02/18/2026	35	MINUTE entry before the Honorable Manish S. Shah: Status hearing held. Motion hearing held. The temporary restraining order is extended to 3/12/26, without objection. The government has leave to file a motion by 11:59 p.m. on 2/23/26, which may be a motion to dismiss, transfer, or vacate the TRO. Whatever procedural vehicle the government chooses, the court expects the government to provide the basis and source for any agency decision that purports to terminate the public-health grants at issue in the operative complaint. Plaintiff's motion to expedite discovery 28 is entered and continued to a telephone hearing on 2/25/26 at 9:30 a.m., at which the court will discuss the government's filing, plaintiffs' plan to amend the complaint, and the motion for expedited discovery. The parties are directed to meet and confer to discuss what facts the government intends to rely on in the forthcoming motion. The motions for leave to appear pro hac vice 22 33 are granted. Parties to the case, members of the public, and the media, may participate in/listen to these proceedings by dialing 1-650-479-3207 and using access code 2302 545 7949. Persons granted remote access to proceedings are reminded of the general prohibition against photographing, recording, and rebroadcasting of court proceedings. Violation of these prohibitions may result in sanctions, including removal of court issued media credentials, restricted entry to future hearings, denial of entry to future hearings, or any other sanctions deemed necessary by the Court. UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
FOR THE NORTHERN DISTRICT OF ILLINOIS
EASTERN DIVISION

STATE OF ILLINOIS, et al.,

Plaintiffs,

v.

RUSSELL VOUGHT, in his official capacity as Director of the Office of Management & Budget, et al.,

Defendants.

No. 26 CV 1566

Judge Manish S. Shah

MEMORANDUM OPINION AND ORDER

After the President announced that states with sanctuary policies would no longer receive federal payments, the Office of Management and Budget directed federal agencies to cut grant funding to Illinois, California, Colorado, and Minnesota—beginning with more than $600 million in public-health grants awarded by the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention. Before the terminations took effect, the states sued to set aside the OMB directive and to enjoin the agencies from implementing it. I entered a temporary restraining order, and later a preliminary injunction.

Defendants moved to transfer the action to the Court of Federal Claims, maintaining that this is, at bottom, a suit to enforce the payment of money by the federal government—a suit within that court’s exclusive jurisdiction. I ordered limited discovery to aid in resolving jurisdictional and factual questions bearing on both preliminary relief and transfer, and plaintiffs moved to enforce that discovery order after defendants asserted the deliberative process privilege. For the reasons below, defendants’ renewed motion to transfer and plaintiffs’ motion to enforce are denied, and further proceedings are stayed for sixty days.

I. Legal Standards

Whenever a federal “court finds that there is a want of jurisdiction, the court shall, if it is in the interest of justice, transfer such action or appeal to any other such court ... in which the action or appeal could have been brought at the time it was filed.” 28 U.S.C. § 1631. Transfer to the Court of Federal Claims is appropriate only if three conditions are met: (1) this court lacks jurisdiction over the action; (2) the Court of Federal Claims could have exercised jurisdiction at the time the action was filed; and (3) transfer is in the interest of justice. Id.; see Christianson v. Colt Indus. Operating Corp., 486 U.S. 800, 818 (1988).

Because an interlocutory appeal from an order granting or denying a motion to transfer an action to the Court of Federal Claims lies exclusively in the Court of Appeals for the Federal Circuit, 28 U.S.C. § 1292(d)(4)(A), Federal Circuit law governs the transfer analysis. Suburban Mortg. Assocs., Inc. v. U.S. Dep’t of Hous. & Urban Dev., 480 F.3d 1116, 1128 (Fed. Cir. 2007). But the Federal Circuit defers to the law of the regional circuit on issues that are not unique to its own jurisdiction. Pro-Mold & Tool Co. v. Great Lakes Plastics, Inc., 75 F.3d 1568, 1574 (Fed. Cir. 1996); see also In re Spalding Sports Worldwide, Inc., 203 F.3d 800, 803 (Fed. Cir. 2000) (applying “the law of the circuit in which the district court sits” to nonpatent issues).

A facial challenge to jurisdiction asks whether the plaintiff has “sufficiently alleged a basis of subject matter jurisdiction.” Apex Digital, Inc. v. Sears, Roebuck &

Co., 572 F.3d 440, 443 (7th Cir. 2009). The complaint need only plausibly suggest jurisdiction when all reasonable inferences are drawn in the plaintiff's favor, Spuhler v. State Collection Serv., Inc., 983 F.3d 282, 285 (7th Cir. 2020), and plaintiffs, as the parties invoking federal jurisdiction, bear the burden of establishing it, Meridian Sec. Ins. Co. v. Sadowski, 441 F.3d 536, 540 (7th Cir. 2006).

II. Background

In January 2026, the President made a series of public statements about federal payments to “sanctuary” jurisdictions. In a January 13 speech, he declared that “starting February 1, we’re not making any payments to sanctuary cities or States having sanctuary cities.” [51] ¶ 50.¹ He addressed the subject again at a January 20 press conference: “They can sue us, and maybe they’ll win, but we’re not giving money to sanctuary cities anymore as of the beginning of the month.” [51] ¶ 54. That same day, the Office of Management and Budget sent a “budget data request” to nearly every federal agency, seeking “a detailed report on Federal funds provided to components, agencies, or instrumentalities of certain States.” [51] ¶ 58. The “certain States” were fourteen jurisdictions, including Illinois, California, Colorado, and Minnesota, the plaintiffs here; nearly all fourteen appeared on federal lists of “sanctuary jurisdictions.” [51] ¶ 59. The request set a reporting deadline of January 28, a timeline that would allow OMB to assemble a complete inventory of funds flowing to those states before February 1 arrived. [51] ¶ 64.

Against the backdrop of the President’s public statements, OMB issued the agency action challenged in this case: a “Targeting Directive” commanding other federal agencies to cut funding to the plaintiff states. [51] ¶¶ 2, 56. On February 4, news media reported that OMB was directing the Department of Transportation and the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention to terminate more than $1.5 billion in grants to Democratic-led states, with the CDC terminations targeted solely at the four plaintiff states; an OMB spokesperson said that “more grant cancellations were expected.” [51] ¶¶ 68–72. The next day, an OMB spokesperson confirmed that OMB had directed CDC to rescind $602 million, and the Department of Transportation to rescind $943 million, in grants from the four states. [51] ¶ 73. On February 9, HHS notified Congress of its intent to terminate a wide swath of CDC grants in the plaintiff states. [51] ¶ 91. The reason given was “Inconsistent with Agency Priorities,” hyperlinked to a CDC webpage. [51] ¶ 92. The targeted grants fund public-health infrastructure, disease surveillance, and testing and treatment for lethal diseases; none are related to the enforcement of federal immigration law. [51] ¶¶ 148–150. To date, the Department of Transportation has not sent termination letters relating to the reported cuts. [51] ¶ 116.

Plaintiffs allege that the Targeting Directive violates the Tenth Amendment, the separation of powers, and the Spending Clause, exceeds the agencies' statutory authority, and is arbitrary and capricious in violation of the Administrative Procedure Act. [51] ¶¶ 180–224. They seek a declaration that the directive is unlawful, vacatur of the directive, and an injunction against its implementation. [51] at 50–51. The grant terminations were to become effective the day after the original complaint was filed. [51] ¶ 103. That day, I entered a temporary restraining order preventing the terminations. [51] ¶ 104; [20]; [21].

Defendants moved to transfer this case to the Court of Federal Claims or, in the alternative, to dismiss for lack of subject-matter jurisdiction, and moved to clarify the scope of the restraining order. [43]. I granted the motion to clarify, narrowing the order to exclude the President, and ordered limited expedited discovery from OMB, HHS, and CDC to assess jurisdiction and the propriety of preliminary relief. [50]. Defendants produced approximately 60 documents, many with redactions. [82] at 9–10. Plaintiffs moved to enforce the discovery order, arguing that defendants had improperly redacted and withheld documents under the deliberative process privilege and that their production was incomplete. [55].

Plaintiffs filed an amended complaint, adding as defendants the Department of Transportation, the Department of Homeland Security, and its component the Federal Emergency Management Agency. [82] at 9; see also n.1 above.

I granted in part plaintiffs' motion for a preliminary injunction, finding a reasonable inference "that the Office of Management and Budget directed HHS to cut funding for plaintiffs by February 1 because plaintiffs were on a list of states with sanctuary jurisdictions,” while concluding that plaintiffs could not yet substantiate that the same directive was at work at DOT and DHS. [63] at 4. The injunction prohibits defendants, except for the President, “from implementing any guidance or directives to target Illinois, California, Colorado, or Minnesota for the cessation of Health and Human Services or Centers for Disease Control-awarded payments after January 13, 2026.” [64] ¶ 1. That same day, defendants renewed their motion to transfer, incorporating their earlier briefing by reference and extending the motion to the newly added defendants. [62].

III. Analysis

A. Motion to Transfer

Defendants’ renewed motion seeks to send this case to the Court of Federal Claims. In defendants’ view, whatever labels plaintiffs attach to their claims, this is a lawsuit that “fundamentally seeks the continued flow of Federal funds” from grant agreements—a suit for money from the United States that belongs exclusively in the Court of Federal Claims under the Tucker Act. [84] at 6. Plaintiffs respond that they have sued to set aside the Targeting Directive—an OMB policy—under the APA and the Constitution, and that they seek no money at all. [82] at 13–14. A motion to transfer under § 1631 contains within it a challenge to this court’s jurisdiction, and a want of jurisdiction must be established before the interest-of-justice inquiry becomes relevant. North v. Ubiquity, Inc., 72 F.4th 221, 228 (7th Cir. 2023); Squillacote v. United States, 747 F.2d 432, 439 (7th Cir. 1984).

If this is a suit for money damages founded on the grant agreements, then the claims arise under the Tucker Act, and it is the Tucker Act—not 28 U.S.C. § 1331—that confers jurisdiction exclusively in the Court of Federal Claims. 28 U.S.C. §§ 1346(a)(2) & 1491(a)(1). That court cannot review agency action under the APA, Crocker v. United States, 125 F.3d 1475, 1476 (Fed. Cir. 1997), and “has no general power to provide equitable relief.” United States v. Tohono O’Odham Nation, 563 U.S. 307, 313 (2011). If this is not a suit for money damages, then the claims arise under the APA, 5 U.S.C. § 704, which permits review of “final agency action for which there is no other adequate remedy in a court,” and the Constitution—and 28 U.S.C. § 1331 confers jurisdiction. The APA waives the federal government’s sovereign immunity for actions “seeking relief other than money damages,” subject to a proviso: nothing in the waiver “confers authority to grant relief if any other statute that grants consent to suit expressly or impliedly forbids the relief which is sought.” 5 U.S.C. § 702.

Defendants lead with the adequate-remedy bar. They argue that plaintiffs have an adequate remedy in the Court of Federal Claims—a money judgment on the grants—and that under Federal Circuit precedent, § 704’s adequate-remedy condition is jurisdictional because it implicates the waiver of sovereign immunity. [84] at 7–9 (citing Consol. Edison Co. of N.Y. v. United States, 247 F.3d 1378, 1383 (Fed. Cir. 2001); Christopher Vill., L.P. v. United States, 360 F.3d 1319, 1327 (Fed. Cir. 2004)). On that premise, defendants say, the transfer analysis should begin—and end—with whether the Court of Federal Claims can provide “essentially the remedy” plaintiffs seek. Suburban Mortg. Assocs., 480 F.3d at 1126.

Federal Circuit law governs the transfer analysis, but whether § 704's conditions are jurisdictional is a question about the meaning of the APA—a statute that every federal court applies, not one entrusted to the Federal Circuit's exclusive care. On questions that are not unique to its jurisdiction, the Federal Circuit itself defers to the law of the regional circuit. Pro-Mold, 75 F.3d at 1574. And in this circuit, the answer is settled: “because the APA is not a jurisdiction-conferring statute, the elements of a claim under the APA ... are not jurisdictional.” Dhakal v. Sessions, 895 F.3d 532, 538 n.9 (7th Cir. 2018) (cleaned up). The conditions in § 704 “do not limit the waiver of immunity in § 702's second sentence.” Michigan v. U.S. Army Corps of Eng'rs, 667 F.3d 765, 775 (7th Cir. 2011). Indeed, sovereign immunity itself “does not diminish a court's subject-matter jurisdiction.” Blagojevich v. Gates, 519 F.3d 370, 371 (7th Cir. 2008). “The ability of governments to waive the benefit of sovereign immunity demonstrates that the doctrine is non-jurisdictional,” because “real jurisdictional limits can't be waived.” Id. “Sovereign immunity concerns the remedy rather than adjudicatory competence.” Id. Section 702 waives sovereign immunity; § 704 defines the cause of action. An argument that plaintiffs have an adequate remedy elsewhere is an argument that plaintiffs cannot state an APA claim—a merits argument, not a jurisdictional one. See Gonzalez v. Thaler, 565 U.S. 134, 141 (2012); Builders Bank v. Fed. Deposit Ins. Corp., 846 F.3d 272, 274 (7th Cir. 2017).

The Federal Circuit's decisions do not compel a different conclusion. The cases defendants cite predate the Supreme Court's effort “to bring some discipline” to the use of the jurisdictional label. Gonzalez, 565 U.S. at 141 (quotation omitted). The Federal Circuit’s more recent decisions express skepticism that § 704’s requirements are jurisdictional, Automated Merch. Sys., Inc. v. Lee, 782 F.3d 1376, 1379 (Fed. Cir. 2015), and hold that the § 702 waiver is not limited by the APA’s definitions of reviewable agency action, Delano Farms Co. v. Calif. Table Grape Comm’n, 655 F.3d 1337, 1344 (Fed. Cir. 2011). And the Seventh Circuit has explained that decisions like Consolidated Edison “rely on statutes that take particular classes of cases outside § 702 and § 704 by providing exclusive means of litigation.” Blagojevich, 519 F.3d at 372. Whether such a statute—here, the Tucker Act—does that work is a distinct question, taken up below; it is not a reason to treat § 704’s adequate-remedy condition as a limit on this court’s jurisdiction.

Suburban Mortgage, the decision on which defendants lean most heavily, would not support their position in any event. The plaintiff there was a private mortgage lender. It had “contracted with HUD for mortgage insurance,” filed a claim under the policy, and sued when HUD refused to pay—“in substance a contract-based action asking for monetary relief from the Government.” 480 F.3d at 1126. The Federal Circuit took care to distinguish those facts from Bowen v. Massachusetts, 487 U.S. 879 (1988). Bowen, the court explained, “was a dispute between two sovereigns—a state government and the federal government—implicating federalism issues.” Id. at 1127. The dispute “centered on the administration of a major federal grant” program. Id. At issue “were the institutional arrangements between these two governments,” which “were locked into a fabric of long-term administration of the program.” Id. And the Supreme Court’s “focus was on the statutory requirements set forth in this complex grant program—nowhere in Bowen did the Court make reference to the existence of any specific contract or express agreement defining the relationship between the parties.” Id.

The Federal Circuit stressed one more distinction: the lender did not “seek[] declaratory or injunctive relief to modify the Government’s future obligations under the program” or “to change any long-term future conduct by the Government.” Id. Every one of those distinctions describes this case. This is a dispute between sovereigns over the administration of major federal grant programs and the long-term institutional arrangements between the state and federal governments. Plaintiffs invoke statutory and constitutional limits on the government’s conduct, not the terms of any contract. [51] ¶¶ 180–224. And they seek exactly the relief the lender in Suburban Mortgage did not: prospective relief against the directive’s future implementation. [51] at 50–51. On the Federal Circuit’s account, this case sits on Bowen’s side of the line.

Even if the adequate-remedy bar were jurisdictional, defendants’ argument would fail. A remedy is adequate only if it gives the plaintiffs “essentially the remedy” they seek. Suburban Mortg. Assocs., 480 F.3d at 1126. Plaintiffs seek an order setting aside the Targeting Directive and enjoining its future enforcement—not payment on a set of grants already identified for termination. [51] at 50–51.

The Court of Federal Claims “has no general power to provide equitable relief,” Tohono O’Odham, 563 U.S. at 313, and a money judgment on particular grants would leave the directive in place and its future implementation unrestrained. Cf. Bowen, 487 U.S. at 905 (refusing “to assume, categorically, that a naked money judgment against the United States will always be an adequate substitute for prospective relief”). The Court of Federal Claims cannot give plaintiffs the remedy they seek, so it cannot provide an adequate one.

The Tucker Act is a different matter: it is jurisdictional. It channels contract claims against the United States to the Court of Federal Claims. The dispositive question is whether this action is, in substance, a claim founded on contract seeking money from the United States—in which case it belongs to the Court of Federal Claims—or a challenge to agency action seeking relief other than money damages—in which case it belongs here.

The framework for answering that question was supplied in National Institutes of Health v. American Public Health Association, 145 S.Ct. 2658 (2025). While the Supreme Court’s “interim orders are not conclusive as to the merits, they inform how a [lower] court should exercise its equitable discretion in like cases.” Trump v. Boyle, 145 S.Ct. 2653, 2654 (2025). The NIH issued internal guidance documents announcing that it would no longer fund certain categories of research and then terminated existing grants under that guidance. The district court vacated both the guidance and the terminations. The Supreme Court stayed the judgment as to the grant terminations, because the APA’s “limited waiver of sovereign immunity” does not give a district court jurisdiction to adjudicate claims “based on” the grants or “to order relief designed to enforce any ‘obligation to pay money’ pursuant to those grants.” 145 S.Ct. at 2660 (quoting Dep’t of Educ. v. California, 604 U.S. 650, 651 (2025) (per curiam)). But the Court left the vacatur of the guidance undisturbed. Justice Barrett, who supplied the decisive vote, explained the dividing line: challenges to grant terminations “belong in the Court of Federal Claims,” while an APA challenge seeking “vacatur of internal agency guidance” belongs in district court. Id. at 2661 (Barrett, J., concurring). That “the agency guidance discusses internal policies related to grants does not transform a challenge to that guidance into a claim ‘founded ... upon’ contract that only the CFC can hear.” Id. (quoting 28 U.S.C. § 1491(a)(1)). The two kinds of claims “are legally distinct.” Id. at 2661. “Vacating the guidance does not reinstate terminated grants,” and a plaintiff cannot “end-run” the Court of Federal Claims’ exclusive jurisdiction over terminations “simply by packaging them with a challenge to agency guidance.” Id. at 2661–62.

On the face of the complaint, this suit sits on the guidance side of that line. Plaintiffs challenge the Targeting Directive: a decision by the OMB—an agency that holds none of the affected grants—commanding other agencies to cut funding to four states. [51] ¶¶ 2, 56. The rights plaintiffs invoke arise from the Constitution and the APA, not from the terms of any grant agreement. [51] ¶¶ 180–224. And the relief they seek is a declaration that the directive is unlawful, vacatur of the directive, and an injunction against its implementation—not payment of any sum. [51] at 50–51; see Evers v. Astrue, 536 F.3d 651, 657–58 (7th Cir. 2008) (whether an action is at bottom contractual depends on the source of the rights the plaintiff asserts and the type of relief sought). A judgment for plaintiffs would not order the government to pay a dollar; it would prevent the OMB from using the directive going forward. See Natl. Insts. of Health, 145 S.Ct. at 2662 n.1 (Barrett, J., concurring) (“If a district court decides that agency guidance violates the APA, it may vacate the guidance, preventing the agency from using it going forward.”).

The timing of this suit confirms as much. Section 1631 asks whether the action “could have been brought” in the transferee court “at the time it was filed,” and “judicial authority depends on the state of affairs when a case begins.” Bush v. United States, 100 F.4th 807, 812 (7th Cir. 2024). Plaintiffs filed this suit on February 11—the day before any grant termination took effect. [1]; [51] ¶ 101. At that moment there were no “past due sums” to recover, Great-W. Life & Annuity Ins. Co. v. Knudson, 534 U.S. 204, 212 (2002), and no terminated grants for the Court of Federal Claims to reinstate. Whatever else may be said of this action, it did not begin as a suit for money due on a contract, because no money was due and no agreement had been terminated.

Defendants respond that the Targeting Directive is artful pleading—“an omnibus and generalized way of reframing a demand for the restoration of terminated contracts.” [84] at 6. On their view, any termination could be recast as a challenge to some upstream “directive,” and a “cottage industry” of contract plaintiffs could evade the Court of Federal Claims by suing over the decision to seek termination authority rather than the termination itself. [84] at 13–14 (quoting Suburban Mortg. Assocs., 480 F.3d at 1124). Unlike the guidance in National Institutes of Health, defendants say, the directive alleged here “consists of ordering immediate terminations,” so the directive and the terminations cannot be separated. [84] at 15–16. The concern about artful pleading is misplaced here for two reasons.

First, to the extent defendants deny that any OMB directive exists apart from the CDC grant terminations, that denial attacks the merits of plaintiffs’ claims—the existence and reviewability of the very agency action they challenge—dressed as a jurisdictional objection. A court may not resolve factual disputes bearing on jurisdiction when those disputes are intertwined with the merits of the claim. Perttu v. Richards, 605 U.S. 460, 472 (2025). When a jurisdictional argument is in substance an attack on the merits, the court assumes the truth of the complaint’s allegations, and jurisdiction fails only if the claim is “wholly insubstantial and frivolous.” Boim v. Am. Muslims for Palestine, 9 F.4th 545, 557–58 (7th Cir. 2021) (quoting Bell v. Hood, 327 U.S. 678, 682–83 (1946)). Plaintiffs’ allegation of a distinct OMB policy is not insubstantial. The limited record developed in expedited discovery supports a reasonable inference that OMB directed HHS to cut plaintiffs’ funding because plaintiffs appeared on a list of states with sanctuary jurisdictions—a motive different from the “agency priorities” rationale HHS gave Congress. [63] at 4; [51] ¶¶ 91–92. Plaintiffs did not conjure an OMB directive through artful pleading.

Second, this case does not sit on the slippery slope defendants describe. A contractor who sues to “vacate” a supervisor’s authorization of his contract’s termination is, in substance, litigating the termination; the “directive” and the termination are one decision taken in two steps. The Targeting Directive, as alleged,² is nothing like that. It is a policy, issued by an agency that is party to none of the affected grants, aimed at states rather than agreements, and—by OMB’s own account—unfinished: “more grant cancellations were expected.” [51] ¶¶ 68–72. Vacating that policy would not reinstate a single grant. Natl. Insts. of Health, 145 S.Ct. at 2661 (Barrett, J., concurring). The termination claims defendants describe and the policy challenge plaintiffs pleaded are legally distinct, and a challenge to the policy is a standard APA case for a district court, no matter that the policy “relate[s] to grants.” Id. at 2661.

Nor is this a suit for “money damages” in disguise. The question under § 702 is whether plaintiffs seek substitute relief—compensation for losses already suffered—or specific relief directed at the challenged conduct. See Bowen, 487 U.S. at 895; Columbus Reg’l Hosp. v. Fed. Emergency Mgmt. Agency, 708 F.3d 893, 896–97 (7th Cir. 2013). A money judgment on the terminated CDC grants—the remedy defendants say awaits in the Court of Federal Claims—would not remedy the injuries plaintiffs allege. The complaint pleads an injury to sovereignty: a federal policy that singles out four states for punishment because of their sovereign policy choices. [51] ¶¶ 185. And it pleads a continuing threat: OMB has promised that “more grant cancellations” are coming and noticed 41 additional grants for termination the day this suit was filed. [51] ¶¶ 72, 108. An award of money for yesterday’s terminations would leave the directive in place and the threat of tomorrow’s terminations intact. Only prospective relief against the policy itself addresses those injuries—and prospective, non-monetary relief is what § 702 permits and the Court of Federal Claims cannot give. Tohono O’Odham, 563 U.S. at 313.

² Because defendants bring a facial challenge to jurisdiction, I accept the allegations as true. Silha v. ACT, Inc., 807 F.3d 169, 173 (7th Cir. 2015); Cedars-Sinai Med. Ctr. v. Watkins, 11 F.3d 1573, 1583 (Fed. Cir. 1993). Whether the “Targeting Directive” exists and, if it does, whether it amounts to a final agency action subject to review are merits issues and remain to be decided.

Defendants’ arguments about plaintiffs’ constitutional claims fail for the same reasons. Defendants contend that the constitutional counts are, in this setting, “substantively indistinguishable from a breach of contract claim” and so face the same jurisdictional bars. [84] at 12 (quoting Suburban Mortg. Assocs., 480 F.3d at 1128). But the § 702 waiver “is not limited to claims brought pursuant to the review provisions contained in the APA itself”; it applies equally to constitutional challenges to agency action. Michigan, 667 F.3d at 775. Plaintiffs’ constitutional theories target the directive, not any contract: retaliation against the states’ sovereign choices, encroachment on Congress’s power of the purse, and the retroactive imposition of funding conditions. [51] ¶¶ 180–224. Those claims challenge agency action and seek only equitable relief, so they stand on the same footing as the APA counts. I do not reach plaintiffs’ alternative argument that the constitutional counts could proceed in equity without any statutory waiver. See [82] at 28–30.

That leaves defendants’ alternative request for a partial transfer of any “claim seeking the continued payment of grants that had already been noticed to Congress for termination.” [84] at 22. Partial transfers are possible in principle: the Federal Circuit has read § 1631, in light of § 1292(d)(4)(A)’s reference to orders granting a transfer “in whole or in part,” to permit the transfer of fewer than all claims in an action. United States v. Cnty. of Cook, 170 F.3d 1084, 1089 (Fed. Cir. 1999). But § 1631 permits transfer only to a court in which the transferred claims “could have been brought,” and 28 U.S.C. § 1500 strips the Court of Federal Claims of jurisdiction over “any claim for or in respect to which” the plaintiff has a suit pending in any other court.

Two suits are for or in respect to the same claim “if they are based on substantially the same operative facts, regardless of the relief sought in each suit.” Tohono O’Odham, 563 U.S. at 317. County of Cook itself illustrates the consequence: when a district court transferred takings counts to the Court of Federal Claims while retaining related counts, the Federal Circuit held that § 1500 “precluded jurisdiction over the transferred claims,” 170 F.3d at 1091, and the Seventh Circuit reached the same conclusion in the parallel appeal. United States v. Cnty. of Cook, 167 F.3d 381, 384 (7th Cir. 1999).

Every claim in this case arises from the same operative facts: OMB’s issuance of the Targeting Directive and the directive’s implementation against the plaintiff states. A partial transfer would send a slice of those facts to a court instantly deprived of jurisdiction over them. That is not a transfer § 1631 authorizes. To the extent plaintiffs have (or come to have) distinct claims for the reinstatement of terminated grants, those claims belong to the Court of Federal Claims, and plaintiffs “will have to proceed sequentially rather than simultaneously”—this action first, and any claim for money on the grants afterward. Natl. Insts. of Health, 145 S.Ct. at 2662 (Barrett, J., concurring). Nothing about that sequence is unfair to anyone; “the statutory scheme puts plaintiffs to precisely this choice.” Id. (citing Tohono O’Odham, 563 U.S. at 316–17).

Because this court has jurisdiction over the action and the Court of Federal Claims would not have it, there is no occasion to consider whether transfer would serve the interest of justice. North v. Ubiquity, 72 F.4th at 228. The renewed motion to transfer is denied.

B. Motion to Enforce Discovery Order

To facilitate resolving the motion to transfer the case as pled in the original complaint, I ordered limited jurisdictional discovery. [50]. A motion to transfer an action to the Court of Federal Claims automatically stays all proceedings in the district court, except for the granting of preliminary or injunctive relief. 28 U.S.C. § 1292(d)(4)(B) (“When a motion to transfer an action to the Court of Federal Claims is filed in a district court, no further proceedings shall be taken in the district court until 60 days after the court has ruled upon the motion. ... The stay of proceedings in the district court shall not bar the granting of preliminary or injunctive relief, where appropriate and where expedition is reasonably necessary.”).

Defendants read that stay to bar any discovery from the moment their first transfer motion was filed. [72] at 7. I disagreed, and I adhere to that view. The statute preserves the court’s authority to grant preliminary and injunctive relief where expedition is reasonably necessary, and a court asked to grant that relief—and to determine whether it has jurisdiction to act at all—must be able to inform both decisions. The discovery I ordered was narrow and aimed at a single factual question underlying both the transfer motion and the request for preliminary relief: whether there was a decision by OMB directing HHS and CDC to target plaintiffs' grants. See [50] (requiring production of documents explaining how plaintiffs were selected for inclusion in Attachment B to Budget Data Request 26-09, and guidance, directives, or instructions from OMB to HHS or CDC on selecting states for grant review and on evaluating grant alignment with agency priorities). Limited jurisdictional discovery was logically necessary to resolve the motion to transfer and to decide whether preliminary relief was warranted; the automatic stay did not prohibit it. Cf. Consol. Edison Co. of N.Y. v. United States, 54 F.Supp.2d 364 (S.D.N.Y. 1999) (refusing to allow discovery where plaintiff sought neither a TRO nor a preliminary injunction, but noting that distinction was decisive).

Defendants produced 30 pages from OMB, 172 pages from CDC, and three spreadsheets, with redactions. [55] at 3; [72] at 6–7. Plaintiffs argue that defendants' privilege assertions are improper because the withheld material is largely post-decisional implementation of OMB's directive rather than predecisional deliberation, that the government's motive is at the center of this case, and that the production is missing responsive documents; they ask for re-production without deliberative-process redactions or, in the alternative, in camera review. [55]; [78]. Defendants respond that their declarations and privilege logs establish that the withheld information is predecisional and deliberative, that plaintiffs have not shown a particularized need for it, and that the production is complete. [72].

The expedited discovery served a specific purpose: to permit reasoned decisions on jurisdiction and preliminary relief. Both decisions have now been made. Plaintiffs obtained a preliminary injunction on the existing record, [63]; [64], and the renewed motion to transfer has been resolved—against defendants—without any need to look behind the redactions. As explained above, jurisdiction turns on the nature of the claims pled and the relief sought, not on the contents of defendants’ internal deliberations, and the record was sufficient to lend plausibility to the alleged OMB decision at issue. The motion to enforce, [55], is denied without prejudice to renewal, if appropriate, when the stay lifts and the case proceeds on a schedule.

IV. Conclusion

The renewed motion to transfer, [62], is denied. Plaintiffs’ motion to enforce discovery order, [55], is denied. The case is stayed for 60 days per 28 U.S.C. § 1292(d)(4)(B). If an appeal is taken from this order, the case will remain stayed until the appeal has been decided. If a notice of appeal is not filed by September 21, 2026, the parties shall file a status report proposing a case schedule.

Dear Clerk:

I am sending you herewith the short record on appeal consisting of the Notice of Appeal, Federal Circuit Appeal Information Sheet, and copies of the FRAP 3(d) letter, docket sheet and the appealed order.

Re: 26-cv-01566 State of Illinois et al v. Vought

The attached copy of the Notice of Appeal is being mailed to all parties pursuant to F.R.A.P. 3 (d). The record on appeal is being maintained in our office until it is requested by the Clerk of the United States Court of Appeals for the Federal Circuit.

For your convenience pertinent information re: perfecting the appeal which is taken from the Procedural Handbook for the United States Court of Appeals for the Federal Circuit is listed below:

The notice of appeal is filed with the clerk of the trial court (District Court) along with the fee for filing the notice and the $605 appellate docket fee. CAFC 10 (a). Appeals will be docketed upon receipt from the clerk of the trial court of (1) a copy of the notice of appeal, (2) a certified copy of docket entries, and (3) a copy of the appeal information sheet. Appeals under 28USC 1292 (d) will be docketed on grant of the appeal by the Court and receipt of a certified copy of docket entries and a copy of the appeal information sheet

The record on appeal shall consist of all papers named in FRCP 10(a) and 16. All papers are normally retained by the tribunal from which the appeal is taken. When deemed necessary, the court, on motion or sua sponte, may order filing of the original or certified copies of the trial or administrative record or any portions thereof at any time during pendency of the appeal.

When a transcript is required, the appellant has the duty to order it from the reporter and to give notice to appellee if a partial transcript is ordered as required by FRAP 10(b). Where no report of the proceedings was made or the transcript is unavailable, the provisions of FRAP 10c shall govern.

Telephone inquiries from counsel concerning rules and procedures are welcomed by the Clerk's Office for the U.S. Court of Appeal for the Federal Circuit. This office is located in Room 401 of the National Courts Building, 717 Madison Place, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20439 and is open from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Telephone (202) 275-8000.

Sincerely,
Thomas G. Bruton, Clerk
