsack, 915 F. Supp. 2d 81, 88 n.6 (D.D.C. 2013), order aff'd, 2013 WL 4711683 (D.C. Cir. 2013), citing Smalls v. U.S., 471 F.3d 186, 189 (D.C. Cir. 2006).

Marceline v. Town of Darien, 974 F. Supp. 2d 123 (D. Conn. 2013).

Amr v. Moore, 2010 WL 3154575 (E.D. Va. 2010), report and recommendation adopted, 2010 WL 3154567 (E.D. Va. 2010), aff'd, 411 Fed. Appx. 584 (4th Cir. 2011).

Deel v. Home Depot USA, Inc., 2010 WL 2179576 (D.S.C. 2010), report and recommendation adopted, 2010 WL 2196272 (D.S.C. 2010), aff'd, 399 Fed. Appx. 786 (4th Cir. 2010).

Bostic v. U.S. Capitol Police, 644 F. Supp. 2d 106 (D.D.C. 2009).

Carroll v. Welch, 2007 WL 1377654 (E.D. Pa. 2007).

Burnett v. Sharma, 2007 WL 1020782 (D.D.C. 2007).

Georgia Farm Bureau Mutual Ins. Co. v. Great American Excess and Surplus Ins.Co., 2007 WL 757816 (N.D. Ga. 2007) (denied because court could not determine issue on face of complaint).

Ashton v. City of Concord, N.C., 337 F. Supp. 2d 735 (M.D. N.C. 2004).

Baron v. Brackis, 312 F. Supp. 2d 808 (E.D. Va. 2004).

Hernandez v. Goord, 312 F. Supp. 2d 537 (S.D. N.Y. 2004).

Coleman v. Potomac Elec. Power Co., 310 F. Supp. 2d 154 (D.D.C. 2004), aff'd, 2004 WL 2348144 (D.C. Cir. 2004).

Langella v. Bush, 306 F. Supp. 2d 459 (S.D. N.Y. 2004).

Lewis ex rel. Lewis v. BHS College Meadows, 2004 WL 870818 (D. Kan. 2004), aff'd, 123 Fed. Appx. 885 (10th Cir. 2005).

Moore v. Navarro, 2004 WL 783104 (N.D. Cal. 2004).

Pergosky v. Pennsylvania Power & Light Co., 2004 WL 765108 (E.D. Pa. 2004), aff'd, 133 Fed. Appx. 827 (3d Cir. 2005) (collateral estoppel).

Chicago Dist. Council of Carpenters Pension Fund v. Marca Const., 2004 WL 725299 (N.D. Ill. 2004) (motion to dismiss denied because defendant cannot meet burden of showing that collateral estoppel exists).

Huntley v. City of Johnstown, 2004 WL 627157 (W.D. Pa. 2004) (collateral estoppel).

Wilson v. Bob Watson Chevrolet, Inc., 2004 WL 432493 (N.D. Ill. 2004).

In re HNRC Dissolution Co., 549 B.R. 469, 481 (Bankr. E.D. Ky. 2016), aff'd, 585 B.R. 837 (B.A.P. 6th Cir. 2018), aff'd, 761 Fed. Appx. 553 (6th Cir. 2019).

In re Stevens, 2004 WL 439250 (Bankr. D. Vt. 2004) (not reported in Bankruptcy Reporter).

DeNune v. Consolidated Capital of North America, Inc., 288 F. Supp. 2d 844 (N.D. Ohio 2003).

Doe v. Mann, 285 F. Supp. 2d 1229 (N.D. Cal. 2003), aff'd, 415 F.3d 1038 (9th Cir. 2005).

Logan Farms v. HBH, Inc. DE, 282 F. Supp. 2d 776 (S.D. Ohio 2003) (collateral estoppel).

Commer v. American Federation of State, County and Mun. Employees, 272 F. Supp. 2d 332 (S.D. N.Y. 2003), judgment aff'd, 390 F.3d 203 (2d Cir. 2004) (collateral estoppel).

Brown v. Quiniou, 2003 WL 1888743 (S.D. N.Y. 2003).

Verizon Maryland Inc. v. RCN Telecom Services, Inc., 232 F. Supp. 2d 539 (D. Md. 2002), aff'd in part, dismissed in part, 377 F.3d 355 (4th Cir. 2004).

Lipin v. National Union Fire Ins. Co. of Pittsburgh, Pa., 202 F. Supp. 2d 126 (S.D. N.Y. 2002).

Taylor v. Maple Ave. Economic Development Corp., 2002 WL 1758189 (N.D. Tex. 2002).

Trevino v. Boomtown Inc., 2002 WL 1363891 (E.D. La. 2002).

Inofast Mfg., Inc. v. Bardsley, 103 F. Supp. 2d 847 (E.D. Pa. 2000), aff'd, 265 F.3d 1055 (3d Cir. 2001).

Tyler v. O'Neill, 52 F. Supp. 2d 471 (E.D. Pa. 1999), order aff'd, 225 F.3d 650 (3d Cir. 2000).

Resource N.E. of Long Island, Inc. v. Town of Babylon, 28 F. Supp. 2d 786 (E.D. N.Y. 1998) (preclusion defenses appropriately raised on Rule 12(b)(6) motion).

Tonken v. Loving & Weintraub Inc., 22 F. Supp. 2d 86 (S.D. N.Y. 1998).

Clarkstown Recycling Center, Inc. v. Parker, Chapin Flattau & Klimpl, LLP, 1 F. Supp. 2d 327 (S.D. N.Y. 1998).

Kuhns v. CoreStates Financial Corp., 998 F. Supp. 573 (E.D. Pa. 1998).

Smith v. State of Alabama, 996 F. Supp. 1203 (M.D. Ala. 1998).

Kowalczyk v. Gilroy, 994 F. Supp. 410 (E.D. N.Y. 1998), judgment aff'd, 166 F.3d 1200 (2d Cir. 1998).

Clavin v. Post, 992 F. Supp. 359 (S.D. N.Y. 1998), judgment aff'd, 165 F.3d 13 (2d Cir. 1998).

Slavov v. Marriott Intern., Inc., 990 F. Supp. 566 (N.D. Ill. 1998).

Barth v. Kaye, 178 F.R.D. 371 (N.D. N.Y. 1998).

City of Painesville, Ohio v. First Montauk Financial Corp., 178 F.R.D. 180 (N.D. Ohio 1998).

State of Ark. ex rel. Bryant v. Dow Chemical Co., 981 F. Supp. 1170 (E.D. Ark. 1997).

Ramirez v. Brooklyn Aids Task Force, 175 F.R.D. 423 (E.D. N.Y. 1997), judgment aff'd, 164 F.3d 619 (2d Cir. 1998).

HBP Associates v. Marsh, 893 F. Supp. 271 (S.D. N.Y. 1995).

U.S. ex rel. Paul v. Parsons, Brinkerhoff, Quade & Douglas, Inc., 860 F. Supp. 370 (S.D. Tex. 1994), aff'd, 53 F.3d 1282 (5th Cir. 1995).

Julian v. New York City Transit Authority, 857 F. Supp. 242 (E.D. N.Y. 1994), aff'd, 52 F.3d 312 (2d Cir. 1995).

Oregon Laborers-Employers Health & Welfare Trust Fund v. All State Indus. and Marine Cleaning, Inc., 850 F. Supp. 905 (D. Or. 1994).

Briggs v. Newberry County School Dist., 838 F. Supp. 232 (D.S.C. 1992), aff'd, 989 F.2d 491 (4th Cir. 1993).

Norals v. Schneider Bros., Inc., 651 F. Supp. 1324 (N.D. Ill. 1987).

Gilbert v. Bagley, 492 F. Supp. 714 (M.D. N.C. 1980), citing Wright & Miller.

Hammer v. Town of Greenburgh, 440 F. Supp. 27 (S.D. N.Y. 1977), aff'd, 578 F.2d 1368 (2d Cir. 1978).

Pyles v. Keane, 418 F. Supp. 269 (S.D. N.Y. 1976) (collateral estoppel).

Fleer Corp. v. Topps Chewing Gum, Inc., 415 F. Supp. 176 (E.D. Pa. 1976) (collateral estoppel).

Sorger v. Philadelphia Redevelopment Authority of City of Philadelphia, 401 F. Supp. 348 (E.D. Pa. 1975).

Lancaster County v. Philadelphia Elec. Co., 386 F. Supp. 934 (E.D. Pa. 1975).

Kaufman v. Somers Bd. of Ed., 368 F. Supp. 28 (D. Conn. 1973).

Keystone Ins. Co. v. U.S., 332 F. Supp. 74 (E.D. Pa. 1971).

Sylk v. U.S., 331 F. Supp. 661 (E.D. Pa. 1971).

Connelly Foundation v. School Dist. of Haverford Tp., 326 F. Supp. 241 (E.D. Pa. 1971), judgment aff'd, 461 F.2d 495 (3d Cir. 1972).

Butterman v. Walston & Co., 50 F.R.D. 189 (E.D. Wis. 1970).

Katz v. State of Conn., 307 F. Supp. 480 (D. Conn. 1969), judgment aff'd, 433 F.2d 878 (2d Cir. 1970).

Travelers Indem. Co. v. Arbogast, 45 F.R.D. 87 (W.D. Pa. 1968).

Haydu v. City of Billings, Mont., 258 F. Supp. 785 (D. Mont. 1966).

Lippmann v. Hydro-Space Technology, Inc., 235 F. Supp. 860 (D.N.J. 1964).

But compare
Dickson v. Township of Novesta, 2006 WL 3240695 (E.D. Mich. 2006), citing Wright & Miller.

See also
Hugel v. Southeast Louisiana Flood Protection Authority-East, 429 Fed. Appx. 364 (5th Cir. 2011) (court declined to decide whether res judicata can be raised on Rule 12(b)(6) motion), quoting Wright & Miller.

Slepian v. Slepian, 355 So. 2d 714, 716 (Ala. Civ. App. 1977), citing Wright & Miller.

Bickford v. American Interinsurance Exchange, 224 N.W.2d 450, 453 (Iowa 1974), citing Wright & Miller.

 © 2025 Thomson Reuters. No claim to original U.S. Government Works.

Osserman v. Jacobs, 369 Mass. 200, 339 N.E.2d 193, 194 n.3 (1975), citing Wright & Miller.

But see
Test Masters Educational Services, Inc. v. Singh, 428 F.3d 559 (5th Cir. 2005) (generally res judicata contention cannot be asserted in motion to dismiss; it must be pleaded as affirmative defense).

Weizmann Institute of Science v. Neschis, 229 F. Supp. 2d 234 (S.D. N.Y. 2002) (although res judicata and collateral estoppel can sometimes be adjudicated pursuant to Rule 12(b)(6), issue of whether plaintiff had full and fair opportunity to participate in foreign adjudication was not appropriately litigated at early stage of case).

The defense of res judicata could not be raised on a motion to dismiss. Foye v. United A. G. Stores Co-op., Inc., 336 F. Supp. 82 (D. Neb. 1972).

104 Failure to exhaust
Williams v. Correction Officer Priatno, 829 F.3d 118, 122 (2d Cir. 2016).

Morris v. McCarthy, 825 F.3d 658, 667 (D.C. Cir. 2016) (district court properly dismissed wrongful termination claims for failure to exhaust administrative remedies).

Hopkins v. City of Bloomington, 774 F.3d 490, 492 (8th Cir. 2014) (plaintiff was required to exhaust available state administrative remedies before bringing post-deprivation procedural due process claim).

"But, though it generally must be affirmatively pled and proved, '[i]f an affirmative defense * * * is apparent on the face of the complaint * * * that [defense] can provide the basis for dismissal under Rule 12(b)(6).'" ABF Freight System, Inc. v. International Broth. of Teamsters, 728 F.3d 853, 861 (8th Cir. 2013), quoting C.H. Robinson Worldwide, Inc. v. Lobrano, 695 F.3d 758, 764 (8th Cir. 2012).

Slingland v. Donahoe, 542 Fed. Appx. 189 (3d Cir. 2013) (dismissal of Title VII and ADEA claims under Rule 12(b)(6) affirmed because plaintiff failed to exhaust administrative remedies), citing Robinson v. Dalton, 107 F.3d 1018, 1020 (3d Cir. 1997).

Mendoza v. Lehigh Southwest Cement Co., 540 Fed. Appx. 813 (9th Cir. 2013) (failure to file timely complaint with Equal Employment Opportunity Commission).

Christiansen v. West Branch Community School Dist., 674 F.3d 927, 935 (8th Cir. 2012).

 © 2025 Thomson Reuters. No claim to original U.S. Government Works.

Jech v. Department of Interior, 483 Fed. Appx. 555 (10th Cir. 2012).

Presbury v. Wenerowicz, 472 Fed. Appx. 100 (3d Cir. 2012) (per curiam).

Bell v. Skendall, 470 Fed. Appx. 65 (3d Cir. 2012) (per curiam).

Szemple v. Correctional Medical Services, Inc., 493 Fed. Appx. 238, 241 (3d Cir. 2012) (per curiam).

Spicer v. Ford Motor Co., 491 Fed. Appx. 543 (6th Cir. 2012).

Hull v. I.R.S., U.S. Dept. of Treasury, 656 F.3d 1174, 1181 n.5 (10th Cir. 2011).

Brooks v. Midwest Heart Group, 655 F.3d 796 (8th Cir. 2011).

Leak v. CIGNA Healthcare, 423 Fed. Appx. 53 (2d Cir. 2011).

Basso v. Willow Run Foods, Inc., 577 F. Supp. 3d 73, 83-85 (N.D. N.Y. 2022) (dismissing plaintiff's hostile work environment claim under the ADA because plaintiff failed to first file a timely charge with the EEOC).

Moreno v. Kansas City Steak Company, LLC, 2017 WL 2985748, *3 (D. Kan. 2017) (treating plaintiff's failure to exhaust administrative remedies as a jurisdictional defect to be considered under a Rule 12(b)(1) motion and not a Rule 12(b)(6) motion).

Gomez v. New York City Police Department, 191 F. Supp. 3d 293, 299-300 (S.D. N.Y. 2016) (plaintiff's failure to exhaust Title VII claims deemed clear from face of complaint).

Mecouch v. Pension Board of the Employees' Retirement System of the County of Milwaukee, 184 F. Supp. 3d 684, 690 (E.D. Wis. 2016) (plaintiff failed to exhaust all available state remedies since state certiorari review was still available and therefore plaintiff's due process claim was denied).

The United States only waives its sovereign immunity for tort claims under the Federal Tort Claims Act after administrative remedies are exhausted. Because the plaintiffs did not refuse (and thus conceded) that they did not exhaust their administrative remedies under the FTCA, the court was without jurisdiction. Emrit v. National Institutes of Health, 157 F. Supp. 3d 52, 54-55 (D.D.C. 2016).

Rosario v. Brennan, 197 F. Supp. 3d 406 (D. Conn. 2016).

Galvez v. I.R.S., 448 Fed. Appx. 880 (11th Cir. 2011).

Latson v. Holder, 82 F. Supp. 3d 377, 386 (D.D.C. 2015).

"The District of Columbia Circuit instructs that a FOIA plaintiff's failure to exhaust administrative remedies before filing a civil action is properly treated as a failure to state a claim upon which relief may be granted under Fed.R.Civ.P. 12(b)(6)." Rachuy v. Director of Federal Bureau of Investigation, 79 F. Supp. 3d 147, 152 n.3 (D.D.C. 2015) (internal quotations omitted).

"In general, exhaustion arguments in FOIA [Freedom of Information Act] cases are analyzed under Rule 12(b)(6)." Pinson v. U.S. Department of Justice, 61 F. Supp. 3d 164, 172 (D.D.C. 2015).

"As an affirmative defense, the burden of proof for the exhaustion of administrative remedies in a suit governed by the PLRA [Prison Litigation Reform Act] lies with the defendant." Bernard v. Britton, 2015 WL 753527, *4 (D. Colo. 2015) (internal quotations omitted).

"The Court will apply the 12(b)(6) standard to both EPA's failure-to-exhaust argument and its failure-to-state-a-claim argument. Although FOIA cases typically and appropriately are decided on motions for summary judgment, where an agency argues that the requester has failed to exhaust his administrative remedies, courts analyze the matter under Rule 12(b)(6) for failure to state a claim." Hall & Associates v. U.S. Environmental Protection Agency, 77 F. Supp. 3d 40, 44 (D.D.C. 2014) (internal citations omitted).

"The Sixth Circuit has explained that the requirement that plaintiffs first exhaust their administrative remedies is not meant to be overly rigid, nor should it result in the restriction of subsequent complaints based on procedural technicalities or the failure of the charges to contain the exact wording which might be required in a judicial pleading." Ellis v. Morgan County Sheriff's Dept., 2014 WL 7408834, *2 (E.D. Tenn. 2014) (internal quotations omitted).

"Dismissal under Rule 12(b)(6) for failure to exhaust is appropriate if such failure is evidenced on the face of the complaint and incorporated documents." Lee v. O'Harer, 2014 WL 7343997, *3 (N.D. N.Y. 2014).

In light of recent Supreme Court decisions, "the Court concludes that if our Circuit [Tenth Circuit] were given the opportunity to consider directly whether an ERISA exhaustion argument is a jurisdictional requirement, it would conclude that it is not. ERISA's exhaustion requirement is not derived from statutory authority; rather, it is a judge-made rule." Richardson v. Kellogg Co., 2014 WL 7338844, *6 (D. Kan. 2014), subsequent determination, 2015 WL 474320 (D. Kan. 2015).

Reed v. Gorring, 2014 WL 7338713, *4 (W.D. Pa. 2014) (PLRA [Prison Litigation Reform Act] exhaustion).

The United States Supreme Court has ruled that an individual need not wait for the EEOC to take action before filing an ADEA [Age Discrimination in Employment Act] lawsuit." Frederick v. Sandusky Cent. Catholic School, 2014

WL 7335178, *2 (N.D. Ohio 2014) (motion denied; "EEOC guidelines do not require complete exhaustion; rather, plaintiffs need only wait sixty days after filing charges with the EEOC to initiate suit"), citing Federal Exp. Corp. v. Holowecki, 552 U.S. 389, 403-404, 128 S. Ct. 1147, 1158-1159, 170 L. Ed. 2d 10 (2008).

"As a general rule, a Title VII plaintiff cannot bring claims in a lawsuit that were not included in her EEOC charge. This rule is not jurisdictional but rather a condition precedent to bringing a case based on those claims." Richardson v. Metropolitan Family Services, 2014 WL 7205581, *4 (N.D. Ill. 2014).

Koch v. Walter, 935 F. Supp. 2d 164, 170-171 (D.D.C. 2013) ("[J]urisdictional exhaustion under the Rehabilitation Act is evaluated under Rule 12(b)(1) of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure. Prudential exhaustion under Title VII and the ADEA, by contrast, is evaluated either under Rule 12(b)(6) for failure to state a claim or, when a party asserts that there are genuine issues of material fact in dispute, and provides evidentiary materials in the record to support that assertion, under Rule 56.").

Jordan v. Forfeiture Support Associates, 928 F. Supp. 2d 588, 593 (E.D. N.Y. 2013) ("Defendant, however, mischaracterizes Title VII's statutory exhaustion requirement as a jurisdictional prerequisite and therefore erroneously invokes Rule 12(b)(1). * * * Accordingly, the court denies defendant's Rule 12(b)(1) motion to dismiss for lack of subject matter jurisdiction and instead construes defendant's administrative exhaustion defense under Rule 12(b)(6) * * *.").

Gallentine v. Housing Authority of City of Port Arthur, Tex., 919 F. Supp. 2d 787, 793 n.3 (E.D. Tex. 2013) ("Because a decision concerning the exhaustion issue would be the same under either standard [Rule 12(b)(1) or Rule 12(b)(6)], the court will proceed by examining all of Defendants' arguments under the standard established by Rule 12(b)(6).").

Sanchez-Arroyo v. Department of Educ. of Puerto Rico, 842 F. Supp. 2d 416, 429 (D.P.R. 2012).

Michael v. Newton-Embry, 2011 WL 4007335 (W.D. Okla. 2011), report and recommendation adopted, 2011 WL 4006591 (W.D. Okla. 2011) (dismissal based on this affirmative defense only proper if it appears on face of plaintiff's pleading).

Harris v. Smith, 2011 WL 2413490 (N.D. Ohio 2011).

King v. Doe, 2011 WL 2669221 (D. Del. 2011), subsequent determination, 2011 WL 4351797 (D. Del. 2011).

 © 2025 Thomson Reuters. No claim to original U.S. Government Works.

Hilson v. Maltese, 2011 WL 767696 (N.D. N.Y. 2011) (failure to exhaust must be apparent on face of complaint for Rule 12(b)(6) motion to be proper).

Gallina v. Potter, 2010 WL 5013844 (D.N.J. 2010).

See also

"[F]ailure to exhaust is an affirmative defense that a defendant must raise. And while affirmative defenses, including non-exhaustion, can be appropriately asserted on a 12(b)(6) motion, dismissal on such a basis is appropriate only if the defense is evident on the face of the complaint. Here, Luebano's purported failure to exhaust does not appear on the face of her complaint. Indeed, she affirmatively claims she has exhausted her administrative remedies. For its part, Office Depot did not attach any documentation supporting the application of exhaustion defenses when it moved for 12(b)(6) dismissal. Nor did it move in the alternative for summary judgment based on such evidence. So, the district court erred when it dismissed Luebano's ADA claim for lacking exhaustion pleading in her complaint." Luebano v. Office Depot, L.L.C., 2023 WL 4249268, *3 (5th Cir. 2023).

Ball v. Famiglio, 726 F.3d 448, 460 (3d Cir. 2013) ("[D]ismissal based on a prisoner's failure to exhaust administrative remedies does not constitute a [Prison Litigation Reform Act] strike, unless a court explicitly and correctly concludes that the complaint reveals the exhaustion defense on its face and the court then dismisses the unexhausted complaint for failure to state a claim.").

Cummings v. City of Newton, 164 F. Supp. 3d 227 (D. Mass. 2016) (court considered motion to dismiss based on plaintiff's alleged failure to exhaust contractual remedy of arbitration).

"Failure to exhaust is an affirmative defense that may be asserted in a Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 12(b)(6) motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim only if the prisoner's failure to exhaust is clear from the face of the complaint and any public records subject to judicial notice." Warren v. Corizon Health, 2014 WL 6886154, *2 (D. Idaho 2014).

Compare

Ball v. Famiglio, 726 F.3d 448, 456-460 (3d Cir. 2013) (discussion of circuit split on whether failure to exhaust administrative remedies counts as failure to state claim under Rule 12(b)(6); majority approach is to treat failure to exhaust as affirmative defense).

Although the plaintiff, an inmate in state prison, did not specifically allege his compliance with the proper appeals process, a failure to exhaust administrative remedies nonetheless did not appear on the face of his complaint. Therefore, the issue could not be decided on a motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim. Martinez v. Aycock-West, 164 F. Supp. 3d 502, 509 (S.D. N.Y. 2016).

But see

A failure to exhaust administrative remedies should be raised on a Rule 12(b)(1) motion to dismiss for lack of subject matter jurisdiction. Luke v. Residential Elevators, Inc., 2011 WL 311370 (N.D. Fla. 2011).

105 Improper joinder

Davidson v. Georgia-Pacific, L.L.C., 819 F.3d 758, 765 (5th Cir. 2016) ("If a plaintiff can survive a Rule 12(b)(6) challenge for a failure to state a claim, there is ordinarily no improper joinder.").

"Improper joinder issues are ordinarily resolved by conducting a Rule 12(b)(6)-type analysis[.]" Harried v. Forman Perry Watkins Krutz & Tardy, 813 F. Supp. 2d 835 (S.D. Miss. 2011).

106 Statute of frauds

Miller v. BAC Home Loans Servicing, L.P., 726 F.3d 717, 726 (5th Cir. 2013) (district court did not err in ruling on statute of frauds).

Dow v. Shoe Corp. of America, 276 F.2d 165 (7th Cir. 1960).

Continental Collieries v. Shober, 130 F.2d 631 (C.C.A. 3d Cir. 1942).

Conceal City, L.L.C. v. Looper Law Enforcement, LLC, 917 F. Supp. 2d 611, 620 (N.D. Tex. 2013) ("[B]ecause reliance on the statute of frauds is an affirmative defense, the court can only dismiss a claim at the Rule 12(b)(6) stage if the 'affirmative defense appears clearly on the face of the pleadings.'"), quoting Rolls-Royce Corp. v. Heros, Inc., 576 F. Supp. 2d 765, 774 (N.D. Tex. 2008) (additional internal quotation marks omitted).

Hoopla Sports and Entertainment, Inc. v. Nike, Inc., 947 F. Supp. 347 (N.D. Ill. 1996).

Laker v. Freid, 854 F. Supp. 923 (D. Mass. 1994).

Atlantic Paper Box Co. v. Whitman's Chocolates, 844 F. Supp. 1038 (E.D. Pa. 1994), citing Wright & Miller.

Simmons Oil Corp. v. Bulk Sales Corp., 498 F. Supp. 457 (D.N.J. 1980).

Oppenheimer Gateway Properties Inc. v. National R. R. Passenger Corp. (AMTRAK), 494 F. Supp. 124 (E.D. Mo. 1980), citing Wright & Miller.

Price v. Reynolds Metals Co., 69 F. Supp. 82 (E.D. N.Y. 1946).

Kahn v. Cecelia Co., 40 F. Supp. 878 (S.D. N.Y. 1941).

 © 2025 Thomson Reuters. No claim to original U.S. Government Works.

See also
Martin v. Mears, 602 P.2d 421, 428 n.14 (Alaska 1979), citing Wright & Miller.

107 Capacity
See the cases cited in § 1295 n.12.

Estate of Vaiselberg ex rel Vaiselberg v. Snow, 2003 WL 1878248 (S.D. N.Y. 2003) (voluntary administrator of estate lacked power to enforce claim for wrongful death).

Hutchison v. Brookshire Bros., Ltd., 205 F. Supp. 2d 629 (E.D. Tex. 2002).

108 Standing
Somers v. Apple, Inc., 729 F.3d 953, 962 (9th Cir. 2013) (purchaser of portable digital media player lacked standing to bring monopolization claim for damages based on diminution in device's value).

Painter's Mill Grille, LLC v. Brown, 716 F.3d 342, 347-349 (4th Cir. 2013) (principals of limited liability company who operated restaurant did not have standing to bring various claims against landlord).

Jackson v. National Ass'n for Advancement of Colored People, 546 Fed. Appx. 438, 442-444 (5th Cir. 2013) (employee lacked standing to bring RICO claim).

McLemore v. Regions Bank, 682 F.3d 414, 419 (6th Cir. 2012).

Ibrahim v. Department of Homeland Sec., 669 F.3d 983, 992 (9th Cir. 2012).

Time Warner Cable, Inc. v. Hudson, 667 F.3d 630, 634 (5th Cir. 2012).

Jewel v. National Sec. Agency, 673 F.3d 902, 907 (9th Cir. 2011).

CGM, LLC v. BellSouth Telecommunications, Inc., 664 F.3d 46, 52 (4th Cir. 2011) ("[T]he district court correctly focused on Civil Procedure Rule 12(b)(6) because the standing inquiry at the heart of this case is statutory standing-a concept distinct from Article III and prudential standing.").

"A dismissal for lack of statutory standing is effectively the same as a dismissal for failure to state a claim." Baldwin v. University of Pittsburgh Medical Center, 636 F.3d 69, 73 (3d Cir. 2011).

Compare
"Where, as here, a case is at the pleading stage, the plaintiff must clearly allege facts demonstrating each element [of Article III standing]." Spokeo, Inc. v. Robins, 578 U.S. 330, 136 S. Ct. 1540, 194 L. Ed. 2d 635 (2016), as revised, (May 24, 2016) (citation and internal quotation marks omitted) (standing challenge was raised via a motion to dismiss under Rule 12(b)(1)).

 © 2025 Thomson Reuters. No claim to original U.S. Government Works.

109 Ripeness

Bowlby v. City of Aberdeen, Miss., 681 F.3d 215, 224 (5th Cir. 2012).

Bub v. Marine Tech, LLC, 2010 WL 2033331 (W.D. Wis. 2010).

General Auto Service Station v. City of Chicago, 2004 WL 442636 (N.D. Ill. 2004) (claims were not ripe because plaintiff had suffered no monetary loss).

110 Wrong defendant

Sanders v. St. Joseph County, Indiana, 806 Fed. Appx. 481, 485 (7th Cir. 2020) (affirming district court's 12(b)(6) dismissal because "[the plaintiff] sued the wrong defendant").

Childs v. Management Registry, Inc., 2018 WL 2009549 (E.D. Mich. 2018).

Mott v. IBM, 2011 WL 3846523 (E.D. N.Y. 2011), report and recommendation adopted, 2011 WL 3847176 (E.D. N.Y. 2011).

111 Real party in interest

Tennyson v. ASCAP, 477 Fed. Appx. 608 (11th Cir. 2012) (per curiam).

Whelan v. Abell, 953 F.2d 663, 293 (D.C. Cir. 1992).

Federal Ins. Co. v. J.K. Mfg. Co., 933 F. Supp. 2d 1065, 1070 (N.D. Ill. 2013).

Odhiambo v. Republic of Kenya, 930 F. Supp. 2d 17, 34 (D.D.C. 2013), aff'd, 764 F.3d 31 (D.C. Cir. 2014).

A'Gard v. Perez, 919 F. Supp. 2d 394, 409 (S.D. N.Y. 2013) (Eleventh Amendment).

Siemens USA Holdings, Inc. v. U.S., 960 F. Supp. 2d 221 (D.D.C. 2013).

Caribbean Petroleum Corp. v. New Hampshire Ins. Co., 2004 WL 540468 (S.D. N.Y. 2004) (denying motion because defendant was real party in interest).

New York State Dept. of Social Services v. Bowen, 684 F. Supp. 775 (E.D. N.Y. 1988).

Weisberg v. Louis Barasch, Inc., 1985 WL 1888 (N.D. Ill. 1985) (unpublished case).

Sedco Intern., S. A. v. Cory, 522 F. Supp. 254 (S.D. Iowa 1981), judgment aff'd, 683 F.2d 1201 (8th Cir. 1982).

Coopers & Lybrand v. Cocklereece, 506 F. Supp. 587 (S.D. N.Y. 1981).

Gluck v. Amicor, Inc., 487 F. Supp. 608 (S.D. N.Y. 1980).

 © 2025 Thomson Reuters. No claim to original U.S. Government Works.

Willis v. Semmes, Bowen & Semmes, 441 F. Supp. 1235 (E.D. Va. 1977).

DeWitt v. Quarterback Sports Federation, Inc., 45 F.R.D. 252 (D. Minn. 1968).

112 Plaintiff not required to negate affirmative defense

Robinette v. ProMedica Pathology Laboratories, LLC, 2022 WL 4540192, *2 (6th Cir. 2022) ("[T]he plaintiff is not required to plead the absence of an affirmative defense to state a claim for relief.").

Sanders v. St. Joseph County, Indiana, 806 Fed. Appx. 481, 484 (7th Cir. 2020) ("A plaintiff is not required to plead around potential affirmative defenses.").

Owens-Benniefield v. BSI Financial Services, 806 Fed. Appx. 853, 856 (11th Cir. 2020) ("[A] plaintiff is not required to negate the affirmative defense in her complaint.").

Chen v. Major League Baseball Properties, Inc., 798 F.3d 72, 81 (2d Cir. 2015) ("[A]n affirmative defense * * * may be raised in a pre-answer Rule 12(b)(6) motion 'if the defense appears on the face of the complaint,' [but a] plaintiff is not required to plead the absence of such a defense.").

Independent Trust Corp. v. Stewart Information Services Corp., 665 F.3d 930, 935 (7th Cir. 2012) ("[A] plaintiff is not required to plead facts in the complaint to anticipate and defeat affirmative defenses. But when a plaintiff's complaint nonetheless sets out all of the elements of an affirmative defense, dismissal under Rule 12(b)(6) is appropriate.").

Jaso v. The Coca Cola Co., 435 Fed. Appx. 346, 351 (5th Cir. 2011) ("A plaintiff typically is not required to plead, in the complaint, facts that negate an affirmative defense.").

Bennett v. Louisiana Health Service & Indemnity Company, 450 F. Supp. 3d 686, 692 (M.D. La. 2020) ("Under Rule 12(b)(6), dismissal on the basis of an affirmative defense is only appropriate if 'an affirmative defense * * * appears on the face of the complaint.' A plaintiff is not required to plead the negation of an affirmative defense.").

113 Jones case

549 U.S. 199, 127 S. Ct. 910, 166 L. Ed. 2d 798 (2007).

114 Quotation

Jones, 549 U.S. at 217.

See also

"The Court notes that plaintiff's claims against defendants * * * were recommended for dismissal based on plaintiff's failure to exhaust administrative remedies against these defendants. After issuance of the Report and Recommendation, the Supreme Court ruled in Jones v. Bock that exhaustion of administrative remedies is an affirmative defense, not an element of the action that must be specially pleaded in the complaint." Sims v. Johnson, 2007 WL 2381262 (N.D. Tex. 2007) (internal citations omitted).

The court granted the plaintiff's motion for relief from judgment because of Jones v. Bock, in which the Supreme Court "overturned the law of exhaustion in the Sixth Circuit upon which this court previously relied when it dismissed claims against certain named Defendants." Fisher v. Caruso, 2007 WL 1827395, *1 (E.D. Mich. 2007).

115 Failure to exhaust as a basis for dismissal

Jones v. Bock, 549 U.S. 199, 216, 127 S. Ct. 910, 166 L. Ed. 2d 798 (2007) (explaining that its holding "is not to say that failure to exhaust cannot be a basis for dismissal for failure to state a claim.").

Williams v. Correction Officer Priatno, 829 F.3d 118, 122 (2d Cir. 2016).

Morris v. McCarthy, 825 F.3d 658, 667 (D.C. Cir. 2016).

Hopkins v. City of Bloomington, 774 F.3d 490, 492 (8th Cir. 2014).

"But, though it generally must be affirmatively pled and proved, '[i]f an affirmative defense * * * is apparent on the face of the complaint * * * that [defense] can provide the basis for dismissal under Rule 12(b)(6).'" ABF Freight System, Inc. v. International Broth. of Teamsters, 728 F.3d 853, 861 (8th Cir. 2013), quoting C.H. Robinson Worldwide, Inc. v. Lobrano, 695 F.3d 758, 764 (8th Cir. 2012).

Slingland v. Donahoe, 542 Fed. Appx. 189 (3d Cir. 2013) (affirming dismissal of Title VII and ADEA claims under Rule 12(b)(6) because plaintiff failed to exhaust administrative remedies), citing Robinson v. Dalton, 107 F.3d 1018, 1020 (3d Cir. 1997).

Mendoza v. Lehigh Southwest Cement Co., 540 Fed. Appx. 813 (9th Cir. 2013).

Christiansen v. West Branch Community School Dist., 674 F.3d 927, 935 (8th Cir. 2012).

Jech v. Department of Interior, 483 Fed. Appx. 555 (10th Cir. 2012).

Spicer v. Ford Motor Co., 491 Fed. Appx. 543 (6th Cir. 2012).

Hull v. I.R.S., U.S. Dept. of Treasury, 656 F.3d 1174, 1181 n.5 (10th Cir. 2011).

Brooks v. Midwest Heart Group, 655 F.3d 796 (8th Cir. 2011).

Leak v. CIGNA Healthcare, 423 Fed. Appx. 53 (2d Cir. 2011).

Feathers v. McFaul, 274 Fed. Appx. 467 (6th Cir. 2008).

Freeman v. Watkins, 479 F.3d 1257 (10th Cir. 2007).

Campbell v. Mullin, 251 Fed. Appx. 542 (10th Cir. 2007).

Basso v. Willow Run Foods, Inc., 577 F. Supp. 3d 73, 83-85 (N.D. N.Y. 2022) (dismissing plaintiff's hostile work environment claim under the ADA because plaintiff failed to first file a timely charge with the EEOC).

Gomez v. New York City Police Department, 191 F. Supp. 3d 293, 299-300 (S.D. N.Y. 2016).

Mecouch v. Pension Board of the Employees' Retirement System of the County of Milwaukee, 184 F. Supp. 3d 684, 690 (E.D. Wis. 2016) (dismissing plaintiff's due process claim because plaintiff failed to exhaust all available state remedies because state certiorari review was still available).

Emrit v. National Institutes of Health, 157 F. Supp. 3d 52, 54-55 (D.D.C. 2016).

Rosario v. Brennan, 197 F. Supp. 3d 406 (D. Conn. 2016).

"Failure to exhaust administrative remedies must be pled and proved by the defendant." Simpson v. CMS, 559 F. Supp. 2d 481, 483 (D. Del. 2008), citing Ray v. Kertes, 285 F.3d 287 (3d Cir. 2002).

"[T]he Supreme Court has recently held that the prior practice of some courts in requiring plaintiffs to plead exhaustion in their complaint, absent a specific statutory mandate to do so, is inconsistent with the liberal pleading requirements of Rule 8(a) * * *." Kimbrough v. U.S. Government, 2007 WL 2746672, *1 (N.D. Ga. 2007).

116 Defamation traditionally disfavored

Garrison v. Fastenal Company, 2017 WL 1001189, *2 (D. Kan. 2017) ("Because defamation constitutes a traditionally disfavored cause of action, defamation claims 'present a significant exception to general liberal pleading standards.'").

Carosella v. One World Translation & Associates, Inc., 2017 WL 11545379 (D. Colo. 2017) ("[D]efamation claims present a 'significant exception' to general liberal pleading standards because defamation constitutes a 'traditionally disfavored' cause of action."), report and recommendation adopted, 2017 WL 11545380 (D. Colo. 2017).

117 National Bowl-O-Mat case

264 F. Supp. 221 (D. N.J. 1967).

118 Disfavored actions

See §§ 1241, 1245 to 1246.

See also
Hatcher v. Moree, 133 Ga. App. 14, 209 S.E.2d 708, 711 (1974), quoting Wright & Miller.

Kersey v. Harbin, 531 S.W.2d 76, 79 (Mo. Ct. App. 1975), citing Wright & Miller.

Andrews v. Stallings, 119 N.M. 478, 1995-NMCA-015, 892 P.2d 611 (Ct. App. 1995), quoting Wright & Miller.

Weber v. Johnston Fuel Liners, Inc., 540 P.2d 535, 540 (Wyo. 1975), citing Wright & Miller (malicious prosecution).

But see
Schatz v. Republican State Leadership Committee, 669 F.3d 50, 58 (1st Cir. 2012) ("[M]alice is not a matter that requires particularity in pleading * * *.").

Educadores Puertorriquenos en Accion v. Hernandez, 367 F.3d 61 (1st Cir. 2004) (previous precedent requiring heightened pleading standard for civil rights actions overturned in light of Supreme Court's decision in Swierkiewicz).

119 No special pleading requirements in state causes of action
Pleading in federal court is governed by Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, not state pleading requirements. Under the Erie doctrine, however, it is long since settled that federal courts sitting in diversity apply state substantive law and federal procedural law. Moreover, the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure impose no special pleading requirements for defamation. A plaintiff asserting a state-law defamation claim in federal court need only satisfy Rule 8; a state's heightened pleading requirement does not apply. * * * [T]he basic philosophy of the Rule 8(a) requirement of a plain and concise statement of the claim for relief should not be sacrificed in order to follow state notions of pleading particularity or an antipathy toward certain claims for relief. Miller v. Sawant, 18 F.4th 328, 337 (9th Cir. 2021) (internal quotation marks and citations omitted), citing Wright & Miller.

120 Courts applying state's heightened pleading standards
Garrison v. Fastenal Company, 2017 WL 1001189, *2 (D. Kan. 2017) ("Because defamation constitutes a traditionally disfavored cause of action, defamation claims 'present a significant exception to general liberal pleading standards.'").

Carosella v. One World Translation & Associates, Inc., 2017 WL 11545379, *3 (D. Colo. 2017), report and recommendation adopted, 2017 WL 11545380 (D. Colo. 2017) ("[D]efamation claims present a 'significant exception' to general liberal pleading standards because defamation constitutes a 'traditionally disfavored' cause of action.").

121 Leatherman case
507 U.S. 163, 113 S. Ct. 1160, 122 L. Ed. 2d 517 (1993).

122 Swierkiewicz case
534 U.S. 506, 122 S. Ct. 992, 152 L. Ed. 2d 1 (2002).

123 Federal statute
Since the PSLRA requires that a plaintiff "state with particularity facts giving rise to a strong inference that the defendant acted with the required state of mind," the district court correctly dismissed a complaint failing to meet this heightened standard. PR Diamonds, Inc. v. Chandler, 364 F.3d 671 (6th Cir. 2004).

Darby v. Century Business Services, Inc., 96 Fed. Appx. 277 (6th Cir. 2004).

In re Iso Ray, Inc. Securities Litigation, 189 F. Supp. 3d 1057 (E.D. Wash. 2016) (court identified equally compelling inference that defendants recklessly omitted information necessary to understand findings of medical journal study and denied motion to dismiss).

Damian v. Montgomery County Bankshares, Inc., 981 F. Supp. 2d 1368 (N.D. Ga. 2013) (heightened pleading standards of Private Securities Litigation Reform Act of 1995).

In re 2007 Novastar Financial, Inc., Securities Litigation, 2008 WL 2354367 (W.D. Mo. 2008), aff'd, 579 F.3d 878 (8th Cir. 2009) (heightened pleading standard under PSLRA for securities fraud claims).

In re Citigroup, Inc. Securities Litigation, 330 F. Supp. 2d 367 (S.D. N.Y. 2004), aff'd, 165 Fed. Appx. 928 (2d Cir. 2006) (complaint dismissed because it failed to meet PSLRA's pleading requirements).

In re Syncor Intern. Corp. Securities Litigation, 327 F. Supp. 2d 1149 (C.D. Cal. 2004), aff'd in part, rev'd in part and remanded, 239 Fed. Appx. 318 (9th Cir. 2007), as amended on denial of reh'g, (Oct. 9, 2007) (claim dismissed because it failed to meet heightened pleading requirements of PSLRA).

In re Global Crossing, Ltd. Securities Litigation, 322 F. Supp. 2d 319 (S.D. N.Y. 2004) (PSLRA requires heightened pleading of fraudulent intent).

In re Cable & Wireless, PLC, 321 F. Supp. 2d 749 (E.D. Va. 2004) (motion to dismiss granted because complaint did not meet heightened requirements of PSLRA).

In re QLT Inc. Securities Litigation, 312 F. Supp. 2d 526 (S.D. N.Y. 2004).

In re Copper Mountain Securities Litigation, 311 F. Supp. 2d 857 (N.D. Cal. 2004) (PSLRA requires more particular pleading of scienter).

Merzin v. Provident Financial Group, Inc., 311 F. Supp. 2d 674 (S.D. Ohio 2004) (motion to dismiss granted because PSLRA created "exacting requirements" for pleading securities fraud).

Osher v. JNI Corp., 308 F. Supp. 2d 1168 (S.D. Cal. 2004), aff'd in part, vacated in part, remanded, 183 Fed. Appx. 604 (9th Cir. 2006) (PSLRA requires heightened pleading of scienter).

Bosch v. Tessa Complete Health Care, Inc., 2004 WL 1278225 (S.D. Tex. 2004) (motion to dismiss granted because plaintiff failed to plead scienter with particularity required by PSLRA).

Frank v. Spielo Mfg. Inc., 2004 WL 1196813 (D. Minn. 2004) (court applied heightened pleading requirements of PSLRA to non-class action securities case).

In re Metricom Securities Litigation, 2004 WL 966291 (N.D. Cal. 2004), aff'd, 182 Fed. Appx. 714 (9th Cir. 2006) (PSLRA requires heightened pleading of scienter to survive motion to dismiss).

In re Blockbuster Inc. Securities Litigation, 2004 WL 884308 (N.D. Tex. 2004) (plaintiff failed to meet heightened pleading requirement for scienter under PSLRA).

Ato Ram, II, Ltd. v. SMC Multimedia Corp., 2004 WL 744792 (S.D. N.Y. 2004) (motion to dismiss granted because plaintiff failed to meet heightened pleading standard for scienter required under PSLRA).

In re Retek Inc. Securities, 2004 WL 741571 (D. Minn. 2004) (PSLRA has heightened pleading standard).

Piser v. Lunn Partners, LLC, 2004 WL 549444 (N.D. Ill. 2004) (plaintiff failed to plead sufficient facts required by PSLRA).

In re Federated Dept. Stores, Inc., Securities Litigation, 2004 WL 444559 (S.D. N.Y. 2004) (fraud claims under PSLRA require heightened pleading of scienter).

But compare

Although the PSLRA requires a strong inference of scienter, the inference need not be irrefutable as long as the complaint provides specific facts that allow a reasonable belief of scienter. In re Sepracor, Inc. Securities Litigation, 308 F. Supp. 2d 20 (D. Mass. 2004).

124 Leatherman and Swierkiewicz philosophy

Hager v. Arkansas Dept. of Health, 735 F.3d 1009 (8th Cir. 2013) (plaintiff relied on Swierkiewicz; however, her complaint had fewer factual allegations than complaint in that case; it made only two conclusory allegations of gender discrimination).

Swanson v. Citibank, N.A., 614 F.3d 400, 404 (7th Cir. 2010) ("The Supreme Court's explicit decision to reaffirm the validity of Swierkiewicz v. Sorema N.A., which was cited with approval in Twombly, indicates that in many straightforward cases, it will not be any more difficult today for a plaintiff to meet that burden than it was before the Court's recent decisions.") (internal citations omitted).

Swann v. Southern Health Partners, Inc., 388 F.3d 834 (11th Cir. 2004) (court overturned precedent requiring heightened pleading for § 1983 suits in light of Leatherman).

Under the Swierkiewicz standard, a plaintiff in a discrimination case does not have to make out a prima facie case of discrimination, nor allege specific evidence, to survive a motion to dismiss. A plaintiff only must comply with the pleading requirements of Rule 8(a)(2). Maduka v. Sunrise Hosp., 375 F.3d 909 (9th Cir. 2004).

The First Circuit overturned its previous precedent requiring a heightened pleading standard for civil rights actions in light of the Supreme Court's decisions in Leatherman and Swierkiewicz. The district court had dismissed the case based on a line of First Circuit precedent. The court of appeals reversed, concluding that Swierkiewicz "sounded the death knell for the imposition of a heightened pleading standard" except as authorized by statute or federal rule. Instead, the court concluded that the only pleading requirement that applied to civil rights actions was that found in Rule 8(a). Educadores Puertorriquenos en Accion v. Hernandez, 367 F.3d 61 (1st Cir. 2004).

One court of appeals remanded to the district court because the district court had required heightened pleading from the plaintiff in response to the defendant's assertion of qualified immunity. The court of appeals said that its intervening precedent interpreting recent Supreme Court cases invalidated this heightened pleading requirement. Hughlett v. Romer-Sensky, 98 Fed. Appx. 360 (6th Cir. 2004).

A plaintiff does not have to make out a prima facie case under the ADA to survive a motion to dismiss. Under Swierkiewicz, the mandate of a prima facie case is an evidentiary standard, not a pleading requirement. To survive a motion to dismiss, a plaintiff only has to satisfy the simple standards of Rule 8. Jackson v. Iasis Healthcare Corp., 92 Fed. Appx. 763 (10th Cir. 2004).

"The Seventh Circuit has explained that [Rule 8(a)(2)] 'reflects a liberal notice pleading regime, which is intended to "focus litigation on the merits of a claim" rather than on technicalities that might keep plaintiffs out of court.'" Volodarskiy

v. Delta Air Lines, Inc., 987 F. Supp. 2d 784 (N.D. Ill. 2013), aff'd, 784 F.3d 349 (7th Cir. 2015), quoting Brooks v. Ross, 578 F.3d 574, 580 (7th Cir. 2009), quoting Swierkiewicz v. Sorema N. A., 534 U.S. 506, 514, 122 S. Ct. 992, 152 L. Ed. 2d 1 (2002).

Coffin v. Safeway, Inc., 323 F. Supp. 2d 997 (D. Ariz. 2004) (court cited to Leatherman and Swierkiewicz to conclude that plaintiff only needed to satisfy requirements of Rule 8 and did not have to make out prima facie case to survive motion to dismiss).

A motion to dismiss is only appropriate when the pleadings fail to put the defendant on notice of the claims. Summary judgment is the appropriate procedure when the facts necessary to support the claim are lacking. In re Xcel Energy, Inc., Securities, Derivative & "ERISA" Litigation, 312 F. Supp. 2d 1165 (D. Minn. 2004).

Ashlee R. ex rel. Russell v. Oakland Unified School Dist. Financing Corp., 2004 WL 1878214 (N.D. Cal. 2004) (court cited Leatherman to support assertion that plaintiff did not need to set out all factual details of civil rights claim to survive motion to dismiss).

Bramlett v. Buell, 2004 WL 1243684 (E.D. La. 2004) (court rejected heightened pleading requirement in light of Leatherman).

Northstar Partners v. S & S Consultants, Inc., 2004 WL 963706 (S.D. Ind. 2004).

Atlas v. City of North Chicago, 2004 WL 816456 (N.D. Ill. 2004).

Bowles v. New York City Transit Authority, 93 Fair Empl. Prac. Cas. (BNA) 892, 2004 WL 548021 (S.D. N.Y. 2004) (under Swierkiewicz, plaintiff does not have to plead facts establishing prima facie case to survive motion to dismiss).

Some courts have interpreted Swierkiewicz to require that the complaint merely provide fair notice of what claims the plaintiff alleges. Moncivaiz v. DeKalb County, 2004 WL 539994 (N.D. Ill. 2004).

See also

Fletcher v. U.S. Department of Justice, 17 F. Supp. 3d 89 (D.D.C. 2014) (not necessary to plead all elements of prima facie case due to Swierkiewicz, but Twombly plausibility standard applies).

"[T]he Second Circuit has noted '[t]he pleading standard for employment discrimination complaints is somewhat of an open question in our circuit.' * * * Although 'an employment discrimination plaintiff need not plead a prima facie case of discrimination,' she must satisfy the standards set out in Twombly in Iqbal." Wang v. Phoenix Satellite Television US, Inc., 976 F. Supp. 2d 527 (S.D. N.Y. 2013) (internal citations omitted), quoting Hedges v. Town of Madison, 456

Fed. Appx. 22, 23 (2d Cir. 2012) (summary order); Swierkiewicz v. Sorema N. A., 534 U.S. 506, 515, 122 S. Ct. 992, 999, 152 L. Ed. 2d 1 (2002).

"For civil rights actions, a court 'must be especially solicitous of the wrongs alleged.'" Pettiford v. City of Greensboro, 556 F. Supp. 2d 512, 530 (M.D. N.C. 2008) (Schroeder, J.), quoting Edwards v. City of Goldsboro, 178 F.3d 231, 244 (4th Cir. 1999).

Compare
One district court ordered a plaintiff to provide more than the short and plain statement mandated by Rule 8 and Swierkiewicz and dismissed the claim pursuant to Rule 41(b) for failure to comply with this order. However, the Second Circuit overturned this decision, ruling that a complaint only needs to put the defendant on notice of the claims. The court ruled that the judge could not supplement Rule 8's requirements by demanding legal theories, specific authority in the form of statutes and case law, detailed evidence, or separated claims as to each defendant. Wynder v. McMahon, 360 F.3d 73 (2d Cir. 2004).

But compare
One district court has interpreted Swierkiewicz to require a plaintiff to plead "minimal facts" establishing the claim rather than merely pleading a statement that provides "fair notice" that a claim exists. Timothy v. Our Lady of Mercy Medical Center, 2004 WL 503760 (S.D. N.Y. 2004).

See generally
Tesoriero, Pre-Twombly Precedent: Have Leatherman and Swierkiewicz Earned Retirement Too?, 65 Duke L.J. 1521, 1530 (2016).

Miller, From Conley to Twombly to Iqbal: A Double Play on the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, 60 Duke L.J. 1 (2010).

125 Gove case
860 Fed. Appx. 446 (7th Cir. 2021).

126 Tellabs case
551 U.S. 308, 127 S. Ct. 2499, 168 L. Ed. 2d 179 (2007), citing Wright & Miller.

127 Quotation
551 U.S. at 323, 127 S. Ct. at 2509.

128 Quotation
551 U.S. at 324, 127 S. Ct. at 2510.

129 Leave to amend
Supreme Court
The Supreme Court reversed the Sixth Circuit's "total exhaustion" rule, which required that prisoner complaints subject to the Prison Litigation Reform Act be entirely dismissed "if any one claim is not properly exhausted" as required by the PLRA. The Court stated, "[W]e have never heard of an entire complaint being thrown out simply because one of several discrete claims was barred by the statute of limitations, and it is hard to imagine what purpose such a rule would serve." Jones v. Bock, 549 U.S. 199, 127 S. Ct. 910, 923, 166 L. Ed. 2d 798 (2007).

First Circuit

Morgan v. Town of Lexington, MA, 823 F.3d 737, 742 (1st Cir. 2016) (court applied standard of plausibility to its assessment of plaintiff's futility to amend complaint).

Lebron-Rios v. U.S. Marshal Service, 341 F.3d 7 (1st Cir. 2003) (plaintiff should be allowed to refile after exhausting administrative remedies).

Ballou v. General Elec. Co., 393 F.2d 398 (1st Cir. 1968).

Boston & M. R. R. v. Bethlehem Steel Co., 311 F.2d 847 (1st Cir. 1963).

Williams v. Astra USA, Inc., 68 F. Supp. 2d 29 (D. Mass. 1999) (if plaintiff has at least colorable grounds for relief, justice requires leave to amend).

Nordica USA, Inc. v. Deloitte & Touche, 839 F. Supp. 1082 (D. Vt. 1993).

Mladen v. Gunty, 655 F. Supp. 455 (D. Me. 1987), citing Wright & Miller.

Sonus Corp. v. Matsushita Elec. Industrial Co., Ltd., 61 F.R.D. 644 (D. Mass. 1974).

Druker v. Sullivan, 334 F. Supp. 861 (D. Mass. 1971), judgment aff'd, 458 F.2d 1272 (1st Cir. 1972).

Bowles v. Schultz, 54 F. Supp. 708 (D.N.H. 1944).

Second Circuit

Morales v. Weiss, 569 Fed. Appx. 36, 37 (2d Cir. 2014) (pro se).

Baptista v. Hartford Bd. of Educ., 427 Fed. Appx. 39 (2d Cir. 2011) (leave to amend should be granted to pro se plaintiff unless amendment would be futile).

Porat v. Lincoln Towers Community Ass'n, 464 F.3d 274 (2d Cir. 2006) ("Without doubt, this circuit strongly favors liberal grant of an opportunity to replead after dismissal of a complaint under Rule 12(b)(6).").

Tarshis v. Riese Organization, 211 F.3d 30 (2d Cir. 2000) (abrogated by, Swierkiewicz v. Sorema N. A., 534 U.S. 506, 122 S. Ct. 992, 152 L. Ed. 2d 1 (2002)) (plaintiff is entitled to opportunity to show proof to support his claims unless it can be said that plaintiff is entitled to no relief under any view of facts that could be produced in support of cause of action).

Cruz v. Gomez, 202 F.3d 593 (2d Cir. 2000) (court should allow plaintiff to amend complaint unless it can rule out any possibility that amended complaint would succeed in stating claim).

Austin v. Ford Models, Inc., 149 F.3d 148 (2d Cir. 1998) (abrogated by, Swierkiewicz v. Sorema N. A., 534 U.S. 506, 122 S. Ct. 992, 152 L. Ed. 2d 1 (2002)) (pro se plaintiff that brings civil rights claim should be freely afforded opportunity to amend her complaint).

Cortec Industries, Inc. v. Sum Holding L.P., 949 F.2d 42 (2d Cir. 1991).

Ricciuti v. N.Y.C. Transit Authority, 941 F.2d 119 (2d Cir. 1991).

Branum v. Clark, 927 F.2d 698 (2d Cir. 1991).

Ronzani v. Sanofi S.A., 899 F.2d 195 (2d Cir. 1990).

Brault v. Town of Milton, 527 F.2d 730, 744 (2d Cir. 1975) (disavowed by, Mahone v. Waddle, 564 F.2d 1018 (3d Cir. 1977)), quoting Wright & Miller.

A court can deny leave to amend if it decides the amended complaint would fail on a future Rule 12(b)(6) motion. Bentley v. Greensky Trade Credit, LLC, 156 F. Supp. 3d 274, 283 (D. Conn. 2015).

Avins v. Mangum, 450 F.2d 932 (2d Cir. 1971).

Moran v. Pallito, 2010 WL 5648722 (D. Vt. 2010), report and recommendation adopted, 2011 WL 282398 (D. Vt. 2011).

Fowlkes v. Parker, 2010 WL 5490739, *5 (N.D. N.Y. 2010), report and recommendation adopted, 2011 WL 13726 (N.D. N.Y. 2011) ("In the event of a perceived deficiency in a pro se plaintiff's complaint, a court should not dismiss without granting leave to amend at least once if there is any indication that a valid claim might be stated.").

Chylinski v. Martin Rosol's Inc., 2010 WL 2794198, *2 (D. Conn. 2010), report and recommendation adopted, 2010 WL 2794101 (D. Conn. 2010) ("If a liberal reading of the complaint gives any indication that a valid claim might be stated, the court must grant the [pro se] plaintiff leave to amend the complaint rather than dismissing it.").

Bacon v. Suffolk Legislature, 2007 WL 2288044 (E.D. N.Y. 2007) (leave to amend granted to pro se plaintiff asserting civil rights claims).

Bonano v. Southside United Housing Development Corp., 363 F. Supp. 2d 559 (E.D. N.Y. 2005) (leave to amend will be denied as futile only if proposed new claim cannot withstand motion to dismiss for failure to state claim).

Morris v. Fordham University, 93 Fair Empl. Prac. Cas. (BNA) 1364, 2004 WL 906248 (S.D. N.Y. 2004).

Calcutti v. SBU, Inc., 224 F. Supp. 2d 691 (S.D. N.Y. 2002).

Torrico v. International Business Machines Corp., 213 F. Supp. 2d 390 (S.D. N.Y. 2002).

Rivera v. New York City Health & Hospitals Corp., 191 F. Supp. 2d 412 (S.D. N.Y. 2002).

T.S. Haulers, Inc. v. Town of Riverhead, 190 F. Supp. 2d 455 (E.D. N.Y. 2002).

Ross v. Mitsui Fudosan, Inc., 2 F. Supp. 2d 522 (S.D. N.Y. 1998).

Davis v. Goode, 995 F. Supp. 82 (E.D. N.Y. 1998).

Continental Orthopedic Appliances, Inc. v. Health Ins. Plan of Greater New York, 994 F. Supp. 133 (E.D. N.Y. 1998).

Barcher v. New York University School of Law, 993 F. Supp. 177 (S.D. N.Y. 1998), aff'd, 172 F.3d 37 (2d Cir. 1999).

Harrison v. NBD Inc., 990 F. Supp. 179 (E.D. N.Y. 1998).

Wilson v. Westmoreland Farm, Inc., 989 F. Supp. 451 (E.D. N.Y. 1998).

Bovi v. United Parcel Service, Inc., 992 F. Supp. 540 (E.D. N.Y. 1997).

Gadbois v. Rock-Tenn Co., Mill Div., Inc., 984 F. Supp. 811 (D. Vt. 1997).

Greene v. WCI Holdings Corp., 956 F. Supp. 509 (S.D. N.Y. 1997), aff'd, 136 F.3d 313 (2d Cir. 1998).

Aramony v. United Way of America, 949 F. Supp. 1080 (S.D. N.Y. 1996).

Spurlock v. NYNEX, 949 F. Supp. 1022 (W.D. N.Y. 1996).

Wallace v. Conroy, 945 F. Supp. 628 (S.D. N.Y. 1996).

Alie v. NYNEX Corp., 158 F.R.D. 239 (E.D. N.Y. 1994).

Shannon v. General Elec. Co., 812 F. Supp. 308 (N.D. N.Y. 1993), citing Wright & Miller.

Bilick v. Eagle Elec. Mfg. Co., Inc., 807 F. Supp. 243 (E.D. N.Y. 1992).

Posner v. Minnesota Min. & Mfg. Co., Inc., 697 F. Supp. 122 (E.D. N.Y. 1988).

Hemming v. Alfin Fragrances, Inc., 690 F. Supp. 239 (S.D. N.Y. 1988).

Lawrence v. McGuire, 651 F. Supp. 312 (S.D. N.Y. 1987).

Glusband v. Fittin Cunningham Lauzon, Inc., 582 F. Supp. 145 (S.D. N.Y. 1984).

The preferred remedy for a complaint alleging an antitrust violation that fails to indicate some nexus between the alleged antitrust violation and some demonstrable injury suffered by the plaintiff is to grant leave to amend the complaint, or alternatively, to order more definite statements. Car-Freshner Corp. v. Auto Aid Mfg. Corp., 438 F. Supp. 82 (N.D. N.Y. 1977).

Rego Trading Corp. v. Birns, 361 F. Supp. 1341 (S.D. N.Y. 1973).

O'Connor v. GCA Corp., 332 F. Supp. 1246 (S.D. N.Y. 1971).

U.S. for Use and Benefit of Pittsburgh-Des Moines Steel Co. v. Dauphin Steel & Engineering Co., 53 F.R.D. 382 (S.D. N.Y. 1971).

Karlinsky v. New York Racing Ass'n, Inc., 310 F. Supp. 937 (S.D. N.Y. 1970).

Sam S. Goldstein Industries, Inc. v. Botany Industries, Inc., 301 F. Supp. 728 (S.D. N.Y. 1969).

When a count of the plaintiffs' complaint was so sketchy that it was hard to tell just what the plaintiffs really claimed, the court dismissed the count for failure to state a claim with leave to serve an amended complaint in intelligible form. Dack v. Shanman, 227 F. Supp. 26 (S.D. N.Y. 1964).

To the extent that a claim based on fraud did not comply with Rule 9(b), a motion to dismiss was granted and the plaintiff was given leave to replead. Dudley v. Zappa, 24 F.R.D. 427 (S.D. N.Y. 1959).

Bascom Launder Corp. v. Farny, 10 F.R.D. 421 (S.D. N.Y. 1950).

Third Circuit

Comments made from the bench suggesting a complaint might need to plead more facts are not sufficient to provide notice that a suit is in danger of being dismissed with prejudice and that the plaintiff must move to amend its complaint immediately after argument, instead of after a decision is ultimately rendered. United States ex rel. Customs Fraud Investigations, LLC. v. Victaulic Company, 839 F.3d 242 (3d Cir. 2016).

Once the district court's time frame for leave to amend has elapsed, the plaintiff's filing of a subsequent action will be dismissed on res judicata grounds because the second lawsuit will not be construed as an intention to not stand on the first complaint. Hoffman v. Nordic Naturals, Inc., 837 F.3d 272, 279 (3d Cir. 2016).

U.S. ex rel. Wilkins v. United Health Group, Inc., 659 F.3d 295, 314-315 (3d Cir. 2011) (when plaintiffs seek to amend, they must do so only in good faith and they must believe they can prove any new facts alleged).

Thomas v. Advance Housing, Inc., 440 Fed. Appx. 86 (3d Cir. 2011).

Island Green, LLC v. Querrard, 429 Fed. Appx. 90 (3d Cir. 2011).

Wilson v. City of Philadelphia, 415 Fed. Appx. 434, 437 (3d Cir. 2011) (leave to amend should be granted unless amendment would be inequitable or futile).

Great Western Mining & Mineral Co. v. Fox Rothschild LLP, 615 F.3d 159, 174 (3d Cir. 2010).

Snyder v. Baxter Healthcare, Inc., 393 Fed. Appx. 905 (3d Cir. 2010) ("[W]e have held that 'it is hardly error for a district court to enter final judgment after granting a Rule 12(b)(6) motion to dismiss when the plaintiff has not properly requested leave to amend its complaint.'"), quoting Fletcher-Harlee Corp. v. Pote Concrete Contractors, Inc., 482 F.3d 247, 253 (3d Cir. 2007).

Alston v. Parker, 363 F.3d 229 (3d Cir. 2004) (dismissal without leave to amend is only allowed on grounds of bad faith, undue delay, prejudice, or futility).

Jame Fine Chemicals Co., Inc. v. Hi-Tech Pharmacal Co., Inc., 44 Fed. Appx. 602 (3d Cir. 2002) (unpublished).

In re Burlington Coat Factory Securities Litigation, 114 F.3d 1410 (3d Cir. 1997).

Rosetti v. Shalala, 12 F.3d 1216 (3d Cir. 1993).

MacLaughlin v. Union Switch & Signal Co., 166 F.2d 46 (C.C.A. 3d Cir. 1948).

"[T]he amended complaint does not contain factual allegations to support the conclusion that the named Defendants acted in concert with CAA Sports and France in order to interfere with Plaintiffs' representation of Golladay. Finding it possible that such facts could be alleged, however, the Court will grant Defendants' motions to dismiss under Rule 12(b)(6) and dismiss the amended complaint without prejudice to Plaintiff's right to file a second amended complaint that clarifies whether Plaintiffs are asserting tortious interference claims as to existing or prospective contracts and that includes additional factual allegations as to the alleged concerted actions by Defendants." Clarity Sports International LLC v. Redland Sports, 400 F. Supp. 3d 161 (M.D. Pa. 2019).

David v. Neumann University, 187 F. Supp. 3d 554, 562 (E.D. Pa. 2016) (courts are required to offer amendment in civil rights cases when dismissing case for failure to state claim, irrespective of whether plaintiff requested it).

Priore v. Caravan Ingredients Inc., 2015 WL 570218, *6 (D.N.J. 2015) (court did not allow plaintiff to amend complaint because court already had permitted plaintiff to amend and current complaint largely mirrored original complaint).

Davis v. Holder, 994 F. Supp. 2d 719 (W.D. Pa. 2014).

Thomas v. Rijos, 780 F. Supp. 2d 376, 379 (D.V.I. 2011).

Wilson v. Board of Control of City of Harrisburg School Dist., 2010 WL 4977056 (M.D. Pa. 2010).

Wynn-Mason v. Levas Communications, LLC, 2010 WL 2816651 (E.D. Pa. 2010).

Baker v. James T. Vaughn Correctional Center, 2010 WL 2788200 (D. Del. 2010).

Dupree v. Doe, 2010 WL 2719977 (D. Del. 2010), on reconsideration, 773 F. Supp. 2d 477 (D. Del. 2011).

Walsh v. Krantz, 2008 WL 2329130 (M.D. Pa. 2008), aff'd, 386 Fed. Appx. 334 (3d Cir. 2010).

Price v. Schwan's Home Services, Inc., 2006 WL 897721 (W.D. Pa. 2006).

Zieper v. Reno, 111 F. Supp. 2d 484 (D.N.J. 2000).

Krantz v. Prudential Investments Fund Management LLC, 77 F. Supp. 2d 559 (D.N.J. 1999), aff'd, 305 F.3d 140 (3d Cir. 2002).

In its assessment of whether an amendment would be futile, a court applies the same standard of legal sufficiency as under Rule 12(b)(6). Florian Greenhouse, Inc. v. Cardinal IG Corp., 11 F. Supp. 2d 521 (D.N.J. 1998).

Keeley v. Loomis Fargo & Co., 11 F. Supp. 2d 517 (D.N.J. 1998).

Jean Anderson Hierarchy of Agents v. Allstate Life Ins. Co., 2 F. Supp. 2d 688 (E.D. Pa. 1998).

Pagano v. Bell Atlantic-New Jersey, Inc., 988 F. Supp. 841 (D.N.J. 1997).

Andrea L. by Judith B. v. Children and Youth Services of Lawrence County, 987 F. Supp. 418 (W.D. Pa. 1997).

Joe Hand Promotions, Inc. v. Rennard Street Enterprises, Inc., 954 F. Supp. 1046 (E.D. Pa. 1997).

Michaels v. State of N.J., 955 F. Supp. 315 (D.N.J. 1996).

Fair Housing Council of Suburban Philadelphia v. Boyertown Area Times, 945 F. Supp. 826 (E.D. Pa. 1996).

Loftus v. Southeastern Pennsylvania Transp. Authority, 843 F. Supp. 981 (E.D. Pa. 1994).

Kroungold v. Triester, 407 F. Supp. 414 (E.D. Pa. 1975).

Brown v. Farview State Hospital, 386 F. Supp. 607 (E.D. Pa. 1974).

Elliott & Frantz, Inc. v. Raygo Inc., 379 F. Supp. 498 (E.D. Pa. 1974).

Speed v. Transamerica Corp., 5 F.R.D. 56 (D. Del. 1945).

Fourth Circuit

Simmons v. United Mortg. and Loan Inv., LLC, 634 F.3d 754, 769 (4th Cir. 2011) (it was abuse of discretion for district court to deny plaintiffs leave to file second amended complaint without providing rationale).

Adams v. Montgomery College, 2010 WL 2813346 (D. Md. 2010).

Fanney v. Trigon Ins. Co., 11 F. Supp. 2d 829 (E.D. Va. 1998).

Valero Terrestrial v. McCoy, 36 F. Supp. 2d 724 (N.D. W. Va. 1997), vacated in part on denial of reconsideration, 50 F. Supp. 2d 564 (N.D. W. Va. 1999), aff'd in part, vacated in part, 211 F.3d 112 (4th Cir. 2000) and vacated in part on other grounds, 211 F.3d 112 (4th Cir. 2000).

Shaw v. Barr, 808 F. Supp. 461 (E.D. N.C. 1992), judgment rev'd, 509 U.S. 630, 113 S. Ct. 2816, 125 L. Ed. 2d 511 (1993), citing Wright & Miller.

Miller v. Holiday Inns, Inc., 436 F. Supp. 460 (E.D. Va. 1977).

L. S. Good & Co. v. H. Daroff & Sons, Inc., 263 F. Supp. 635 (N.D. W. Va. 1967).

Fifth Circuit

Hale v. King, 642 F.3d 492, 503 (5th Cir. 2011) (pro se plaintiff should be granted leave to amend unless it is obvious that he already has pled his best case).

Gregory v. McKennon, 430 Fed. Appx. 306 (5th Cir. 2011) (error to dismiss pro se complaint without granting leave to amend if allegations could be developed into nonfrivolous claim; error may be ameliorated if plaintiff already has stated his best case).

Zidell v. Kanan, 428 Fed. Appx. 426 (5th Cir. 2011) (error to dismiss pro se complaint without granting leave to amend if allegations could be developed into nonfrivolous claim).

It will not be error for the district court to dismiss a pro se complaint without allowing leave to amend only when the plaintiff has asserted her best case or the dismissal was with prejudice. Amanduron v. American Airlines, 416 Fed. Appx. 421, 423 (5th Cir. 2011).

Hart v. Bayer Corp., 199 F.3d 239 (5th Cir. 2000).

Pena v. U.S., 157 F.3d 984 (5th Cir. 1998) (dismissals of pro se complaints for failure to state claim are disfavored and court should grant pro se party every reasonable opportunity to amend).

Bazrowx v. Scott, 136 F.3d 1053 (5th Cir. 1998).

Fernandez-Montes v. Allied Pilots Ass'n, 987 F.2d 278 (5th Cir. 1993).

The court should allow pleaders the opportunity to advance their best case. Thus, a pro se plaintiff should have been allowed to amend his pleading to meet the heightened requirements to overcome a qualified immunity defense after he obtained counsel. Jackson v. City of Beaumont Police Dept., 958 F.2d 616 (5th Cir. 1992).

Griggs v. Hinds Junior College, 563 F.2d 179 (5th Cir. 1977).

Hines v. Wainwright, 539 F.2d 433 (5th Cir. 1976).

If the information set forth in the complaint does not adequately apprise the defendant of the nature of the plaintiff's claim, the trial court should allow the plaintiff to amend the pleadings to delineate more plainly the cause of action rather than dismiss the complaint. Sarter v. Mays, 491 F.2d 675 (5th Cir. 1974).

Dowdy v. Procter & Gamble Mfg. Co., 267 F.2d 827 (5th Cir. 1959).

Even if the complaint fails to state a claim, a court ordinarily should not dismiss the complaint unless it affords every opportunity to the plaintiff to state a claim. Byrd v. Bates, 220 F.2d 480 (5th Cir. 1955).

John Walker & Sons v. Tampa Cigar Co., 197 F.2d 72 (5th Cir. 1952).

Watkins v. Gautreaux, 515 F. Supp. 3d 500, 518-519 (M.D. La. 2021) ("[T]he Court agrees that Plaintiff should be given leave to amend under the circumstances. * * * '[D]ismissal under Rule 12(b)(6) generally is not immediately final or on the merits because the district court normally will give the plaintiff leave to file an amended complaint to see if the shortcomings of the original document can be corrected.' * * * Failure to cure the deficiencies will likely result in the dismissal of Plaintiff's case from this Court."), quoting Wright & Miller.

O'Neal v. Cargill, Inc., 178 F. Supp. 3d 408 (E.D. La. 2016) (amendment was denied because court decided any attempt to re-assert claims would be futile).

Tow v. Amegy Bank N.A., 498 B.R. 757, 765 (S.D. Tex. 2013) ("When a complaint fails to state a claim, the court should generally give the plaintiff at least one chance to amend before dismissing the action with prejudice unless it is clear that the defects in the complaint are incurable.").

Dorest v. Piney Point Surgical Center, 2011 WL 2633575 (S.D. Tex. 2011).

Whitney Nat. Bank v. Delfre, 2008 WL 2323237 (S.D. Tex. 2008).

In re Blockbuster Inc. Securities Litigation, 2004 WL 884308 (N.D. Tex. 2004).

Nabors Drilling U.S.A. L.P. v. Twister Exploration, L.L.C., 2002 WL 287728 (E.D. La. 2002).

Guilbeaux v. 3927 Foundation, Inc., 177 F.R.D. 387 (E.D. Tex. 1998).

Mills v. Injury Benefits Plan of Schepps-Foremost, Inc., 851 F. Supp. 804 (N.D. Tex. 1993) (court ordinarily should grant leave to replead rather than dismiss if it appears that more carefully drafted complaint would be sufficient).

Webber v. White, 422 F. Supp. 416 (N.D. Tex. 1976), citing Wright & Miller.

Although it appeared to the court that the plaintiff could not cure a complaint for negligence that showed on its face that the plaintiff's negligence was the cause of her injury, the court still preferred to grant the plaintiff leave to amend her complaint. Smith v. Vincent, 109 F. Supp. 451 (S.D. Fla. 1952), judgment aff'd, 204 F.2d 945 (5th Cir. 1953).

Sixth Circuit

Baxter v. Rose, 305 F.3d 486 (6th Cir. 2002) (abrogated by, Jones v. Bock, 549 U.S. 199, 127 S. Ct. 910, 166 L. Ed. 2d 798 (2007)).

Oil, Chemical and Atomic Workers Intern. Union, AFL-CIO v. Delta Refining Co., 277 F.2d 694 (6th Cir. 1960).

A court can deny leave to amend if the court decides the amended complaint would fail on a future Rule 12(b)(6) motion. CSX Transportation, Inc. v. Benore, 154 F. Supp. 3d 541, 547-548 (E.D. Mich. 2015).

Bordas v. Washtenaw County, 987 F. Supp. 979 (E.D. Mich. 1997).

Mario's Enterprises, Inc. v. Morton-Norwich Products, Inc., 487 F. Supp. 1308 (W.D. Ky. 1980).

O'Donel v. Great Lakes S. S. Co., 7 F.R.D. 501 (N.D. Ohio 1946).

Seventh Circuit

Smith v. Union Pacific R. Co., 474 Fed. Appx. 478 (7th Cir. 2012) (district court erred in dismissing complaint for untimeliness without granting leave to amend).

Paul v. Marberry, 658 F.3d 702 (7th Cir. 2011).

Prematurity may be raised on a Rule 12(b)(6) motion but a dismissal granted on that ground alone should be without prejudice. Schy v. Susquehanna Corp., 419 F.2d 1112 (7th Cir. 1970).

Hy Cite Corp. v. Regal Ware, Inc., 2011 WL 1206768, *9 (W.D. Wis. 2011).

Phillips v. Hunter Marine Transport, Inc., 2010 WL 2745963 (S.D. Ill. 2010).

Bub v. Marine Tech, LLC, 2010 WL 2033331 (W.D. Wis. 2010).

Zimmerman v. Hoard, 5 F. Supp. 2d 633 (N.D. Ind. 1998).

Naguib v. Illinois Dept. of Professional Regulation, 986 F. Supp. 1082 (N.D. Ill. 1997) (pro se litigant).

Graham v. Gendex Medical X-Ray, Inc., 176 F.R.D. 288 (N.D. Ill. 1997).

In re Scattered Corp. Securities Litigation, 844 F. Supp. 416 (N.D. Ill. 1994), aff'd, 47 F.3d 857 (7th Cir. 1995).

Commercial Ins. Co. of Newark, New Jersey v. Krain, 843 F. Supp. 404 (N.D. Ill. 1994).

Eret v. Continental Holding, Inc., 838 F. Supp. 358 (N.D. Ill. 1993).

Powell Duffryn Terminals, Inc. v. CJR Processing, Inc., 808 F. Supp. 652 (N.D. Ill. 1992).

Smith-Victor Corp. v. Sylvania Elec. Products, Inc., 242 F. Supp. 302 (N.D. Ill. 1965).

In re Gilman, 2010 WL 2812735 (Bankr. N.D. Ill. 2010).

Eighth Circuit

Christiansen v. West Branch Community School Dist., 674 F.3d 927, 938 (8th Cir. 2012).

Parnes v. Gateway 2000, Inc., 122 F.3d 539 (8th Cir. 1997).

Frey v. City of Herculaneum, 44 F.3d 667 (8th Cir. 1995) (district court erred by not giving civil rights plaintiff leave to amend).

Rogers v. Bruntrager, 841 F.2d 853, 855 (8th Cir. 1988), citing Wright & Miller.

Williams v. Town of Okoboji, 606 F.2d 812 (8th Cir. 1979).

Holt v. Bose, 2011 WL 3679820 (D. Neb. 2011).

Hawkins v. County of Lincoln, 2010 WL 2039656 (D. Neb. 2010).

Iowa Health System v. Trinity Health Corp., 177 F. Supp. 2d 897 (N.D. Iowa 2001).

Spinks v. City of St. Louis Water Div., 176 F.R.D. 572 (E.D. Mo. 1997).

Upsher-Smith Laboratories, Inc. v. Mylan Laboratories, Inc., 944 F. Supp. 1411 (D. Minn. 1996).

Fairyland Amusement Co. v. Metromedia, Inc., 413 F. Supp. 1290 (W.D. Mo. 1976), citing Wright & Miller.

Ninth Circuit
U.S. ex rel. Tamanaha v. Furukawa America, Inc., 445 Fed. Appx. 992 (9th Cir. 2011).

Dismissal without leave to amend is improper unless it is clear, upon de novo review, that the complaint could not be saved by any amendment. Gompper v. VISX, Inc., 298 F.3d 893 (9th Cir. 2002).

Absent unusual circumstances, dismissal without leave to amend is improper unless it is clear upon de novo review that the complaint could not be saved by any amendment. Ochoa v. Housing Authority of City Los Angeles, 47 Fed. Appx. 484 (9th Cir. 2002) (unpublished).

Lopez v. Smith, 203 F.3d 1122 (9th Cir. 2000).

Udom v. Fonseca, 846 F.2d 1236, 1238 (9th Cir. 1988), citing Wright & Miller.

Conway v. Slaughter, 440 F.2d 1278 (9th Cir. 1971).

Hughes v. Johnson, 305 F.2d 67 (9th Cir. 1962).

Florentine v. Landon, 231 F.2d 452 (9th Cir. 1955).

Sidebotham v. Robison, 216 F.2d 816 (9th Cir. 1954).

French v. Idaho State AFL-CIO, 164 F. Supp. 3d 1205, 1212 (D. Idaho 2016) (dismissal without leave to amend is improper "unless it is beyond doubt" that no amendment could save complaint), citing U.S. v. Ritchie, 342 F.3d 903, 907-908 (9th Cir. 2003).

Rojas-Lozano v. Google, Inc., 159 F. Supp. 3d 1101, 1108 (N.D. Cal. 2016) (unless "pleading could not possibly be cured by the allegation of other facts," courts should grant leave to amend even if pleader made no request to amend).

Meyer v. National Tenant Network, Inc., 10 F. Supp. 3d 1096 (N.D. Cal. 2014).

Cortez v. City of Porterville, 5 F. Supp. 3d 1160 (E.D. Cal. 2014).

Nguyen v. CTS Electronics Manufacturing Solutions Inc., 301 F.R.D. 337 (N.D. Cal. 2014).

Parker v. Barclays Bank Delaware, 2011 WL 2709407 (E.D. Wash. 2011).

Manestar v. JP Morgan Chase Bank, N.A., 2011 WL 686252 (C.D. Cal. 2011).

Lucas v. City of Visalia, 726 F. Supp. 2d 1149 (E.D. Cal. 2010).

Zepeda v. Tate, 2010 WL 4977596 (E.D. Cal. 2010) (improper to dismiss without leave to amend unless amendment clearly could not save complaint).

Herschelman v. New Century Mortg. Corp., 2010 WL 4448224, *3 (D. Haw. 2010).

Kingsburg Apple Packers, Inc. v. Ballantine Produce Co., Inc., 2010 WL 2817056, *3 (E.D. Cal. 2010).

Stringer v. Woolsey, 2010 WL 2776788 (D. Nev. 2010).

Brown v. Dillman, 2010 WL 2775842 (D. Nev. 2010).

Wheeler v. Terrible Herbst, 2010 WL 2775780 (D. Nev. 2010) (pro se plaintiff).

Edwards v. Aurora Loan Services, LLC, 2010 WL 2740173 (E.D. Cal. 2010) (pro se plaintiff).

Bauer v. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co., 2010 WL 2595291 (D. Idaho 2010).

Lee v. AFT-Yakima, 2010 WL 2243992 (E.D. Wash. 2010).

Austin v. Amazon.Com, Inc., 2010 WL 1875811 (W.D. Wash. 2010).

Chace v. M & T Mortg. Corp., 2010 WL 1816161 (D. Idaho 2010) ("The Ninth Circuit has held that, where a court finds dismissal under Rule 12(b)(6) is warranted, the court 'should grant leave to amend even if no request to amend the pleading was made, unless it determines that the pleading could not possibly be cured by the allegation of other facts.'"), quoting Lopez v. Smith, 203 F.3d 1122 (9th Cir. 2000).

Court must "grant plaintiff leave to amend 'unless it clearly appears that the deficiency cannot be overcome by amendment.'" Anderson v. Fishback, 2009 WL 2423327, *3 (E.D. Cal. 2009).

Sconiers v. California Dept. of Social Services, 2008 WL 4196599 (E.D. Cal. 2008).

Walker v. City of Hayward, 2008 WL 2357249 (N.D. Cal. 2008).

"The Ninth Circuit has 'repeatedly held that a district court should grant leave to amend even if no request to amend the pleading was made, unless it determines that the pleading could not possibly be cured by the allegation of other facts.'" Setzler v. City and County of San Francisco, 2008 WL 2264481 (N.D. Cal. 2008) (Illston, J.), quoting Lopez v. Smith, 203 F.3d 1122, 1130 (9th Cir. 2000).

Elston v. Toma, 2004 WL 1048132 (D. Or. 2004).

Scherz v. South Carolina Ins. Co., 112 F. Supp. 2d 1000 (C.D. Cal. 2000).

Guerrero v. Gates, 110 F. Supp. 2d 1287 (C.D. Cal. 2000).

Wyatt v. Liljenquist, 96 F. Supp. 2d 1062 (C.D. Cal. 2000) (dismissal without leave to amend is appropriate only when court is satisfied that deficiencies of complaint could not possibly be cured by amendment).

Roe v. Unocal Corp., 70 F. Supp. 2d 1073 (C.D. Cal. 1999) (court should grant leave to amend if complaint possibly can be cured by inclusion of additional factual allegations).

Cairns v. Franklin Mint Co., 24 F. Supp. 2d 1013 (C.D. Cal. 1998) (leave to amend appropriate if plaintiff possibly can cure defect in complaint).

Films of Distinction, Inc. v. Allegro Film Productions, Inc., 12 F. Supp. 2d 1068 (C.D. Cal. 1998).

Isuzu Motors Ltd. v. Consumers Union of U.S., Inc., 12 F. Supp. 2d 1035 (C.D. Cal. 1998).

A court must grant a pro se litigant leave to amend the complaint unless it is absolutely clear that the deficiencies of the complaint cannot be cured by amendment. Ricotta v. State of Cal., 4 F. Supp. 2d 961 (S.D. Cal. 1998), aff'd, 173 F.3d 861 (9th Cir. 1999).

Allison v. Brooktree Corp., 999 F. Supp. 1342 (S.D. Cal. 1998).

 © 2025 Thomson Reuters. No claim to original U.S. Government Works.

Dunlap v. Association of Bay Area Governments, 996 F. Supp. 962 (N.D. Cal. 1998).

Larramendy v. Newton, 994 F. Supp. 1211 (E.D. Cal. 1998).

Edwards v. Ellsworth, May, Sudweeks, Stubbs, Ibsen and Perry, 10 F. Supp. 2d 1131 (D. Idaho 1997), aff'd, 152 F.3d 924 (9th Cir. 1998).

Diaz v. Carlson, 5 F. Supp. 2d 809 (C.D. Cal. 1997), aff'd, 142 F.3d 443 (9th Cir. 1998).

Qualcomm, Inc. v. Motorola, Inc., 989 F. Supp. 1048 (S.D. Cal. 1997).

Silicon Knights, Inc. v. Crystal Dynamics, Inc., 983 F. Supp. 1303 (N.D. Cal. 1997).

Meek v. County of Riverside, 982 F. Supp. 1410 (C.D. Cal. 1997), aff'd in part, dismissed in part, 183 F.3d 962 (9th Cir. 1999).

National Coalition Government of Union of Burma v. Unocal, Inc., 176 F.R.D. 329 (C.D. Cal. 1997).

Bloom v. Martin, 865 F. Supp. 1377 (N.D. Cal. 1994), aff'd, 77 F.3d 318 (9th Cir. 1996).

Kaufman and Broad-South Bay v. Unisys Corp., 822 F. Supp. 1468 (N.D. Cal. 1993) (disapproved of by, KFC Western, Inc. v. Meghrig, 49 F.3d 518 (9th Cir. 1995)).

McDonald v. General Mills, Inc., 387 F. Supp. 24 (E.D. Cal. 1974).

Buchler v. U.S., 384 F. Supp. 709 (E.D. Cal. 1974).

Anspach v. Bestline Products, Inc., 382 F. Supp. 1083 (N.D. Cal. 1974).

Nishiyama v. North Am. Rockwell Corp., 49 F.R.D. 288 (C.D. Cal. 1970).

Tenth Circuit

McCown v. Heidler, 527 F.2d 204 (10th Cir. 1975).

"With regard to futility, the court must analyze the proposed amendment as though it was before the court on a motion to dismiss under Fed.R.Civ.P. 12(b)(6)." Hawkins v. Mercy Kansas Communities, Inc., 2015 WL 728484, *2 (D. Kan. 2015).

Holgers v. South Salt Lake City, 2011 WL 98488 (D. Utah 2011).

Riggs v. Boeing Co., 12 F. Supp. 2d 1215 (D. Kan. 1998) (pro se complaint).

Bushnell Corp. v. ITT Corp., 973 F. Supp. 1276 (D. Kan. 1997).

Freeman v. Burlington Northern and Santa Fe Ry. Co., 176 F.R.D. 581 (D. Kan. 1997).

Gallardo v. Board of County Com'rs, Kearny County Kan., 857 F. Supp. 783 (D. Kan. 1994) (abrogated by, Burns v. Board of Com'rs of County of Jackson, Kansas, 197 F. Supp. 2d 1278 (D. Kan. 2002)), citing Wright & Miller.

Moten v. American Linen Supply Co., 155 F.R.D. 202 (D. Kan. 1994).

Eleventh Circuit

A district court " 'district court is not required to grant a plaintiff leave to amend his complaint sua sponte when the plaintiff, who is represented by counsel, never filed a motion to amend nor requested leave to amend before the district court.'" Novoneuron Inc. v. Addiction Research Institute, Inc., 326 Fed. Appx. 505, 507 (11th Cir. 2009), quoting Wagner v. Daewoo Heavy Industries America Corp., 314 F.3d 541, 542 (11th Cir. 2002).

Ford v. Central Loan Admin., 2011 WL 4702912 (S.D. Ala. 2011).

Campbell v. Grady's Bar, Inc., 2010 WL 2754328 (S.D. Fla. 2010).

Wise v. Heddell, 2010 WL 2688730 (M.D. Ga. 2010).

Hodges v. Buzzeo, 193 F. Supp. 2d 1279 (M.D. Fla. 2002).

Digiro v. Pall Aeropower Corp., 19 F. Supp. 2d 1304 (M.D. Fla. 1998) (pro se complaint).

U.S. v. One (1) 1980 Cessna 441 Conquest II Aircraft, 989 F. Supp. 1465 (S.D. Fla. 1997).

Underwood v. City of Fort Myers, 836 F. Supp. 823 (M.D. Fla. 1993).

Harrell v. Anderson, 294 F. Supp. 405 (S.D. Ga. 1968).

D.C. Circuit

O'Donnell v. Barry, 148 F.3d 1126, 331 (D.C. Cir. 1998), citing Wright & Miller.

Doe v. U.S. Dept. of Justice, 753 F.2d 1092, 1104 (D.C. Cir. 1985), quoting Wright & Miller.

Shapiro v. Secretary of State, 499 F.2d 527, 162 (D.C. Cir. 1974), judgment aff'd, 424 U.S. 614, 96 S. Ct. 1062, 47 L. Ed. 2d 278 (1976).

Douglas v. District of Columbia Housing Authority, 981 F. Supp. 2d 78 (D.D.C. 2013) (review for futility is identical to review of Rule 12(b)(6) motion to dismiss).

Morrow v. U.S., 723 F. Supp. 2d 71 (D.D.C. 2010).

Johnson v. Computer Technology Services, Inc., 670 F. Supp. 1036 (D.D.C. 1987).

See also
Stanley v. Harper Buffing Mach. Co., 28 F.R.D. 579 (D. Conn. 1961).

Calkins v. City of Fruitland, 97 Idaho 263, 543 P.2d 166, 167 (1975), citing Wright & Miller.

Capazzoli v. Holzwasser, 397 Mass. 158, 490 N.E.2d 420, 424 (1986), citing Wright & Miller.

But see
Nettles v. City of Leesburg—Police Dept., 415 Fed. Appx. 116, 120 (11th Cir. 2010) (court not required to grant leave to amend when plaintiff, represented by counsel, never requested to do so).

Spiller v. City of Texas City, Police Dept., 130 F.3d 162 (5th Cir. 1997).

A dismissal without leave to amend is proper when there was no request for leave to amend. Coates v. Illinois State Bd. of Ed., 559 F.2d 445 (7th Cir. 1977).

The district court dismissed the defendants' counterclaims with prejudice without mentioning any possibility of amendment. Sundance Services, Inc. v. Roach, 2011 WL 3608014 (D.N.M. 2011).

130 Ability to correct doubtful
Bausch v. Stryker Corp., 630 F.3d 546, 562 (7th Cir. 2010).

Silverstein v. Keynetics Inc., 192 F. Supp. 3d 1045, 1053 (N.D. Cal. 2016), aff'd, 727 Fed. Appx. 244 (9th Cir. 2018) (court granted leave to amend despite seriously doubting plaintiff's ability to plead claims to escape federal preemption).

Rolo v. City Investing Co. Liquidating Trust, 845 F. Supp. 182 (D.N.J. 1993), order aff'd, 43 F.3d 1462 (3d Cir. 1994), judgment vacated on reh'g, 66 F.3d 312 (3d Cir. 1995) and order vacated, 66 F.3d 312 (3d Cir. 1995), citing Wright & Miller.

Resolution Trust Corp. v. DiDomenico, 837 F. Supp. 623 (D.N.J. 1993), quoting Wright & Miller.

Napoli v. Sears, Roebuck and Co., 835 F. Supp. 1053 (N.D. Ill. 1993), vacated on reconsideration, 858 F. Supp. 101 (N.D. Ill. 1994) and opinion vacated, 926 F. Supp. 780 (N.D. Ill. 1996).

Jackson v. Culinary School of Washington, 788 F. Supp. 1233 (D.D.C. 1992).

St. Louis Home Insulators, Inc. v. Burroughs Corp., 597 F. Supp. 100 (E.D. Mo. 1984), judgment aff'd, 793 F.2d 954 (8th Cir. 1986).

Muhammad Ali v. Division of State Athletic Commission of Dept. of State of N. Y., 308 F. Supp. 11 (S.D. N.Y. 1969).

Although a defense of immunity raised by the complaint made the possibility of practical and effective amendment dubious, the court would allow the plaintiff to move to amend and would rule on the motion when tendered. Rhodes v. Van Steenberg, 225 F. Supp. 113 (D. Neb. 1963), aff'd, 334 F.2d 709 (8th Cir. 1964).

131 Leave to amend refused

"In the Ninth Circuit, although leave to amend should be given freely, a district court may dismiss without leave where a plaintiff's proposed amendments would fail to cure the pleading deficiencies and amendment would be futile. * * * we agree with the district court that Sanderling's proposed amendment * * * would have been futile. No amendment to a complaint can alter what a patent itself states." Sanderling Management Ltd. v. Snap Inc., 65 F.4th 698, 705–706 (Fed. Cir. 2023) (citing Cervantes v. Countrywide Home Loans, Inc., 656 F.3d 1034, 1041 (9th Cir. 2011)) (internal quotation marks omitted).

Arizona Board of Regents for and on behalf of Arizona State University v. Doe, 2022 WL 1514649, *1 (9th Cir. 2022) ("The district court did not err by dismissing ABR's complaint sua sponte without leave to amend and without providing notice because amendment would have been futile.") (citing Wong v. Bell, 642 F.2d 359, 361–362 (9th Cir. 1981)).

"While Appellants suggest error in the court's dismissal of their federal claims with prejudice without allowing leave to amend the complaint, the record shows that Appellants' requests for leave to amend were perfunctory, asserted only in their responses to the Rule 12(b)(6) motions, and without supporting pleadings. Accordingly, we discern no abuse of discretion in this regard." Babakaeva v. PTR Investments, Inc., 2022 WL 17103767, *1 (4th Cir. 2022) (citation omitted).

Lutz v. Portfolio Recovery Associates, LLC, 49 F.4th 323, 335 (3d Cir. 2022) ("Because the proposed amendments do not cure those deficient allegations, the amendments would be futile, and the District Court did not abuse its discretion in dismissing Lutz's claims with prejudice and denying Lutz leave to amend.").

Seale v. Peacock, 32 F.4th 1011, 1027 (10th Cir. 2022) ("[D]ismissal with prejudice is appropriate where a complaint fails to state a claim under Rule 12(b)(6) and granting leave to amend would be futile.").

Stewart v. IHT Insurance Agency Group, LLC, 990 F.3d 455, 457 (6th Cir. 2021).

Rand v. Midland National Life Insurance, 857 Fed. Appx. 343, 348 (9th Cir. 2021).

Orchard Hill Master Fund Ltd. v. SBA Communications Corporation, 830 F.3d 152, 160 (2d Cir. 2016).

Arizona Students' Association v. Arizona Board of Regents, 824 F.3d 858, 871 (9th Cir. 2016).

Moody v. Vozel, 771 F.3d 1093, 1096 (8th Cir. 2014).

Bogie v. Rosenberg, 705 F.3d 603, 608 (7th Cir. 2013), citing Garcia v. City of Chicago, Ill., 24 F.3d 966, 970 (7th Cir. 1994).

Glazer v. Chase Home Finance LLC, 704 F.3d 453, 458-459 (6th Cir. 2013) (abrogated by, Obduskey v. McCarthy & Holthus LLP, 139 S. Ct. 1029, 203 L. Ed. 2d 390 (2019)) (district court did not abuse its discretion in denying plaintiff leave to amend when plaintiff filed his motion to amend four months after discovery of "new" evidence, well after defendant's motion to dismiss had been filed and fully briefed, and one month after magistrate recommended granting it).

Saunders v. Philadelphia Dist. Attorney's Office, 546 Fed. Appx. 68, 73 (3d Cir. 2013) (per curiam) ("A dismissal of a civil rights complaint pursuant to Rule 12(b)(6) without leave to amend is 'justified only on the grounds of bad faith, undue delay, prejudice, or futility.'"), quoting Alston v. Parker, 363 F.3d 229, 236 (3d Cir. 2004).

Panther Partners Inc. v. Ikanos Communications, Inc., 681 F.3d 114, 119 (2d Cir. 2012) ("Futility is a determination, as a matter of law, that proposed amendments would fail to cure prior deficiencies or to state a claim under Rule 12(b)(6) * * *.").

Hettinga v. U.S., 677 F.3d 471, 480 (D.C. Cir. 2012) ("A district court may deny a motion to amend a complaint as futile if the proposed claim would not survive a motion to dismiss.").

Absolute Activist Value Master Fund Ltd. v. Ficeto, 677 F.3d 60, 71 (2d Cir. 2012).

Rudder v. Williams, 666 F.3d 790, 794 (D.C. Cir. 2012) (district court erroneously responded to plaintiff concession that some claims were time-barred by dismissing all claims, including those not time-barred, with prejudice).

Hunt v. Klein, 476 Fed. Appx. 889, 891 (2d Cir. 2012) ("Although we generally disfavor the dismissal of pro se complaints without leave to replead, an opportunity to amend is not required if amendment would be futile.").

Wilcox v. Magill, 468 Fed. Appx. 849, 854 (10th Cir. 2012).

Chechele v. Scheetz, 466 Fed. Appx. 39, 40 (2d Cir. 2012).

"The court considers five factors in assessing the propriety of leave to amend-bad faith, undue delay, prejudice to the opposing party, futility of amendment, and whether the plaintiff has previously amended the complaint." U.S. v. Corinthian Colleges, 655 F.3d 984, 995 (9th Cir. 2011).

Nordyke v. King, 644 F.3d 776 (9th Cir. 2011) (amendment is futile and should be denied if amended complaint would be subject to immediate dismissal under Rule 12(b)(6) standard), on reh'g en banc, 681 F.3d 1041 (9th Cir. 2012).

Katyle v. Penn Nat. Gaming, Inc., 637 F.3d 462, 466 (4th Cir. 2011) (amendment may be refused when it would be futile).

Arlin-Golf, LLC v. Village of Arlington Heights, 631 F.3d 818, 823 (7th Cir. 2011) (proper to deny motion to amend when amendment would be futile).

Brule v. Blue Cross and Blue Shield of New Mexico, 455 Fed. Appx. 836, 840 (10th Cir. 2011) ("[E]ven if he were allowed to amend, Mr. Brule would be unable to establish a legal duty under New Mexico law.").

Jones v. HSBC Bank USA, N.A., 444 Fed. Appx. 640 (4th Cir. 2011) (in determining whether amendment is futile, court should look at substantive or procedural considerations).

Rocha v. Zavaras, 443 Fed. Appx. 316 (10th Cir. 2011) (refusal of amendment was proper when to do so would be futile).

Dollonne v. Ventura Unified School Dist. ex rel. its officials, 440 Fed. Appx. 533 (9th Cir. 2011) (amendment is futile and should be denied where all defendants are immune from suit).

"Among the grounds that could justify a denial of leave to amend are undue delay, bad faith, dilatory motive, prejudice, and futility." Bootay v. KBR, Inc., 437 Fed. Appx. 140, 147 (3d Cir. 2011), quoting In re Burlington Coat Factory Securities Litigation, 114 F.3d 1410, 1434 (3d Cir. 1997).

Weston v. Illinois Dept. of Human Services, 433 Fed. Appx. 480 (7th Cir. 2011) (dismissal without leave to amend was proper when amendment would be futile as plaintiff could not state plausible claim).

Bennett v. City of New York, 425 Fed. Appx. 79 (2d Cir. 2011).

American Corporate Soc. v. Valley Forge Ins. Co., 424 Fed. Appx. 86 (3d Cir. 2011) (leave to amend properly refused when amendment would be futile).

Roth v. Wilder, 420 Fed. Appx. 804 (10th Cir. 2011).

Smith v. Arguello, 415 Fed. Appx. 57, 61 (10th Cir. 2011).

LaCroix v. Marshall County, Mississippi, 409 Fed. Appx. 794, 802 (5th Cir. 2011).

Rocha v. CCCF Admin., 408 Fed. Appx. 141, 144 (10th Cir. 2011).

Kundratic v. Thomas, 407 Fed. Appx. 625, 627 (3d Cir. 2011).

Hill v. City of Oklahoma City, 448 Fed. Appx. 814 (10th Cir. 2011) (amendment may be refused and case dismissed with prejudice when amendment would be futile).

Bausch v. Stryker Corp., 630 F.3d 546, 562 (7th Cir. 2010) (denial of motion to amend is disfavored).

In re Interbank Funding Corp. Securities Litigation, 629 F.3d 213, 218 (D.C. Cir. 2010) (leave to amend may be denied if amended pleading would not survive motion to dismiss).

Kevilly v. New York, 410 Fed. Appx. 371, 375 (2d Cir. 2010).

"[C]lear or explicit justifications, such as repeated failure to cure deficiencies by amendments previously allowed, undue prejudice to the opposing party by virtue of allowance of amendment, and futility of amendment, can justify dismissal with prejudice." Carvel v. Godley, 404 Fed. Appx. 359, 361 (11th Cir. 2010) (internal quotation marks omitted).

Golod v. Bank of America Corp., 403 Fed. Appx. 699, 702 (3d Cir. 2010) (amendment futile after several failures by plaintiff to move complaint across line from conceivable to plausible).

Holmes v. Gates, 403 Fed. Appx. 670, 673 (3d Cir. 2010) (complaint properly dismissed after plaintiff failed three times to include facts beyond conclusory allegations).

Jewell v. Bell, 388 Fed. Appx. 435 (5th Cir. 2010) (upholding district court's refusal to grant plaintiff leave to amend on grounds that amendment would be futile).

Brookhart v. Rohr, 385 Fed. Appx. 67 (3d Cir. 2010) (dismissing plaintiff's appeal of district court's dismissal without leave to amend on grounds that appeal was frivolous).

Brown v. Hillsborough County Sheriff's Office, 342 Fed. Appx. 552 (11th Cir. 2009).

Because the plaintiff's second amendment did not alter the disposition of the case, the district court was correct to refuse amendment because the complaint would not pass a motion to dismiss and, therefore, was futile. Pollard v. Pollard, 325 Fed. Appx. 270 (4th Cir. 2009).

Cohen v. Clemens, 321 Fed. Appx. 739 (10th Cir. 2009).

In re NVE Corp. Securities Litigation, 527 F.3d 749 (8th Cir. 2008) (appellants did not articulate changes they wished to make, nor did they demonstrate how revision would address numerous pleading deficiencies identified by district court).

Airborne Beepers & Video, Inc. v. AT & T Mobility LLC, 499 F.3d 663 (7th Cir. 2007) (upholding district court's refusal to grant plaintiff leave to amend complaint for fourth time).

Crenshaw v. Antokol, 206 Fed. Appx. 560, 563 (7th Cir. 2006).

"Dismissal without leave to amend is improper unless it is clear, upon de novo review, that the complaint could not be saved by any amendment." Kelly v. Provident Life & Acc. Ins., 245 Fed. Appx. 637, 639 (9th Cir. 2007) (finding district court erred in dismissing claim without leave to amend).

Lum v. Bank of America, 361 F.3d 217 (3d Cir. 2004) (allowing amendment would be futile because plaintiffs cannot allege sufficient facts to support fraud or RICO claim).

Donovan v. American Skandia Life Assur. Corp., 96 Fed. Appx. 779 (2d Cir. 2004).

Broam v. Bogan, 320 F.3d 1023 (9th Cir. 2003) ("dismissal without leave to amend is proper only in extraordinary cases").

Dismissal without leave to amend is proper only if the complaint cannot be cured by amendment. Oki Semiconductor Co. v. Wells Fargo Bank, Nat. Ass'n, 298 F.3d 768 (9th Cir. 2002).

 © 2025 Thomson Reuters. No claim to original U.S. Government Works.

Ochoa v. Housing Authority of City Los Angeles, 47 Fed. Appx. 484 (9th Cir. 2002) (unpublished).

Shane v. Fauver, 213 F.3d 113 (3d Cir. 2000) (court can deny leave to amend for reasons including undue delay, bad faith, dilatory motive, prejudice, and futility).

Koehler v. Bank of Bermuda (New York) Ltd., 209 F.3d 130 (2d Cir. 2000), opinion amended, 229 F.3d 424 (2d Cir. 2000) (court did not abuse its discretion in denying leave to amend complaint when any amendment would be futile because plaintiff could not plead elements of securities fraud claim).

Simon v. Value Behavioral Health, Inc., 208 F.3d 1073 (9th Cir. 2000), opinion amended, 234 F.3d 428 (9th Cir. 2000) and (overruled by, Odom v. Microsoft Corp., 486 F.3d 541 (9th Cir. 2007)) (court properly denied plaintiff leave to amend complaint even though it theoretically was possible for him to allege more specific facts because fact that claims failed due to absence of direct injury, and that court already gave plaintiff three opportunities to amend claims suggested futility of amendment).

Looper Maintenance Service Inc. v. City of Indianapolis, 197 F.3d 908 (7th Cir. 1999) (district court did not abuse its discretion in denying plaintiff leave to file fourth amended complaint, when plaintiff was given three prior opportunities and made no appreciably substantive changes to complaint).

Beanal v. Freeport-McMoran, Inc., 197 F.3d 161 (5th Cir. 1999) (district court gave plaintiff several opportunities to amend complaint and provided plaintiff roadmap as to how to amend complaint, but plaintiff was unable to draft complaint that met minimum pleading requirements).

Pani v. Empire Blue Cross Blue Shield, 152 F.3d 67 (2d Cir. 1998) (plaintiff failed to request leave to amend and failed to show any basis upon which the complaint could be amended).

Although a dismissal for the failure of a pleading to contain a short and plain statement of the claim showing that the pleader is entitled to relief is usually with leave to amend, the district court is justified in dismissing with prejudice if the plaintiff has "persisted" in violating the rule. Micklus v. Greer, 705 F.2d 314 (8th Cir. 1983).

The trial court did not err in dismissing the complaint without leave to amend when it was clear that leave to amend the complaint further would have served no purpose since the acts complained of could not constitute a claim for relief. Havas v. Thornton, 609 F.2d 372 (9th Cir. 1979).

Stebbins v. Weaver, 537 F.2d 939 (7th Cir. 1976).

 © 2025 Thomson Reuters. No claim to original U.S. Government Works.

Prezzi v. Schelter, 469 F.2d 691 (2d Cir. 1972).

DeWitt v. Pail, 366 F.2d 682 (9th Cir. 1966).

The district court did not abuse its discretion by dismissing the complaint with prejudice when the plaintiff already had tried twice to state a claim and it appeared that no mere amendment could cure its defect and have it state a claim upon which relief could be granted. Feinberg v. Leach, 243 F.2d 64 (5th Cir. 1957).

Christine Asia Co., Ltd. v. Alibaba Group Holding Limited, 192 F. Supp. 3d 456, 482 (S.D. N.Y. 2016), vacated and remanded, 718 Fed. Appx. 20 (2d Cir. 2017).

Naperville Smart Meter Awareness v. City of Naperville, 114 F. Supp. 3d 606 (N.D. Ill. 2015), aff'd, 900 F.3d 521 (7th Cir. 2018).

Brooks v. Branch Banking and Trust Co., 107 F. Supp. 3d 1290 (N.D. Ga. 2015).

In re Sanofi Securities Litigation, 87 F. Supp. 3d 510, 549 (S.D. N.Y. 2015), judgment aff'd, 816 F.3d 199 (2d Cir. 2016) ("there is no realistic prospect of rehabilitating plaintiffs' federal claims").

Belcher v. W.C. English Inc., 125 F. Supp. 3d 544 (M.D. N.C. 2015).

Hancock v. Urban Outfitters, Inc., 32 F. Supp. 3d 26 (D.D.C. 2014), vacated and remanded, 830 F.3d 511 (D.C. Cir. 2016) (futile).

Polanco v. NCO Portfolio Management, Inc., 23 F. Supp. 3d 363 (S.D. N.Y. 2014) (futility under Rule 12(b)(6) standards prevents leave to amend).

Hanley v. Green Tree Servicing, LLC, 934 F. Supp. 2d 977, 986 (N.D. Ill. 2013), on reconsideration, (June 7, 2013), quoting Wright & Miller.

Macharia v. City of Revere, 848 F. Supp. 2d 74 (D. Mass. 2012).

Leave to amend "should be denied only when amending the complaint would prejudice the opposing party, reward bad faith on the part of the moving party, or would amount to futility." Hufford v. Bank United, FSB, 2011 WL 4985920, *4 (D. Md. 2011).

" 'Reasons for a proper denial of leave to amend include undue delay, bad faith, futility of the amendment, and perhaps most important, the resulting prejudice to the opposing party.' " Consolmagno v. Hospital of St. Raphael, 94 Empl. Prac. Dec. (CCH) P 44292, 2011 WL 4804774, *4 (D. Conn. 2011), quoting State Teachers Retirement Bd. v. Fluor Corp., 654 F.2d 843, 856 (2d Cir. 1981).

Dorest v. Piney Point Surgical Center, 2011 WL 2633575 (S.D. Tex. 2011) (amendment should be refused when frivolous or futile).

Leave to amend should be denied mainly in three circumstances. First, if amendment would be futile, i.e. it would fail to withstand a Rule 12(b)(6) motion. Second, if it would be prejudicial to the opposing party. And finally, if the party seeking amendment has missed the set deadline to amend without good cause. Steel Institute of New York v. City of New York, 2010 WL 5060682 (S.D. N.Y. 2010).

Multiut Corp. v. Greenberg Traurig, LLP, 2010 WL 5018538 (N.D. Ill. 2010) (amendment futile if it would not survive motion to dismiss).

Abebe v. South Carolina Dept. of Corrections, 2010 WL 2991595 (D.S.C. 2010) (pro se plaintiff).

Ponder v. Bank of N.Y. Mellon, 2010 WL 2950681 (M.D. Ga. 2010) (pro se plaintiff).

CBS, Inc. v. Ahern, 108 F.R.D. 14, 19 (S.D. N.Y. 1985), citing Wright & Miller.

Ordinarily, the court should grant the plaintiff leave to amend when dismissing a complaint for failure to state a claim for which relief can be granted; however, when it appears certain that the plaintiffs will not be able to recover, as a matter of law, under any set of facts proved, leave to amend should be refused. Fairyland Amusement Co. v. Metromedia, Inc., 413 F. Supp. 1290 (W.D. Mo. 1976), citing Wright & Miller.

See also
Christiansen v. West Branch Community School Dist., 674 F.3d 927, 938 (8th Cir. 2012) (when district court dismisses claim on own motion, failure to give leave to amend not reversible error when "patently obvious" plaintiff could not prevail).

The court refused to allow the appellants to amend their complaint because they already had been given leave to amend their complaint once before. The appellants also had been given the opportunity to conduct discovery in order to discern the facts they needed to plead their claims. Kendall v. Visa U.S.A., Inc., 518 F.3d 1042 (9th Cir. 2008).

Storman v. Sacramento Regional Transit Dist., 70 Fed. Appx. 438 (9th Cir. 2003) (court should grant leave to amend pro se complaint even if no request to amend is made unless it is absolutely clear that no permissible amendment could cure defect).

Wang v. Palmisano, 157 F. Supp. 3d 306, 341 (S.D. N.Y. 2016) (dismissal with prejudice was appropriate because plaintiff received full notice of complaint's deficiencies and failed to remedy them).

Franklin v. City of Slidell, 936 F. Supp. 2d 691, 702 (E.D. La. 2013) (district courts should not dismiss pro se complaints for failure to state claim without first providing plaintiff opportunity to amend, unless it is obvious from record that plaintiff has pled best case), citing Taylor v. Books A Million, Inc., 296 F.3d 376, 378 (5th Cir. 2002).

Some courts have held that if the plaintiff already has had leave to amend and still has failed to state a claim, then leave to amend would be futile and should be denied. Rampersad v. Deutsche Bank Securities, Inc., 2004 WL 616132 (S.D. N.Y. 2004).

Compare
State v. Watson Pharmaceuticals Inc., 2019 UT App 31, 440 P.3d 727 (Utah Ct. App. 2019) (upholding a trial court's dismissal with prejudice in the face of the plaintiff-State's multiple failures to amend its complaint to state a claim), citing Wright & Miller.

But compare
The Sixth Circuit has upheld a district court's refusal to grant leave to amend because the motion to amend contained procedural defects. The court ruled that even if the motion was proper, leave to amend should be denied because it would frustrate the purposes of the PSLRA. PR Diamonds, Inc. v. Chandler, 364 F.3d 671 (6th Cir. 2004).

132 Abuse of discretion regarding leave to amend
Hammer v. Equifax Information Services, L.L.C., 974 F.3d 564, 570 (5th Cir. 2020) ("Hammer's claim is likely futile, and the district court did not abuse its discretion by dismissing the complaint with prejudice."), quoting Wright & Miller.

Sonner v. Premier Nutrition Corporation, 971 F.3d 834, 839 (9th Cir. 2020) ("We review the district court's decision to grant a motion to dismiss under Rule 12(b)(6) de novo, and to deny a request for leave to amend for abuse of discretion. We may affirm the district court's dismissal of the complaint on any basis supported by the record.").

Cresci v. Mohawk Valley Community College, 693 Fed. Appx. 21, 24-25 (2d Cir. 2017) (finding that when, "in a single order, the [district] court [1] granted the defendant's motion to dismiss [and identified] the flaws it found in [the plaintiff's] complaint, and [2] denied [the plaintiff] leave to replead, faulting [the plaintiff] for having failed to submit a proposed amended complaint in the time between the defendant's motion to dismiss and the court's ruling on it," the district court abused its discretion because "[t]he proper time for a plaintiff to move to amend the complaint is when the plaintiff learns from the District Court in what respect the complaint is deficient").

 © 2025 Thomson Reuters. No claim to original U.S. Government Works.

Arizona Students' Association v. Arizona Board of Regents, 824 F.3d 858, 871 (9th Cir. 2016) (district court improperly held that amendment would be futile).

Cohen v. Board of Trustees of the University of the Dist. of Columbia, 819 F.3d 476 (D.C. Cir. 2016) (court affirmed district court's dismissal of complaint, but found that district court abused its discretion in dismissing with prejudice).

Starr v. Firstmark Corp., 563 Fed. Appx. 803 (2d Cir. 2014).

O'Connor v. City of Desert Hot Springs, 552 Fed. Appx. 703 (9th Cir. 2014).

Miller v. BAC Home Loans Servicing, L.P., 726 F.3d 717, 722 (5th Cir. 2013), quoting Pioneer Natural Resources USA, Inc. v. Paper, Allied Indus., Chemical and Energy Workers Intern. Union Local 4-487, 328 F.3d 818, 820 (5th Cir. 2003), modified on denial of reh'g, Pioneer Natural Resources USA, Inc. v. Paper, Allied Industrial, Chemical And Energy Workers Intern. Union Local 4-487, 338 F.3d 440 (5th Cir. 2003).

Nakahata v. New York-Presbyterian Healthcare System, Inc., 723 F.3d 192, 198 (2d Cir. 2013).

Agnew v. National Collegiate Athletic Ass'n, 683 F.3d 328, 334 (7th Cir. 2012).

Okwu v. McKim, 682 F.3d 841, 844 (9th Cir. 2012).

Panther Partners Inc. v. Ikanos Communications, Inc., 681 F.3d 114, 119 (2d Cir. 2012).

Anderson News, L.L.C. v. American Media, Inc., 680 F.3d 162, 185 (2d Cir. 2012).

Public Pension Fund Group v. KV Pharmaceutical Co., 679 F.3d 972, 987 (8th Cir. 2012).

Wood v. City of San Diego, 678 F.3d 1075, 1080 (9th Cir. 2012).

Washington State Republican Party v. Washington State Grange, 676 F.3d 784, 797 (9th Cir. 2012).

Orton v. Johnny's Lunch Franchise, LLC, 668 F.3d 843, 850 (6th Cir. 2012).

AE ex rel. Hernandez v. County of Tulare, 666 F.3d 631, 636 (9th Cir. 2012).

McGarvey v. Penske Auto Group, Inc., 486 Fed. Appx. 276, 279 (3d Cir. 2012).

Johnson v. Epps, 479 Fed. Appx. 583, 588 (5th Cir. 2012) (per curiam).

Bangerter v. Roach, 467 Fed. Appx. 787, 789 (10th Cir. 2012).

Webb v. Morella, 457 Fed. Appx. 448 (5th Cir. 2012) (per curiam) (district court's dismissal with prejudice for failure to abide by local rules vacated because court failed to consider less severe sanctions).

Palm Beach Strategic Income, LP v. Salzman, 457 Fed. Appx. 40, 43-44 (2d Cir. 2012).

Metz v. U.S. Life Ins. Co. in City of New York, 662 F.3d 600, 602 (2d Cir. 2011) (per curiam).

Stanard v. Nygren, 658 F.3d 792, 796-797 (7th Cir. 2011) (denial of motion for leave to file second amended complaint is reviewed for abuse of discretion).

WPP Luxembourg Gamma Three Sarl v. Spot Runner, Inc., 655 F.3d 1039, 1058 (9th Cir. 2011) (abrogated by, Lorenzo v. Securities and Exchange Commission, 139 S. Ct. 1094, 203 L. Ed. 2d 484 (2019)) ("[d]istrict courts have broad discretion in deciding whether to grant leave to amend and whether to dismiss actions with or without prejudice").

Stearns v. Ticketmaster Corp., 655 F.3d 1013, 1018 (9th Cir. 2011).

Cafasso, U.S. ex rel. v. General Dynamics C4 Systems, Inc., 637 F.3d 1047, 1058 (9th Cir. 2011).

Dutciuc v. Meritage Homes of Arizona, Inc., 462 Fed. Appx. 658, 659 (9th Cir. 2011).

Ruddy v. U.S. Postal Service, 455 Fed. Appx. 279, 283 (3d Cir. 2011).

Terra Securities ASA Konkursbo v. Citigroup, Inc., 450 Fed. Appx. 32, 34 (2d Cir. 2011).

U.S. ex rel. Tamanaha v. Furukawa America, Inc., 445 Fed. Appx. 992 (9th Cir. 2011).

Jones v. HSBC Bank USA, N.A., 444 Fed. Appx. 640 (4th Cir. 2011).

Lomako v. New York Institute of Technology, 440 Fed. Appx. 1 (2d Cir. 2011).

Bootay v. KBR, Inc., 437 Fed. Appx. 140 (3d Cir. 2011).

D'Agostino v. CECOM RDEC, 436 Fed. Appx. 70 (3d Cir. 2011).

Bennett v. City of New York, 425 Fed. Appx. 79 (2d Cir. 2011).

Perano v. Township Of Tilden, 423 Fed. Appx. 234 (3d Cir. 2011).

Brown v. Matauszak, 415 Fed. Appx. 608, 616 (6th Cir. 2011) (remand for abuse of discretion is proper when alleged offense is sufficiently serious and it is clear that information exists that will cure defect).

Smugglers Notch Homeowners' Ass'n, Inc. v. Smugglers' Notch Management Company, Ltd., 414 Fed. Appx. 372, 374 (2d Cir. 2011).

Matthews v. LaBarge, Inc., 407 Fed. Appx. 277, 280 (10th Cir. 2011) (not abuse of discretion to refuse third amended complaint when differences were immaterial and plaintiff did not seek consent before filing).

Phillips v. James, 403 Fed. Appx. 641, 643 n.1 (3d Cir. 2010) (per curiam).

Brown v. Hillsborough County Sheriff's Office, 342 Fed. Appx. 552 (11th Cir. 2009).

"[B]ecause the district court determined that the amended complaint would not survive a motion to dismiss, that legal conclusion is reviewed de novo." Pollard v. Pollard, 325 Fed. Appx. 270 (4th Cir. 2009), Walker v. Zenk, 323 Fed. Appx. 144 (3d Cir. 2009).

Panther Partners Inc. v. Ikanos Communications, Inc., 347 Fed. Appx. 617 (2d Cir. 2009)

Platt Elec. Supply, Inc. v. EOFF Elec., Inc., 522 F.3d 1049 (9th Cir. 2008).

Fetterhoff v. Liberty Life Assur. Co., 282 Fed. Appx. 740 (11th Cir. 2008).

Airborne Beepers & Video, Inc. v. AT & T Mobility LLC, 499 F.3d 663 (7th Cir. 2007).

U.S. ex rel. Adrian v. Regents of University of California, 363 F.3d 398 (5th Cir. 2004).

U.S. ex rel. Karvelas v. Melrose-Wakefield Hosp., 360 F.3d 220 (1st Cir. 2004).

Broudo v. Dura Pharmaceuticals, Inc., 339 F.3d 933 (9th Cir. 2003), judgment rev'd, 544 U.S. 336, 125 S. Ct. 1627, 161 L. Ed. 2d 577 (2005).

General Refractories Co. v. Fireman's Fund Ins. Co., 337 F.3d 297 (3d Cir. 2003).

U.S. ex rel. Willard v. Humana Health Plan of Texas Inc., 336 F.3d 375 (5th Cir. 2003).

Shepherd v. Wellman, 313 F.3d 963 (6th Cir. 2002).

Franks v. Ross, 313 F.3d 184 (4th Cir. 2002).

Koehler v. Bank of Bermuda (New York) Ltd., 209 F.3d 130 (2d Cir. 2000), opinion amended, 229 F.3d 424 (2d Cir. 2000).

Simon v. Value Behavioral Health, Inc., 208 F.3d 1073 (9th Cir. 2000), opinion amended, 234 F.3d 428 (9th Cir. 2000) and (overruled by, Odom v. Microsoft Corp., 486 F.3d 541 (9th Cir. 2007)) (court's discretion is particularly broad when plaintiff previously has been granted leave to amend, and key question is whether plaintiff could have saved his complaint through further amendment).

Looper Maintenance Service Inc. v. City of Indianapolis, 197 F.3d 908 (7th Cir. 1999).

Austin v. Ford Models, Inc., 149 F.3d 148 (2d Cir. 1998) (abrogated by, Swierkiewicz v. Sorema N. A., 534 U.S. 506, 122 S. Ct. 992, 152 L. Ed. 2d 1 (2002)).

Eison v. McCoy, 146 F.3d 468 (7th Cir. 1998).

Hudson United Bank v. LiTenda Mortg. Corp., 142 F.3d 151 (3d Cir. 1998).

Although the grant or denial of an opportunity to amend is within the discretion of the district court, an outright refusal to grant the leave without any justifying reason appearing for the denial is not an exercise of that discretion but rather an abuse of discretion inconsistent with the spirit of the federal rules. Smith v. National Collegiate Athletic Ass'n, 139 F.3d 180 (3d Cir. 1998), vacated on other grounds, 525 U.S. 459, 119 S. Ct. 924, 142 L. Ed. 2d 929 (1999).

Price v. Pinnacle Brands, Inc., 138 F.3d 602 (5th Cir. 1998).

In re NationsMart Corp. Securities Litigation, 130 F.3d 309 (8th Cir. 1997).

A denial of leave to amend is reviewed under the abuse of discretion standard. In re American Continental Corporation/Lincoln Sav. & Loan Securities Litigation, 102 F.3d 1524 (9th Cir. 1996), rev'd, 523 U.S. 26, 118 S. Ct. 956, 140 L. Ed. 2d 62 (1998).

But see

Doe v. United States, 853 F.3d 792, 803 (5th Cir. 2017), as revised, (Apr. 12, 2017) ("Although we ordinarily review the denial of leave to amend for abuse of discretion. if the denial was predicated solely on futility, as here, 'we apply a de novo standard of review identical, in practice, to the standard used for reviewing a dismissal under Rule 12(b)(6).'" (footnotes omitted)).

Stengel v. Medtronic Inc., 704 F.3d 1224, 1227 (9th Cir. 2013) ("We ordinarily review for abuse of discretion a denial of a motion to amend a complaint. But here, where the district court denied the motion to amend because of its conclusion that the claim in the proposed complaint was preempted as a matter of law, we review de novo."), citing Alvarez v. Chevron Corp., 656 F.3d 925, 931 (9th Cir. 2011).

Hintz v. JPMorgan Chase Bank, N.A., 686 F.3d 505, 511 (8th Cir. 2012) ("'[W]hen the court denies leave on the basis of futility, it means the district court has reached the legal conclusion that the amended complaint could not withstand a motion to dismiss under Rule 12(b)(6) of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, and appellate review of this legal conclusion is * * * de novo.'"), quoting Cornelia I. Crowell GST Trust v. Possis Medical, Inc., 519 F.3d 778, 781-782 (8th Cir. 2008).

Alhallaq v. Radha Soami Trading, LLC, 484 Fed. Appx. 293, 298 (11th Cir. 2012) (per curiam) ("However, we review the denial de novo when the district court denies leave to amend based on futility because it concludes that an amended complaint would necessarily fail as a matter of law."), citing Florida Evergreen Foliage v. E.I. DuPont De Nemours and Co., 470 F.3d 1036, 1040 (11th Cir. 2006).

Johnson v. Lucent Technologies Inc., 653 F.3d 1000 (9th Cir. 2011), as amended, (Aug. 19, 2011) (dismissal without leave to amend reviewed de novo).

"[W]hen the district court bases its denial on the futility of the proposed amendments, we review the underlying legal conclusions de novo." Walker v. Barrett, 650 F.3d 1198, 1210 (8th Cir. 2011) (internal quotation marks omitted).

"When the denial of leave to amend is based on a legal interpretation, such as a determination that amendment would be futile, a reviewing court conducts a de novo review." Hutchison v. Deutsche Bank Securities Inc., 647 F.3d 479, 490 (2d Cir. 2011).

When the denial of a motion to dismiss is based on rulings of law, appellate review is de novo. Papelino v. Albany College of Pharmacy of Union University, 633 F.3d 81, 88 (2d Cir. 2011).

"We review a denial of a motion for reconsideration for abuse of discretion, but we review the District Court's underlying legal determinations de novo and factual determinations for clear error." U.S., ex rel. Pilecki-Simko v. Chubb Institute, 443 Fed. Appx. 754 (3d Cir. 2011), quoting Howard Hess Dental Laboratories Inc. v. Dentsply Intern., Inc., 602 F.3d 237, 245 (3d Cir. 2010).

Jaso v. The Coca Cola Co., 435 Fed. Appx. 346, 351 (5th Cir. 2011) (when refusal to grant leave to amend is based solely on futility, standard of review is de novo).

"We review a district court's denial of leave to amend for 'abuse of discretion,' although we review any legal conclusions relevant to that decision de novo."

Gorham-DiMaggio v. Countrywide Home Loans, Inc., 421 Fed. Appx. 97, 101 (2d Cir. 2011).

"We review a denial of a motion for reconsideration for abuse of discretion, while reviewing the District Court's underlying legal determinations de novo and its factual determinations for clear error." Brown v. DiGuglielmo, 418 Fed. Appx. 99, 101 (3d Cir. 2011).

Hill v. City of Oklahoma City, 448 Fed. Appx. 814 (10th Cir. 2011) (when denial of amendment is based on futility, appellate court will review legal basis for futility de novo).

Although denial of a motion for leave to amend ordinarily is reviewed for abuse of discretion, when that denial is based solely on futility, review is de novo. City of Clinton, Ark. v. Pilgrim's Pride Corp., 632 F.3d 148, 152 (5th Cir. 2010).

In re Medtronic, Inc., Sprint Fidelis Leads Products Liability Litigation, 623 F.3d 1200, 1208 (8th Cir. 2010) ("We review denial of leave to amend for an abuse of discretion, but the legal conclusions underlying a determination of futility are reviewed de novo.").

"Ordinarily, the decision of whether to allow a plaintiff leave to amend a complaint is within the district court's discretion, however, when the court denies leave on the basis of futility, it means the district court has reached the legal conclusion that the amended complaint could not withstand a motion to dismiss under Rule 12(b)(6) of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, and appellate review of this legal conclusion is also de novo." Cornelia I. Cornelia I. Crowell GST Trust v. Possis Medical, Inc., 519 F.3d 778, 781-782 (8th Cir. 2008) (internal citations omitted) (Goldberg, J.).

Miller v. Champion Enterprises Inc., 346 F.3d 660 (6th Cir. 2003) (although denial of leave to amend is generally reviewed for abuse of discretion, when decision is based on legal conclusion that amendment would be futile, review is de novo).

But compare

Edwards v. Marin Park, Inc., 356 F.3d 1058 (9th Cir. 2004) (when plaintiff chose not to amend her complaint given chance by court, in part in order to attain an appealable final judgment of entire case more quickly, failure to amend was not sanctionable through conversion of dismissal into one under Rule 41(b), which is only reviewed for abuse of discretion, as opposed to de novo review for Rule 12(b)(6); such action would unjustly deny appeal of adequacy of complaint to plaintiffs exercising their right to stand on original complaint).

 © 2025 Thomson Reuters. No claim to original U.S. Government Works.

Note 111 contains citations to cases supporting the proposition that the plaintiff can amend once as a matter of right under Rule 15(a) despite the dismissal if no responsive pleading has been served.

133 Wise practice

E.E.O.C. v. Ohio Edison Co., 7 F.3d 541 (6th Cir. 1993) (proper course of action when plaintiff may have claim is to allow it to amend complaint).

Schlesinger Inv. Partnership v. Fluor Corp., 671 F.2d 739 (2d Cir. 1982).

When the plaintiff seeks an opportunity to amend his complaint to meet objections raised by a motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim, he should be accorded such an opportunity, since it cannot be determined whether the amended complaint will state a claim unless and until the amended complaint is filed and tested. Austin v. House of Vision, Inc., 385 F.2d 171 (7th Cir. 1967).

Empire Kosher Poultry, Inc. v. United Food and Commercial Workers Health and Welfare Fund of Northeastern Pennsylvania, 285 F. Supp. 2d 573 (M.D. Pa. 2003).

See also

"While a pro se litigant generally must be given at least one opportunity to amend his complaint, a district judge need not allow an amendment where amendment would be futile." Cornelius v. Bank of America, NA, 585 Fed. Appx. 996 (11th Cir. 2014).

U.S. ex rel. Adrian v. Regents of University of California, 363 F.3d 398 (5th Cir. 2004) (district court properly denied leave to amend because plaintiff already had one chance to amend).

Broam v. Bogan, 320 F.3d 1023 (9th Cir. 2003) (facts raised for first time in plaintiff's opposition papers should be considered by court in determining whether to grant leave to amend or to dismiss with or without prejudice).

Dean v. Westchester County P.R.C., 309 F. Supp. 2d 587 (S.D. N.Y. 2004) (court dismissed complaint with prejudice because plaintiff already had one chance to amend).

Compare

321 Studios v. Metro Goldwyn Mayer Studios, Inc., 307 F. Supp. 2d 1085 (N.D. Cal. 2004) (court should grant leave to amend even if no request was made, unless pleading could not possibly be cured by amendment).

Foley v. Marquez, 2003 WL 22288160 (N.D. Cal. 2003) (Ninth Circuit advocates granting leave to amend even if no request to amend pleading was made, unless pleading could not possibly be cured by amendment), citing Lopez v. Smith, 203 F.3d 1122 (9th Cir. 2000).

But compare

U.S. ex rel. Karvelas v. Melrose-Wakefield Hosp., 360 F.3d 220 (1st Cir. 2004) (district court has no obligation to invite plaintiff to amend complaint when plaintiff has not sought amendment).

Wagner v. Daewoo Heavy Industries America Corp., 314 F.3d 541 (11th Cir. 2002) (overruling prior precedent that required giving plaintiff at least one opportunity to amend complaint before dismissing with prejudice and instituting new rule that district court is not required to grant leave to amend sua sponte when plaintiff, represented by counsel, never filed motion to amend nor requested leave to amend before district court).

134 Leniency on first amendment attempt

Amyndas Pharmaceuticals, S.A. v. Zealand Pharma A/S, 48 F.4th 18 (1st Cir. 2022) ("[In determining whether to grant leave to amend,] a court may consider whether a proposed amendment is a first attempt. Serial amendments may be given closer scrutiny.") (internal citations omitted).

Garcia v. City of Lubbock, Texas, 487 F. Supp. 3d 555, 564 (N.D. Tex. 2020) ("District courts 'often afford plaintiffs at least one opportunity to cure pleading deficiencies before dismissing a case, unless it is clear that the defects are incurable or the plaintiffs advise the court that they are unwilling or unable to amend in a manner that will avoid dismissal.'") (quoting Great Plains Trust Co. v. Morgan Stanley Dean Witter & Co., 313 F.3d 305, 329 (5th Cir. 2002)), aff'd in part, rev'd in part, 2023 WL 4636896 (5th Cir. 2023).

Gray v. D.C. Public Schools, 688 F. Supp. 2d 1, 5-6 (D.D.C. 2010) (granting plaintiff's motion for leave to amend in part because "the Amendment submitted by Plaintiff [wa]s her first attempt to cure the deficiencies of the original Complaint").

Dean v. Westchester County P.R.C., 309 F. Supp. 2d 587 (S.D. N.Y. 2004) (court dismissed complaint with prejudice because plaintiff already had one chance to amend).

See also

"While a pro se litigant generally must be given at least one opportunity to amend his complaint, a district judge need not allow an amendment where amendment would be futile." Cornelius v. Bank of America, NA, 585 Fed. Appx. 996 (11th Cir. 2014).

135 Moitie case

452 U.S. 394, 101 S. Ct. 2424, 69 L. Ed. 2d 103 (1981).

 © 2025 Thomson Reuters. No claim to original U.S. Government Works.

136 Moitie footnote
452 U.S. at 399 n.3.

137 Res judicata effect
Beach Blitz Co. v. City of Miami Beach, Florida, 13 F.4th 1289 (11th Cir. 2021), citing Wright & Miller.

Kaswatuka v. Dallas/Fort Worth International Airport Board, 853 Fed. Appx. 916, 917-918 (5th Cir. 2021) ("[T]he district court dismissed [plaintiff's] claim with prejudice. * * * [T]hat constitutes 'a final judgment on the merits for res judicata purposes.'").

"Although res judicata is not a defense under Rule 12(b), it may be raised in a Rule 12(b)(6) motion where the existence of the defense can be determined from the face of the complaint." Johnson v. Girl Scouts of the USA, 596 Fed. Appx. 797, 798 (11th Cir. 2015).

Clark v. Callahan, 587 Fed. Appx. 1000, 1002 (8th Cir. 2014).

Stevens v. Bank of America, N.A., 587 Fed. Appx. 130 (5th Cir. 2014) ("It is well established that Rule 12(b)(6) dismissals are made on the merits.").

Goings v. Sumner County Dist. Attorney's Office, 571 Fed. Appx. 634 (10th Cir. 2014), citing Wright & Miller.

Davis v. Davis, 551 Fed. Appx. 991, 994 (11th Cir. 2014).

McLean v. U.S., 566 F.3d 391, 396 (4th Cir. 2009) (abrogated by, Lomax v. Ortiz-Marquez, 140 S. Ct. 1721, 207 L. Ed. 2d 132 (2020)) ("Courts have held that, unless otherwise specified, a dismissal for failure to state a claim under Rule 12(b)(6) is presumed to be both a judgment on the merits and to be rendered with prejudice.").

Drobnak v. Andersen Corp., 561 F.3d 778 (8th Cir. 2009).

U.S. ex rel. Karvelas v. Melrose-Wakefield Hosp., 360 F.3d 220 (1st Cir. 2004) (in absence of clear statement to contrary, dismissal pursuant to Rule 12(b)(6) is presumed to be with prejudice, carrying claim preclusive effect).

Wilkins v. Jakeway, 183 F.3d 528 (6th Cir. 1999) (dismissal for failure to state claim is on merits).

Pabst Brewing Co., Inc. v. Corrao, 161 F.3d 434 (7th Cir. 1998).

Ahmed v. U.S., 147 F.3d 791 (8th Cir. 1998).

N.A.A.C.P. v. Hunt, 891 F.2d 1555, 1560 (11th Cir. 1990) (holding that a "dismissal for failure to state a claim under Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 12(b)

(6) is a 'judgment on the merits' " even where the district court does not state whether the claims were dismissed with or without prejudice) (quoting Federated Dept. Stores, Inc. v. Moitie, 452 U.S. 394, 399 n.3, 101 S. Ct. 2424, 69 L. Ed. 2d 103 (1981)).

Because leave to amend was given, when the plaintiff chose not to plead further and was barred from doing so by the statute of limitations, she waived her right to file an amended complaint, and the order of dismissal was final and appealable. Olson v. Rembrandt Printing Co., 511 F.2d 1228 (8th Cir. 1975) (rejected by, Aronsen v. Crown Zellerbach, 662 F.2d 584 (9th Cir. 1981)).

When the court could not distinguish the claim alleged in the complaint from claims alleged in a former complaint that was dismissed for insufficiency, the prior action was dispositive of all issues raised in the present action and res judicata applied to it. Rhodes v. Jones, 351 F.2d 884 (8th Cir. 1965).

Dismissal with prejudice is res judicata and effectively bars any effort in any court at any time to find out what the true facts were. Shull v. Pilot Life Ins. Co., 313 F.2d 445 (5th Cir. 1963).

When an order of dismissal under Rule 12(b)(6) did not specify that it was not upon the merits, under Rule 41(b) it operated as an adjudication upon the merits. Bartsch v. Chamberlin Co. of America, 266 F.2d 357 (6th Cir. 1959). It is questionable whether this case is a valid precedent in light of the Supreme Court's Swierkiewicz decision, which is discussed at note 93, above.

Swaida v. Gentiva Health Services, 238 F. Supp. 2d 325 (D. Mass. 2002) (dismissal for failure to state claim is judgment on merits for res judicata purposes and there need be no specific notification that dismissal was on merits since it is presumed to be with prejudice unless order explicitly states otherwise).

Dismissal of an action under Rule 12(b)(6), as a final federal judgment on the merits, precludes the parties or their privies from relitigating issues that were or could have been raised in that action. Lipin v. National Union Fire Ins. Co. of Pittsburgh, Pa., 202 F. Supp. 2d 126 (S.D. N.Y. 2002).

Ramirez v. Brooklyn Aids Task Force, 175 F.R.D. 423 (E.D. N.Y. 1997), judgment aff'd, 164 F.3d 619 (2d Cir. 1998).

Mennella v. Office of Court Admin., 938 F. Supp. 128 (E.D. N.Y. 1996), judgment aff'd, 164 F.3d 618 (2d Cir. 1998).

DeWit v. Firstar Corp., 904 F. Supp. 1476 (N.D. Iowa 1995).

Riddle v. National R.R. Passenger Corp., 869 F. Supp. 40 (D.D.C. 1994).

See also

 © 2025 Thomson Reuters. No claim to original U.S. Government Works.

Restatement (Second), Judgments, § 19 (1982), and comment.

See § 2373 for a discussion of the effect of Rule 41(b) on a Rule 12(b)(6) dismissal and § 4439 for a discussion of res judicata following a dismissal on the pleadings.

Compare
"Vermont Rule 12(b)(6) mirrors Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 12(b)(6). The Vermont Supreme Court has held that 'the dismissal of [a] complaint under V.R.C.P. 12(b)(6) for failure to state a claim * * * operates as a final adjudication on the merits.'" Steuerwald v. Cleveland, 651 Fed. Appx. 49, 50–51 (2d Cir. 2016) (citing Judd v. State, 2012 WL 1305003, *2 (Vt. 2012)).

But compare
"In a previous appeal, Cirrus challenged the district court's dismissal of its defamation claim under Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 12(b)(6). We reversed. On remand, Adams moved for judgment on the pleadings on the defamation claim under Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 12(c). In support of his motion, he submitted a foreign legal expert's declaration for the district court's review pursuant to Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 44.1. Notwithstanding the submission of new evidence, the district court held that the Rule 12(c) motion was barred by our prior mandate and certified its order for interlocutory appeal. Adams appeals that ruling. Our mandate in the previous appeal considered only the facts set forth in the complaint. We did not address, or bar further consideration of, whether additional evidence might support Adams' argument for dismissal. Adams properly presented such additional evidence in his motion for judgment on the pleadings. Given the submission of new evidence, the Rule 12(c) motion was not barred by our mandate. The district court therefore erred in denying the motion on that basis." Cirrus Education, Inc. v. Adams, 2023 WL 3051833, *1 (9th Cir. 2023) (citations omitted).

138 Res judicata rationale
Restatement (Second), Judgments, § 19 (1982), and comment.

For further discussion, see § 4439.

139 Not final determination
Occupy Columbia v. Haley, 738 F.3d 107, 115 (4th Cir. 2013) ("Ordinarily, we do not possess appellate jurisdiction over interlocutory orders-such as the denial of a Rule 12(b)(6) motion to dismiss or the denial of a Rule 12(c) motion for judgment on the pleadings-because such decisions are not final judgments * * *.").

Linares v. McLaughlin, 423 Fed. Appx. 84 (2d Cir. 2011).

140 Particular statement of claim

Alfred v. Corrections Corp. of America, 437 Fed. Appx. 281 (5th Cir. 2011) (dismissal for failure to state claim does not mean claim necessarily is without merit).

U.S. v. Ritchie, 15 F.3d 592 (6th Cir. 1994).

Maldonado v. City of Pearsall, Tex., 977 F. Supp. 2d 646 (W.D. Tex. 2013) ("[T]he plaintiff should generally be given at least one chance to amend the complaint under Rule 15(a) before dismissing the action with prejudice."), citing Great Plains Trust Co. v. Morgan Stanley Dean Witter & Co., 313 F.3d 305, 329 (5th Cir. 2002).

Abbott Laboratories v. Zenith Laboratories, Inc., 934 F. Supp. 925 (N.D. Ill. 1995), dismissed, 78 F.3d 603 (Fed. Cir. 1996), quoting Wright & Miller.

Judgments of dismissal or nonsuit are not sufficient to sustain a plea of res judicata because they do not constitute any final conclusion of the merits of the litigation; this is necessarily true, for were the rules otherwise a party might be precluded by some technical or trivial defect. Playa De Flor Land & Imp. Co. v. U.S., 70 F. Supp. 281 (D. C.Z. 1945), judgment modified, 160 F.2d 131 (C.C.A. 5th Cir. 1947).

But see
Restatement (Second), Judgments, § 19 (1982), comment (d).

141 Semtek case
531 U.S. 497, 121 S. Ct. 1021, 149 L. Ed. 2d 32 (2001).

142 Forum state preclusion law
Semtek, 531 U.S. at 508.

143 Rule 41(b)
For a discussion of Rule 41(b) and its effects, §§ 2369, 2373.

144 Federal common law
Semtek, 531 U.S. at 501-08.

See also
Rollins v. Wackenhut Services, Inc., 703 F.3d 122, 132-133 (D.C. Cir. 2012) (Kavanaugh, J., concurring) ("Some of this Court's cases, without citing Rule 41(b), have suggested that Rule 12(b)(6) dismissals with prejudice are disfavored. Those decisions have imposed a "high" bar for Rule 12(b)(6) dismissals with prejudice. See, e.g., Belizan v. Hershon, 434 F.3d 579, 583-184 (D.C. Cir. 2006). By their terms, however, it is not evident that the Rules impose such a constraint on the discretion of district courts in issuing Rule 12(b)(6) dismissals. On the contrary, Rule 41(b) contemplates that a Rule 12(b)(6) dismissal ordinarily operates as a dismissal with prejudice, unless the district court in its discretion states otherwise.").

145 Federal question claims

"Turning to the claims against Chase, we also conclude that the district court did not err in determining that res judicata bars Stone's wrongful foreclosure claim against Chase because Stone had the opportunity to raise this claim in her first action. As to the first prong of the res judicata analysis, in her first foreclosure-related action, Stone sued Chase in state court and the defendants properly removed the action to federal court based on federal-question jurisdiction—the federal district court therefore properly exercised jurisdiction over the action. The second prong is also met because, by dismissing all the claims against Chase for failure to state a claim, the district court entered a final judgment on the merits." Stone v. JPMorgan Chase Bank, N.A., 786 Fed. Appx. 212 (11th Cir. 2019).

Kennemer v. Denton County, 2022 WL 4459881, *6-10 (E.D. Tex. 2022) (finding "all elements for res judicata [we]re met" when plaintiff sought to bring § 1983 claims that had been dismissed for failure to state a claim by a court exercising federal question subject matter jurisdiction in a prior case), report and recommendation adopted, 2022 WL 4449320 (E.D. Tex. 2022).

Sabeerin v. Fassler, 2021 WL 4155899, *4 (D.N.M. 2021) ("[Because the judge in the corresponding case] dismissed Plaintiffs' federal claims and issued a final judgment on the merits based on application of qualified immunity raised pursuant to Fed. R. Civ. P., Rule 12(b)(6) * * * the corresponding judgment carries preclusive effect and requires dismissal here."), report and recommendation adopted, 2021 WL 4150886 (D.N.M. 2021).

146 Split of authority

Frazier v. Colthfelt, 2020 WL 914323, *4 (E.D. Mich. 2020) (cataloguing the split of authority), report and recommendation adopted, 2020 WL 905746 (E.D. Mich. 2020).

Tish v. Magee-Women's Hosp. of University of Pittsburgh Medical Center, 2007 WL 1221137, *3-5 (W.D. Pa. 2007) (same).

U.S. v. Union Corp., 194 F.R.D. 223, 230-231 (E.D. Pa. 2000) (same).

Amendment as matter of right despite dismissal

"[P]laintiffs enjoy leave to amend once as a matter of course * * * this right survives dismissal." Stoller v. Walworth County, 770 Fed. Appx. 762, 764 (7th Cir. 2019).

"[A] plaintiff ordinarily retains the ability to amend his complaint once as a matter of right, even after a court grants a motion to dismiss." Alioto v. Town of Lisbon, 651 F.3d 715, 721 (7th Cir. 2011).

"[A]n order dismissing the original complaint normally does not eliminate the plaintiff's right to amend once as a matter of right." Camp v. Gregory, 67 F.3d 1286, 1289 (7th Cir. 1995).

Domino Sugar Corp. v. Sugar Workers Local Union 392 of United Food and Commercial Workers Intern. Union, 10 F.3d 1064, 1068 n.1 (4th Cir. 1993) (explaining that motion to dismiss did not preclude plaintiff from amending complaint and therefore leave to amend was not needed).

Ohio Cas. Ins. Co. v. Farmers Bank of Clay, Ky., 178 F.2d 570, 572-573 (6th Cir. 1949) (upholding an amendment as a matter of right filed after the district court dismissed the original complaint).

Pactiv LLC v. Perez, 2021 WL 4439393, *1 n.1 (N.D. Ill. 2021) (citing Camp v. Gregory, 67 F.3d 1286, 1289 (7th Cir. 1995)).

"A motion to dismiss is not a 'responsive pleading' within the meaning of the Rule. Neither the filing nor granting of such a motion before answer terminates the right to amend." Eileen Frances Living Trust v. Bank of America, 2016 WL 3162061, *2 (E.D. Wash. 2016) (quoting Mayes v. Leipziger, 729 F.2d 605, 607 (9th Cir. 1984)).

"Courts have held generally that a party may amend its pleading without seeking leave of court after the pleading has been dismissed, as long as the amendment is made within a reasonable time and no responsive pleading has been served." Waterloov Gutter Protection Systems Co., Inc. v. Absolute Gutter Protection, L.L.C., 64 F. Supp. 2d 398, 408 (D.N.J. 1999), citing Wright & Miller.

Azevedo v. Housing Authority of City of Sarasota, 147 F.R.D. 255 (M.D. Fla. 1993) (allowing amendment despite previous dismissal because new facts raised sufficient claim).

Amendment within court's discretion
See cases cited in note 129 above.

147 Right to amend endures
Mayes v. Leipziger, 729 F.2d 605, 607 (9th Cir. 1984) ("Neither the filing nor granting of [a 12(b)(6)] motion before answer terminates the right to amend [under Rule 15(a)].").

"The right to amend a complaint 'as a matter of course' is provided in Rule 15(a). Rule 15(a)(1) expressly mentions only two events which terminate this right. The first event is upon being served with a responsive pleading. A responsive pleading was never filed by Gharibco. The second event is the passing of '20 days after serving the pleading if a responsive pleading is not allowed and the action is not yet on the trial calendar.' A responsive pleading was allowed in this case. Therefore, Hamblen's right to amend as a matter of course under Rule 15(a) was not terminated at the time the Court dismissed his complaint under Rule 12(b)(6)." Hamblen v. Gharibco Enterprises, LLC, 2008 WL 4173621, *1 (D. Ariz. 2008).

148 Entry of judgment

Adams v. American Family Mut. Ins. Co., 813 F.3d 1151, 1155 (8th Cir. 2016) (district court did not abuse discretion by refusing plaintiff leave to amend because plaintiff sought to change theory of liability after class action petition had been dismissed).

Under Eleventh Circuit case law: "After the dismissal of a complaint and the entry of final judgment for the defendant, Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 15(a) does not apply; the plaintiff who seeks leave to amend must do so within 10 days of the entry of judgment by seeking relief under Rule 59(e) (motion to alter or amend a judgment) or Rule 60(b)(6) (motion for relief from a judgment). * * * A plaintiff's obligation is to ask the district court for leave to amend at that time, rather than to ask this court for leave to amend in the event it affirms the district court's Rule 12(b)(6) dismissal." Friedman v. Market Street Mortg. Corp., 520 F.3d 1289, 1293 n.4 (11th Cir. 2008) (internal citations omitted) (Tjoflat, J.).

The plaintiff cannot amend a dismissed complaint as a matter of right, since the right to amend without leave ends with the entry of a judgment dismissing the action. O'Bryan v. Chandler, 352 F.2d 987 (10th Cir. 1965).

The right to amend the complaint once as a matter of course prior to a responsive pleading terminates with a judgment of dismissal; thereafter efforts to amend presumably must first be directed to reopening the judgment under Rule 59(a) or Rule 60(b). Cassell v. Michaux, 240 F.2d 406 (D.C. Cir. 1956).

Feddersen Motors v. Ward, 180 F.2d 519 (10th Cir. 1950).

It might be argued that the plaintiff would be entitled as of right to one amendment of his complaint, without any limitation of time, despite the filing of a motion to dismiss; however, it hardly could have been intended that the plaintiff should have the right to amend without limit of time after a judgment of dismissal had been entered. U.S. v. Newbury Mfg. Co., 123 F.2d 453 (C.C.A. 1st Cir. 1941).

Fields v. Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner & Smith, Inc., 2004 WL 626180 (S.D. N.Y. 2004).

Christophides v. Porco, 289 F. Supp. 403 (S.D. N.Y. 1968).

A party is not entitled to amend his complaint as a matter of right after the court has entered an order dismissing the original complaint. Kirsch v. Barnes, 157 F.

Supp. 671 (N.D. Cal. 1957), judgment aff'd on other grounds, 263 F.2d 692 (9th Cir. 1959).

149 Delaying entry of judgment

"[W]hen a complaint is dismissed under Rule 12(b)(6) and the claimant still possesses the right to amend as a matter of course under Rule 15(a), the district court must give the claimant an opportunity to exercise this right before dismissing the action. This opportunity need not be a sua sponte granting of an explicit leave to amend. Instead, the district court can simply provide a reasonable amount of time between the granting of a 12(b)(6) motion and the dismissal of the action for the claimant to exercise its 15(a) right. Here, however, the Court did neither, and Hamblen was denied the opportunity to exercise his right to amend as a matter of course. Denying Hamblen this opportunity was clear error." Hamblen v. Gharibco Enterprises, LLC, 2008 WL 4173621, *1 (D. Ariz. 2008).

150 Relief from appellate court

Where federal appellate court affirmed district court's decision to dismiss investment group's claim with prejudice, the rule of mandate doctrine precluded amendment of that claim on remand. The Hemmer Group v. Southwest Water Company, 663 Fed. Appx. 496 (9th Cir. 2016).

When the proposed amended complaint did not disclose any new ground for relief, and the appellate court had affirmed a dismissal of the complaint and had not granted leave to amend on a prior appeal, it was beyond the power of the district court to disturb the judgment by granting the plaintiff leave to amend. Ginsburg v. Stern, 242 F.2d 379 (3d Cir. 1957).

See also

Butcher & Sherrerd v. Welsh, 206 F.2d 259 (3d Cir. 1953), judgment vacated, 223 F.2d 262 (3d Cir. 1955) and (disapproved of by, Standard Oil Co. of California v. U.S., 429 U.S. 17, 97 S. Ct. 31, 50 L. Ed. 2d 21 (1976)).

151 Rule 15

See §§ 1471 to 1510.

Rule 59

See §§ 2801 to 2821.

Rule 60

See §§ 2851 to 2873.

152 Transferee court

In re Donald J. Trump Casino Securities Litigation-Taj Mahal Litigation, 7 F.3d 357 (3d Cir. 1993).

See also

 © 2025 Thomson Reuters. No claim to original U.S. Government Works.

Terry v. SunTrust Banks, Inc., 493 Fed. Appx. 345 (4th Cir. 2012).

In re: Whole Foods Market, Inc., 163 F. Supp. 3d 385 (W.D. Tex. 2016) (transferee court dismissed all claims, although it applied choice-of-law rules of transferor courts).

153 Power to terminate

See generally §§ 3865 to 3867.

End of Document

© 2025 Thomson Reuters. No claim to original U.S. Government Works.

CASE NO. 56

2018 WL 296063
Only the Westlaw citation
is currently available.
United States District Court,
N.D. Texas, Dallas Division.

Arthur LOPEZ, individually, and on behalf of himself and all other similarly situated individuals, Plaintiff,
v.
DON HERRING LTD., Defendant.

CIVIL ACTION
NO.
3
:
16
-
CV
-
02663
-
B

Signed 01/04/2018

Attorneys and Law Firms

Joseph Hanson Malley, Law Offices of Joseph H. Malley PC, Dallas, TX, for Plaintiff.

David B. Tabor, Martha Hardwick Hofmeister, Shackelford Bowen McKinley & Norton LLP, Dallas, TX, for Defendant.

MEMORANDUM OPINION AND ORDER

JANE J. BOYLE, UNITED STATES DISTRICT JUDGE

1 The Driver's Privacy Protection Act (DPPA) limits access to and disclosure of personal information in state-maintained motor-vehicle records and authorizes private individuals to sue those they believe have violated the act. In this case, auto dealer Don Herring Ltd. (Herring) mailed to Arthur Lopez (Lopez) an advertisement containing Lopez's name and address as well as the make and model of his car. Believing the information in the advertisement to have come from the Texas Department of Motor Vehicles's (DMV) records, Lopez filed a class-action DPPA claim against Herring and others. Herring, the only remaining defendant, now moves the Court to dismiss Lopez's suit under Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 12(b)(6), contending that Lopez has failed to plead sufficient facts to support a DPPA claim. For the reasons that follow, the Court DENIES Herrings motion to dismiss.

I.

BACKGROUND

A. Factual History [1]

This case begins with an advertisement Lopez received in the mail from Herring. Doc. 47, Am. Compl., ¶ 5; Doc. 47-1, Am. Compl., Ex. 1. Having never done business with Herring, Lopez was shocked to find that the advertisement contained not only Lopez's full name and address but also the make, model, and year of his car. Doc. 47, Am. Compl., ¶

 © 2025 Thomson Reuters. No claim to original U.S. Government Works.

23. Believing the safety of his identity was on the line, Lopez decided to investigate. Id. Lopez pleads that he talked to Herring Senior Sales Associate Cary Wilson, who told him that Herring obtained his vehicle information from the Texas DMV. Id.

Lopez then asked his attorney, Joseph Malley (Malley), to investigate further. Id. Malley asked Herring via mail,[2] "I understand you informed [Lopez] that the information was not obtained from [Lopez's former employer][3] but from the state motor vehicle department. Can you clarify this issue?" Id. Herring's General Sales Manager, Reuben Mosley, responded, "Yes that is correct. We use a third party company that supplies the information and it is gathered through vehicle registrations." Id.

Malley also contacted the third party the General Sales Manager mentioned: Tacito & Associates, Inc. (Tacito). Doc. 1, Compl., ¶ 72; Doc. 1-4, Compl., Ex. 5. Tacito created the advertisement that triggered this action and may have provided Herring with Lopez's vehicle information. Doc. 47-1, Am. Compl., Ex. 1; Doc. 1-4, Compl., Ex. 5. The letter Malley sent Tacito is not in the record, but Tacito's CEO responded that Tacito received Lopez's record from another company, BB Direct, and that BB Direct's auto list is "Shelby Act compliant"[4] and does not draw from Texas DMV records. Doc. 1-4, Compl., Ex. 5.

2 Malley then contacted BB Direct. What Malley sent to BB Direct is not in the record. BB Direct's Brian Berg responded that BB Direct had a record of an order from Tacito for Herring but no longer had the "data file." Doc. 1-8, Compl., Ex. 9. Though nothing in the complaints nor their attachments explain what this "data file" is, the Court presumes it contained information of car owners like Lopez. Berg went on to explain that BB Direct acts as a broker when it receives requests for automobile owners and obtained the list for the Tacito order from a Texas company called Data Shark. Id. Berg said Data Shark's owner told him that Data Shark's file is Shelby compliant and that Data Shark's file sources are oil-lube stations, insurance companies, and some auto groups. Id. Berg did not believe Data Shark's data came from the DMV because Data Shark's data contained errors. Id. Berg said also that he did not know where Lopez's information came from or whether it was even on the Tacito list. Id.

B. Procedural History

When Lopez first filed this class-action lawsuit, he sued Herring, Tacito, BB Direct, and Monica Braverman, the owner of Data Shark, alleging they violated the DPPA and purporting to represent a class of "millions, if not tens of millions" of victims of the defendants' allegedly unlawful practices. Doc. 1, Compl, ¶ 136. But the Court dismissed Lopez's original complaint. Doc. 45, Electronic Order. Lopez then filed an Amended Complaint, naming Herring as the only defendant but still claiming to represent a class possibly numbering in the tens of millions. Doc. 47, Am. Compl., ¶¶ 8, 33. Though, Lopez more realistically describes the class he purports to represent as consisting of those whose personal information Herring obtained from state DMVs. Id. at ¶ 30. And whereas Lopez attached emails from Tacito and BB Direct to his original complaint, he attaches only emails from Herring to his amended complaint and omits from his pleadings any mention of Tacito, BB Direct, or Data Shark. Doc. 47-2, Am. Compl., Ex. 2; Doc. 47-3, Am. Compl., Ex. 3.

Herring now moves that the Court dismiss Lopez's amended complaint under Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 12(b)(6). Doc. 48, Mot. to Dismiss. That motion is ripe for the Court to resolve.

II.

LEGAL STANDARD

Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 12(b)(6) authorizes dismissal for failure to state a claim upon which relief may be granted. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(b)(6). When analyzing rule 12(b)(6) motions, courts generally consider "the complaint, its proper attachments, documents incorporated into the complaint by reference, and matters of which a court may take judicial notice." Wolcott v. Sebelius, 635 F.3d 757, 763 (5th Cir. 2011). Courts can consider documents attached to a motion to dismiss if the documents are referenced in the challenged complaint and central to the plaintiff's claims. Kaye v. Lone Star Fund V (U.S.), L.P., 453 B.R. 645, 661–62 (N.D. Tex. 2011). During this review, factual allegations must be viewed as true and taken "in the light most favorable to the plaintiffs." Spivey v. Robertson, 197 F.3d 772, 774 (5th Cir. 1999). Courts are not, however, "bound to accept as true a legal conclusion couched as a factual allegation." Bell Atl. Corp. v Twombly, 550 U.S. 544, 555 (2007).

Rule 12(b)(6) motions turn on whether a complaint contains "enough facts to state a claim to relief that is plausible on its face." Id. at 570. Facially plausible complaints " 'allege more than labels and conclusions'[;] ... [the] 'factual allegations must be enough to raise a right to relief above the speculative level.' " Jebaco, Inc. v. Harrah's Operating Co., 587 F.3d 314, 318 (5th Cir. 2009) (quoting Twombly, 550 U.S. at 555). If the allegations lack sufficient detail, "this basic deficiency should ... be exposed" before the parties and court spend unnecessary time and resources on the case. Twombly, 550 U.S. at 558.

III.

ANALYSIS

Lopez complains that Herring violated the DPPA. Doc. 47, Am. Compl., ¶¶ 3–6. The DPPA authorizes individuals to file civil actions against those they believe to have violated the act. 18 U.S.C. § 2724(a). To prevail in his civil action against Herring, Lopez must prove that Herring "knowingly ... obtain[ed] or disclos[ed] personal information, from a motor vehicle record, for any use not permitted under ... this title." Id. § 2722(a).

3 Herring now argues that Lopez has failed to plead a plausible claim. Doc. 48, Mot. Dismiss. The Court disagrees.

Lopez has pleaded sufficient facts to make his claim plausible. Reading the complaint and disregarding legal conclusions leaves the Court with two key facts. See Twombly, 550 U.S. at 555 (stating that courts should disregard legal conclusions when evaluating the sufficiency of a pleading under rule 12(b)(6)). First, Lopez alleges that, when he asked Herring where it obtained the information in the advertisement he received in the mail, a Herring salesperson responded that Herring obtained Lopez's information from the Texas DMV. Doc. 47, Am. Compl, ¶ 23. Second, Lopez's attorney emailed Herring, "I understand you informed [Lopez] that the information was not obtained from [Lopez's former employer] but from the state motor vehicle department. Can you clarify the issue?" Id. Herring's General Sales Manager responded, "Yes that is correct. We use a third party company that supplies the information and it is gathered through vehicle registrations." Id. Taken together and in the light most favorable to Lopez, Spivey, 197 F.3d at 774, these pleadings make it plausible that Herring knowingly obtained Lopez's information from the DMV or disclosed it, knowing it had been obtained from the DMV.

Herring's arguments that the sales person's and General Sales Manager's statements do not make Lopez's claim plausible fail. Herring first contends that the sales person and the General Sales Manager were incorrect about how Herring obtained Lopez's information and therefore that their statements do not make Lopez's claim plausible. Doc. 51, Reply, 3–4. But the Court must take Lopez's factual pleadings as true and construe factual allegations in the plaintiff's favor. Spivey, 197 F.3d at 774. Thus, the Court must accept as fact who Lopez said made the statements and what they said. And the Court can reasonably infer based that information that Herring knew Lopez's information came from the DMV. Thus, the mere possibility that the sales person and General Sales Manager were incorrect about the source of Lopez's information does not render Lopez's claim implausible.

Second, Herring argues that the General Sales Manager's statement, even if taken as true, does not make Lopez's claim plausible. Doc. 51, Reply, 3. Because the General Sales Manager said Herring obtained the information from third parties, Herring contends, the General Sales Manager could only have been speculating about the origin of the information. Id. But although the manager could have been speculating, the Court can still reasonably infer that Herring knew Lopez's information came from the DMV based on what he said and the query to which he was responding.

Herring additionally contends that the General Sales Manager said only that the third parties obtained their information from "vehicle registrations" and that "vehicle registrations" is different from the state DMV. Id. But Lopez alleges that his attorney asked if the records came from the DMV, and the general manager said, "Yes that is correct." Doc. 47, Am. Compl. ¶ 23. Again, the Court can reasonably infer that the sales manager was confirming Malley's suspicion that Lopez's information came from the DMV.

4 Next, moving beyond the four corners of Lopez's complaint, Herring argues that the attachments Lopez attached to his original, now dismissed, complaint render his current claim implausible. Doc. 48, Reply, 3–4. In both Lopez's live and dismissed complaints, Lopez accuses Herring of violating the DPPA, and Lopez attaches the Herring General Sales Manager's response to Lopez's attorney's question to both complaints. Doc. 1-3, Compl., Ex. 4; Doc. 47-2, Am. Compl., Ex. 2. In the response, the General Sales Manager referred to a third party from which Herring may have obtained Lopez's information. Doc. 47, Am. Compl., ¶ 23. Lopez attached an email from this third party to his original complaint. Doc. 1-4, Compl., Ex. 5. The email was from the CEO of Tacito Marketing, which, according to the advertisement Herring sent Lopez, created the advertisement for Herring. Doc. 47-1, Am. Compl., Ex. 1. The Tacito email says in relevant part, "The record for Mr. Lopez came from BB Direct. BB Direct is a mailing list broker ... They have been providing TACITO alternate date for over 13 years. Their auto list is Shelby Act compliant and does not draw from the Texas DMV records." Doc. 1-4, Compl., Ex. 5. Lopez's attorney also contacted BB Direct and attached BB Direct's response to Lopez's original complaint. Only BB Direct's response is in the record; it says BB Direct received an order from Tacito regarding Herring but that BB Direct did not retain the data file. Doc. 1-8, Compl., Ex. 9. BB Direct says it obtained the list it sent to Tacito from a company called Data Shark, the owner of which has told BB Direct that Data Shark's file is Shelby compliant and that Data Shark's sources are oil lube stations, insurance companies, and some auto groups. Id. BB Direct did not know the source of the information for the list sent to Tacito or if Lopez's information was on the list sent to Tacito. Id. BB Direct said also that it has found errors on her lists, which indicated to BB Direct that Data Shark data did not come from the DMV because if it did it would not contain errors. Id.

At the outset, the Court must determine whether it can consider the emails on which Herring relies. Typically, courts resolving 12(b)(6) motions consider only the challenged complaint. But the Fifth Circuit has said courts may consider also a complaint's "proper attachments, documents incorporated into the complaint by reference, and matters of which a court may take judicial notice." Wolcott, 635 F.3d at 763. The Fifth Circuit has allowed trial courts to consider also documents a movant attaches to its motion to dismiss as long as the plaintiff's complaint refers to the documents and the documents are "central" to the plaintiff's claims. Kaye, 453 B.R. at 661–62 Courts treat such documents as incorporated into the plaintiff's complaint. Id. at 662 n.16 (citing Fed. R. Civ. P. 10(c)).

Although the Fifth Circuit has not stated a test for determining whether a document is central to plaintiffs' claim such that a trial court may consider it when resolving a 12(b)(6) motion, id. at 662, Fifth Circuit precedent makes clear that a document is central to a plaintiff's claim only if "necessary to establish an element of one of the plaintiff's claims." Id. In contract cases, for example, the contract on which the plaintiff relies is central to the plaintiffs claim; the plaintiff cannot prevail without the contract. Id.

But if a "document referenced in a plaintiff's complaint is merely evidence of an element of the plaintiff's claim, then the court may not incorporate it into the complaint." Id. at 662. For example, in Scanlan v. Texas A&M University, the plaintiffs sued Texas A&M University in the wake of the Texas A&M 1999 bonfire incident, alleging that the university violated their civil rights. 343 F.3d 533, 535 (5th Cir. 2003). The Fifth Circuit held that the district court erred by relying on a "final report" to dismiss the plaintiffs claims under 12(b)(6). Id. at 536–37. The report was not central to the plaintiffs' claims because the plaintiffs relied on "substantial, other evidence to support their claims." Id. at 537; See also Kaye, 453 B.R. at 662.

In two cases, though, the Fifth Circuit has allowed trial courts to consider at the 12(b)(6) stage materials outside the pleadings other than contracts giving rise to plaintiffs' claims. The most recent case is Walch v. Adjutant General's Department of Texas, 533 F.3d 289 (5th Cir. 2008). There Walch challenged his discharge from the Texas National Guard, raising "claims for deprivation of constitutional due process, conspiracy, failure to prevent conspiracy, intentional infliction of emotional distress, and retaliation." Id. at 292. The district court dismissed his case under 12(b)(6) but in doing so considered Walch's discharge letters, which Walsh attached to his complaint. Id. at 294. The Fifth Circuit affirmed because "[n]o party question[ed] the authenticity of these two documents and both were sufficiently referenced in the complaint to permit their consideration on a motion to dismiss." Id.

5 Causey v. Sewell Cadillac–Chevrolet, Inc., 394 F.3d 285 (5th Cir. 2004), though ultimately inapposite, also warrants some discussion. Causey sued Sewell and General Motors, alleging that they wrongfully discriminated against him because of his race when he asked Sewell to repair his car. Id. at 287. Relevant here is General Motors's motion to dismiss. After the district court dismissed Causey's case, the Fifth Circuit approved the trial court's considering of the franchising agreement between Sewell and General Motors. Id. at 290. The agreement was relevant because Causey sought to hold General Motors vicariously liable for Sewell's allegedly wrongful conduct. Id. Ultimately, agreement showed that General Motors was a separate legal entity from Sewell and therefore could not be vicariously liable for Sewell's allegedly wrongful actions. Id. But the trial court did not say whether it treated the motion as one to dismiss for failure to state a claim or as a motion for summary judgment, nor did the Fifth Circuit actually hold anything about what trial courts may consider when resolving 12(b)(6) motions. Id. Rather, the Fifth Circuit affirmed because, in a prior case, the Fifth Circuit affirmed a trial court's granting of summary judgment on similar facts. Id. (citing Arguello v. Conoco, Inc., 207 F.3d 803, 807 (5th Cir. 2000)). Causey thus sheds little light on the question of what trial courts may consider when resolving 12(b)(6) motions.

Here, Herring wants the Court to consider not only emails attached to the challenged complaint but also emails attached to a complaint the Court has already dismissed. Doc. 51, Reply, 3, 6. But the Court may not consider the emails. First, the emails are not attached to the challenged complaint. See Wolcott, 635 F.3d at 763 (stating that trial court may consider complaint's proper attachments).

Second, the Court cannot judicially notice the facts Herring says the emails establish. Id. at 763 (allowing trial courts to consider facts they can judicially notice). Federal Rule of Evidence 201 determines what facts a court may judicially notice. Courts may judicially notice facts not subject to reasonable dispute that are not subject to reasonable dispute because they are "generally known within the trial court's territorial jurisdiction; or ... can be accurately and readily determined from sources whose accuracy cannot reasonably be questioned." Fed. R. Evid. 201(b). Herring argues that the emails show that third parties from which it obtained Lopez's information did not obtain Lopez's information from the Texas DMV, which means Herring could not possibly have violated the DPPA. Doc. 51, Reply, 6. But that Tacito, BB Direct, and Data Shark obtained Lopez's records from a source other than Texas or some other state's DMV is not generally known in this Court's territorial jurisdiction, nor can the Court determine the truth of Herring's assertions from sources whose accuracy cannot be reasonably questioned. See Fed. R. Evid. 201(b).

 © 2025 Thomson Reuters. No claim to original U.S. Government Works.

Nor can the Court consider the emails on the ground that they are central to Lopez's claim. Here, the emails on which Herring relies are like the report in Scanlan and unlike a contract in a contract case. Like the report the district court improperly considered in Scanlan, the emails Herring wants the Court to consider are "merely evidence," Kaye, 453 B.R. at 662; they do not give rise to Lopez's claim in the way a contract gives rise to a contract claim. Though the emails may be relevant, probative evidence in Lopez's case, they are not legally necessary for Lopez to prevail.

Walch does not counsel otherwise. In Walch, the documents the Fifth Circuit considered were referenced by the plaintiffs' complaint and attached to the plaintiffs' response to the defendant's motion to dismiss. Walch, 553 F.3d at 294. But here, Lopez neither attached the emails to his complaint or his response to Herring's motion to dismiss nor referenced the emails in his live complaint. Thus, the Court declines to incorporate the emails Herring wants the Court to consider into Lopez's amended complaint.

Even if the Court considered the email incorporated into Lopez's complaint, the Court would deny Herring's motion. At the 12(b)(6) stage, the Court must accept Lopez's pleadings as facts. Spivey, 197 F.3d at 774. The emails Herring wants the Court to consider contradict the facts Lopez pleaded, but that does not mean the emails render Lopez's claim implausible. At any rate, the oddity of the Court comparing pleadings it must accept as facts and actual evidence demonstrates why courts generally limit their 12(b)(6) analysis to the pleadings.

6 There is still one way for the Court to consider the emails attached to Lopez's original complaint. But that would require converting Herring's motion to dismiss into a motion for summary judgment, Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(d), a procedural vehicle that allows court to consider evidence the parties submit, id. 56(c). The Court declines to issue summary judgment for Herring at this time. Although the emails on which Herring relies may be some evidence tending to disprove Lopez's claim, granting summary judgment before Lopez has had the chance to gather and submit evidence would be improper.

One matter remains unresolved: Herring's motion to strike portions of Lopez's amended complaint under Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 12(f). Doc. 48, Mot. to Dismiss, 8. Rule 12(f) allows courts to strike "any redundant, immaterial, impertinent, or scandalous matter." Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(f). Motions to strike under rule 12(f) are disfavored. FDIC v. Cheng, 832 F. Supp. 181, 185 (N.D. Tex. 1993). A court should grant a 12(f) motion to strike only when "the matter of which the movant complains bears no possible relation to the controversy or may cause the objecting party prejudice." OKC Corp. v. Williams, 461 F. Supp. 540, 550 (N.D. Tex. 1978). The Court will not strike Lopez's pleadings because the pleadings are related to the controversy and do not prejudice Herring.

IV.

CONCLUSION

The Court DENIES Herring's motion to dismiss Lopez's Amended Complaint and DENIES Herring's motion to strike. Doc. 48, Mot. to Dismiss.

SO ORDERED.

All Citations

Not Reported in Fed. Supp., 2018 WL 296063

Footnotes

1 This factual history is drawn from Lopez's original and amended complaints and their attachments.

2 Exactly who at Herring Malley emailed is unclear.

3 Lopez was at some point worried that Herring had obtained his personal information from his former employer, another car dealership. Doc. 47-2, Am. Compl., Ex. 2.

4 In 2000 Congress amended the Driver's Privacy Protection Act to include the act's current prohibitions on state officials disclosing drivers' personal information contained in DMV records. Pub. L. No. 106-346, 114 Stat. 1356(codified as amended at 18 U.S.C. §§ 2721, 2725). The 2000 amendment is known colloquially as the Shelby Amendment. But the provision of the DPPA Lopez seeks to enforce was not amended in 2000. Thus, why Tacito and BB Direct refer to lists of personal information as "Shelby compliant" and "Shelby Act compliant" is unclear.

End of Document

© 2025 Thomson Reuters. No claim to original U.S. Government Works.

CASE NO. 57

2024 WL 4720290
Only the Westlaw citation
is currently available.
United States District Court, S.D. Texas, Corpus Christi Division.

BANQUETE INDEPENDENT SCHOOL DISTRICT, Plaintiff,
v.
The ALLIANCE FOR COMMUNITY SOLUTIONS, LTD., Defendant.

Civil Action
No.
2
:
22
-
Cv
-
00094
|
Signed September 10, 2024

Attorneys and Law Firms

Harsharan Kaur, Troy Dean Bolen, Austin, TX, Ryan Wesley Lione, Powell Law Group LLP, Austin, TX, Sara Bella Kerr, Messer Fort, PLLC, Austin, TX, for Plaintiff.

Nicholas Jay Reisch, Brian Weil Zimmerman, Spencer Fane LLP, Houston, TX, for Defendant.

MEMORANDUM AND RECOMMENDATION

Jason B. Libby, United States Magistrate Judge

1 Pending are Defendant The Alliance for Community Solutions, Ltd.'s ("ACS") two Motions for Partial Summary Judgment to which Plaintiff Banquete Independent School District ("Banquete") has responded. (D.E. 29; D.E. 42; D.E. 48; and D.E. 50). For the reasons stated below, the undersigned recommends ACS' Motions for Partial Summary Judgment be GRANTED in part and otherwise DENIED. (D.E. 29 and D.E. 48).

I. JURISDICTION

The Court has diversity jurisdiction over this action pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 1332. This case was referred to the undersigned United States Magistrate Judge for case management pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 636.

II. BACKGROUND

Originally filed in state court, this diversity action arises from a proposed security project on Banquete's campus by ACS, involving the installation of an electronic monitoring and communication system linking the Banquete campus to local law enforcement agencies in the event of an emergency. The parties entered into an Interlocal Agreement in January 2020 which was executed by Joe Abrams, Executive Director and Chairman of ACS and by Dr. Max Thompson, then Banquete's Superintendent. (D.E. 29-7). Dr. Thompson signed the Interlocal Agreement, stating he received school board approval to do so which Banquete now disputes. The final estimate for the project was $2,199,762.00 with an additional recurring annual fee of $46,149.00.

 © 2025 Thomson Reuters. No claim to original U.S. Government Works.

A proposed school district tax bond was then put on the ballot for county voters and was approved in November 2020. After ACS was paid an initial payment of $100,000.00, Mr. Abrams delivered a presentation to the school board in February 2021 including plans for starting the project and a few months later, in April 2021, the bond funds became available. ACS then began ordering items for the project, alleging it encountered supply chain delays associated with the Covid-19 pandemic which prevented ACS from completing the project before the start of school according to the initial schedule. ACS held items off site for installation during Banquete's breaks.

After Dr. Thompson retired in mid-June 2021, he was replaced by Dr. Stacy Johnson. Two payments were made to ACS in May and July 2021, making the total paid to ACS $1,754,889.00. ACS provided updates through September 2021 to Banquete regarding the status of the project and completion of work although it is evident Banquete was dissatisfied with the quality and amount of work performed by ACS during this time. On October 28, 2021, Banquete ordered ACS off all Banquete property. The parties then unsuccessfully attempted to resolve outstanding issues until March 18, 2022, when Banquete sent ACS a letter titled "Notice of Termination-Physical Security Upgrade Project." (D.E. 29-14).

Shortly thereafter, on March 25, 2022, Banquete initiated an action against ACS in state court alleging that while approximately $1.7 million had been paid to ACS since 2020, little progress had been made on the project, asserting claims for breach of contract, negligence, fraudulent inducement, negligent misrepresentation and fraud. (D.E. 1, Pages 7-19). This case was removed to this Court on May 2, 2022. (D.E. 1). On November 9, 2022, Banquete filed an Amended Complaint, eliminating its claim for fraudulent inducement. (D.E. 12). ACS, on November 23, 2022 and February 13, 2023, filed Amended Answers and asserted counterclaims for breach of contract and conversion. (D.E. 15 and D.E. 18). On October 27, 2023, ACS filed the pending Motion for Partial Summary Judgment. (D.E. 29). Banquete later filed a Second Amended Complaint on November 16, 2023, eliminating its claim for breach of contract and adding a claim for rescission of void contract. (D.E. 40). On June 17, 2024, ACS filed the pending second Motion for Partial Summary Judgment seeking dismissal of Banquete's claim for rescission as well as "a determination that Chapter 44 of the Texas Education Code, rather than Chapter 2269 of the Texas Government Code, governs the Interlocal Agreement." (D.E. 48). This case was referred to the undersigned on July 17, 2024. (D.E. 54).

III. SUMMARY JUDGMENT STANDARD

2 Summary judgment is proper if there is no genuine issue as to any material fact and the moving party is entitled to judgment as a matter of law. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56. A genuine issue exists "if the evidence is such that a reasonable jury could return a verdict for the nonmoving party." Anderson v. Liberty Lobby, Inc., 477 U.S. 242, 248 (1986). The Court must examine "whether the evidence presents a sufficient disagreement to require submission to a jury or whether it is so one-sided that one party must prevail as a matter of law." Id. at 251–52. In making this determination, the Court must consider the record as a whole by reviewing all pleadings, depositions, affidavits, and admissions on file, and drawing all justifiable inferences in favor of the party opposing the motion. Caboni v. Gen. Motors Corp., 278 F.3d 448, 451 (5th Cir. 2002).

The Court may not weigh the evidence or evaluate the credibility of witnesses. Id. Furthermore, "affidavits shall be made on personal knowledge, shall set forth such facts as would be admissible in evidence, and shall show affirmatively that the affiant is competent to testify to the matters stated therein." Fed. R. Civ. P. 56; see also Cormier v. Pennzoil Exploration & Prod. Co., 969 F.2d 1559, 1561 (5th Cir. 1992) (Refusing to consider affidavits that relied on hearsay statements); Martin v. John W. Stone Oil Distrib., Inc., 819 F.2d 547, 549 (5th Cir. 1987) (Stating that courts cannot consider hearsay evidence in affidavits and depositions). Unauthenticated and unverified documents do not constitute proper summary judgment evidence. King v. Dogan, 31 F.3d 344, 346 (5th Cir. 1994).

The moving party bears the initial burden of showing the absence of a genuine issue of material fact. Celotex Corp. v. Catrett, 477 U.S. 317, 323 (1986). The evidence must be evaluated under the summary judgment standard to determine whether the moving party has shown the absence of a genuine issue of material fact. "[T]he substantive law will identify which facts are material. Only disputes over facts that might affect the outcome of the suit under the governing law will properly preclude the entry of summary judgment." Anderson, 477 U.S. at 248. If the moving party demonstrates an absence of evidence supporting the nonmoving party's case, then the burden shifts to the nonmoving party to come forward with specific facts showing that a genuine issue for trial does exist. Matsushita Elec. Indus. Co. v. Zenith Radio Corp., 475 U.S. 574, 586-87 (1986).

To sustain this burden, the nonmoving party cannot rest on the mere allegations of the pleadings. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56; Anderson, 477 U.S. at 248. The nonmovant may not rely merely on allegations, denials in a pleading or unsubstantiated assertions that a fact issue exists, but must set forth specific facts showing the existence of a genuine issue of material fact concerning every element of its cause(s) of action. Morris v. Covan World Wide Moving, Inc., 144 F.3d 377, 380 (5th Cir. 1998). "After the nonmovant has been given an opportunity to raise a genuine factual issue, if no reasonable juror could find for the nonmovant, summary judgment will be granted." Caboni, 278 F.3d at 451.

IV. ANALYSIS

A. Negligence [1] And Negligent Misrepresentation [2]

3 ACS next seeks dismissal of Banquete's negligence claims as barred by the economic loss rule, among other reasons. While a party's conduct may implicate various torts as well as contractual obligations, "[a]s a general rule, 'the failure to perform the terms of a contract is a breach of contract, not a tort.' " Heller Fin., Inc. v. Grammco Computer Sales, Inc., 71 F.3d 518, 527 (5th Cir. 1996) (citation omitted). Under Texas law, the economic loss rule "generally precludes recovery in tort for economic losses resulting from a party's failure to perform under a contract when the harm consists only of the economic loss of a contractual expectancy." Id. (citation omitted); Golden Spread Elec. Coop., Inc. v. Emerson Process Mgmt., 954 F.3d 804, 808 (5th Cir. 2020) (citations omitted) ("[T]he economic loss rule generally prevents recovery in tort for purely economic damages unaccompanied by injury to persons or property."); Shrieve Chem. Prods., Inc. v. Caremoli, No. H-16-2173, 2018 WL 1558273, at *4 (S.D. Tex. Jan. 4, 2018) (The economic loss doctrine bars negligent misrepresentation claims where the plaintiff is seeking to recover benefit-of-the-bargain damages.); Jim Walter Homes, Inc. v. Reed, 711 S.W.2d 617, 618 (Tex. 1986) ("When the injury is only the economic loss to the subject of a contract itself, the action sounds in contract alone.") Recovering in tort for economic losses resulting from a party's failure to perform under a contract when the alleged harm consists of only economic loss of the expected contract, without any claim of personal injury or damage to other property, is precluded. Chapman Custom Homes, Inc. v. Dall. Plumbing, Co., 445 S.W.3d 716, 718-19 (Tex. 2014) (Plumber had an implied duty not to flood or otherwise damage the plaintiff's house when performing contracted plumbing work, this implied duty was independent of the plumber's contractual obligations and the damages caused by the plumber's breach were "beyond the economic loss of any anticipated benefit under the plumbing contract.") "If the alleged injury is only due to the party's failure to fulfill its contractual obligation, the rule precludes recovery of economic losses in tort." Expedited Servicepartners, LLC v. 1011 Ram Fairfield AMA, LLC, No. 7:22-cv-103-O, 2023 WL 7190849, at *4 (N.D. Tex. Nov. 1, 2023) (citations omitted) ("Even if the matter in dispute is the subject of a contract, a party may elect recovery in tort if the duty breached stands independent from the contractual undertaking, and the alleged damages are not solely the result of a bargained-for contractual benefit."). The rule "restricts contracting parties to contractual remedies for those economic losses associated with the relationship, even when the breach might reasonably be viewed as a consequence of a contracting party's negligence." PCS Software, Inc. v. Dispatch Servs., Inc., No. H-23-108, 2024 WL 3448009, at *4 (S.D. Tex. July 16, 2024) (citations omitted) (The economic loss rule bars negligent misrepresentation claims when they are "dependent on a contractual relationship.") However, "an actor whose negligence causes personal injury or physical harm to the property of another can be held liable in tort regardless of whether the negligence occurs in the performance of a contract between the parties." Shakeri, 816 F.3d at 293 (citation omitted) (Finding the district court erred in dismissing plaintiffs' negligence claim pursuant to the economic loss rule where ADT failed to provide a working alarm and backup alarm system pursuant to the parties' contract, was notified the system needed repair and plaintiffs, after their jewelry store was then robbed, alleged severe physical injuries requiring surgery).

Upon review, Banquete has not stated a negligence claim independent of obligations in the agreement nor do the claimed damages extend beyond the economic loss of the anticipated benefit under the agreement.

Banquete does not allege any personal injury damages. Further, the property damage alleged by Banquete to its schools as a result of ACS' purported subpar work is the result of ACS' failure to properly perform under the party's agreement.[3] (D.E. 29-8, Pages 8-9). Banquete seeks the return of the money it paid to ACS pursuant to the parties' agreement, alleging the work performed was sub-par, defective, unsafe and/or not completed. (D.E. 40 and D.E. 29-11, Pages 15-16). Banquete cites to no evidence that it suffered any loss independent from the subject matter of the parties' agreement. Accordingly, the undersigned recommends Banquete has failed to create a fact question as to its negligence claims.[4] [5]

B. FRAUD

4 Banquete asserts false statements were made regarding the completion of a full security assessment, which Banquete alleges was never completed. (D.E. 29-8, Page 5). Additionally, Banquete asserts Mr. Abrams misrepresented that a master plan of the facilities related to the project would be prepared and provided. (D.E. 29-8, Pages 5-6). Banquete further asserts Mr. Abrams misrepresented that ACS would hold the project funds in an escrow account requiring dual authority for their release and also that contractors would be paid their final payments after approval by the project coordinator and the district representative. (D.E. 29-8, Pages 4 and 5). Based on these representations, Banquete asserts it continued to let ACS "send invoices and demand funds from the District on the reliance that adequate planning and progress was taking place and would be taking place," tendering several payments. (D.E. 29-8, Pages 6-8).

Claims of fraud have six elements. *Barge, 2024 WL 2520324, at 6 (citing Aquaplex, Inc. v. Rancho La Valencia, Inc, 297 S.W.3d 768, 774-75 (Tex. 2009)) (other citations omitted). They are: "(1) a material representation was made; (2) the representation was false; (3) the speaker knew that the representation was false or made it recklessly without any knowledge of the truth and as a positive assertion; (4) the speaker made the statement with the intent that the other act upon it; (5) the party acted in reliance on the representation; and (6) the party thereby suffered an injury." Id. (citations omitted). These elements establish that "[a] promise of future performance constitutes an actionable misrepresentation if the promise was made with no intention of performing at the time it was made." Id. (citing Formosa Plastics Corp. U.S. v. Presidio Eng'rs & Contractors, Inc., 960 S.W.2d 41, 48 (Tex. 1998) (other citation omitted) (A plaintiff is required to present evidence that defendant made representations with the intent to deceive at the time the representations were made and with no intention of performing as represented). While "intent is determined at the time a party made the representation, it may also be inferred from the party's ... acts after the representation was made." Id. (citations omitted). "Proving that a party had no intention of performing... is [difficult], as intent to defraud is not usually susceptible to direct proof." *Barge, 2024 WL 2520324, at 6 (citing Aquaplex, 297 S.W.3d at 774–75) (other citations omitted). Thus, a contractual "breach combined with slight circumstantial evidence of fraud is" sufficient to support a finding of fraudulent intent. Id.

 © 2025 Thomson Reuters. No claim to original U.S. Government Works.

(citations omitted); Premiere Holdings of Texas LP v. Sterling Reit, Inc., No. H-04-0916, 2006 WL 2796387, at *5 (S.D. Tex. Sept. 26, 2006) (citation omitted) ("Intent is a fact question uniquely within the realm of the trier of fact because it so depends on the credibility of witnesses and the weight to be given to their testimony.") Under Texas law, "a contract may be induced by fraud when a party promises to perform the contract while knowing that it has no intention of carrying out that promise." L & C Consultants, LLC v. ASH Petroleum, Inc., No. 3:07-cv-1904-D, 2009 WL 3110200, at *6 (N.D. Tex. Sept. 29, 2009) (citation omitted). "[A] party's denial that they ever made a promise is a factor showing no intent to perform when they made the promise." Id. (citation omitted). Further, a plaintiff must show actual and justifiable reliance. Noble Capital Fund Mgmt., LLC v. US Capital Glob. Inv. Mgmt., No. 1:20-cv-1247-RP, 2023 WL 5814390, at *9 (W.D. Tex. Sept. 7, 2023) (citations omitted) ("The issue of justifiable reliance is generally a question of fact" as "[t]he justifiable reliance inquiry is necessarily fact intensive.")

ACS asserts Banquete has no evidence of ACS' fraudulent intent, justifiable reliance or evidence of damages. However, reviewing the evidence, the undersigned recommends there is a genuine issue of material fact as to whether ACS made representations with no intention of performing as represented, inducing Banquete to enter into an agreement and to continue to make payments pursuant to this agreement as further discussed below.

5 In one of the initial documents prepared by ACS for Banquete, titled "Security Upgrade Project Quote," a $260,000.00 estimate for completion of a "District-Wide Assessment & Plan" is included, which Banquete asserts it never received. (D.E. 42-11, Page 3).[6] There is no dispute that ACS received the initial payment of $100,000.00 in December 2020 toward the preparation of this assessment and plan. (D.E. 42, Page 7). Approximately six months later, on July 20, 2021, Banquete received a "Security Upgrade Project Invoice" which was the same as the aforementioned "Security Upgrade Project Quote" with updates provided under each section as to the amount of work performed and the remaining amount now owed. (D.E. 42-22). Under the section at issue, it states, "This portion of the project is essentially done, with assessments complete and building maps/plans completed within the next 2 weeks." (D.E. 42-22, Page 2). It further indicated the remaining $160,000.00 was due and owing. (D.E. 42-22, Page 3). The parties do not dispute that ACS was then paid a third payment of $1,304,889.00 in July 2021. (D.E. 42, Page 7). During her deposition, Dr. Johnson stated ACS had no intention of completing a full security assessment "[b]ecause to have a project design, it's done before the project is started on and initialed, and that has never been shared with us, nor when we asked for it repeatedly any part of it." (D.E. 42-3, Page 22). She further stated that when ACS was confronted about this issue, they did not provide any evidence that they had completed any part of a full security assessment and she asked "for it multiple times, and not one time did they say it was going to be a document provided at the end. They said they were compiling it and would get it to me" and were "90 percent done" or "70 percent done." (D.E. 42-3, Pages 22-23 and 31). Dr. Johnson further stated she "asked specifically for the district-wide assessment and plan" and "our conversations [while not remembering specific dates but it being after her employment began in June 2021] led me to believe they were producing a document with all of this information in it" "through the summer and fall." (D.E. 42-3, Pages 23 and 31). These documents and testimony, along with the competing evidence as to whether any portion of this plan was ever produced or provided,[7] are sufficient circumstantial evidence to support Banquete's contention that ACS breached the parties agreement, intentionally made representations that it never intended to keep in order to induce Banquete to enter into an agreement and to approve payments, and Banquete did in fact rely on those misrepresentations to its detriment by making those payments for work and materials it did not receive. This alone is sufficient for the undersigned to recommend there is a genuine issue of material fact as to Banquete's fraud claim. Additionally, the undersigned notes that ACS should not be permitted to refuse to produce financial documents as to "where funds from Plaintiff for the Project were spent" and then argue Plaintiff has not provided sufficient evidence of exact damages.[8]

 © 2025 Thomson Reuters. No claim to original U.S. Government Works.

C. RESCISSION, CONSTRUCTIVE TRUST, PUNITIVE DAMAGES AND ATTORNEYS' FEES

ACS moves for dismissal of the remedies of rescission, constructive trust, punitive damages and attorneys' fees premised on the dismissal of all Banquete's claims. If the Court were to grant dismissal of all Banquete's causes of action, Banquete would not be able to recover any of these remedies. However, because the undersigned has recommended ACS' Motion be denied as to Banquete's claim for fraud, the undersigned also recommends ACS' Motions be denied related to these remedies as they would be more appropriately decided should this case proceed to trial. The undersigned further recommends Banquete's argument that rescission is "both an independent claim and independent remedy" is without merit. (D.E. 50, Page 9). "Rescission is an equitable remedy available under Texas contract law that 'operates to set aside a contract that is legally valid but is marred by fraud, mistake or for some other reason." Integrated Pipe & Supply, LLC v. Critical Path Res., Inc., No. 4:23-cv-2006, 2024 WL 554151, at *2 (S.D. Tex. Feb. 12, 2024) (citations omitted). "Rescission is a remedy only, and not an independent cause of action." Kreway v. Countrywide Bank, No. 15-CA-332-OLG, 2015 WL 11622495, at *5 (W.D. Tex. July 21, 2015) (citation omitted); Wallner, et al., v. Farish, et al., No. 3:09-cv-587-G, No. 2011 WL 1085307, at *4 FN 2 (N.D. Tex. Mar. 23, 2011) (citation omitted) ("Texas courts have long held under general principles of common-law fraud that one who is induced by fraud to enter into a contract has a choice of remedies: he may either recover his monetary damages flowing from the fraud or he may elect the equitable remedy of rescission in lieu of damages and demand a return of any amount paid."); James v. Wells Fargo Bank, N.A., No. H-14-0449, 2014 WL 2123060, at *6 (S.D. Tex. May 21, 2014) (citations omitted) (Rescission is remedy, not a legal cause of action, and therefore, plaintiffs must prevail on an underlying claim to seek this remedy); As cited by Banquete, Italian Cowboy Partners, Ltd. V. Prudential Ins. Co. of America, 341 S.W. 3d 323, 347 (Tex. 2011) (Rendering "judgment in favor of Italian Cowboy on its claim for rescission premised on Prudential's breach of implied warranty of suitability" directing the court to "consider any such remaining issues as to Italian Cowboy's rescission damages.") As the undersigned has recommended Banquete's claim for fraud survive summary judgment, the undersigned recommends rescission remains a viable remedy for Banquete to claim should it prevail.

D. APPLICABLE LAW OF THE INTERLOCAL AGREEMENT

6 Section 2269 of the Texas Government Code applies to public works contracts entered into by school districts, meaning contracts "for constructing, altering, or repairing a public building or carrying out or completing any public work." Tex. Gov't Code §§ 2269.001(6); 2269.002(2)(c). There are set procedures that must be followed prior to entering into a public works contract, including publishing notice and permitting bids on the proposed project, and any contract "entered into in violation [of § 2269] is voidable as against public policy." Tex. Gov't Code §§ 2269.052; 2269.451. Section 44 of the Texas Education Code lists the approved methods for "all school district [to enter into] contracts for the purchase of good and services...valued at $50,000.00 or more in aggregate for each 12-month period." Tex. Educ. Code § 44.031(a). Methods include, but are not limited to, competitive bidding, competitive sealed proposals and requests for proposals for services other than construction services. Id. § 44.031(a)(1)-(3). Also listed are interlocal contracts and, for construction services, "a method provided by Chapter 2269, Government Code." Id. § 44.031(a)(4)-(5).

ACS asserts "Banquete ISD has made it clear that one of the bases for its rescission claim is the Interlocal Agreement being void under Chapter 2269 of the Texas Government Code. In addition, Banquete ISD has made it clear that this same basis underlies its defense to ACS' counterclaim for breach of contract that the Interlocal Agreement is unenforceable." (D.E. 48, Page 9). ACS asserts Chapter 44 of the Texas Education Code applies to the parties' agreement rather than Chapter 2269 of the Texas Government Code and requests the Court, in this summary judgment motion, determine which law is applicable to the parties' agreement. (D.E. 48, Pages 8-17).

However, in response, Banquete affirmatively states, "The District does not make the contention that Chapter 44 of the Tex. Educ. Code applies to the Interlocal Agreement rather than Chapter 2269 of the Tex. Gov't Code. The sections of the Tex. Educ. Code, Tex. Gov't Code, and Tex. Local Gov't Code are all complimentary and applicable to the Interlocal Agreement." (D.E. 50, Page 10). Further, "[t]he District states, in its Petition that both the Tex. Educ. Code and Tex. Local Gov't Code spell out the procurement requirements that a school district must abide by for contracts over $50,000.00 for the purchase of good and services and for contracts involving the construction, repair, or renovation of an improvement to real property. Both statutes are meant to be read together since they do not conflict with one another." (D.E. 50, Page 10). Banquete further responds that "a motion for partial summary judgment is not the correct procedural vehicle to address this since Plaintiff makes no such claim in its pleadings." (D.E. 50, Page 10).

ACS has not sought declaratory relief on this issue in its pleading. Further, there is clearly a dispute as to whether the agreement entered into by the parties is a construction contract, in whole or in part, or an installation contract combined with the sale of goods and services. By requesting the Court determine the controlling law applicable to the parties' agreement, ACS is asking the Court to classify it as one or the other. The parties, while giving clear briefing on the relevant law applicable to certain contracts entered into with school districts, have not sufficiently presented arguments and supporting evidence related to the proposed scope of work and/or the work performed on Banquete's campus which would permit this Court to make a determination at this stage as to whether there is a genuine issue of material fact as to how the agreement should be classified. Accordingly, the undersigned recommends ACS' request for declaratory relief on this issue be denied.

V. CONCLUSION

For the reasons stated above, the undersigned recommends ACS' Motions for Partial Summary Judgment be GRANTED in part and otherwise DENIED. (D.E. 29 and D.E. 48).

7 ORDERED on September 10, 2024.

NOTICE TO PARTIES

The Clerk will file this Memorandum and Recommendation and transmit a copy to each party or counsel. Within FOURTEEN (14) DAYS after being served with a copy of the Memorandum and Recommendation, a party may file with the Clerk and serve on the United States Magistrate Judge and all parties, written objections, pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 636(b)(1)(c); Rule 72(b) of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure; and Article IV, General Order No. 2002-13, United States District Court for the Southern District of Texas.

A party's failure to file written objections to the proposed findings, conclusions, and recommendations in a Magistrate Judge's report and recommendation within FOURTEEN (14) DAYS after being served with a copy shall bar that party, except upon grounds of plain error, from attacking on appeal the unobjected-to proposed factual findings and legal conclusions accepted by the District Court. Douglass v. United Servs. Auto Ass'n, 79 F.3d 1415 (5th Cir. 1996) (en banc).

All Citations

Slip Copy, 2024 WL 4720290

Footnotes

1 Under Texas law, "[t]o sustain a negligence action, the plaintiff must produce evidence of a legal duty owed by the defendant to the plaintiff, a breach of that duty, and damages proximately caused by that breach." Shakeri v. ADT Sec. Serv., Inc., 816 F.3d 283, 292 (5th Cir. 2016) (citation omitted).

2 A negligent misrepresentation cause of action has four elements. Barge v. Wells Fargo Bank, N.A., No. 1:23-cv-189, 2024 WL 2520324, at *5 (E.D. Tex. Mar. 28, 2024) (citing Wal-Mart Stores, Inc. v. Xerox State & Loc. Sols., Inc., 663 S.W.3d 569, 581 n.55 (Tex. 2023)). First, "the defendant made a representation in the course of its business or in a transaction in which it has a pecuniary interest." Id. Second, "the representation conveyed false information for the guidance of others in their business." Id. Third, "the defendant did not exercise reasonable care or competence in obtaining or communicating the information." Id. Finally, "the plaintiff suffers pecuniary loss by justifiably relying on the representation." *Barge, 2024 WL 2520324, at 5 (citation omitted). There must be a false representation for a successful negligent misrepresentation claim and therefore, "[a] promise to do or refrain from doing an act in the future is not actionable because it does not concern an existing fact." Id. (citation omitted); Pi Data Centers Pvt. Ltd. V. HPE Enter. Co., No. H-22-3947, 2024 WL 1056039, at *4 (S.D. Tex. Mar. 4, 2024) (citation omitted) ("[T]he false information contemplated in a negligent misrepresentation case must be a misstatement of an existing fact rather that the promise of future conduct.")

3 Banquete attempts to save its negligence claim by arguing that at some point, there was undocumented floor damage caused by water coming into the school as a result of ACS' alleged subpar work. The only evidence in support of this allegation is Dr. Johnson's deposition testimony. She stated the school "had some door issues with water coming in [as the result of missing door sweeps] and the flooring around it" was damaged sometime in the "summer/fall" with Banquete staff replacing "it with supplies we had." (D.E. 42-3, Page 42). Dr. Johnson further stated there is no documentation as to what amount of damage was involved or what supplies were used. (D.E. 42-3, Page 43). Nor does Banquete direct the Court to any additional information on this alleged floor damage being disclosed in discovery or otherwise mentioned until the pending Motion and Response. Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(c)(1) (A party who fails to provide information as required in discovery is not permitted to use that information to supply evidence on a motion, at a hearing or at a trial unless the failure was substantially justified or harmless). Further, Banquete does not offer any reason, if such evidence does exist, why it was not previously disclosed. In fact, while Banquete referenced that "[d]oor sweeps were missing from the exterior doors installed in the elementary school" in response to an interrogatory about its negligence claim, no mention is made of any floor damage. (D.E. 29-8, Page 8). The undersigned recommends Dr. Johnson's limited deposition testimony alone is insufficient to defeat summary judgment on this negligence claim. While this Court must not weigh the evidence or evaluate the credibility of witnesses, here, there is no evidence to weigh as Banquete has provided no evidence as to the extent of the damages, when the damages definitively happened, exactly where the damages occurred or what the cost of repairs were.

4 The undersigned notes Banquete, after ACS filed its first dispositive motion which seeks dismissal of Banquete's negligence claims, has now filed a Second Amended Complaint which removes the breach of contract claim, adding a new count for "Rescission of Void Contract," which the undersigned has addressed below. (D.E. 40). Having reviewed the parties briefing regarding Banquete's negligence claims, the parties have not sufficiently addressed, citing to precedent, whether voluntarily withdrawing its claim for breach of contract would impact the viability of Banquete's negligence claims. Further, the undersigned declines to address ACS' Motion requesting summary judgment on Banquete's now withdrawn breach of contract claim as it not currently in the live pleading. There is a factual dispute as to whether the parties' agreement was executed properly and therefore, whether it is a binding contract. Whether Banquete will request to further amend its pleadings based on the Court's decision on ACS' pending motions, as well as its own motion to plea to jurisdiction, remains to be seen.

5 As the undersigned recommends Banquete's negligence claims be dismissed as barred by the economic loss rule, ACS' remaining arguments as to why Banquete's negligence claims should be dismissed need not be addressed at this time.

6 This section provided that, "To begin this project, a district-wide assessment will be conducted to document the as-built condition of every security asset, including doors, gates, locks, keying systems, door controls, cameras, video recording and distribution systems, phones, intercoms, panic/duress reporting mechanisms, intrusion systems, other monitoring systems and related infrastructure. From these details various plans will be developed to repair, upgrade, replace or deploy new solutions to help ensure defined security goals. As solutions are deployed, a record of as-built configurations and security assets will be documented for district use." (D.E. 42-11, Page 3).

7 While not directly arguing it completed the disputed assessment and plan, ACS appears to assert it was completed in the form of a PowerPoint presentation presented to the school board in February 2021. (D.E. 29, Page 5 and D.E. 29-18 (PowerPoint) ("Mr. Abrams delivered a presentation to the BISD school board on February 8, 2021 that summarized the conclusions of the assessment and initial plan for starting the project.") This further demonstrates a genuine issue of material fact, given Dr. Johnson's testimony that ACS repeatedly represented to her that it was still being completed after she began her employment over four months later as discussed above.

 © 2025 Thomson Reuters. No claim to original U.S. Government Works.

8 In response to Banquete's request for production for ACS to "produce any financial documents or records which demonstrate where funds from Plaintiff for the Project were spent," ACS stated it would "not produce documents responsive to this request" because it "seeks information that is not relevant to this litigation. There is no dispute about the amount of money paid to ACS and there is nothing about the allegations asserted by either party that make the requested documents reasonably likely to lead to the discovery of admissible evidence in this case." (D.E. 42-19, Page 32). Additionally, prior to this litigation, Banquete repeatedly requested an accounting which it states it never received. (D.E. 42-8; D.E. 42-9; and D.E. 42-10). Further, whether this claim could be barred by the economic loss rule was not raised in ACS' Motion.

End of Document

© 2025 Thomson Reuters. No claim to original U.S. Government Works.

CASE NO. 58

2024 WL 2520324
Only the Westlaw citation
is currently available.
United States District Court,
E.D. Texas, Beaumont Division.

Byron BARGE, Individually and d/b/a Byron's RV Repair; and Kathleen Barge, Plaintiffs,
v.
WELLS FARGO
BANK, N.A., Defendant.

CIVIL ACTION
NO.
1
:
23
-
CV
-
00189

Signed March 28, 2024

Attorneys and Law Firms

Mark Christopher Sparks, Elijah Cole Smith, The Ferguson Law Firm, LLP, Beaumont, TX, Sarah Jane Sanders, Beaumont, TX, for Plaintiffs.

Justin Ryan Opitz, Addison Eleanor Fontein, Brittney Marie Angelich, McGuirewoods LLP, Dallas, TX, for Defendant.

ORDER GRANTING IN PART DEFENDANT WELLS FARGO BANK, N.A.'S MOTION TO DISMISS COMPLAINT

Michael J. Truncale, United States District Judge

1 Before the Court is the Motion to Dismiss Complaint ("Motion") [Dkt. 6] filed by Defendant Wells Fargo Bank, N.A. ("Wells Fargo"). For the following reasons, the Motion is GRANTED IN PART.

I. BACKGROUND

Plaintiff Byron Barge and Plaintiff Kathleen Barge ("the Barges") seek recovery from Wells Fargo, arguing that the bank failed to fulfill its promise of protecting their funds against a wire transfer fraud. [Dkt. 4]. The Barges have multiple accounts with Wells Fargo. Id. at 3. They signed a contract where the bank supposedly "agreed to protect [the couple] from fraud and fraudulent transfers[ ] and represented that it would provide such protection ...." Id.

The Barges aver that this promise was breached on November 10, 2022, when Wells Fargo failed to protect them against two fraudulent wire transfers in the total amount of $37,500.00. Id. The Barges charge that, eight days before the transactions were approved, a Wells Fargo employee called them "numerous times" to confirm whether the requests were legitimate. Id. Byron allegedly visited the Wells Fargo branch in his area, only to be told that the person he spoke to over the telephone was the hacker. Id. at 3–4. Byron alleges that a manager told him that the bank needs up to ten business days to review the transfers. Id. at 4. Wells Fargo refused to return the funds after eight days of supposed investigation, saying that a "business partner" of Byron's "approved the transfer." Id. The Barges also assert that, about three months after the fraudulent transfers, they started to receive a checking statement listing a new account under Byron's name. Id. at 4–5.

 © 2025 Thomson Reuters. No claim to original U.S. Government Works.

So the Barges sued Wells Fargo, asserting nine common law claims and one statutory claim under the Texas Deceptive Trade Practices Consumer Protection Act (also known as the Deceptive Trade Practices Act, or "DTPA") to recover their lost fund. Id. at 5–17. The live Plaintiffs' First Amended Petition with Jury Demand ("Amended Petition") uses screenshots of Wells Fargo's webpages to present general assertions of tort and contract causes of action. Id. at 5–15. The Barges filed their suit in state court on March 17, 2023. [Dkt. 1-3 at 2]. They served Wells Fargo on April 21 of the same year. [Dkt. 1 at 2]. The bank removed for diversity and then filed the Motion. Id. at 1; [Dkt. 6]. The Barges responded. [Dkt. 7]. The Motion is now ripe for review.

II. LEGAL STANDARD

The Court applies federal procedural law and Texas substantive law. Ferrer & Poirot, GP v. Cincinnati Ins. Co., 36 F.4th 656, 659 (5th Cir. 2022) (per curiam) (first citing 28 U.S.C. § 1332; and then citing Erie R.R. Co. v. Tompkins, 304 U.S. 64, 78 (1938)).

A court may dismiss a complaint for its "failure to state a claim upon which relief can be granted." Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(b)(6). In considering a 12(b)(6) motion, the Court "accepts all well-pleaded facts as true, viewing them in the light most favorable to the plaintiff." Sonnier v. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co., 509 F.3d 673, 675 (5th Cir. 2007) (per curiam) (quoting In re Katrina Canal Breaches Litig., 495 F.3d 191, 205 (5th Cir. 2007)). In doing so, the Court cannot "accept as true conclusory allegations, unwarranted factual inferences, or legal conclusions." Gentilello v. Rege, 627 F.3d 540, 544 (5th Cir. 2010) (citations omitted).

2 To survive a 12(b)(6) challenge, a complaint must allege "enough [well-pleaded] facts to state a claim to relief that is plausible on its face." Ashcroft v. Iqbal, 556 U.S. 662, 697 (2009) (Souter, J., dissenting) (quoting Bell Atl. Corp. v. Twombly, 550 U.S. 544, 570 (2007)); see also Fed. Rs. Civ. P. 8(a)(2) ("A pleading that states a claim for relief must contain[ ] ... a short and plain statement of the claim showing that the pleader is entitled to relief."), 9(b) ("In alleging fraud ..., a party must state with particularity the circumstances constituting fraud or mistake."). [1] A claim is "plausible on its face" if its well-pleaded facts lead to "the reasonable inference that the defendant is liable for the misconduct alleged." Ashcroft, 556 U.S. at 678 (citing Twombly, 550 U.S. at 556). By contrast, "if a complaint pleads facts that are merely consistent with a defendant's liability, it stops short of the line between possibility and plausibility." Id. (cleaned up).

Determining whether a plausible claim exists is "a context-specific task that requires the ... [C]ourt to draw on its judicial experience and common sense." Id. at 679 (citation omitted).

III. DISCUSSION

The following issues are before the Court:

1. Whether the UCC preempts the Barges' case against Wells Fargo; and

2. Whether the Barges present viable claims of:

   a. negligence and breach of fiduciary duty;

   b. gross negligence;

   c. negligent misrepresentation;

   d. fraud;

   e. fraudulent misrepresentation;

   f. breach of contract;

   g. breach of express warranty;

   h. breach of implied warranty; and

   i. violation of the DTPA.

[Dkt. 4 at 9–15; Dkt. 6 at 2–15].

After considering the Motion, record, and relevant law, the Court rules that the Amended Petition is not preempted and therefore GRANTS the Motion as to the following causes of action: negligence, breach of fiduciary duty, gross negligence, fraud, fraudulent misrepresentation, breach of contract, and breach of implied warranty.

A. Dismissal Motion

1. Preemption

The Court finds that the Barges' case is not preempted by Chapter 4A of the Texas Business and Commerce Code, "which incorporates the Uniform Commercial Code ("UCC") and governs wire transfers." See Ashcroft, 556 U.S. at 679; [Dkt. 6 at 9] (citations omitted). This result is based on Wells Fargo's failure to cite a preemptive UCC clause. See Tex. Bus. & Com. Code § 4A.102 cmt.; Gentilello, 627 F.3d at 544; Ashcroft, 556 U.S. at 679.

A supplementary comment to Chapter 4A states that preemption under the chapter occurs if one of its clauses contradicts a state law claim. Tex. Bus. & Com. Code § 4A.102 cmt. "To the extent the UCC does not resolve a question, courts [use] the common law." United Galvanizing, Inc. v. Imperial Zinc Corp., No. H–08–0551, 2011 WL 11185 at *9 (S.D. Tex. Jan. 3, 2011); see also Moody Nat'l Bank v. Tex. City Dev., Ltd. Co., 46 S.W.3d 373, 378–79 (Tex. App.—Houston [1st Dist.] 2001, pet. denied) (citation omitted) ("Common law claims are precluded when a claim ... impose[s] liability inconsistent with any of the [Chapter]'s provisions.").

Here, Wells Fargo cites the same UCC comment but ignores its textual guidance in arguing that Chapter 4A is "to be the exclusive means of determining the rights, duties[,] and liabilities of the affected parties in any situation covered by particular provisions of the [Chapter].” [Dkt. 6 at 10] (quoting Tex. Bus. & Com. Code § 4A.102 cmt.) (emphasis added). The bank argues that the chapter covers everything related to wire transfers and that “state law claims that attempt to burden banks with additional duties are [thus] preempted.” Id. (citations omitted). But the Motion fails to state which Chapter 4A clause preempts which cause of action. Such conclusory reasoning cannot justify a dismissal of this case. See Tex. Bus. & Com. Code § 4A.102 cmt.; Gentilello, 627 F.3d at 544; Ashcroft, 556 U.S. at 679.

3 Accordingly, the Court rejects Wells Fargo's preemption argument and evaluates each recovery theory. See Moody, 46 S.W.3d at 378–79; Gentilello, 627 F.3d at 544; Ashcroft, 556 U.S. at 679.

2. Common Law and Statutory Causes of Action

The Court rules that only the negligent misrepresentation, breach of express warranty, and DTPA noncompliance theories survive the 12(b)(6) scrutiny.

a. Common Law Claims

i. Negligence Causes of Action [2]

The Court notes that the following negligence analyses focus on duty. See Allen v. Walmart Stores, L.L.C., 907 F.3d 170, 178 (5th Cir. 2018); Ashcroft, 556 U.S. at 679. This is so since “the existence of duty is a question of law for the [C]ourt to decide ....” Allen, 907 F.3d at 178 (first quoting Greater Hous. Transp. Co. v. Phillips, 801 S.W.2d 523, 525 (Tex. 1990); and then citing Otis Eng'g Corp. v. Clark, 668 S.W.2d 307, 312 (Tex. 1983) (McGee, J., dissenting)). In other words, duty is the “threshold inquiry.” Centeq Realty v. Siegler, 899 S.W.2d 195, 197 (Tex. 1995) (first citing Graff v. Beard, 855 S.W.2d 918, 919 (Tex. 1993); and then citing Greater Hous., 801 S.W.2d at 525). All other questions are for the jury to decide. See Allen, 907 F.3d at 178.

(A) Negligence, Breach of Fiduciary Duty

The Court DISMISSES these two claims as the Barges were not owed an actionable duty. See Thigpen v. Locke, 363 S.W.2d 247, 253 (Tex. 1962); Ashcroft, 556 U.S. at 679.

4 Negligence means that there were “(1) a legal duty, (2) a breach of that duty, and (3) damages ... resulting from the breach.” Elephant Ins. Co., LLC v. Kenyon, 644 S.W.3d 137, 144 (Tex. 2022) (cleaned up) (citing Praesel v. Johnson, 967 S.W.2d 391, 394 (Tex. 1998)). Regarding duty in a banking relationship, “the relationship ... does not usually create a special or fiduciary relationship.” Farah v. Mafrige & Kormanick, P.C., 927 S.W.2d 663, 675 (Tex. App.—Houston [1st Dist.] 1993, no writ) (first citing Manufacturers Hanover Tr. Co. v. Kingston Inv. Corp., 819 S.W.2d 607, 610 (Tex. App.—Houston [1st Dist.] 1991, no writ); and then citing Thigpen, 363 S.W.2d at 253). Otherwise, “the security of contracts and conveyances in this state would be seriously jeopardized." Elephant, 644 S.W.3d at 144. To be sure, there are situations where a debtor-creditor relationship may be fiduciary. Thigpen, 363 S.W.2d at 253. More specifically, the Court may find that a fiduciary relationship existed only if the plaintiff sufficiently establishes that his or her "relationship with [the defendant] was ... more than a debtor-creditor relationship." Farah, 927 S.W.2d at 675. And whether a fiduciary relationship exists is "determined from the actualities of the relationship between the persons involved." Id. One such factor, for example, is an "excessive lender control over, or influence in, the borrower's business activities." Id. (citation omitted).

Here, the Barges fail to show that they had a qualifying relationship with Wells Fargo. See id.; Thigpen, 363 S.W.2d at 253. The bank rightly observes that the Barges have not alleged facts establishing that its relationship with the couple is fiduciary. [Dkt. 8 at 4–5]. Indeed, the thrust of the Barges' argument rests on a Texas Court of Appeals case about a financial advisor's fiduciary duties, which the couple claims plausibly establishes Wells Fargo's duty. [Dkt. 7 at 10–12] (citing W. Rsrv. Life Assurance Co. v. Graben, 233 S.W.3d 360, 374 (Tex. App.—Fort Worth 2007, pet. denied)). But the Court is unconvinced that Graben applies because, while the that case involved "a professional who promised to use sophisticated measures to safeguard" the fund and advance his clients' financial interests via investments, the dispute here concerns a bank that only protected the monies. Compare Graben, 233 S.W.3d at 367 (stating that the financial advisor knew that his clients "wanted to preserve their principal" and that "he had a [duty] to determine the ... suitability of investments."), with [Dkt. 4 at 3–4] (clarifying that Wells Fargo "agreed to protect [the Barges] from fraud and fraudulent transfers[ ] and represented that it would provide such protection ....). This stark contrast prevents the Court from finally determining whether Wells Fargo was under an actionable duty. See Thigpen, 363 S.W.2d at 253; Ashcroft, 556 U.S. at 679; see also Elephant, 644 S.W.3d at 144.

Accordingly, the Court GRANTS the Motion with respect to the negligence and breach of fiduciary duty theories. See Thigpen, 363 S.W.2d at 253; Ashcroft, 556 U.S. at 679.

(B) Gross Negligence

The Court also DISMISSES this cause of action as gross negligence cannot be established without negligence. See Nowzaradan v. Ryans, 347 S.W.3d 734, 739 (Tex. App.—Houston [14th Dist.] 2011, no pet.); Ashcroft, 556 U.S. at 679.

Legally and logically, "negligence and gross negligence are ... inextricably intertwined." Nowzaradan, 347 S.W.3d at 739 (citation omitted). This is so since "ordinary negligence is needed for gross negligence." Id. (citing Sonic Sys. Int'l, Inc. v. Croix, 278 S.W.3d 377, 395 (Tex. App.—Houston [14th Dist.] 2008, pet. denied)). Gross negligence requires a higher standard of duty than negligence does. See Elephant, 644 S.W.3d at 145; U-Haul Int'l, Inc. v. Waldrip, 380 S.W.3d 118, 137 (Tex. 2012). For ordinary negligence, the Court evaluates the relevant factors to define "the existence, scope, and elements of legal duties" and then decides whether an ordinary person in the defendant's position must use ordinary care. See Elephant, 644 S.W.3d at 145. This process hardly (if at all) examines the defendant's subjective intent. See id. By contrast, gross negligence requires "both objective and subjective elements." U-Haul, 380 S.W.3d at 137 (citing Lee Lewis Const., Inc. v. Harrison, 70 S.W.3d 778, 785 (Tex. 2001)). That is, a plaintiff "must prove by clear and convincing evidence that (1) when viewed objectively from the defendant's position when the event occurred, the act or omission involved an extreme degree of risk, considering the probability and magnitude of the potential harm, and (2) the defendant had actual, subjective awareness of the risk, but proceeded with indifference to the rights, safety, or welfare of others." Id. (cleaned up).

5 Here, as the negligence theory was dismissed, the Court must rule that the gross negligence claim fails. See supra Section III.A.2.a.i.(A); Nowzaradan, 347 S.W.3d at 739. Finding gross negligence without ordinary negligence defies law and logic. See Nowzaradan, 347 S.W.3d at 739.

Accordingly, the Court GRANTS the Motion with regard to this cause of action as well. See id.; Ashcroft, 556 U.S. at 679.

(C) Negligent Representation

Since this theory concerns Wells Fargo's representations about security measures that were presumably in place when those statements were made, the Court declines to dismiss it. See BCY Water Supply Corp. v. Residential Inv., Inc., 170 S.W.3d 596, 603 (Tex. App.—Tyler 2005, pet. denied); Ashcroft, 556 U.S. at 679.

A viable negligent misrepresentation cause of action has four elements. Wal-Mart Stores, Inc. v. Xerox State & Loc. Sols., Inc., 663 S.W.3d 569, 581 n.55 (Tex. 2023) (citing JPMorgan Chase Bank, N.A. v. Orca Assets G.P., 546 S.W.3d 648, 653–54 (Tex. 2018)). First, "the defendant made a representation in the course of its business or in a transaction in which it has a pecuniary interest." Id. Second, "the representation conveyed false information for the guidance of others in their business." Id. (quotation omitted). Third, "the defendant did not exercise reasonable care or competence in obtaining or communicating the information." Id. Finally, "the plaintiff suffers pecuniary loss by justifiably relying on the representation." Id.

Notably, "the duty to avoid making a negligent misrepresentation is separate from any duty that may exist and can arise even if the parties' relationship otherwise precludes a duty." Jeffries v. Pat A. Madison, Inc., 269 S.W.3d 689, 691 (Tex. App.—Eastland 2008, no pet.) (cleaned up) (citing McCamish, Martin, Brown & Loeffler v. F.E. Appling Ints., 991 S.W.2d 787, 795 (Tex. 1999)). Negligent misrepresentation instead asks that "the misrepresentation ... be one of existing fact." BCY, 170 S.W.3d at 603 (citing Allied Vista, Inc. v. Holt, 987 S.W.2d 138, 141 (Tex. App.—Houston [14th Dist.] 1999, pet. denied)). This is so since, as the second and third elements of this claim imply, a false representation is needed for negligent misrepresentation. See Wal-Mart, 663 S.W.3d at 581 n.55. Put differently, "[a] promise to do or refrain from doing an act in the future is not actionable because it does not concern an existing fact." BCY, 170 S.W.3d at 603 (citing Miksch v. Exxon Corp., 979 S.W.2d 700, 706 (Tex. App.—Houston [14th Dist.] 1998, pet. denied)).

Here, the Court finds the negligent misrepresentation cause of action plausible since some allegations concern security policies that supposedly were in place when the Barges signed their contract with Wells Fargo. See id. The Barges urge that Wells Fargo's presentations about its security measures, presented in purported screenshots of the bank's webpages, induced them into trusting their monies to the bank. [Dkt. 4 at 5–9]. These screenshots' authenticity notwithstanding, the Court agrees with Wells Fargo that many of the captured statements are about future acts. [Dkt. 6 at 16–17]. For instance, one screenshot contains a statement that Wells Fargo "may take [four] steps to help protect [an] account[ ]," apparently promising that the bank will take at least one of the listed measures if a client's account is at danger. [Dkt. 4 at 6]. Such representations concern future acts and thus must be excluded in a proper negligent misrepresentation analysis. See BCY, 170 S.W.3d at 603. At the same time, the screenshots discuss what appear to be Wells Fargo's ongoing security policies. [Dkt. 4 at 5–7]. Most tellingly, the third image shows a webpage titled "Fraud Defenses" that lists six acts that "help[a client] protect [his or her] accounts from online fraud." Id. at 7. Wells Fargo presumably implements those rules so long as it makes representations about them on its website. Put simply, the listed items are statements of existing fact that may qualify as negligent misrepresentations. See BCY, 170 S.W.3d at 603; see also Jeffries, 269 S.W.3d at 691.

6 Accordingly, the Court DENIES the Motion with respect to negligent misrepresentation. See BCY, 170 S.W.3d at 603; Jeffries, 269 S.W.3d at 691; Ashcroft, 556 U.S. at 679.

ii. Fraud Causes of Action

(A) Fraud

The Court DISMISSES this claim, as the Barges fail to produce evidence establishing that Wells Fargo's publications were fraudulent. See Aquaplex, Inc. v. Rancho La Valencia, Inc., 297 S.W.3d 768, 775 (Tex. 2009) (per curiam); Wesdem, 70 F.4th at 291; Ashcroft, 556 U.S. at 679.

As the Parties agree, fraud has six elements. Aquaplex, 297 S.W.3d at 774. They are: "(1) a material representation was made; (2) the representation was false; (3) the speaker knew that the representation was false or made it recklessly without any knowledge of the truth and as a positive assertion; (4) the speaker made the statement with the intent that the other act upon it; (5) the party acted in reliance on the representation; and (6) the party thereby suffered an injury." Id. (cleaned up) (first quoting *In re FirstMerit Bank, N.A., 52 S.W.3d 749, 758 (Tex. 2001); and then citing Formosa Plastics Corp. U.S. v. Presidio Eng'rs & Contractors, Inc., 960 S.W.2d 41, 47 (Tex. 1998)). These elements establish that "[a] promise of future performance constitutes an actionable misrepresentation if the promise was made with no intent[ ] of performing [when] it was made." Id. (citing Formosa, 960 S.W.2d at 48). While "intent is determined at the time a party made the representation, it may also be inferred from the party's ... acts after the representation was made." Id. (cleaned up) (citing Spolijaric v. Percival Tours, Inc., 708 S.W.2d 432, 435 (Tex. 1986)).

That said, a fraud allegation without evidence falls short of federal pleading standards. See Wesdem, 70 F.4th at 291. In an ideal world, a plaintiff asserting fraud would produce "confessions by the defendant or its agents of the requisite intent." Tony Gullo Motors I, L.P. v. Chapa, 212 S.W.3d 299, 305 (Tex. 2006) (first citing Formosa, 960 S.W.2d at 48; and then citing Spolijaric, 708 S.W.2d at 434–35). But "[p]roving that a party had no intent[ ] of performing ... is [difficult], as intent to defraud is not usually susceptible to direct proof." Aquaplex, 297 S.W.3d at 774–75 (first quoting Tony Gullo, 212 S.W.3d at 305; and then citing Spolijaric, 708 S.W.2d at 435). Thus, a contractual "breach combined with slight circumstantial evidence of fraud is ... [also] evidence of fraudulent intent ...." Id. at 775 (quotation omitted) (citing Tony Gullo, 212 S.W.3d at 305); see also, e.g., Tony Gullo, 212 S.W.3d at 305–06 (breach plus evidence of spoliation and forgery sufficed); Spolijaric, 708 S.W.2d at 435–36 (breach plus evidence that employer refused to commit bonus plan to writing and kept silent on relevant details met standard).

Here, the Barges lack the required evidence of fraudulent intent and therefore fail to state a viable fraud claim. See Aquaplex, 297 S.W.3d at 775. The Amended Petition states all fraud elements. [Dkt. 4 at 11–12]. But the Barges lack an evidentiary allegation that show Wells Fargo's fraudulent intent and thus would shield this claim against Wells Fargo's 12(b)(6) challenge. See id. Nor do their allegations suggest that Wells Fargo made its written assurances with fraudulent intent. See id. at 3–8. While the facts that Wells Fargo agents "called numerous times," talked to the Barges, and still ended up approving the transfers after six days of investigation may indicate questionable services, they do not establish that the bank presents fraudulent representations on its webpage (or on the missing contract, for that matter). See id.; Aquaplex, 297 S.W.3d at 775; Wesdem, 70 F.4th at 291; Ashcroft, 556 U.S. at 679.

7 Accordingly, the Court GRANTS the Motion as to the fraud assertion. See Aquaplex, 297 S.W.3d at 775; Wesdem, 70 F.4th at 291; Ashcroft, 556 U.S. at 679.

(B) Fraudulent Misrepresentation

The Court also DISMISSES this cause of action due to the lack of circumstantial evidence. See Enter. Crude GP LLC v. Sealy Partners, LLC, 614 S.W.3d 283, 306 (Tex. App.—Houston [14th Dist.] 2020, no pet.); Wesdem, 70 F.4th at 291; Ashcroft, 556 U.S. at 679.

Fraudulent misrepresentation requires the same elements and evidence as fraud. See Enter. Crude, 614 S.W.3d at 306. This means that a viable claim of fraudulent misrepresentation shows the six elements of fraud. Id. (citing Italian Cowboy Partners, Ltd. v. Prudential Ins. Co. of Am., 341 S.W.3d 323, 337 (Tex. 2011)). Also, the plaintiff must show direct or circumstantial evidence to establish the movant's fraudulent intent. See id.; Wesdem, 70 F.4th at 291. The relevant evidence may establish that the defendant had no intent to perform the promised act, knew that the representation was false or made recklessly, or made the promise with the intent for the plaintiff to act on the promise. See Enter. Crude, 614 S.W.3d at 306 (gathering cases).

Here, the same lack of evidence that undermines the Barge's fraud theory permeates their fraudulent misrepresentation cause of action. [Dkt. 4 at 11–12].

Accordingly, the Court GRANTS the Motion in respect to this claim. See Enter. Crude, 614 S.W.3d at 306; Wesdem, 70 F.4th at 291; Ashcroft, 556 U.S. at 679.

iii. Contractual Causes of Action

(A) Breach of Contract

The Court DISMISSES this theory for the absence of a specific provision from the contract signed by the Barges. See Bayway Servs., Inc. v. Ameri-Build Const., L.C., 106 S.W.3d 156, 160 (Tex. App.—Houston [1st Dist.] 2003, no pet.); Ashcroft, 556 U.S. at 679.

"Breach of contract requires pleading and proof that (1) a valid contract exists; (2) the plaintiff performed or tendered performance as contractually required; (3) the defendant breached the contract by failing to perform or tender performance as contractually required; and (4) the plaintiff sustained damages due to the breach." Pathfinder Oil & Gas, Inc. v. Great W. Drilling, Ltd., 574 S.W.3d 882, 890 (Tex. 2019) (emphasis added) (citing USAA Tex. Lloyds Co. v. Menchaca, 545 S.W.3d 479, 501 n.21 (Tex. 2018)). It is true that other evidence may supplement the contract and that its "terms cannot be viewed in isolation, ... because doing so distorts [the contract's] meaning." Id. at 889. At the same time, the Court must honor "the written expression of the parties' intent." Id. at 888 (first citing URI, Inc. v. Kleberg Cnty., 543 S.W.3d 755, 763 (Tex. 2018); and then quoting Matagorda Cty. Hosp. Dist. v. Burwell, 189 S.W.3d 738, 740 (Tex. 2006) (per curiam)). This is so because "a contract's plain language controls," given that the "objective manifestations of intent" are crucial to a contractual case. Id. (alterations and citations omitted). So "[a] petition in an action based on a contract must contain ... the substance of the contract which supports the pleader's right to recover." Bayway, 106 S.W.3d at 160.

8 Here, the Court must dismiss this cause of action because Barges fail to produce a single contractual provision allegedly breached by Wells Fargo. See id.; Ashcroft, 556 U.S. at 679. Surely the couple signed at least one contract to open their accounts with the bank. See [Dkt. 4 at 3]. But, as Wells Fargo rightly notes, the Amended Petition instead uses the three screenshots and "broad and general claims" to pursue this theory. Id. at 3–9, 12. The Court agrees that these materials "do not amount to a contract." See [Dkt. 8 at 8]. Nor does the Barges' response brief cite their contract. [Dkt.

7 at 22–23]. The Barges seem to be aware of this as well, as they explain that they have yet to conduct adequate discovery and will address this deficiency if given a chance to do so. Id. at 23.

Accordingly, the Court GRANTS the Motion as to this cause of action. See Bayway, 106 S.W.3d at 160; Ashcroft, 556 U.S. at 679.

(B) Breach of Express Warranty

The Court declines to dismiss this claim since Wells Fargo's statements about its security measures adequately support it. See Chrysler-Plymouth City, Inc. v. Guerrero, 620 S.W.2d 700, 705 (Tex. App.—San Antonio 1981, no writ); Ashcroft, 556 U.S. at 679.

A claim for breach of express warranty is "contractual in nature." Med. City Dall., Ltd. v. Carlisle Corp., 251 S.W.3d 55, 60 (Tex. 2008) (citations omitted). This is so because "[a]n express warranty is the result of a negotiated exchange" and therefore a "creature of contract." Id. at 60–61 (citations omitted). An express warranty claim thus requires a court to rely on "well-established rules for interpretation and construction of contracts." Id. at 61 (citations omitted). But, at the same time, the defendant's factual representations made before the contract's formation may create an express warranty. See Chrysler-Plymouth, 620 S.W.2d at 705 (salesman's assertions regarding product's condition sufficed for finding of express warranty). This conversely means that opinions, beliefs, judgments, or estimates do not lead to an express warranty. See Gen. Supply & Equip. Co., Inc. v. Phillips, 490 S.W.2d 913, 917–18 (Tex. App.—Tyler 1972, writ ref'd n.r.e.). Notably, a claim for breach of express warranty supported by general assertions about security systems and protocols is one about services. See Contractors Source, Inc. v. Amegy Bank Nat'l Ass'n, 462 S.W.3d 128, 138 (Tex. App.—Houston [1st Dist.] 2015, no pet.).

Here, the Court rules that Wells Fargo's representations on its website about its security measures satisfy the 12(b)(6) standard. See Chrysler-Plymouth, 620 S.W.2d at 705; Ashcroft, 556 U.S. at 679. The Court already found that the statements shown in the third screenshot presented in the Amended Petition constitute statements of present facts. Section III.A.2.a.i.(C). Such factual representations may create express warranties about security systems and protocols used by Wells Fargo. See Chrysler-Plymouth, 620 S.W.2d at 705; Contractors Source, 462 S.W.3d at 138.

Accordingly, the Court DENIES the Motion as to this theory. See Chrysler-Plymouth, 620 S.W.2d at 705; Ashcroft, 556 U.S. at 679.

(C) Breach of Implied Warranty

The Court DISMISSES this cause of action as well because of its lack of specificity. See Nghiem v. Sajib, 567 S.W.3d 718, 723–24 (Tex. 2019); Ashcroft, 556 U.S. at 679.

"Causes of action for breach of implied warranties defy simple categorization because an implied warranty is a freak hybrid born of the illicit intercourse of tort and contract."

 © 2025 Thomson Reuters. No claim to original U.S. Government Works.

Nghiem, 567 S.W.3d at 723 (quotation and citations omitted). It is true that "[t]he precise nature of [an implied warranty] claim [depends on] the damages alleged: when the damages are purely economic, the claim sounds in contract[ ] ...." JCW Elecs., Inc. v. Garza, 257 S.W.3d 701, 705 (Tex. 2008) (first citing DeLanney, 809 S.W.2d at 495; and then citing Jim Walter, 711 S.W.2d at 618). But implied warranties "have feet" in both contract and tort because they are "created by operation of law in connection with a contract." Nghiem, 567 S.W.3d at 724 (citing JCW, 257 S.W.3d at 704). Further, "[i]mplied warranties may be imposed either by statute or under the common law." Rocky Mountain Helicopters, Inc. v. Lubbock Cnty. Hosp. Dist., 987 S.W.2d 50, 52 (Tex. 1998) (citing Parkway Co. v. Woodruff, 901 S.W.2d 434, 438 (Tex. 1995)). All this is to say that there are many variants of implied warranty, each of which "behave[s] differently" and therefore requires different elements. See Nghiem, 567 S.W.3d at 724 (citation omitted).

9 Here, Wells Fargo successfully challenges the Barges' vague assertion of breach of implied warranty. See id.; Ashcroft, 556 U.S. at 679. The Amended Petition presents a rather undeveloped articulation of this theory, presented in the same section as the express warranty theory. [Dkt. 4 at 14–15] ("Breach[es] of Express and Implied Warranties"). This shortcoming, again, seems to arise out of the fact that the Barges could not amend their complaint "to fit the heightened standard of a federal pleading" due to insufficient discovery. See [Dkt. 7 at 23]. The Amended Petition may satisfy state pleading standards, but it fails to meet federal ones. See Nghiem, 567 S.W.3d at 724; Ashcroft, 556 U.S. at 697, 679.

Accordingly, the Court GRANTS the Motion as to this cause of action. See Nghiem, 567 S.W.3d at 723–24; Ashcroft, 556 U.S. at 679.

b. Statutory Claim

i. DTPA Violation

The Court declines to dismiss this theory since its negligent misrepresentation and express warranty breach counterparts enable it to meet the pleading standard. See Tony Gullo, 212 S.W.3d at 305; Nghiem, 567 S.W.3d at 722; Ashcroft, 556 U.S. at 679.

When evaluating a claim under the DTPA, the Court must consider "both the source of the defendant's duty to act (whether it arose solely out of the contract or from some common[ ]law duty) and the nature of the remedy sought by the plaintiff." Formosa, 960 S.W.2d at 45 (quoting Crawford v. Ace Sign, Inc., 917 S.W.2d 12, 13–14 (Tex. 1996) (per curiam)). In a contract case, a breach of the contract itself is not a "false, misleading, or deceptive" act that violates the DTPA. Tony Gullo, 212 S.W.3d at 304 (citing Ashford Dev., Inc. v. USLife Real Est. Servs. Corp., 661 S.W.2d 933, 935 (Tex. 1983)). In other words, a mere contractual breach cannot support a DTPA noncompliance allegation. See id. But the DTPA allows recovery for an initial misrepresentation. See Tony Gullo, 212 S.W.3d at 305 (citation omitted) (discussing fraudulent misrepresentation). Likewise, a viable express warranty breach claim may support a DTPA noncompliance cause of action. See Nghiem, 567 S.W.3d at 722 (citing La Sara Grain Co. v. First Nat'l Bank of Mercedes, 673 S.W.2d 558, 565 (Tex. 1984)).

Here, the DTPA violation theory is viable as the negligent misrepresentation and warranty breach claims are too. See Tony Gullo, 212 S.W.3d at 305; Nghiem, 567 S.W.3d at 722; Ashcroft, 556 U.S. at 679. The Court determined that most causes of action fall short of the 12(b)(6) scrutiny. Sections III.A.2.a.i.(A)–(B), III.A.2.a.ii.(A)–(B), III.A.2.a.i.(A), III.A.2.a.i.(C). But the Court also determined that the negligent misrepresentation and breach of express warranty claims survive the Motion. Sections III.A.2.a.i.(C), III.A.2.a.iii.(B). Since the DTPA allows recovery for those causes of action, the Court concludes that the Barges successfully pleaded this statutory theory as well. See Tony Gullo, 212 S.W.3d at 305; Nghiem, 567 S.W.3d at 722; Ashcroft, 556 U.S. at 679.

Accordingly, the Court DENIES the Motion as to the DTPA violation cause of action. See Tony Gullo, 212 S.W.3d at 305; Nghiem, 567 S.W.3d at 722; Ashcroft, 556 U.S. at 679.

B. Leave to Amend

Finally, after dismissing seven causes of action, the Court grants the Barges another chance to replead all seven due to Wells Fargo's failure to cooperate in discovery. See S&W Enters., L.L.C. v. SouthTrust Bank of Ala., 315 F.3d 533, 535 (5th Cir. 2003); *Douglas v. Wells Fargo Bank, N.A., 992 F.3d 367, 373 (5th Cir. 2021); Brown v. Taylor, 911 F.3d 235, 246 (5th Cir. 2018) (per curiam); Edionwe v. Bailey, 860 F.3d 287, 295 (5th Cir. 2017); Ashcroft, 556 U.S. at 679.

10 Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 16(b) "governs amendment of pleadings after a scheduling order deadline has expired." S&W, 315 F.3d at 536 (cleaned up); Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(b). In other words, Rule 16(b)(4) applies if "leave to amend would require modification of the [live] scheduling order." S&W, 315 F.3d at 536; Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(b)(4). Such an amendment is warranted "upon a showing of good cause and by leave of the Court." S&W, 315 F.3d at 535 (cleaned up). "The good cause standard requires the party seeking relief to show that the deadlines cannot reasonably be met despite its diligence." Id. (cleaned up). "If the party [does] show[a] good cause, the [C]ourt may then consider certain factors under Rule 15(a)(2)." Douglas, 992 F.3d at 373 (citing Jones v. Robinson Prop. Grp., L.P., 427 F.3d 987, 994 (5th Cir. 2005)). Rule 15(a)(2) states that the Court may "freely give leave to amend the complaint when justice so requires." Brown, 911 F.3d at 246 (cleaned up); Fed. R. Civ. P. 15(a)(2). But the Court can also deny leave to amend for a "substantial reason." Brown, 911 F.3d at 246 (citations omitted). Precedents identify at least five rationales for failure to allow leave to amend: "undue delay, bad faith on the movant's part, repeated failure to cure deficiencies, undue prejudice to the opposing party, and futility of the amendment." Edionwe, 860 F.3d at 295 (cleaned up); see also Foman v. Davis, 371 U.S. 178, 182 (1962) (implying that there could be other rationales —"etc."—for granting a leave to amend the complaint).

Here, the Barges have exercised their privilege to a free amendment, and the deadline to file an amended complaint has passed. See [Dkts. 3 (the original complaint), 4 (the live Amended Petition), 21 (the First Amended Scheduling Order)]. The couple thus asks that they be allowed another chance to amend their complaint, especially as they had yet to "receive discovery materials which may be necessary" to amend the Amended Petition and meet "the heightened standard of a federal pleading." [Dkt. 7 at 3, 22–23, 25]. The Barges aver that this is due in part to Wells Fargo's refusal to produce the documents they need to establish their claims. [Dkt. 13 at 4–5].

The Court rules that Wells Fargo's failure to cooperate in discovery is a good cause and so gives the Barges one more chance with all dismissed causes of action. See S&W, 315 F.3d at 535; Douglas, 992 F.3d at 373; Brown, 911 F.3d at 246; Edionwe, 860 F.3d at 295; Ashcroft, 556 U.S. at 679. The couple's response brief observes that they filed the Amended Petition before adequate discovery occurred. [Dkt. 7 at 22–23]. The Barges thus implore that "dismiss[ing] a proper state court pleading based on federal standards before [they] had [an opportuunity] to receive discovery materials" would be unjust. Id. at 23. The Court agrees. See Douglas, 992 F.3d at 373; Edionwe, 860 F.3d at 295; Ashcroft, 556 U.S. at 679; see also Fed. R. Civ. P. 1 (declaring that the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure "should be construed, administered, and employed by the [C]ourt and the [P]arties to secure the just, speedy, and inexpensive determination of every action and proceeding) (emphases added). Also, Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 15(a)(2) states that the Court "should freely give leave when justice so requires." Fed. R. Civ. P. 15(a)(2). Each dismissal is due to the absence of supporting evidence or allegations. Sections III.A.2.a.i.(A)–(B), III.A.2.a.ii.(A)–(B), III.A.2.a.iii.(A), III.A.2.a.iii.(C). Considering that about ten months have passed since this case was removed, the Barges, had there been adequate discovery, could have by now decided whether they want to replead some or all of the dismissed theories. See [Dkts. 1 (the removal notice); 9–10, 19 (discovery disclosures)]. This assessment finds further support in the Court's determination that no other reason for denying an amendment applies. See Edionwe, 860 F.3d at 295; Foman, 371 U.S. at 182; Ashcroft, 556 U.S. at 679. Granting one more chance to remedy a discovery issue creates neither an undue delay nor an undue prejudice. See Edionwe, 860 F.3d at 295; Ashcroft, 556 U.S. at 679. The Court finds no bad faith or futility. See Edionwe, 860 F.3d at 295; Ashcroft, 556 U.S. at 679. Nor is there a repeated failure to cure deficiencies just yet. See Edionwe, 860 F.3d at 295; Ashcroft, 556 U.S. at 679.

11 Accordingly, the Court DISMISSES WITHOUT PREJUDICE and allows the Barges an additional chance to replead their negligence, breach of fiduciary duty, gross negligence, fraud, fraudulent misrepresentation, breach of contract, and breach of implied warranty causes of action after adequate discovery takes place. See S&W, 315 F.3d at 535; Douglas, 992 F.3d at 373; Brown, 911 F.3d at 246; Edionwe, 860 F.3d at 295; Ashcroft, 556 U.S. at 679.

IV. CONCLUSION

It is therefore ORDERED that Wells Fargo's Motion [Dkt. 6] is hereby GRANTED IN PART. The Barges' negligence, breach of fiduciary duty, gross negligence, fraud, fraudulent misrepresentation, breach of contract, and breach of implied warranty claims are DISMISSED WITHOUT PREJUDICE.

It is further ORDERED that the Motion is hereby DENIED with respect to the negligent misrepresentation, breach of express warranty, and DTPA violation theories.

The Court will issue the Second Amended Scheduling Order—which will establish, among others, the new dispositive motion deadline and trial setting—once the Court is satisfied that Wells Fargo fulfilled its discovery duties.

All Citations

Not Reported in Fed. Supp., 2024 WL 2520324

Footnotes

1 The Court agrees with the Barges that Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 9(b) governs their fraud claims. See Wesdem, L.L.C. v. Ill. Tool Works, Inc., 70 F.4th 285, 291 (5th Cir. 2023); Ashcroft, 556 U.S. at 679. The usual 8(a) standard demands that the complaint "do more than name laws that may have been violated by the defendant" by stating "facts regarding what conduct violated those laws." Anderson v. U.S. Dep't of Hous. & Urban Dev., 554 F.3d 525, 528 (5th Cir. 2008). But a fraud claim under Rule 9(b) "requires that the plaintiff 'state with particularity the circumstances constituting [the] fraud.' " Wesdem, 70 F.4th at 291 (alteration in original) (quoting Fed. R. Civ. P. 9(b)).

2 The Court notes that its decisions on negligence and DTPA claims comply with the economic loss rule. See Chapman Custom Homes, Inc. v. Dall. Plumbing Co., 445 S.W.3d 716, 718 (Tex. 2014) (per curiam); Ashcroft, 556 U.S. at 679. "The economic loss rule generally precludes recovery in tort for economic losses resulting from a party's failure to perform under a contract when the harm [is] only ... the economic loss of a contractual expectancy." Chapman, 445 S.W.3d at 718 (first citing LAN/STV v. Martin K. Eby Constr. Co., Inc., 435 S.W.3d 234, 243 (Tex. 2014); and then citing Jim Walter Homes, Inc. v. Reed, 711 S.W.2d 617, 618 (Tex. 1986)). "But it does not bar all tort claims arising out of a contractual setting." Id. Indeed, "a party states a tort claim when the duty allegedly breached is independent of the contractual undertaking and the harm suffered is not merely the economic loss of a contractual benefit." Id. (first citing LAN/STV, 435 S.W.3d at 242 n.35; and then citing Sw. Bell Tel. Co. v. DeLanney, 809 S.W.2d 493, 494–95 (Tex. 1991)). Here, the Barges allege that they have a contractual relationship with Wells Fargo. [Dkt. 4 at 3–16]. This Court holds that Wells Fargo did not owe a duty to the Barges and thus dismissed their negligence, breach of fiduciary duty, and gross negligence claims. Sections III.A.2.a.i.(A)–(B). But this Court also denies the Motion with respect to the negligent misrepresentation cause of action, which does not require a duty to satisfy the pleading standard. Section III.A.2.a.i.(C). And the DTPA violation theory survives partly since the negligent misrepresentation cause of action survives. Section III.A.2.b. Accordingly, these outcomes follow the economic loss rule. See Chapman, 445 S.W.3d at 718.

End of Document

© 2025 Thomson Reuters. No claim to original U.S. Government Works.

CASE NO. 59

2006 WL 2796387
Only the Westlaw citation
is currently available.
United States District Court,
S.D. Texas, Houston Division.

PREMIERE HOLDINGS OF TEXAS LP., Plaintiff,
v.
STERLING REIT, INC., et al., Defendants.

No. CIV A
H
-
04
-
0916
.
|
Sept. 26, 2006.

Attorneys and Law Firms

Ernest W. Boyd, Jr., Jeremy Richard Stone, Mehaffy Weber PC, John F. Higgins, IV, Porter & Hedges LLP, Houston, TX, for Plaintiff.

ORDER

GILMORE, J.

1 Pending before the Court is Defendant Thomas Mathew's Motion for Summary Judgment. (Instrument No. 36).

I.

On June 23, 2005, this Court issued an Order withdrawing the reference as to this adversary proceeding, which was originally filed in the United States Bankruptcy Court for the Southern District of Texas, Houston Division (Case No. 03-3948) pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 157 and § 1334.[1] (Instrument No. 8). Venue is proper in this district pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 1409. On September 15, 2005, Premiere Holdings of Texas, LP Liquidating Trust ("Plaintiff" or "Premiere")[2] filed its Second Amended Complaint against Defendants Sterling REIT, Inc. ("Sterling") and Thomas Mathew ("Mathew") alleging dishonor of a promissory note, breach of contract, fraud, and conspiracy relating to an exit fee for broker services allegedly rendered in relation to a loan made to Defendants. (Instrument No. 20, at 3-4). Plaintiff is seeking actual damages as well as exemplary damages, attorneys' fees, and pre- and post-judgment interest. (Id., at 4-5).

In 2001, Mathew and Sterling made a business decision to purchase the remainder of the ownership interests in the Fixed Based Operations ("FBO's") in which Mathew was already part owner. (Instrument No. 36, at 2). FBO's are "private airports" of sorts that provide hangar, fueling, and other services at airports. (Id.). The purchase of the ownership interests would allow Sterling and Mathew to become the sole owners of the FBO's. (Id.). Considering the time restraints to close this deal, and after having considered more traditional lending institutions (e.g., Wells Fargo Bank) that could not produce the amount of loan money necessary in such a short amount of time, Sterling and Mathew chose Money Mortgage, Ltd. ("Mortgage" or "Money Mortgage") (a division of Premiere) to underwrite the loan. (Id.). Lucky Srinivasan ("Lucky"), an agent and consultant of Sterling, contacted Mortgage to initiate the loan for the FBO's in the amount of $5,000,000 at a 15% interest for a term of 12 months ("the Waterfront Note"). (Id.). Once the loan process was initiated, Mortgage gave Lucky loan documents to be signed by Sterling and Mathew. The documents included the following: Mortgage Loan Application: Equity Loan (the general application); the Disclosures Regarding Mortgage Transaction: Equity Loan (document purporting to establish a broker relationship and basis for broker fees); the Waterfront Note; and the Exit Note (a promissory note in the amount of $500,000). (Id.).

 © 2025 Thomson Reuters. No claim to original U.S. Government Works.

On August 9, 2001, Mathew signed all of the documents related to the loan, and the loan was closed and funded on that same day. (Id ., at 1). As part of the closing, Mathew and Sterling paid Mortgage a $750,000 broker's fee as part of the loan agreement. (Id.). The Exit Note, which stated that an exit fee in the amount of $250,000 would be payable to Mortgage if the Waterfront Note was paid on or before six months before the due date, or $500,000 if the loan was paid off after six months after closing. The Exit Note also stated that "[a]ll exit fees shall be payable upon payoff of the loan." (Id., at Exhibit 2). The Note also includes the following clause:

> 2 By your signature below Borrower agrees (1) the loan fees and exit fees are paid as broker compensation in consideration for arranging this loan; (2) the loan and exit fees are reasonable and voluntarily paid by Borrower; (3) the lender will receive none of the loan fees and exit fees; (4) the loan fees and exit fees are not paid to Broker for the use or forbearance of money; (5) Money Mortgage, Ltd. and its affiliates will not fund any of the loan amount; (6) it has rights under Texas Usury Law and specifically renounces its right to bring a usury claim arising out of this Mortgage Loan Application and any loan made as a direct result of this Mortgage Loan Application; and (7) Borrower specifically agrees that absent his express and effective waiver of any possible usury claim, Money Mortgage, Ltd. would not arrange for and its investors would not extend credit under this Mortgage Loan Application.

(Id.). The $5,000,000 Waterfront Note was paid in full in February 2003 after a settlement was reached in a suit commenced by Mathew against Waterfront. (Instrument No. 38, at 2). Mathew, however, did not at that time pay the Exit Note, despite Plaintiff's demand letter dated February 13, 2003, per Lucky's advice.

 © 2025 Thomson Reuters. No claim to original U.S. Government Works.

(Instrument No. 36, at 4; Instrument No. 38, Exhibit C). Mathew states that he did in fact have the money to pay Mortgage the $500,000 Exit Note fee, but because Mortgage never requested payment of the fee, Mathew never tendered the money-despite his contention that he believed he was legally obligated to pay the additional fee. (Instrument No. 36, at 4-5).

Plaintiff states that both Mortgage and Lapin were divisions within Premiere as well as assumed names of Premiere. (Id., at 4). Plaintiff argues that Lapin, while affiliated with Premiere, was a separate and distinct entity. (Id., at 5). Defendant argues that Mortgage and Lapin were both wholly-owned subsidiaries of Premiere where all were housed in the same office under one lease, all of their employees' paychecks came from Premiere, and all were a part of an operation controlled by Premiere. (Instrument No. 36, at 3). As for Waterfront Mortgage, L.P. ("Waterfront" or "Waterfront Mortgage") (the company to which the principal amount of the loan was due), Defendant believes the entity to be no more than a "paper company." (Id., at 4). Plaintiff states that just a short time before Sterling and Mathew's loan was closed, either Premiere or its affiliates filed a Certificate of Limited Partnership for Waterfront with the Texas Secretary of State. (Id.). Waterfront's general partner was listed as Lapin & Wigginton, Ltd., but Defendant asserts that there is no evidence that Waterfront had any employees, officers, bank accounts, or assets (besides it being named as payee on Mathew's Waterfront note). Further, Defendant contends that there is no evidence that Waterfront received funds from investors in the general public to fund the loan to Mathew and Sterling. (Id.). The $500,000 exit fee remains unpaid and is the focus of this adversary proceeding that was removed from the Bankruptcy Court. (Instrument No. 1). On the other hand, Plaintiff states that its summary judgment evidence demonstrates that Waterfront did have limited partners who funded the Mathew and Sterling loan, and the facts that Waterfront continued on as a limited partnership even after the bankruptcy of Premiere and that Mathew and Sterling settled with Waterfront on the loan amount, contradict Defendant's position that Waterfront was a "paper company." (Instrument No. 38, at 5).

3 Prior to the closing, Defendant Mathew avers that he had no contact or communication of any kind with Mortgage, Lapin, or any other "Premiere entity." (Instrument No. 36, at 4). After the closing, Mathew states that he had a brief conversation with Mr. Kaminski, a purported limited partner in Waterfront. (Id.). In early 2004, Richard Kammerman ("Kammerman") was retained as counsel for Sterling and Mathew. (Id., at 5). In November 2005, this Court granted Kammerman's motion to withdraw as Sterling's counsel, and as a result, Sterling was ordered to retain new counsel. (Id.). By January 2006, Sterling had not yet retained new counsel in this case, and this Court granted Plaintiff's Motion for Default Judgment against Sterling and issued a Default Judgment. (Id.).

Plaintiff Premiere's corporate structure chart shows that Mortgage and Lapin & Wigginton, Ltd. ("Lapin") conduct two separate functions in the processing of a loan-the chart states that Mortgage is responsible for mortgage operations, while Lapin is responsible for funding operations. (Instrument No. 38, at Exhibit E). More specifically, Lapin was responsible for raising cash from the general public to fund loans-charging 12% interest on amounts invested with Lapin; and Mortgage was responsible for originating, underwriting, negotiating, approving, funding, and servicing the loans. (Instrument No. 36, at 3).

 © 2025 Thomson Reuters. No claim to original U.S. Government Works.

On April 10, 2006, Defendant Mathew filed this Motion for Summary Judgment. (Instrument No. 36). Defendant argues that the Exit Note is unconscionable, fraudulent, and violative of the usury laws of Texas. (Id., at 7). More specifically, Defendant argues that Plaintiff's claims of fraud and conspiracy fail as a matter of law because there were never any communications made by Mathew to Mortgage, Lapin, Premiere, Waterfront, or any of the other Premiere-related entities. (Id., at 8). Further, Defendant argues that because no broker services were rendered by Mortgage to him or Sterling, no consideration was given in exchange for the Exit Note, and therefore, the Note violates general principles of contract law. (Id., at 9). Also, Defendant believes that the broker fees charged by Mortgage are unconscionable, as the total amount of fees equaled $1,250,000 ($750,000 at closing plus $500,000 upon payment of the principal). (Id., at 11-15). Defendant also asserts a usury defense because he believes that if the Court determines consideration was given for the Exit Note, the broker fees charged to Mathew and Sterling is actually disguised interest on the $5,000,000 loan. (Id., at 15-18). Finally, Defendant raises the defense of fraud because he argues that Plaintiff perpetrated a fraud on him by making misrepresentations to him about material facts regarding the loan. (Id., at 18-19).

On May 1, 2006, Plaintiff Premiere filed its Response to Defendant Mathew's Motion for Summary Judgment. (Instrument No. 38). First, Plaintiff objects to affidavits attached to Defendant's Motion for Summary Judgment because (1) Plaintiff alleges that much of Mathew's affidavit is based on hearsay and contains conclusory statements, and (2) Plaintiff alleges that Jeffrey Dunn's affidavit should be stricken because Mr. Dunn has no personal knowledge of the matters in this case. (Id., at iv). Plaintiff contends that Defendant's defenses of fraud and conspiracy fail because Defendant Mathew did in fact sign the loan documents, and as a result, made representations that he would pay the exit fee upon the repayment of the loan. (Id., at iv-v). Moreover, Plaintiff states that there is ample evidence to demonstrate that consideration was given for the Exit Note because Mathew has testified that he received exactly what he wanted and that he was able to close on his transaction. (Id., at v). Further, Plaintiff avers that because Mathew knew of all the fees and terms of the agreement, and signed the loan documents in his own home, the Exit Note cannot constitute an unconscionable contract. (Id.). Premiere next argues that the Exit Note is not usurious on its face, and that Defendant cannot assert this defense because of the savings clause in the Exit Note. (Id., at v-vi). Lastly, Premiere contends that Mathew's affirmative defense of fraud fails because nothing was ever misrepresented to him, and he cannot show any damages. (Id., at vi).

II.

 © 2025 Thomson Reuters. No claim to original U.S. Government Works.

4 Summary judgment is appropriate if no genuine issue of material fact exists and the moving party is entitled to judgment as a matter of law. Fed.R.Civ.P. 56. A fact is "material" if its resolution in favor of one party might affect the outcome of the suit under governing law. See Anderson v. Liberty Lobby, Inc., 477 U.S. 242, 248, 106 S.Ct. 2505, 91 L.Ed.2d 202 (1986); see also United States v. Arron, 954 F.2d 249, 251 (5th Cir.1992). An issue is "genuine" if the evidence is sufficient for a reasonable jury to return a verdict for the nonmoving party. See Anderson, 477 U.S. at 248. If the evidence rebutting the motion for summary judgment is only colorable or is not significantly probative, summary judgment should be granted. See id. at 2511; see also Thomas v. Barton Lodge, Ltd., 174 F.3d 636, 644 (5th Cir.1999). The summary judgment procedure, therefore, enables a party "who believes there is no genuine issue as to a specific fact essential to the other side's case to demand at least one sworn averment of that [specific] fact before the lengthy process continues." Lujan v. Nat'l Wildlife Fed'n, 497 U.S. 871, 886-88, 110 S.Ct. 3177, 111 L.Ed.2d 695 (1990).

Under Rule 56(c), the moving party bears the initial burden of informing the district court of the basis for its belief that there is an absence of a genuine issue for trial and of identifying those portions of the record that demonstrate such absence. See Matsushita Elec. Indus. Co. v. Zenith Radio Corp., 475 U.S. 576, 586-87 (1986); see also Burge v. Parish of St. Tammany, 187 F.3d 452, 464 (5th Cir.1999).

Where the moving party has met its Rule 56(c) burden, the nonmovant "must do more than simply show that there is some metaphysical doubt as to the material facts.... [T]he nonmoving party must come forward with specific facts showing that there is a genuine issue for trial." ' Matsushita Elec. Indus. Co. v. Zenith Radio Corp., 475 U.S. at 586-87 (quoting FED. R. CIV. P. 56(e)) (emphasis in original). See also Celotex Corp. v. Catrett, 477 U.S. 317, 322, 106 S.Ct. 2548, 91 L.Ed.2d 265 (1986); Engstrom v. First Nat'l Bank, 47 F.3d 1459, 1462 (5th Cir.1995). To sustain the burden, the nonmoving party must produce evidence admissible at trial. See Anderson, 477 U.S. at 242; see also Thomas v. Price, 975 F.2d 231, 235 (5th Cir.1992) ("To avoid a summary judgment, the nonmoving party must adduce admissible evidence which creates a fact issue.").

The Court reviews the facts in the light most favorable to the nonmovant and draws all reasonable inferences in favor of the nonmovant. See Brown v. Bunge Corp., 207 F.3d 776, 781 (5th Cir.2000). "The mere existence of a scintilla of evidence in support of the plaintiff's position will be insufficient; there must be evidence on which the jury could reasonably find for the plaintiff." Anderson, 477 U.S. at 252.

III.

A.

Defendant argues that no conspiracy existed to commit fraud because there was little to no communication among Defendant and Plaintiff, Mortgage, Waterfront, and any of the other Premiere-related entities. (Instrument No. 36, at 8). To prove a prima facie case of common-law fraud, the Plaintiff must show that: (1) a material representation was made; (2) the representation was false; (3) when the representation was made, the speaker knew it was false or made it recklessly without any knowledge of the truth and as a positive assertion; (4) the representation was made with the intention that it be acted upon by the other party; (5) the party acted in reliance upon the representation; and (6) the party suffered injury. Johnson & Higgins v. Kenneco Energy, 962 S.W.2d 507 (Tex.1998). A promise to do something in the future is not fraud unless the promise was made with the intent not to perform. M.J. Sheridan & Sons Co. v. Seminole Pipeline Co., 731 S.W.2d 620, 624 (Tex.App.-Houston [1st Dist.] 1997, no writ). Plaintiff argues that Defendant and Sterling committed fraud in a conspiracy against it because by signing the loan documents, which included the Exit Note, Defendant represented to Plaintiff that he would pay the exit fee ($500,000) in conjunction with the loan from Mortgage, but has not paid such fee. (Instrument No. 1, at 4).

 © 2025 Thomson Reuters. No claim to original U.S. Government Works.

1.

5 Circumstantial evidence, including the subsequent conduct of the promisor, may be used to prove intent not to perform a promise at the time it was made. Pulchny v. Pulchny, 555 S.W.2d 543, 545 (Tex.Civ.App.-Corpus Christi 1977, no writ). "Intent is a fact question uniquely within the realm of the trier of fact because it so depends upon the credibility of the witnesses and the weight to be given to their testimony" Spoljaric v. Percival Tours, Inc., 708 S.W.2d 432, 434 (Tex.1986); and therefore, "[s]ummary judgment is rarely proper." Taylor v. Bonilla, 801 S.W.2d 553, 557 (Tex.App.1990, writ denied). By itself, the failure to perform does not establish fraudulent intent; however, "[s]light circumstantial evidence of fraud, when considered with the breach of promise to perform, is sufficient to support a finding of fraudulent intent." Spoljaric, 708 S.W.2d at 435 (internal quotations omitted).

Here, it is clear from the record that Mathew signed all of the loan documents, on his own volition, including the Exit Note, which required him to pay an additional $500,000 when the principal amount of the loan was paid off at a certain time. While this is true, evidence in the summary judgment record also indicates that Mathew's verbal communication with Plaintiff Premiere, Waterfront, or any of the Premiere-related entities was virtually non-existent. Mathew does state that at the time he signed the Exit Note, he intended to pay the amount in full upon the repayment of the entire loan balance, which, if true, would negate the majority of the elements of Plaintiff's fraud and conspiracy claims. Further, Mathew states that he would have paid the Exit Note in February 2003, at which time he said he was acting without counsel, if he had received such a request from Premiere. Plaintiff counters Mathew's statement by providing evidence to the Court that in February 2003 Mathew was in fact represented by counsel, and also that a letter dated February 13, 2003 entitled "Notice of Intention to Accelerate and Demand for Payment" was sent to both Mathew and Sterling demanding payment of the Exit Note. (Instrument No. 38, at Exhibit C).

In viewing the evidence in the light most favorable to the Plaintiff, this evidence; specifically, Defendant's statement that the reason the Exit Note was never paid was in part due to the fact that he never received a request for payment of the Exit Note even when Plaintiff has produced evidence to the contrary, creates a material fact issue with respect to Mathew's intent to pay the Exit Note at the time he signed the agreement with Money Mortgage.

2.

In order to prove a case of fraud, the Plaintiff must show that Defendant possessed the requisite intent to defraud Plaintiff and that Plaintiff Premiere both justifiably and actually relied on Defendant's promise to pay the Exit Loan. Haralson v. E.F. Hutton Group, Inc., 919 F.2d 1014, 1025 (5th Cir.1990). Defendant Mathew highlights that David Lapin (Chief Operating Office of Premiere) stated in his deposition that he was not made aware of any misrepresentations or the like by Mathew to Premiere or any other Premiere-related entity regarding the payment of the Exit Note or the loan. (Instrument No. 36, at 8). Plaintiff attempts to refute this evidence by stating that the deposition testimony of Richard Melamed ("Melamed")(real estate attorney for Premiere) and Ted Murray ("Murray") (principal of Premiere) provide proof that both of these Premiere representatives believe that Premiere relied on promises made by Mathew and Sterling, and that if Mathew or Sterling signed the Exit Note without intending to pay it, it would be misrepresentation. (Instrument No. 38, at 6).

6 To make a determination about justifiable reliance, the court must consider whether, "given a fraud plaintiff's individual characteristics, abilities, and appreciation of facts and circumstances at or before the time of the alleged fraud-it is extremely unlikely that there is actual reliance on the plaintiff's part." Id., at 1026; see also General Motors Corp., Pontiac Motor Div. v. Courtesy Pontiac, Inc., 538 S.W.2d 3, 6 (Tex.Civ.App.-Tyler 1976, no writ) (quoted in Haralson, 919 F.2d at 1026) (internal quotations omitted). In other words, a plaintiff cannot justifiably rely on "representations which any [person] would recognize at once as proposterous ... or which are shown by facts within his observation to be so patently and obviously false that he must have closed his eyes to avoid discovery of the truth." Courtesy Pontiac, Inc., 538 S.W.2d at 6.

Mathew maintains that because he had little to no communication with Premiere, Money Mortgage, or any other Premiere-related entities, the Court cannot presume that any of these entities acted in reliance on or suffered any injury as a result of alleged representations made by him. (Instrument No. 36, at 9). Further, Mathew states that "[m]erely refusing to pay a note or any debt when one has good reason to do so is not fraud or any civil wrong." (Id.). The summary judgment evidence shows, however, that Mathew did in fact sign all of the loan documents-including the Exit Note, and by his signature, he acknowledged the following:

> (1) the loan fees and exit fees are paid as broker compensation in > consideration for arranging this loan; (2) the loan and exit fees are reasonable and voluntarily paid by Borrower; (3) the lender will receive none of the loan fees and exit fees; (4) the loan fees and exit fees are not paid to Broker for the use or forbearance of money....

(Instrument No. 36, Exhibit 2, at 2). Based on the deposition testimony and the loan agreement which includes Mathew's signature, and viewing the evidence in the light most favorable to the Plaintiff, the Court concludes that Plaintiff has provided sufficient evidence to establish that a fact issue exists as to whether its reliance on Mathew's signature was justifiable. Because genuine issues of material fact exist with respect to Plaintiff's claim that a conspiracy existed to commit fraud, Defendant's Motion for Summary Judgment with respect to that issue is DENIED.

B.

Next, Defendant argues that because there were no broker services rendered in connection with the loan agreement signed by Defendant Mathew and Sterling, no consideration was given in exchange for the Exit Note, and as a result, the Note must be declared unenforceable and/or void. (Instrument No. 36, at 9). Plaintiff argues that deposition testimony provides support for its argument that broker services were provided by Mortgage, and that because these services were performed by Mortgage for Defendant Mathew, consideration exists to support the Exit Note. "A complete failure of consideration constitutes a defense to an action on a written agreement." Gensco, Inc. v. Transformaciones Metalurgicias Especiales S.A., 666 S.W.2d 549, 553 (Tex.App.-Houston [14th Dist.] 1984, writ dism'd). "The defense of failure of consideration defeats summary judgment if the nonmovant alleges facts and presents evidence that the consideration in the agreement was not received." Stewart v. U.S. Leasing Corp., 702 S.W.2d 288, 290 (Tex.App.-Houston 1985, no writ (citing O'Shea v. Coronado Transmission Co., 656 S.W.2d 557, 563 (Tex.App.-Corpus Christi 1983, writ ref'd n.r.e).

7 The loan agreement and Exit Note were signed by Mathew at the same time. (Instrument No. 36, at 10). In addition to the $5,000,000 Waterfront Note, Mortgage assessed what it dubbed to be broker fees in the amount of $1,250,000 ($750,000 at closing; $500,000 Exit Note). Defendant has not yet paid the $500,000 Exit Note despite his paying back the principal amount of the loan in 2003. In this case, Defendant asserts that the Exit Note, valued at $500,000 was not supported by consideration (namely, broker services), and is therefore unenforceable. In both the loan application and the Disclosures and Mortgage and Equity Loan Agreement, Money Mortgage characterized the $1,250,000 fees as "broker fees." (Id.). Defendant states that despite this characterization, Mortgage never provided any broker services. (Id.). More specifically, Defendant asserts that Mortgage did not seek out additional lenders, and that it did not perform adequate due diligence to seek out the best possible deal. (Id.). On the other hand, Plaintiff provides deposition testimony by Melamed as evidence that Mortgage did render broker services. Specifically, Melamed's deposition indicates that Mortgage originated the loans, brokered the loans, completed transactions using others' funds, arranged the loan, qualified borrowers, evaluated the collateral, and both packaged and serviced the loan. (Instrument No. 38, at 7). Defendant contends that because L & W (a Premiere affiliate) found the investors, and in its opinion essentially brokered the loan, L & W's services cannot also suffice as services provided by Mortgage, and therefore, the Exit Note still lacks consideration. Plaintiff has provided evidence that refutes this contention, however. The Premiere Holdings Corporate Chart shows that both L & W and Money Mortgage were assumed names of Premiere, and that despite each division having separate functions, they all operated under the Premiere umbrella. (Instrument No. 38, at 8). Further, Plaintiff points to Defendant's own testimony to support its position. In Defendant's deposition, he stated that he "received exactly what he asked for" (regarding the $5,000,000 loan), and that although more traditional lending institutions would have been able to structure the loan for less interest and fees, those institutions were unwilling to structure the loan in the expeditious manner which Defendant required for the purchase of FBO's. (Instrument No. 38, at 8).

In viewing the evidence in the light most favorable to the nonmovant, the Court concludes that Plaintiff has presented evidence that creates fact issues with respect to whether the Exit Note in the amount of $500,000 was supported by consideration-namely, broker services. Accordingly, Defendant's Motion for Summary Judgment with respect to the defense of lack of consideration is DENIED.

C.

Defendant alleges that even if the Court decided that Mortgage provided broker services, the amount already paid and the amount to be paid as broker fees are unconscionable, and the Exit Note is unenforceable. (Instrument No. 36, at 11). Also, Defendant states the Exit Note is unconscionable because Mortgage "never shopped the deal to anyone." (Id., at 11). Plaintiff argues that the Exit Note is not unconscionable, as Mathew considered many lenders before choosing Mortgage, and Mortgage was ultimately chosen because it was the only institution willing to arrange the loan in the time period required by Defendant. (Instrument No. 38, at 10).

8 "[T]he decision of whether some agreement is or is not unconscionable is dependent upon the existence of facts which allegedly illustrate unconscionability." El Paso Natural Gas Co. v. Minco Oil & Gas Co., 964 S.W.2d 54, 61 (Tex.App.-Amarillo, 1997), rev'd on other grounds, 8 S.W.3d 309 (Tex.1999). The defense of unconscionability is available to prevent unfair advantage procured through surprise or deception. TEX.BUS. & COM.CODE ANN. § 2.302, cmt. 1. There is no precise or agreed upon definition of unconscionability, but "it must be shown that the agreement in question arose through [both] procedural and substantive abuse." El Paso, 964 S.W.2d at 61 (citing Tri- Continental Leasing Corp. v. Law Office of Richard W. Burns, 710 S.W.2d 604, 609 (Tex.App.-Houston [1st Dist.] 1985, writ ref'd n.r.e.); Wade v. Austin, 524 S.W.2d 79, 85 (Tex.Civ.App.-Texarkana 1975, no writ)). First, procedural abuse relates to whether oppression and unfairness tainted the negotiation process leading up to the formation of the agreement. Pony Express Courier Corp. v. Morris, 921 S.W.2d 817, 820 (Tex.App.-San Antonio 1996, no writ). Things such as (1) the presence of deception, overreaching, and sharp business practices; (2) the absence of a viable alternative; (3) and the relative acumen, knowledge, education, and financial ability of the parties involved all go to the determination of whether procedural unconscionability was present at the time of the negotiation of the agreement. Arkwright-Boston Mfrs. Mut. Ins. Co. v. Westinghouse Electric Corp. ., 844 F.2d 1174, 1184 (5th Cir.1988); Wade, 524 S.W.2d at 86; Restatement (Second) of Contracts § 208, cmt. d.. Second, substantive unconscionability relates more to the fairness of the contract itself. Pony Express, 921 S.W.2d at 821. Substantive unconscionability is best determined on a case-by-case basis, as it is not easily quantifiable, and case law and statutes vary somewhat on the definition of the term. It is well settled, however, that "when the negative aspects of the bargaining process and subsequent contract are gross, under the totality of the circumstances, the [ ] court's authority to intercede [is] triggered." El Paso Natural Gas Co., 964 S.W.2d at 62 (citing Restatement (Second) of Contracts § 208, cmt. d.).

Here, Defendant states in his motion for summary judgment that because the deadline was near for the closing of the sale of the FBO's he "had no choice but to sign [the] Loan documents." (Instrument No. 36, at 12). He further states that he did not go to another lender because there was no time, and that Mortgage knew or should have known this information. (Id.). Mathew's deposition testimony, however, directly contradicts these statements made in his motion for summary judgment with respect to unconscionability. He stated in his deposition that he did actually consider a number of traditional lending institutions to broker the loan, but that because none of the traditional institutions were willing to arrange the loan in the time period required, he chose to conduct business with Mortgage. (Instrument No. 38, at 10). Further, there is no evidence in the record of overreaching or sharp business practices, as Mathew was told about Mortgage through his partner Sterling REIT, Sterling was the contact person between Mathew and Mortgage, and Sterling sent the loan documents to Mathew to secure his signature on the paperwork. (Id.). The record demonstrates that Mathew had a strong desire to close his deal expeditiously so that he could reap the benefits of a substantial profit. "[I]f the complainant did what he did because of his own motivations, and not those of his opponent, then he must suffer the result of his deal." El Paso Natural Gas Co., 964 S.W.2d at 62. The record does not show, as Defendant suggests, that he was somehow forced to sign the loan documents without full knowledge of the terms of the agreement, including the terms of the Exit Note. See Troy Mining Corp. v. Itmann Coal Co., 176 W.Va. 599, 346 S.E.2d 749, 754 (1986) (failing to uphold claim of unconscionability where there was a lack of evidence that indicated contract was "forced" upon the complainant); see also Wade, 524 S.W.2d at 86 (a person who "knowingly enters an improvident contract cannot be heard to complain thereafter). While Defendant avoids discussing his level of familiarity with regard to deals of this nature, the record shows that Defendant's acumen or level of business sophistication with respect to these types of transactions is fairly high in that he has entered into several similar agreements in the past. (Instrument No. 38, at 18). Defendant attempts to liken this case to Walton v. Hoover, Bax & Slovacek, L.L.P. where it was found that a contingency fee arrangment was unconscionable as a matter of law after the issue had been submitted to the jury. 149 S.W.3d 834 (Tex.App.-El Paso 2004, pet. granted). The present case is distinguishable from Walton because here, the loan agreement as well as the Exit Note explicitly stated the percentage rate of interest as well as the amount of broker fees that the borrower (Mathew) would be required to pay upon acceptance of the $5,000,000 loan. In Walton, the court considered several factors in determining that the fee arrangement was unconscionable-namely, that the agreement did not clearly and accurately explain how the fee was to be calculated, and that the fee was not tied to the work performed or the risk incurred by the firm. Id., at 846-47. Also in Walton, the attorneys had a distinct advantage over their clients, and tried to exploit this advantage through deception. This is not the case here. The risk involved in structuring a loan of the type that was given to Mathew is evidenced by the fact that all of the traditional lending institutions sought out by Mathew declined to arrange the loan for the amount and in the time frame necessary for Mathew to still make a substantial profit on his deal. Further, Defendant Mathew was knowledgeable about these types of deals, and was made aware of all of the terms of the agreement, but still chose to enter into the deal for his own benefit.

1.

9 Therefore, the Court finds that Mathew was not subjected to procedural unconscionability because the record does not reflect that Mortgage was in any way deceptive with respect to making Mathew aware of its fee structure, Mathew solicited other traditional lending institutions and chose Mortgage based on the fact that it was able to structure the agreement in the time period he required, and Mathew possessed the requisite acumen to either accept or reject the agreement based on the terms that were made explicitly clear to him. Accordingly, the Court finds that Mathew was not subjected to gross procedural abuse in the formation of the agreement to pay the loan and the Exit Note.

2.

With respect to the bargaining process, Defendant argues that "the circumstances regarding the signing of the loan were oppressive." (Instrument No. 36, at 12). This averment, however, is not supported by the facts in the record. In fact, the record indicates that Mathew had an opportunity to sign the loan documents in the comforts of his own home, and that he was sent the paperwork by his partner, Sterling REIT with no time pressure from Plaintiff. (Instrument No. 38, at 11). Also, Plaintiff notes that Mathew had legitimate commercial reasons for entering into this supposedly unconscionable agreement with Mortgage, as he wanted to make quick money on the purchase of the FBO's. (Id.). Texas has a strong policy in favor of freedom of contract. Marsh v. Marsh, 949 S.W.2d 734, 740 (Tex.App.-Houston [14th Dist.] 1997, no writ); see also Churchhill Forge, Inc. v. Brown, 61 S.W.3d 368, 371 (Tex.2001). Mathew has failed to make a showing that the Exit Note was formed as the result of gross oppression, fraud, or mutual mistake, as he himself sought out Mortgage's services to assist in making his deal possible given the time constraints. See Earman Oil Co., Inc., v. Burroughs Corp., 625 F.2d 1291, 1299 (5th Cir.1980) (stating that an individual who both knowingly and "willingly" enters an agreement is not a victim of gross conduct). In considering the totality of the circumstances surrounding the formation of the Exit Note agreement, this Court finds that Mathew was not subjected to substantive unconscionability. Accordingly, Defendant Mathew's Motion for Summary Judgment with respect to his defense of unconscionability fails and, therefore, is DENIED.

D.

The Texas Finance Code prohibits creditors from contracting for, charging, or receiving interest in excess of the statutory limit on a loan of money. Tex. Fin.Code § 305.001. To prevail on a claim of usury, a plaintiff must show "(1) a loan of money; (2) an absolute obligation to repay the principal; and (3) the exaction of a greater compensation than allowed by law for the use of the money by the borrower." First Bank v. Tony's Tortilla Factory, Inc., 877 S.W.2d 285, 287 (Tex.1994) (citing Holley v. Watts, 629 S.W.2d 694, 696 (Tex.1982)). Generally, lenders do not expressly charge an interest rate above the legal rate. Usury occurs more often, however, when the lender charges borrowers fees that are disguised as interest that, when added to the interest rate on the face of the loan, results in the borrower paying an interest rate that is not allowable under the law. "[A]mounts charged or received in connection with a loan are not interest if they are not for the use, forbearance, or detention of money." First USA Management Inc. v. Esmond, 960 S.W.2d 625, 627 (Tex.1997). To make this determination, the Texas Supreme Court has held that "fees which are an additional charge supported by a distinctly separate and additional consideration, other than the simple lending of money, are not interest and thus do not violate the usury laws." Tony's Tortillas, 877 S.W.2d at 287. Further, courts may look past the label given to a particular fee to discern whether the fee is a service charge or disguised interest. Id.

10 Defendant Mathew argues that the $500,000 due on the Exit Note constitutes disguised interest, making the fee usurious and the Exit Note unenforceable-despite Plaintiff's attempt to make Defendant waive any possible usury claim by including such language in the Exit Note. (Instrument No. 36, at 15). The Note reads as follows:

> By your signature below Borrower agrees (1) the loan fees and exit fees are paid as broker compensation in > consideration for arranging this loan; (2) the loan and exit fees are reasonable and voluntarily paid by Borrower; (3) the lender will receive none of the loan fees and exit fees; (4) the loan fees and exit fees are not paid to Broker for the use or forbearance of money; (5) Money Mortgage, Ltd. and its affiliates will not fund any of the loan amount; (6) it has rights under Texas Usury Law and specifically renounces its right to bring a usury claim arising out of this Mortgage Loan Application and any loan made as a direct result of this Mortgage Loan Application; and (7) Borrower specifically agrees that absent his express and effective waiver of any possible usury claim, Money Mortgage, Ltd. would not arrange for and its investors would not extend credit under this Mortgage Loan Application.

Defendant requests this Court to draw a negative inference from Mortgage's inclusion of the above language in the Exit Note, as Defendant believes it logical that a company would include such language only if it realized that it was charging interest in excess of the maximum allowed under the law. (Id., at 17-18).

In an effort to provide concrete support for his usury argument, Defendant relies almost exclusively on the deposition testimony of Jeff Dunn ("Dunn"), who was retained because of his expertise in this area of the law. (Id., at 16). Defendant avers that because he believes no broker services were provided, the Court must construe the $500,000 Exit Note coupled with the $750,000 paid at the time the loan was finalized as additional interest on the loan. (Id., at 17). Dunn testified that in his experience, a broker's fee generally ranges from 1% to 3% of the total loan amount. According to Dunn's own calculations, Defendant argues that, given the interest rate of 15% on the $5,000,000 loan amount and the $1,250,000 in alleged broker's fees, the real amount of total interest is $2,045,256, which in his opinion, far exceeds the maximum allowable interest charge of $1,234,096 (calculated using an interest rate of 18%). (Id.). Plaintiff maintains, and the Court agrees, that Dunn's calculations and testimony related to whether the Exit Note is usurious do not demonstrate that the Note is in fact usurious on its face. (Instrument No. 38, at 13). "One who uses the defense of usury in a suit on a note that does not call for usurious interest on its face has the obligation to establish that there was a corrupt agreement or scheme to cover usury and that such agreement or scheme was in full contemplation of the parties." Moss v. Metropolitan Nat'l Bank of Houston, 533 S.W.2d 397, 399 (Tex.Civ.App.-Houston [1st Dist.] 1976, no writ). Mathew has not put forth any evidence to demonstrate that Waterfront and Money Mortgage entered into a corrupt scheme to cover usury and, therefore, he cannot prevail as a matter of law on this issue. Even further, after evaluating Dunn's testimony, the Court chooses not to rely on the calculations performed by Dunn, as there are clearly fact issues with respect to the true principal amount of the loan, (Plaintiff states the amount is $5,000,000; Defendant states the amount is $4,250,000 ($5,000,000 less the $750,000 in broker fees), the interest actually paid by Mathew, and the actual term of the loan.

 © 2025 Thomson Reuters. No claim to original U.S. Government Works.

11 The Court has also previously discussed that a fact issue exists with regard to whether Money Mortgage actually provided broker services, which would suffice as separate consideration for the broker fees assessed at the time the loan was paid, and the broker fees related to the Exit Note. The determination of this fact is critical because if it is found that no broker services were provided to Mathew, the "broker fees" included in both the Waterfront Note and the Exit Note could potentially be categorized as disguised interest, and also lead the jury to the conclusion that the broker fees coupled with the interest of 15% on the $5,000,000 Note are usurious in nature.

Moreover, while Mathew alleges that Money Mortgage served as the lender in the transaction, Plaintiff argues that Waterfront Mortgage, L.P. was the lender (despite Defendant's belief that Waterfront is a paper company) and that Money Mortgage was in fact the broker on the deal. (Id., at 14-15). Plaintiff states that Waterfront Mortgage is not related to Premiere, and that its general partner (post-Premiere's bankruptcy) is Jefferson Advisors GP, L.L.C. To bolster Plaintiff's argument that Waterfront Mortgage is not a paper company and that it existed on its own-wholly separate from Premiere-Plaintiff points to the Premiere Holdings Corporate Chart as well as to the fact that Waterfront Mortgage continued on as a limited partnership even after the bankruptcy of Premiere. Also, Plaintiff highlights that when Defendant Mathew paid the $5,000,000 loan, he paid Waterfront Mortgage and not Money Mortgage, which in its opinion further evidences that Waterfront Mortgage and Money Mortgage had two separate and distinct roles in the execution of the loan agreement and Exit Note with Mathew (as lender, Waterfront received payment of the principal; as broker, Money Mortgage received payment of the broker fees). (Id.). In viewing the evidence in the light most favorable to the non-movant, Plaintiff has presented sufficient summary judgment evidence to create a fact issue with respect to whether Waterfront Mortgage acted as simply a paper company in the Mathew transaction, or if Waterfront is a separate entity, unaffiliated with Premiere that received the payment of the principal amount of the loan.

The determination of whether the broker fees included in the Waterfront Note as well as the broker fees included in the Exit Note are usurious is rather fact intensive. Morris v. Miglicco, 468 S.W.2d 517, 520 (Tex.Civ.App.-Houston [14th Distr.] 1971, reh'g denied) (remanding the case to the trial court where court found that the question of the bona fides of the charge for brokerage fees is a question of fact). Defendant has not satisfied his burden of proof by demonstrating that no genuine issues of material fact exist with respect to this affirmative defense and, therefore, the court cannot conclude that as a matter of law Defendant should prevail on this defense. Accordingly, Defendant's Motion for Summary Judgment regarding his usury claim defense is DENIED.

1.

12 Plaintiff contends that Defendant cannot prove a claim of usury on a receiving or charging theory because the Exit Note contains a savings clause. (Instrument No. 38, at 15). "Usury savings clauses are valid in Texas and, in appropriate circumstances, are enforced to defeat a violation of the usury laws." Mims v. Fidelity Funding, Inc., 307 B.R. 849, 859 (N.D.Tex.2002). Without assessing the validity of the savings clause contained in the Exit Note, the Court concludes that to determine properly the effect the savings clause would have on the Exit Note agreement, a determination of the fact issues discussed above with respect to Defendant's affirmative defense of usury must first be resolved. Woodcrest Assoc., Ltd. v. Commonwealth Mtg. Corp., 775 S.W.2d 434, 438 (Tex.App.-Dallas 1989, writ denied).

E.

Defendant asserts that a fraud was perpetrated on him because Mortgage represented that it would perform broker services, and Defendant contends that Mortgage did not provide him with such services. (Instrument No. 36, at 18). Defendant also believes that although the loan was funded by Mortgage, it did not "shop the loan," nor did Mortgage receive reimbursement from any money received by the public investors secured by L & W, which Defendant argues evidences Mortgage's and Premiere's "scheme [ ] to gain additional fees." (Instrument No. 36, at 19). Moreover, Defendant maintains that he has been damaged because Plaintiff brought a claim against him, which required him to retain counsel to defend himself. Plaintiff argues that Defendant's affirmative defense of fraud fails because: (1) Mathew received exactly what was represented to him that he would receive; (2) Mathew was admittedly aware of the all of the terms of the Exit Note and loan agreement and chose Mortgage; and (3) Mathew also admittedly had no substantive conversations with Mortgage, and his partner Sterling sent all of the loan documentation to him. (Instrument No. 38, at 18).

Mathew's argument in support of his defense of fraud, to negate any liability he may have that stems from the Exit Note, relies heavily on the fact that Mortgage purportedly did not provide broker services as promised and set forth in the Exit Note. Because the Court has already decided above that a genuine issue of material fact exists as to whether actual broker services were indeed provided to Mathew, as stated in the language included in the Exit Note and the loan agreement, Mathew's affirmative defense of fraud fails at this juncture. Further, another fact issue exists because there is summary judgment evidence that demonstrates Mathew may not have relied to his detriment on representations made with respect to broker services, but rather that he relied on representations related to the amount of money he was to receive as part of the loan and the time frame in which the loan would be arranged and made available to him. (Instrument No. 38, at 19). Based on these conclusions, the Court finds that Defendant has failed to establish that no genuine issues of material fact exist regarding both the broker services provided and his reliance on the alleged misrepresentations. Accordingly, Defendant's Motion for Summary Judgment with respect to this issue is DENIED.

 © 2025 Thomson Reuters. No claim to original U.S. Government Works.

IV.

13 Based on the foregoing, IT IS HEREBY ORDERED that Defendant Thomas Mathew's Motion for Summary Judgment (Instrument No. 36) is DENIED.

The Clerk shall enter this Order and provide a copy to all parties.

All Citations

Not Reported in F.Supp.2d, 2006 WL 2796387

Footnotes

1 This case is a core proceeding to the bankruptcy case styled In re Premiere Holdings of Texas, LP, Case No. 01-40836-H2-11.

2 The Premiere Trust was established under the Chapter 11 Trustee's Third Amended Joint Consolidated Plan of Liquidation under Chapter 11 of the Bankruptcy Code, confirmed in the Premiere Holdings of Texas, LP; MMCOA, LP; and Lapin & Wigginton Funding LP bankruptcy cases.

End of Document

© 2025 Thomson Reuters. No claim to original U.S. Government Works.

CASE NO. 60

2024 WL 3541499
Only the Westlaw citation
is currently available.
United States District Court,
S.D. Texas, Houston Division.

UNITED STATES of America EX REL. BAKERRIPLEY, Plaintiff,
v.
KIDS U US, INC. d/b/a Fueling Brains, et al., Defendants.

CIVIL ACTION
NO.
23
-
cv
-
1124

Signed July 25, 2024

Attorneys and Law Firms

Joseph E. Hoffer, Schuman, Lopez, Hoffer & Adelstein, LLP, San Antonio, TX, Marion M. Reilly, Martinez Reilly PLLC, Corpus Christi, TX, for Plaintiff BakerRipley.

Jill Ondrejko Venezia, Office of U.S. Attorney, Houston, TX, for Plaintiff United States of America.

Allissa Pollard, Arnold & Porter, Houston, TX, Christian David Sheehan, Megan Pieper, Arnold & Porter Kaye Scholer LLP, Washington, DC, Randy Miller, Arnold & Porter Kaye Scholer LLP, Denver, CO, for Defendant Kids U U.S., Inc.

Dinesh H. Singhal, Singhal Law Firm, Houston, TX, for Defendant Cimberli Johnson Darrough.

Andres Omar Soto, Fred D. Raschke, Mills Shirley LLP, Galveston, TX, Jesse Gardner Potts, Brown Sims, P.C., Houston, TX, for Defendants Antonio Corrales, Sterling Evaluation and Assessment, LLC.

Andrew J. Mytelka, Jordan Raschke Elton, Greer Herz Adams LLP, Galveston, TX, for Defendants Michelle Peters, MNA Evaluation and Assessment, LLC.

MEMORANDUM AND OPINION

Lee H. Rosenthal, United States District Judge

1 BakerRipley, a Texas nonprofit and public charity that operates Head Start and Early Head Start federal programs throughout the Houston, Texas area, sues four defendants under the False Claims Act. (Docket Entry No. 22). BakerRipley is a designated Head Start Agency. (Id.). BakerRipley alleges that Kids U US, Inc. d/b/a Fueling Brains, Cimberli Darrough, Antonio Corrales d/b/a Sterling Evaluation and Assessment, LLC, and Michele Peters d/b/a MNA Evaluation and Assessment, LLC, submitted false claims and statements that defrauded the United States; engaged in a kickback program; and breached common law contractual obligations owing to BakerRipley. The defendants move to dismiss. (Docket Entry Nos. 32-36).

 © 2025 Thomson Reuters. No claim to original U.S. Government Works.

Based on the record and the applicable law, the court grants in part and denies in part the motions to dismiss. The reasons are set out below.

I. Background

BakerRipley's claims arise from alleged conflicts of interest between its former senior director of the Head Start division (Darrough) and three vendors for Head Start programs who provided virtual curriculum and training and who received government grants related to those programs (Corrales, Fueling Brains, and Peters). (See generally Docket Entry No. 22). Unbeknownst to BakerRipley, Corrales and Peters had an existing relationship with Darrough. (Id.). Both Corrales and Peters had served on Darrough's dissertation committee while she pursued her Ph.D. at the University of Houston—Clear Lake. Fueling Brains, Corrales, and Peters all secured grants from BakerRipley (approved by Darrough) to provide training, evaluation, and material support to BakerRipley's Head Start programs in Houston. (Id.).

BakerRipley claims that the defendants worked together to deceive and defraud both BakerRipley and other publicly funded entities throughout the Houston area. (Id. at ¶ 6). BakerRipley claims to have paid these three vendors in excess of $800,000 in federal funds as a result of their fraud and breaches of contract. (Id.). BakerRipley claims that Corrales failed to disclose that he had acted as a "Strategic Advisor" to Fueling Brains and that he had received payment for referring Head Start clients who signed service contracts with Fueling Brains. (Id. at ¶¶ 34, 142-154). Darrough also allegedly received payments from Fueling Brains, both for approving Fueling Brain's contracts with BakerRipley and for marketing the organization to other federally funded education providers across Houston. All three vendors allegedly engaged in this coordinated "kickback scheme," which helped the vendors obtain federal Head Start grants totaling over $3 million over the course of roughly two years. (Id. at ¶ 7).

BakerRipley also alleges that the three vendors only partially fulfilled their contracts with BakerRipley, and that Fueling Brains fraudulently misrepresented its capacity and willingness to deliver on its contractual obligations. (Docket Entry No. 45 at ¶¶ 15, 48). BakerRipley alleges that Darrough facilitated a conspiracy to circumvent the federal grant procurement requirements, so as to evade managerial scrutiny. (Id. at ¶ 28).

2 For contracts of $150,000 and over, BakerRipley used the Request for Proposal process, which takes approximately two to three months to complete and triggers additional managerial oversight. (Docket Entry No. 22 at ¶ 43). BakerRipley alleges that the three vendors, under Darrough's direction, intentionally submitted multiple invoices to BakerRipley for amounts less than that threshold to avoid the Request for Proposal process and the oversight it involves. (Id. at ¶ 98).

BakerRipley brings the following causes of action:

- False Claims Act claims (qui tam):
  - (1) Violation of the False Claims Act (31 U.S.C. § 3729(a)(1)(A)) –

The Submission of, or Causing the Submission of, False Claims – against all defendants

- (2) Violation of the False Claims Act (31 U.S.C. § 3729(a)(1)(B)) – Use of False Statements – against all defendants
- (3) Violation of the False Claims Act (31 U.S.C. § 3729 (a)(1)(G)) – Reverse False Claims – against all defendants
- (4) Violation of the False Claims Act (31 U.S.C. § 3729(a)(3)) – Conspiracy to Violate the FCA U.S.C. 3729 (a)(1)(C) – against all defendants

- Common law claims:
  - (5) Unjust Enrichment – against Fueling Brains, Corrales, Peters
  - (6) Payment by Mistake – against Fueling Brains, Corrales, Peters
  - (7) Breach of Contract and Covenant of Good Faith and Fair Dealing – against Corrales, Peters
  - (8) Fraud – against all defendants
  - (9) Fraud by Nondisclosure – against all defendants
  - (10) Civil Conspiracy – against all defendants
  - (11) Money Had and Received – against Fueling Brains, Corrales, and Peters
- Texas Civil Practice and Remedies Code claims:
  - (12) Violation of TTLA, Chapter 134 – Theft – against Fueling Brains, Corrales, Peters

II. The Legal Standards

A. Rule 12(b)(6)

Rule 12(b)(6) allows dismissal if a plaintiff fails "to state a claim upon which relief can be granted." Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(b)(6). Rule 12(b)(6) must be read in conjunction with Rule 8(a), which requires "a short and plain statement of the claim showing that the pleader is entitled to relief." Fed. R. Civ. P. 8(a)(2). A complaint must contain "enough facts to state a claim to relief that is plausible on its face." Bell Atl. Corp. v. Twombly, 550 U.S. 544, 570 (2007). Rule 8 "does not require 'detailed factual allegations,' but it demands more than an unadorned, the-defendant-unlawfully-harmed-me accusation." Ashcroft v. Iqbal, 556 U.S. 662, 678 (2009) (quoting Twombly, 550 U.S. at 555). "A claim has facial plausibility when the plaintiff pleads factual content that allows the court to draw the reasonable inference that the defendant is liable for the misconduct alleged." Id. (citing Twombly, 550 U.S. at 556). "The plausibility standard is not akin to a 'probability requirement,' but it asks for more than a sheer possibility that a defendant has acted unlawfully." Id. (quoting Twombly, 550 U.S. at 556).

To withstand a Rule 12(b)(6) motion, a complaint must include "more than labels and conclusions, and a formulaic recitation of the elements of a cause of action will not do." Lincoln v. Turner, 874 F.3d 833, 839 (5th Cir. 2017) (quoting Twombly, 550 U.S.

at 555). "Nor does a complaint suffice if it tenders 'naked assertion[s]' devoid of 'further factual enhancement.' " Iqbal, 556 U.S. at 678 (alteration in original) (quoting Twombly, 550 U.S. at 557). "A complaint 'does not need detailed factual allegations,' but the facts alleged 'must be enough to raise a right to relief above the speculative level.' " Cicalese v. Univ. of Tex. Med. Branch, 924 F.3d 762, 765 (5th Cir. 2019) (quoting Twombly, 550 U.S. at 555). "Conversely, when the allegations in a complaint, however true, could not raise a claim of entitlement to relief, this basic deficiency should be exposed at the point of minimum expenditure of time and money by the parties and the court." Cuvillier v. Taylor, 503 F.3d 397, 401 (5th Cir. 2007) (alterations omitted) (quoting Twombly, 550 U.S. at 558).

3 A court reviewing a motion to dismiss under Rule 12(b)(6) may consider "(1) the facts set forth in the complaint, (2) documents attached to the complaint, and (3) matters of which judicial notice may be taken under Federal Rule of Evidence 201." Inclusive Cmtys Project, Inc. v. Lincoln Prop. Co., 920 F.3d 890, 900 (5th Cir. 2019).

B. The False Claims Act and the Anti-Kickback Statute

The False Claims Act "is intended to protect the Treasury against the hungry and unscrupulous host that encompasses it on every side." United States ex rel. Grubbs v. Kanneganti, 565 F.3d 180, 184 (5th Cir. 2009) (quotation omitted). "To aid the rooting out of fraud, the Act provides for civil suits brought by both the Attorney General and by private persons, termed relators." Id. "[R]elators share in the government's winnings, receiving a bounty of up to thirty percent of the government's proceeds." United States ex rel. Ruscher v. Omnicare, Inc., No. 4:08-CV-3396, 2014 WL 2618158, at *2 (S.D. Tex. June 12, 2014) (quotation omitted).

Whether the action is prosecuted by the government or by relators, a violation of the False Claims Act occurs when: (1) "there was a false statement or fraudulent course of conduct; (2) made or carried out with the requisite scienter; (3) that was material; and (4) that caused the government to pay out money or to forfeit moneys due (i.e., that involved a claim)." United States v. Bollinger Shipyards, Inc., 775 F.3d 255, 259 (5th Cir. 2014). The scienter requirement of a False Claims Act claim requires the relator to show that false claims and records were "knowingly" made or caused to be made. United States ex rel. Bennett v. Bos. Sci. Corp., 2011 WL 1231577, at *14. "Knowingly" means "actual knowledge of the information"; "deliberate ignorance of the truth or falsity of the information"; or "reckless disregard to the truth or falsity of the information." 31 U.S.C. § 3729(b)(1)(A)(i)–(iii). "Material" means "having a natural tendency to influence, or be capable of influencing, the payment or receipt of money or property." 31 U.S.C. § 3729(b)(4). Specific intent to defraud is not required to establish knowledge. 31 U.S.C. § 3729(b)(1)(B).

A "kickback" is "any ... gratuity, thing of value, or compensation of any kind that is provided to a ... prime contractor employee ... to improperly obtain or reward favorable treatment in connection with a ... subcontract relating to a prime contract." 41 U.S.C. § 8701(2). The Fifth Circuit has concluded "that anything of value offered in order to subvert the 'proper' process for awarding contracts is a potential kickback." U.S. ex rel. Vavra v. Kellogg Brown & Root, Inc., 848 F.3d 366, 380 (5th Cir. 2017). Examples of the "pursuit of improper favorable treatment" include receiving something of value in exchange for "forgiv[ing] deficiencies in performance, overlook[ing] shortcomings in a bid or suggested contract, ... obtain[ing] some other treatment not generally available." Id.

C. Rule 9(b)

"[A] complaint filed under the False Claims Act must meet the heightened pleading standard of Rule 9(b)." United States ex rel. Grubbs v. Kanneganti, 565 F.3d 180, 185 (5th Cir. 2009). Relators "must state with particularity the circumstances constituting fraud or mistake." Fed. R. Civ. P. 9(b). That standard requires pleadings to "set forth the who, what, when, where, and how of the alleged fraud." United States ex rel. Steury v. Cardinal Health, Inc., 625 F.3d 262, 266 (5th Cir. 2010) (quotation omitted). A relator's complaint may survive a motion to dismiss by alleging either "the details of an actually submitted false claim" or "particular details of a scheme to submit false claims paired with reliable indicia that lead to a strong inference that claims were actually submitted." Grubbs, 565 F.3d at 190.

III. Analysis

A. False Claims and False Statements under the False Claims Act

4 BakerRipley brings two causes of action against all defendants: (1) the submission of, or causing the submission of, false claims (31 U.S.C. § 3729(a)(1)(A)); and (2) the use of false statements (31 U.S.C. § 3729(a)(1)(B)). These claims may be divided into two broad categories: (i) False Claims Act violations by the defendants stemming from their contracts with BakerRipley itself; and (ii) False Claims Act violations by the defendants due to the alleged kickback scheme stemming from Fueling Brains's contracts with other federal grantees.

i. The False Claims Act Claims Arising from the Defendants' Contracts with BakerRipley

The False Claims Act "permits, in certain circumstances, suits by private parties on behalf of the United States against anyone submitting a false claim to the Government." Hughes Aircraft Co. v. United States ex rel. Schumer, 520 U.S. 939, 941 (1997). The Act attempts to balance the "promot[ion of] private citizen involvement in exposing fraud against the government" against the "prevent[ion of] parasitic suits by opportunistic late-comers who add nothing to the exposure of fraud." U.S. ex rel. Reagan v. E. Texas Med. Ctr. Reg'l Healthcare Sys., 384 F.3d 168, 174 (5th Cir. 2004). The False Claims Act limits the subject-matter jurisdiction of courts adjudicating qui tam actions under the Act if the relator's suit is based on earlier public disclosures of sufficiently related information. The statute states:

> No court shall have jurisdiction over an action under this section > based upon the public disclosure of allegations or transactions in a criminal, civil, or administrative hearing, in a congressional, administrative, or Government Accounting Office report, hearing, audit, or investigation, or from the news media, unless the action is brought by the Attorney General or the person bringing the action is an original source of the information.

31 U.S.C. § 3730(e)(4)(A). The Fifth Circuit has established a three-question test to determine whether a public disclosure information bars a particular FCA suit:

> (a) Was there a "public disclosure" of the allegations or transactions?
>
> (b) Was the qui tam action "based upon" what was publicly disclosed?
>
> (c) If so, was the relator an "original source" of the information that forms the basis of the complaint?

U.S. ex rel. Sonnier v. Standard Fire Ins. Co., 84 F. Supp. 3d 575, 586 (S.D. Tex. 2015) (citing Fed. Recovery Servs., Inc. v. United States, 72 F.3d 447, 450 (5th Cir. 1995)); see also Graham Cnty. Soil & Water Conservation Dist. v. United States, 559 U.S. 280, 290, 130 S. Ct. 1396, 1404, 176 L. Ed. 2d 225 (2010).

The defendants argue that the public disclosure rule bars the False Claims Act claims against Darrough and Peters related to BakerRipley itself. (Docket Entry No. 36 at ¶¶ 42-48). BakerRipley does not dispute that Darrough's dissertation contained the information that Corrales and Peters had served on Darrough's dissertation committee. BakerRipley similarly does not dispute that the dissertation has been and is available online—both on the scholarly database ProQuest and on the University of Houston—Clear Lake's library website. (Docket Entry No. 46 at ¶ 44). The dissertation was published on the university's website in December 2021—well before BakerRipley filed its complaint in March 2023. (Id.). Information in a dissertation published on a university's website, given the Supreme Court's broad interpretation of what counts as "news media," meets the standard of a "public disclosure." Graham Cty. Soil & Water Conservation Dist., 559 U.S. at 290 (2010) ("[t]he 'news media' referenced in [§ 3730(e)(4)(A)(iii)] plainly have a broader sweep."); see also Schindler Elevator Corp. v. U.S. ex rel. Kirk, 563 U.S. 401, 408 (2011) (holding that courts have interpreted the term "public disclosure" to include disclosures on websites and online publications).

5 The public disclosure bar is meant to prevent suits that "add nothing to the exposure of fraud"—in other words, to hinder those seeking to benefit from disclosing information that is already publicly known. Reagan, 384 F.3d at 174; see also Jamison, 649 F.3d at 332; U.S. ex rel. Branch Consultants v. Allstate Ins. Co., 560 F.3d 371, 381 (5th Cir. 2009). Because the information about a prior relationship between Darrough and Peters was publicly disclosed before the filing of this lawsuit, the information was publicly disclosed for the purpose of the False Claims Act. [1]

BakerRipley's False Claims Act causes of action against Darrough and Peters are fundamentally "based upon" the defendants' undisclosed associations with each other at the University of Houston—Clear Lake. (Docket Entry No. 22 at ¶ 17 ("Defendants knowingly failed to disclose their conflicts of interest to the Agency and other school systems and federal grantees, knowingly misrepresented their interrelationships, and made affirmative false representations of 'independence' in order to further their claims."); ¶¶ 10, 13, 16, 17, 37, 53, 57, 120, 125-27, 131, 141). BakerRipley argues that these claims are "not based upon the relationships in and of themselves, but the reciprocal nature and benefits received by virtue of those relationships[,]" (Docket Entry No. 47 at ¶ 26). But BakerRipley also states that it "would have refused to enter into ... contract[s]" or make payments on defendants' claims, if it had known of each defendant's "affiliation with" the others (i.e., at UHCL). (Docket Entry No. 22 at ¶ 131). The public disclosure bar applies to BakerRipley's claims against Darrough and Peters.

By contrast, BakerRipley's claims against Fueling Brains and Corrales are based on separate allegations that both defendants participated in fraudulent invoicing practices and failed to provide promised goods and services, in breach of their Head Start vendor contracts with BakerRipley. (Docket Entry No. 22). A violation of the False Claims Act occurs when (1) "there was a false statement or fraudulent course of conduct; (2) made or carried out with the requisite scienter; (3) that was material; and (4) that caused the government to pay out money or to forfeit moneys due (i.e., that involved a claim)." United States ex rel. Longhi v. Lithium Power Techs., Inc., 575 F.3d 458, 467 (5th Cir. 2009) (quoting United States ex rel. Wilson v. Kellogg Brown & Root, Inc., 525 F.3d 370, 376 (4th Cir. 2008)). False Claims Act claims must meet the heightened pleading standard of Rule 9(b). Grubbs, 565 F.3d at 185. BakerRipley must either plead "the details of an actually submitted false claim" by Fueling Brains, or "particular details of a scheme to submit false claims paired with reliable indicia that lead to a strong inference that claims were actually submitted." Grubbs, 565 F.3d at 190.

6 BakerRipley's allegations of breach of contract do not allege a violation of the False Claims Act unless the allegations additionally satisfy the four requirements articulated in Universal Health Servs., Inc. v. U.S. ex rel. Escobar, 579 U.S. 176, 194 (2016) ("The False Claims Act is not 'an all-purpose antifraud statute,' or a vehicle for punishing garden-variety breaches of contract or regulatory violations.") (citation omitted). As BakerRipley concedes, Fueling Brains and Corrales did partially deliver on their contractual obligations, weighing against a finding of the scienter required to prove a violation of the False Claims Act. And regardless of whether these defendants provided all the services called for by their contracts with BakerRipley, the complaint does not allege plausible facts that would support an inference that these defendants intentionally submitted "fictitious service offerings," or knowingly misrepresented that they could fulfill those service offerings. (Docket Entry Nos. 45 at ¶ 15; 22 at ¶¶ 70-80).

BakerRipley alleges that Fueling Brains submitted two invoices for "professional development" and "material kits" that were "double bill[s]." (Docket Entry No. 22 at ¶¶ 77, 89). BakerRipley also alleges that Corrales submitted two double-billed invoices for "trauma and emotional intelligence training" and "financial literacy training." (Id. at ¶104). These factual allegations are sufficiently specific to plead "reliable indicia" that Corrales and Fueling Brains possessed the requisite scienter when submitting duplicate invoices. Grubbs, 565 F.3d at 190. The invoices were facially redundant or identical, suggesting that the defendants should have known they were duplicates. The timing of Corrales's invoicing also suggests fraudulent intent. He sent the second set of bills to BakerRipley soon after it had suffered a debilitating cyberattack, preventing it from verifying the procurements and payments to vendors in a timely manner. (Docket Entry No. 22 at ¶¶ 103-105). Darrough approved the duplicate invoices promptly after Corrales referred Darrough to the University of Houston College of Education Director of Student Relations for the purpose of furthering Darrough's career and networking contacts. (Id. at ¶ 106). Finally, BakerRipley alleges that Fueling Brains and Corrales attempted to circumvent the automatic managerial review of contracts for $150,000 and over. Both defendants allegedly submitted multiple invoice "installments" for amounts just under that threshold, including a $149,000 invoice from Corrales, in order to evade scrutiny of the invoices they submitted. (Id. at ¶¶ 68-69). This allegation, taken together with the alleged submission of duplicative invoices, sufficiently alleges fraud to meet Rule 9(b).

ii. FCA claims against Fueling Brains, Corrales, and Darrough for participating in a kickback scheme with other school systems

A "relator must provide reliable indicia that there was a kickback provided in return for the referral" to survive the Rule 9(b) standard. U.S. ex rel. Parikh v. Citizens Med. Ctr., 977 F. Supp. 2d 654, 664 (S.D. Tex. 2013). Pleading reliable indicia of unlawful kickbacks requires BakerRipley to allege the wrongful conduct attributable to each defendant. U.S. ex rel. Hebert v. Dizney, 295 F. App'x 717, 722 (5th Cir. 2008). BakerRipley does not need to plead and prove the exact amount of the false claims, only that the defendants made specific false claims. United States ex rel. Grubbs v. Kanneganti, 565 F.3d 180, 189 (5th Cir. 2009).

Although BakerRipley admits that it is basing most of the allegations "on information and belief," a claim has "facial plausibility" when the pleaded facts allow the court to "draw the reasonable inference that the defendant is liable for the misconduct alleged." Ashcroft v. Iqbal, 556 U.S. 662, 663 (2009). Affidavits attached to the complaint[2] discuss the alleged kickback scheme in detail. Two former Fueling Brains employees, Dr. Nici Esch and Vinicius Ozorio, detailed a scheme by Corrales and Fueling Brains to sell Fueling Brains' services to educational entities receiving federal funding. (Docket Entry Nos. 23 at ¶¶ 8, 9; 23-1 at ¶ 8). Dr. Esch states in his affidavit that Corrales's "job was to get districts to sign up with Fueling Brains, for which he received 20% commissions." (Docket Entry No. 23 at ¶ 8). BakerRipley also alleged that Corrales emailed Fueling Brains that he expected to receive "cuts" from nine identified contracts with eight different school districts, allegedly in return for his "marketing services." (Docket Entry No. 22 at ¶ 156). Fueling Brains and Corrales both allegedly paid "referral sources"—individuals who "exercise discretion in connection with Federal Government contracts, purchases, payments, claims, or other financial transactions"—when potential clients coming through those sources accepted Fueling Brains' service proposals. (Id. at ¶ 34).

7 BakerRipley alleges that Darrough also marketed Fueling Brains to other school districts, using both her BakerRipley email and her personal email. (Id. at ¶¶ 142-154). Despite her knowledge of Fueling Brains's alleged failure to fulfill most of its contractual obligations with BakerRipley within the contractual timelines, Darrough appears to have worked with Corrales to sell Fueling Brains's services to other school districts. (Id.). In one email, Darrough provided Corrales with a list of local Head Start providers, noting "This is everyone in the Houston Metropolitan Area that has any impact on Early Childhood Education ... YOU OWE ME!" (Id.). BakerRipley also alleged that Darrough sent emails through her BakerRipley email account to the Bryan Independent School District and Fort Bend Independent School District trying to sell Fueling Brains's services. (Id.).

BakerRipley has pleaded that Fueling Brains, Corrales, and Darrough participated in the alleged kickback scheme, with other federal grantors, with sufficient particularity to meet Rule 9(b). BakerRipley's False Claims Act allegations for false claims and false statements under § 3729(a)(1)(A)-(B), against Fueling Brains, Corrales, and Darrough may proceed; the False Claims Act claims against Peters are dismissed.

B. Reverse False Claims under the False Claims Act

In a reverse-false claims suit, the defendant's action "does not result in improper payment by the government to the defendants, but instead results in no payment to the government when a payment is obligated." U.S. ex rel. Bain v. Georgia Gulf Corp., 386 F.3d 648, 653 (5th Cir. 2004). "Reverse false claim liability" for failing to disclose and return an overpayment from the government requires proof of the following elements: (1) a false record is created; (2) the provider knows the record is false; (3) the false record or statement is made, used, or caused to be made or used; (4) to conceal, decrease, or avoid an obligation to pay the government; and (5) the misrepresentation is material. See 31 U.S.C. § 3729(a)(1)(G); U.S. ex rel. Ligai v. ETS-Lindgren Inc., No. CIV.A. H-112973, 2014 WL 4649885, at *12 (S.D. Tex. Sept. 16, 2014), aff'd sub nom. U.S. ex rel. Ligai v. ESCO Techs., Inc., 611 F. App'x 219 (5th Cir. 2015).

BakerRipley alleges that the defendants submitted reverse false claims by "making false statements relating to their failure to provide materials and services it was to provide [BakerRipley] and/or to repay [BakerRipley] for overpayments to which the Defendants were not entitled." (Docket Entry No. 22 at ¶ 182). BakerRipley alleges that "had the Agency been aware of Defendants' wrongful conduct, it would have taken steps to recover" the overpayments. (Id. at ¶ 183). Pleading reverse-false-claims liability requires factually sufficient allegations that a contractor knowingly created a false record or knowingly concealed overpayments obtained by fraud and not repaid. Ligai, 2014 WL 4649885 at *12. The defendants' failure to refund "the same money the Government allegedly paid in relation to [Relator's] § 3729(a)(1)(A) and (B) claims" is not, itself, actionable under the reverse False Claims Act provision. See U.S. v. Cath. Health Initiatives, No. 4:18-CV-123, 2022 WL 2657131, at *11 (S.D. Tex. Mar. 31, 2022). The crux of BakerRipley's reverse false claims allegations is that the defendants did not refund the payments for the same alleged false claims at issue in the § 3729(a)(1)(A) and (B) claims. While it is true that BakerRipley or the federal government could have sought to reclaim the overpayments if reported, the failure to report the overpayments is part of the original false claims, and not a separate reverse false claim.

The allegations against the defendants do not plausibly plead a reverse false claim under the False Claims Act, 31 U.S.C. § 3729(a)(1)(G). This claim is dismissed as to all defendants.

C. Conspiracy to Violate the False Claims Act

8 To plead a conspiracy, BakerRipley must plead facts that show "(1) the existence of an unlawful agreement between defendants to get a false or fraudulent claim allowed or paid" and "(2) at least one act performed in furtherance of that agreement." U.S. ex rel. Farmer v. City of Houston, 523 F.3d 333, 343 (5th Cir. 2008). Specific intent to defraud is a required element, but allegations of intent are not required to be pleaded with the same level of particularity as other factual allegations. Fed. R. Civ. P. 9(b); U. S. ex rel. Farmer v. City of Houston, 523 F.3d 333, 343 (5th Cir. 2008). The allegations against Fueling Brains, Corrales, and Darrough described above meet the threshold for a claim of conspiracy to violate the False Claims Act. 31 U.S.C. § 3729 (a)(1)(C). The conspiracy claim against Peters does not, because there are no viable False Claims Act allegations against Peters, (see supra III.A), and it is dismissed.

D. State-law claims

i. Quasi-contractual claims

BakerRipley brings claims for unjust enrichment, payment by mistake, and money had and received against Fueling Brains, Corrales, and Peters. Unjust enrichment, payment by mistake, and money had and received are quasi-contractual theories of liability. U.S. ex rel. Campbell v. KIC Development, LLC, No. EP-18-CV-193-KC, 2019 WL 6884485, at *17 (W.D. Tex. Dec. 10, 2019) (payment by mistake); Stewart Title Guar. Co. v. Mims, 405 S.W.3d 319, 339 (Tex. App.—Dallas 2013, no pet.) (unjust enrichment and money had and received). "[W]hen a valid, express contract covers the subject matter of the parties' dispute, there can be no recovery under a quasi-contract theory." Fortune Production Co. v. Conoco, Inc., 52 S.W.3d 671, 684 (Tex. 2000). However, BakerRipley may plead quasi-contractual claims in the alternative, because it disputes whether the contracts were validly formed. See, e.g., Peters v. Norwegian Cruise Line Ltd., No. 01-05-00906, 2007 WL 1633555, at *10 (Tex. App. June 7, 2007) (the plaintiff produced evidence that the contract was unconscionable, making his unjust enrichment claim a "viable alternative to his breach of contract claim"). The complaint adequately pleads false claims and statements, including duplicate invoices and invoices presented in a way that circumvented internal review. (See supra III.A). The quasi-contractual claims may proceed.

ii. Breach of Contract and Breach of the Covenant of Good Faith and Fair Dealing

In Texas, "[t]he essential elements of a breach of contract action are: (1) the existence of a valid contract; (2) performance or tendered performance by the plaintiff; (3) breach of the contract by the defendant; and (4) damages sustained by the plaintiff as a result of the breach." Smith Int'l, Inc. v. Egle Grp., LLC, 490 F.3d 380, 387 (5th Cir. 2007). BakerRipley has pleaded with particularity that Fueling Brains, Corrales, and Peters, failed to completely fulfill their contracts and did not provide all the services required under their contracts. (Docket Entry No. 22).

Texas courts have resisted imposing an implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing in contracts unless there is a special relationship between the parties governed or created by a contract. Arnold v. Nat'l Cnty. Mut. Fire Ins. Co., 725 S.W.2d 165, 167 (Tex. 1987). BakerRipley has not pleaded the existence of a special relationship, and the record discloses none. BakerRipley's breach of contract claims against Fueling Brains, Corrales, and Peters, may proceed; the claims for breach of covenant of good faith are dismissed.

iii. Fraud and Fraud by Nondisclosure

Under Texas law, a claim for fraud must allege: (1) that a material representation was made; (2) the representation was false; (3) when the representation was made, the speaker knew it was false or made it recklessly without any knowledge of the truth and as a positive assertion; (4) the speaker made the representation with the intent that the other party should act upon it; (5) the party acted in reliance on the representation; and (6) the party thereby suffered injury. Aquaplex, Inc. v. Rancho La Valencia, Inc., 297 S.W.3d 768, 774 (Tex. 2009) (quoting In re FirstMerit Bank, N.A., 52 S.W.3d 749, 758 (Tex. 2001)). Breach of contract "combined with 'slight circumstantial evidence' of fraud is enough to support a verdict for fraudulent inducement." Tony Gullo Motors I, L.P. v. Chapa, 212 S.W.3d 299, 305 (Tex. 2006). The elements of fraud by nondisclosure are that: (1) the defendant failed to disclose facts to the plaintiff; (2) the defendant had a duty to disclose those facts; (3) the facts were material; (4) the defendant knew the plaintiff was ignorant of the facts and the plaintiff did not have an equal opportunity to discover the facts; (5) the defendant was deliberately silent when it had a duty to speak: (6) by failing to disclose the facts, the defendant intended to induce the plaintiff to take some action or refrain from acting; (7) the plaintiff relied on the defendant's nondisclosure; and (8) the plaintiff was injured as a result of acting without that knowledge. Horizon Shipbuilding, Inc. v. Blyn II Holding, LLC, 324 S.W.3d 840 (Tex. App.—Houston [14th Dist.] 2010).

9 Based on the plausible pleading of false claims and statements, (see supra III.A), BakerRipley has met the heightened standard for pleading fraud and fraud by nondisclosure against all the defendants except Peters. BakerRipley has not sufficiently alleged False Claims Act claims against Peters, because any information that could have provided the basis for such a claim was already publicly disclosed and therefore available to BakerRipley.

iv. Civil Conspiracy

"To allege civil conspiracy, the government and the relator must plead [ ] 'the defendants ... had an agreement to commit an illegal act which resulted in the plaintiff's injury.' " U.S. ex rel. Wilkins v. North Am. Constr. Corp., 173 F. Supp. 2d 601, 639 (S.D. Tex. 2001) (quoting Thomas v. City of New Orleans, 687 F.2d 80, 83 (5th Cir. 1982)). The "illegal act" here is the alleged knowing submission of a false or fraudulent claim to BakerRipley. Baker Ripley alleges with sufficient particularity how all the defendants except Peters worked together to submit false claims, statements, and records to BakerRipley and other government-funded school districts, in hopes of procuring contracts with BakerRipley and other educational entities to provide Head Start-related services at a substantial markup. (Docket Entry No. 45 at ¶¶19-21; see supra III.A).

v. Theft

"When a claim of theft is made in connection with a contract, there must be 'proof of more than an intent to deprive the owner of property and subsequent appropriation of the property' "; "the appropriation [must have been] a result of a false pretext or fraud." Porter-Garcia v. Travis L. Firm, P.C., 564 S.W.3d 75, 91 (Tex. App.—Houston [1st Dist.] 2018, pet. denied). A breach of contract can give rise to a Texas Theft Liability Act claim only if the defendant "did not intend to deliver at ... at the time [it] entered into the contracts." See Holcomb v. State, 445 S.W.3d 767, 782 (Tex. App.—Houston [1st Dist.] 2014, pet. ref'd). As discussed above, BakerRipley does not plead with sufficient particularity facts showing that the defendants never intended to perform their contracts because the defendants did partially perform their contracts. (See supra III.A).

IV. Conclusion

For the reasons explained above, the defendants' motions to dismiss, (Docket Entry Nos. 32-36), are granted in part and denied in part, as follows—

- False Claims Act claims (qui tam actions)
  - (1) Violation of the False Claims Act (31 U.S.C. § 3729(a)(1)(A)) – dismissed only against Peters
  - (2) Violation of the False Claims Act (31 U.S.C. § 3729(a)(1)(B)) – dismissed only against Peters

- (3) Violation of the False Claims Act (31 U.S.C. § 3729 (a)(1)(G)) – complete dismissal
- (4) Violation of the False Claims Act (31 U.S.C. § 3729(a)(3)) – dismissed only against Peters

- Common law claims
  - (5) Unjust Enrichment – no dismissal
  - (6) Payment by Mistake – no dismissal
  - (7) Breach of Contract and Covenant of Good Faith and Fair Dealing – no dismissal for Breach of Contract; complete dismissal of Breach of Covenant of Good Faith and Fair Dealing
  - (8) Fraud – dismissed only against Peters
  - (9) Fraud by Nondisclosure – dismissed only against Peters
  - (10) Civil Conspiracy – dismissed only against Peters
  - (11) Money Had and Received – no dismissal
- Texas Civil Practice and Remedies Code claims
  - (12) Violation of TTLA, Chapter 134 – Theft – complete dismissal

10 The dismissed claims are dismissed with prejudice, as BakerRipley has already amended its complaint twice and further amendment would be futile.

All Citations

Slip Copy, 2024 WL 3541499

Footnotes

1 BakerRipley has not proven itself to be an "original source" of the information that forms the basis of its claims. *Rockwell Int'l Corp. v. United States, 549 U.S. 457, 467–68 (2007). An "original source" is "an individual who has 'direct' and 'independent' knowledge of the information on which the allegations are based and has voluntarily provided the information to the Government before filing an action under this section which is based on the information." Sonnier, 84 F. Supp. 3d at 586 (citing 31 U.S.C. § 3730(e)(4)(B)). As established by both parties, BakerRipley relied specifically on the information disclosed in Darrough's dissertation (and published by the University of Houston—Clear Lake) to bring its False Claims Act causes of action.

2 When a "complaint relies substantially on the affidavits ... these affidavits should be considered as part of the pleadings, such that the motion need not be treated as one for summary judgment." Bosarge v. Mississippi Bureau of Narcotics, 796 F.3d 435, 440 (5th Cir. 2015). Here the complaint relies heavily on the affidavits in the pleading of fraud, and the court can consider the affidavits as part of the pleadings at the motion to dismiss stage.

End of Document

© 2025 Thomson Reuters. No claim to original U.S. Government Works.

CASE NO. 61

2020 WL 6136265
Only the Westlaw citation
is currently available.
United States District Court,
S.D. Texas, Houston Division.

XIONGEN JIAO, an individual, Qianju Jiao, an individual, Zhonghua Yu, an individual, Jiatong Yu, an individual, Pengfei Zhou, an individual, and Xuanmei Zhou. Plaintiffs,
v.
NINGBO XU, an individual, and LCL Company LLC, a Texas limited liability company, Defendants, and Dongtai Investment Group, LLC, a Texas Limited Liability Company Nominal Defendant

Case No.:
4:
19-
cv-
01848
|
Signed 01/29/2020

Attorneys and Law Firms

Yaou Li, Brian Michael Gargano, Brian Michael Gargano, Nguyen Chen, Houston, TX, for Plaintiffs.

James Edward Leavens, Soape Leavens et al, Neal Durant Cannon, Jr, Attorney at Law, Joseph Todd Trombley, Adam Banks Brown, The Adam Banks Brown Law Firm, Houston, TX, for Defendant.

LCL Company, LLC, Sugar Land, TX, pro se.

ORDER GRANTING PRELIMINARY INJUNCTION AND DECLARATORY JUDGMENT

KEITH P. ELLISON, UNITED STATES DISTRICT JUDGE

1 Before the Court is the Sealed Emergency Motion for Preliminary Injunction, Permanent Injunction, and Declaratory Judgment made and filed by Plaintiffs XIONGEN JIAO, QIANJU JIAO, ZHONGHUA YU, JIATONG YU, PENGFEI ZHOU, and XUANMEI ZHOU ("Plaintiffs"). (Doc. 30). Having heard the evidence and the arguments of counsel, and having considered Plaintiffs' Motion and attached exhibits, as well as relevant pleadings including Plaintiffs' Second Amended Verified Complaint with exhibits, and any oppositions, the Court reaches the following findings of fact and conclusions of law:

1. According to the Joint Venture Agreements, Defendant Ningbo Xu was obligated to make a $3 million contribution to Dongtai as his capital contribution in exchange for 50.02% of Dongtai's member units and designation as Dongtai's sole managing member. (Doc. 21, Ex. 2 at Section I, ¶3). However, Xu's contribution was approximately

 © 2025 Thomson Reuters. No claim to original U.S. Government Works.

$2.2 million short. (Doc. 30, Exs. E, H). As demonstrated by the parties' jointly retained forensic accountant, Xu contributed only $867,889.11, making his percentage of ownership approximately 14.45%. (Doc. 30, Exs. E, H).

2. To conceal the shortfall, Xu provided a bogus HUD statement to Plaintiffs, who reasonably believed it was the real HUD statement for the hotel closing. (Doc. 30, XJ Affidavit at ¶¶ 16–17). The bogus HUD statement made it falsely appear that Xu had paid an additional $1.4 million toward his capital contribution. (Doc. 30, Ex. H at 7–8).

3. Subsequent to the purchase of the hotel, Xu made dozens of unauthorized withdrawals from Dongtai's account, resulting in a net cash outflow to Xu of $1,304,400.80. (Doc. 30, Ex. E at 7). Xu used these funds to further his own personal interests, including the purchase of a car dealership. (Doc. 21, Jiao Affidavit at ¶27 and Exs. 10, 11). Xu's unauthorized withdrawals have caused an almost fatal cash flow problem for Dongtai and its operation of the hotel. (Doc. 52, Ex. A at 80:6–7).

4. From October 2019 to December 2019, and in violation of this Court's order (Doc. 25), Xu obtained from different banks several unauthorized high-interest loans, totalling $435,000.00, by collateralizing Dongtai's assets. (Doc. 52, Exs. F–I). These loans were not intended or used for Dongtai's benefit.

5. To obtain a preliminary injunction, Plaintiffs must establish four elements: 1) a substantial likelihood that they will prevail on the merits, 2) a substantial threat that they will suffer irreparable injury if the injunction is not granted, 3) their threatened injury outweighs the threatened harm to Defendants, and 4) granting the preliminary injunction will not disserve the public interest. See Ponce v. Socorro Indep. Sch. Dist., 508 F.3d 765, 768 (5th Cir. 2007). Plaintiffs have satisfied all four elements.

6. Plaintiffs have satisfied the substantial-likelihood-of-success-on-the-merits element for each of their four claims: i) breach of fiduciary duty, ii) breach of contract, iii) fraud, and iv) federal securities fraud.

2 i. Under Texas law, a breach-of-fiduciary-duty claim requires that: "(1) a fiduciary relationship must exist between the plaintiff and defendant; (2) the defendant must have breached his fiduciary duty to the plaintiff; and (3) the defendant's breach must result in injury to the plaintiff or benefit to the defendant." Graham Mortg. Corp. v. Hall, 307 S.W.3d 472, 479 (Tex.App.-Dallas 2010, no pet.). Xu breached his fiduciary duties as the President and Managing Member of Dongtai by failing to fully pay for his units, misleading Plaintiffs, and using Dongtai funds for his personal benefit, thereby harming Plaintiffs.

ii. To prevail on a breach of contract claim, Plaintiffs must establish: "(1) the existence of a valid contract; (2) performance or tendered performance by the plaintiff; (3) breach of the contract by the defendant; and (4) damages sustained by the plaintiff as a result of the breach." Valero Mktg. & Supply Co. v. Kalama Int'l, LLC, 51 S.W.3d 345, 351 (Tex.App.-Houston [1st Dist] 2001, no pet.). The Joint Venture Agreement and LLC Operating Agreement are valid agreements, fully performed by Plaintiffs. Xu breached these agreements by paying only $867,889.11 for his 50.02% stake. The $2.2 million shortfall has harmed Dongtai and Plaintiffs.

iii. Under Texas law, there are six elements of fraud: 1) a material misrepresentation was made; 2) the representation was false; 3) when the representation was made, the speaker knew that it was false or made it recklessly without any knowledge of the truth and as a positive assertion; 4) the speaker made the representation with the intent that the other party should act upon it; 5) the party acted in reliance on the representation; and 6) the party thereby suffered injury. Aquaplex, Inc. v. Rancho La Valencia, Inc., 297 S.W.3d 768, 774 (Tex. 2009). Xu falsely represented that he would contribute $3,000,000.00 as his capital contribution in exchange for a 50.02% controlling stake in Dongtai. Xu's other actions—particularly, his attempt to cover up his shortfall by providing a fake HUD statement—establish that the representation was made with at least a reckless disregard for its truth and with the intent to induce Plaintiffs to action. Plaintiffs acted in reliance upon the representation and have suffered injury as a result.

iv. To prevail on a Rule 10b-5 securities fraud claim Plaintiffs "must prove 1) a misstatement or omission 2) of material fact 3) occurring in connection with the purchase or sale of a security, that 4) was made with scienter 5) upon which the plaintiff justifiably relied, 6) and that proximately caused injury to the plaintiff." Rubinstein v. Collins, 20 F.3d 160, 166 (5th Cir. 1994). Plaintiffs seek redress for injuries caused to them by Xu's misleading statements in connection with the purchase and sale of Dongtai member units. Xu represented to Plaintiffs he would contribute $3.0 million for his units and would act in Plaintiffs' best interests as Dongtai's Managing Member. There is circumstantial evidence that these material representations were false when made, including Xu's failure to pay the $3 million, falsification of the HUD statement, and withdrawal of funds for his own personal use. This evidence supports a "cogent and compelling" inference of misrepresentation and scienter. Tellabs, Inc. v. Makor Issues & Rights, Ltd., 551 U.S. 308, 324 (2007). Plaintiffs reasonably relied upon Xu's material misrepresentations and have suffered injury as a result.

7. Plaintiffs have established a substantial threat that they will suffer irreparable injury if the injunction is not granted. If Xu is allowed to continue to possess the units that he did not pay for, Plaintiffs will be unable to pay the $280,000 property taxes due by the end of January 2020 and will also be in imminent danger of losing the hotel's IHG franchise, and even the hotel itself. (Doc. 52 Ex. A, 75:8 – 76:5 and 128:13 – 128:16). Moreover, if Xu is permitted to continue as Dongtai's President and Managing Member, there is a substantial threat that he will further damage Dongtai.

3 8. Plaintiffs' threatened injury outweighs the hardship to Xu. Xu has no claim to the member units for which he did not pay. Thus, their return would not cause harm to Xu. In addition, because Xu has repeatedly mismanaged Dongtai and misappropriated Dongtai's assets, the threatened and continuing injury to Plaintiffs and Dongtai outweighs the harm that the injunction may cause to Xu if he is removed as President and Managing Member of Dongtai.

9. Granting the preliminary injunction will not disserve the public interest.

10. The Declaratory Judgment Act provides that "[i]n a case of actual controversy within its jurisdiction, except with respect to Federal taxes, any court of the United States, upon the filing of an appropriate pleading, may declare the rights and other legal relations of any interested party seeking such declaration, whether or not further relief is or could be sought. Any such declaration shall have the force and effect of a final judgment or decree and shall be reviewable as such." 28 U.S.C. § 2201.

Accordingly, IT IS HEREBY ORDERED this 29th day of January 2020, that a preliminary injunction and declaratory judgment is GRANTED on the following terms:

a. Xu is permanently removed as the President and Managing Member of Dongtai and his management authority and ability regarding the affairs of the joint venture including the operation of the Crowne Plaza Hotel is terminated immediately;

b. It is declared Xu did not make a capital contribution of $3,000,000.00 as he promised and was contractually obligated to do in order to obtain 50.02% controlling interest in Dongtai;

c. It is declared Xu paid only $867,889.11 for his units and that this amounts to approximately 867,031 units (14.45%);

d. Xu must immediately surrender to Dongtai all member units he did not pay for, specifically 2,134,169 units (35.57%);

e. Xu's current unit certificates are declared invalid and Dongtai is to provide Xu with new certificates based on the amount Xu actually paid for within a reasonable time from the date of this Order;

f. Xu is enjoined from purchasing the member units he did not pay for;

 © 2025 Thomson Reuters. No claim to original U.S. Government Works.

g. It is declared Xu owes and is indebted to Dongtai for $1,304,400.80 as a result of his withdrawals (this does not include the amount in consequential and other damages, attorneys' fees and costs Plaintiffs seek from Defendants and nothing in this Order prohibits or restrains Plaintiffs in any way from seeking these damages, fees and costs from Defendants).

Plaintiffs are required to post a bond in the amount of $10,000. F.R.C.P. 65(c).

IT IS SO ORDERED.

All Citations

Not Reported in Fed. Supp., 2020 WL 6136265

End of Document © 2025 Thomson Reuters. No claim to original U.S. Government Works.